HEADED FOR STATE FAIR.

After a Series of Thrilling Stunts in the Air Smith Will Enter His Miniature Racing Car and Show Mile-a-Minute Speed on Mile Track.

Art Smith, wizard of the air, is on his way aross the Pacific, homeward bound from Japan, to prepare for a series of flights at the New York State Fair at Syracuse next month.

As a flier, Smith is probably without an equal in the world. He has originated and perfected spectacular evolutions which have served the dual purpose of promoting the safety of the flier and entertaining the crowd. He has reached the pinnacle of fame, being regarded as the foremost exponent of the science of aviation.

Thousands Thrilled.

Smith proved the sensation of the Panama-Pacific exposition, where he thrilled thousands with his upside down flying and his spectacular night exhibitions. After gathering in high laurels on the Pacific coast, Smith went to Japan, where he has since been instructing army officers how to fly.

Since the death a few months ago of Niles, Smith remains the only aviator of international reputation in this country. For any new feats this year the public will look to Smith. While at the State Fair his stunts, it is promised, will not be performed a mile in the sky. He will fly with his machine upside down and his head toward the earth, directly in front of the grand stand.

Art Smith has another diversion. He races an automobile, and it is the smallest racing car in existence. With this toy machine he has been able to hold his own in a ten mile race against Barney Oldfield in a high powered modern racing machine. The small wheel base of Smith's machine permits him to "hug close" on the turns of a mile track and to average better than a mile a minute.

Smith will have his baby racer at the State Fair for exhibitions on the mile track, following his exhibitions with his monoplane. It will mean an attraction that will not be eclipsed at any fair in the country.

THE DAIRY INDUSTRY.

Now Worth $100,000,000 to State Annually and Is Growing Steadily.

One of the finest buildings at the New York State Fair grounds, Syracuse, is devoted to the dairy industry, the state recognizing the value of this industry which now has an annual yield of $100,000,000 and is growing.

That the dairy industry may get the full benefit of this fine structure, Commissioner of Agriculture Charles S. Wilson has arranged an unusually attractive prize list and program in the Dairy department, including a series of lectures and demonstrations. There will be butter making contests daily. Experts on dairy lines will be constantly present in the building for consultation and to answer questions.

The money prizes in the classes for dairy products total $3,000, and in addition Commissioner Wilson has arranged to give diplomas of merit and gold and silver medals.

The exhibit of dairy machinery, representing thousands of dollars in value, should hold interest for any person interested in this industry. Representatives of the manufacturers will be on hand at all times to explain or demonstrate machinery, so that New York farmers may have the benefit of the very latest devices useful in dairy work.

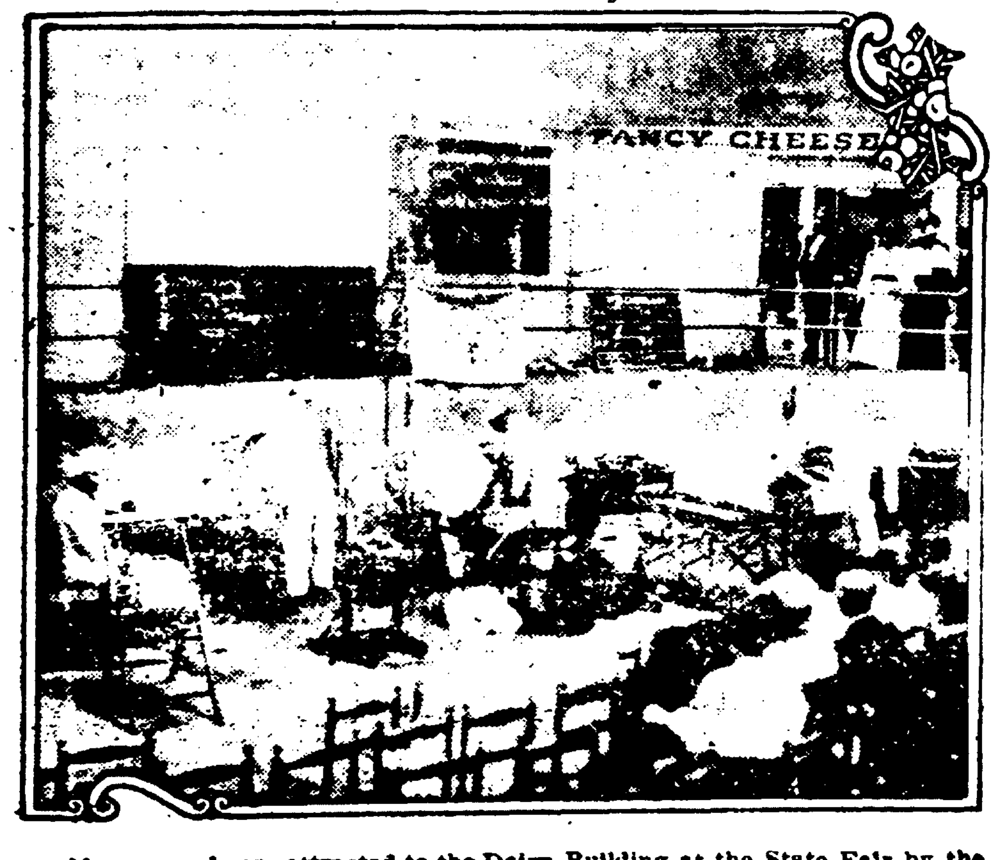
In a miniature automobile the famous aviator tackles the high power racing machines and beats them on a circular track.

Interest In Butter Making



Many crowds are attracted to the Dairy Building at the State Fair by the butter making contests furnished by experts representing the dairy industry.

WEATHER FAVORS GROWING CROPS

Fields of Cereals Show Rapid Advancement, But Rain is Needed in Most Sections Hereabouts.

The unusually hot weather has caused wonderful growth of corn during the past three weeks, in nearly all parts of the state.

This crop has, perhaps, benefited more than any other by the hot spell but wheat, oats, rye and barley have also advanced. Wheat and rye are now being cut in some sections.

The excessive rainfall early in the season damaged the crops to such an extent that some of them are still backward in spite of the favorable July weather and the acreage in some cases is smaller than that of last year.

What we need now, according to the farmers, is a good soaking rain and then another spell of dry weather.

The timothy crop in this section is large and of the best quality. Whether the hay crop is to be a bumper one or just about the average depends on weather conditions affecting the second and third cuttings of alfalfa.

Despite the gains made by corn in the past few weeks the planting was delayed so long by spring rains that there may not be more than a fifty per cent. crop this year.

Wheat generally is looking well, except in some fields the leads are not filled out as well as they ought to be and the yield will not be quite up to the average. The oats crop will also be a little down from the average, with a smaller acreage and in sore need of rain. The same is true of barley.

The number of acres devoted to cabbage this fall is small in the aggregate, compared with that of former years, the wet ground having prevented the seting out of the plants this spring.

Beans are being raised in increased quantities in this section, this summer, and are expected to yield a good profit.

The potato crop will be short, some farmers say, while in other sections it is predicted that the yield will be up to, if not above, the average. The trouble in some sections, it is found, was due to diseased seed.

Tobacco fields around Baldwinsville are reported to be in good shape, with promises of a fairly good year.

LECTURES FOR POULTRYMEN

During the week of July 31st to August 4th, there will be a series of poultry demonstrations held throughout the Oswego county, for the purpose of demonstrating a method of selecting breeding stock and culling out the poor laying hens.

Professor L. M. Hurd, from the State College of Agriculture, will be in Oswego county for the week and assist the manager in carrying out the program of meetings scheduled as follows:

Monday, July 31—S. R. Lockwood, Hannibal, R. D., 9:30 a. m.; W. W. Manning, Hannibal, 1:00 p. m.

Tuesday, August 1—Albert Paddock, Fulton, R. D. 1, 9:30 a. m.; W. H. Guyett, Oswego, R. D. 2, 1:00 p. m.; C H. Riedell, Mexico, R. D., 3:30 p. m.

Wednesday, August 2—C. R. Guile, Fulton, 9:30 a. m.; F. L. Hees, Fulton, R. D. 6, 1:00 p. m.; B. W. Severance, Pennellville, 3:30 p. m.

Thursday, August 3—J. B. West, Parish, R. D., 9:30 a. m.; J. W. House, Parish, R. D., 1:00 p. m.; W. W. Miller, Parish, R. D., 3:30 p. m.

Friday, August 4—A. D. Sherman, Altmar, 9:30 a. m.; W. V. Joslyn, Sandy Creek, 1:00 p. m.; C. E. Stone, Sandy Creek, R. D., 3:30 p. m.

There are few general farms in Oswego county, but what have flocks of poultry in size from the small mongrel flocks to those which are counted in the hundreds. On many farms the care of the poultry is in the hands of the ladies and a hearty invitation is extended to them, as well as to the men to attend one of these demonstrations. Keep the date of the demonstration nearest your home in mind and plan to attend.

BORERS DOING DEADLY WORK

They Are Spoiling Many of City's Handsome Maple Trees, Adding to Owners' Troubles.

Shade tree owners, or those who have Maple trees, are becoming exercised over the deadly work of a species of borers whose attacks on sugar and soft maples in preference to any others is quite noticeable. According to persons who know, it appears that about every three years borers begin their attacks on maple trees. The method pursued by the borers is as follows:

The larvae eat around the trunk of the tree instead of perpendicularly and in this way girdle the tree which is apt to shut off the supply of sap from the branches, killing the tree. The eggs and young are in the tree for three years, emerging as an adult the third, and after mating and laying the eggs the adult dies. The larvae which do the damage are about an inch and a half long. An attempt will be made to save the trees in Grover street, but the success of the venture is doubtful. The bark has been stripped from several of the trunks and shows the paths of the pests in grooves around the bodies.

The Tussock Moth

The tussock moth, specimens of which were found at the postoffice and on Franklin street put in an appearance at the Woman's Union this morning. They are about an inch long, covered with hair-like projections. They are gray on the sides with yellow and black stripes running lengthwise of the body. The black stripe down the back is dotted with bright red spots. Four tufts of bristles protrude a third of the way from the head, which is red with feathered antennae. A long bristle of gray silk like material points at an angle from the posterior end.

OSWELL HOSPITAL ANNEX OPENS AUG. 2

A meeting of the Board of Managers of the Oswego County Tuberculosis Hospital at Orwell was held Tuesday afternoon at the home of County Attorney James Gallagher of Cleveland, one of the board. At the meeting it was decided to hold the opening of the new addition to the hospital next Wednesday.

The advance of salary of the superintendent, Dr. A. G. Dunbar, was discussed but no action was taken. The superintendent now receives a salary of $1,200 and he requested an increase to $1,500.

The advisability of the appointment of a resident physician to act as superintendent of the hospital, to receive a larger salary and his home, was discussed and no action taken, it being held over until next Wednesday. The board is of the opinion that the expense of running the hospital would be greatly reduced by this method.

NO GILDED CAGES IN GOOD HOMES

However, the Family Gold Fish Must Be Properly Clothed.

By Margaret Mason.
(Written for the United Press)

Little goldfish in a bowl,
Birdies in a cage,
You must now be all dressed up
For it's quite the rage.

New York—The modern woman, seemingly surfeited with trimming herself and incidentally trimming her husband has turned her attention to trimming up the household canary and the family goldfish.

At least, if not the canary and the gold fish personally, she has their domiciles all dolled up.

Bird cages have become fantastic dreams of beauty and decorative art. No self respecting canary, linnet, or thrush can be expected to trill in anything but a cage of rush or willow from the peasant realms of Europe, or a wire and lacquer cage from China's shores. Japanese reed cages also are permissible but birdies simply must have one of these three decorative influences for surroundings.

Mercy! Just fancy how plebian and inartistic nowadays would be that proverbial bird in a gilded cage. Cages are positively not being worn gilded this season.

Of the lovely willow cages, some of which are fashioned by peasant hands in the Black Forest and yet others in Brittany and probably most over in New Jersey or Brooklyn, there are those in the natural toned willow, those stained, grass green and those enameled white or pastel pink or blue.

Even these willow cages feel the Chinese influence however, or at least their owners do, for milady hangs a Chinese jade bracelet to a short string of jade beads suspended from the middle of the cage for the songster to sway on in lieu of a prosaic swing. From the bottom of the cage she fastens with a thumbtack a Chinese tassel green and gold.

The real Chinese cages are gorgeous in their scarlet green or black lacquer, ornate with gold. Round, oblong, square and octagonal they are, and some shaped like pagodas two or three stories high. In the finest cages the water and seed dishes are of carved jade or ivory, beads and tassels deck the outside and always there is the bracelet swing.

As for the little fishes, red and gold, their crystal abodes are iridescent bubbles of antique Venetian glass of divers fantastic shapes. Some, high huge goblet shapes, others shallow bowls poised on slender stems, two handled Grecian urns of rainbow tinted glass and one, the quaintest of all, is a squat and study crystal elephant.

Many of the round glass aquariums are raised on standards of carved or enameled wood and hand painted in water lilies and deep sea flora on the outside of the glass.

Yet others simple and effective of line are the oblong and square aquariums, crystal clear.

Feathery green water plants and the decorative branches of Chinese "Thousand-years-green" make a fairy forest for the fishes and most artistic and modern note of all in latest fish fashions are the marbles of green glass that strew the golden gravel floor in the bottom of every equarium that is a la mode.

Before Prices Advance

ONLY $1 PUTS THE HOOSIER IN YOUR HOME WHILE THIS ALLOTMENT LASTS

"Prices must advance" is the official announcement made by the Hoosier Company today in the Saturday Evening Post.

This is due to the increased cost of all raw materials used in the Hoosier. Our allotment at the old price is limited—only a few of each pattern are left. These may all be taken any day.

The factory has notified us that 20,000 cabinets were snapped up in three weeks when it first became known that Hoosier prices must be increased September 1st. You can judge for yourself how long our small allotment will last.

Your only chance of being sure to get one of these cabinents at the present low prices is to come at once before this allotment is gone.

1.—$1 puts the cabinet you choose in your home.
2.—$1 weekly quickly pays for it.
3.—The low cash price fixed by the factory prevails strictly. 4.—No interest—No extra fees.
5.—This sale is under the direct supervision of the Hoosier Company. 6—Your money back if you are not delighted.

WHY WISH AND WAIT?

You need a Hoosier Cabinet now more than at any other time of the year. Your kitchen is hot and disagreeable. You have extra work to do—canning fruit, making preserves, and many other things that keep you in the kitchen extra hours each day.

Is there any reason why you should spend this extra time in the kitchen toiling and working in hot weather when it is so easy to get your cabinet at once?

SALE MAY CLOSE ANY DAY

Our entire allotment may be sold out by tomorrow night. Decide right now which is the best for you—To take chances and miss this opportunity, or —Come to our store at once and find out about this cabinet before it is too late?

EVERY WOMAN HAS A RIGHT TO A HOOSIER

Sooner or later, you will probably get the cabinet anyway; so why waste your energy, health and time by waiting until prices increase?

It need not take you ten minutes to decide once for all whether you intend to buy now or later after prices go up; and you are deciding, remember, whether you will save many dollars and miles of unnecessary steps you now take in a hot kitchen.

Let other things go and decide this question tomorrow while you have time.

This is "HOOSIER BEAUTY"
The National Step Saver

WHAT THE HOOSIER CABINET WILL DO FOR YOU

—Places for 400 articles all within arm's reach.
—40 labor-saving features, each like a helping hand.
—The Hoosier will cut your kitchen work in half.
—Will save you miles of steps.
—Will save you hours of weary toil.
—Will make it a pleasure to cook and bake.
—Will save your energy and beauty, and keep you feeling young and strong.
—Will help you get good meals quickly.
—Will help you tidy up in just a few moments when the meal's over.

These are only a few of Hoosier's conveniences. To really appreciate the great amount of time the Hoosier will save you, you must see and examine these features yourself in our store.

Tomorrow for only $1 you can start using these labor-saving features in your own kitchen, but if you wait and let tomorrow drift by and think that you still have time to accept this offer, you may be too late.

NO SCANDALS IN NEW ROAD LAW

(By United Press)

Washington—No "pork barrel scandals" will result from the new Shackleford good roads law just signed by President Wilson, the authors declare.

Instead they expect the system established, that of contributing federal aid to the states for the construction of good roads, will bo so free from criticism and so helpful in building up a system of internal improvements, that Congress will be willing after the $75,000,000 is spent, to vote new appropriations.

Good roads advocates say the new law is epochmaking. It is intended, together with the rural credit system, to improve the conditions of country life and to stop the flow of population from the country to the city.

Good roads, with the automobile will destroy the lonely existence of the farmer. Opportunities of association with neighbors, it is believed, will make the country boy more willing to stay on the farm.

If the automobile owners think the Shackleford law is intended solely for them, they are badly fooled. So sa Representative Saunders of Virginia, one of the authors.

"There will be a howl going up to heaven if the Department of Agriculture picks for improvement only such main roads as the automobile owners prefer," said Saunders today. He is an automobile owner himself. "We want the backroads improved for the man who now is hemmed in all sides in winter by impassible roads."

The appropriations, under the provision of the law, will be paid to the state in five installments—$5,000,000 the first year, $10,000,000 the second year, $15,000,000 the third year, $20,000,000 the fourth year, and $25,000,000 the fifth year.

The money will be divided among the states, one third in the ratio of the area, one third on the basis of the population and one third on the basis of the number of mile of rural delivery routes.

Payment for the construction of roads will be on a fifty-fifty basis. If the state agrees to provide half the cost, the federal government will furnish the rest. Road projects must be approved by the Department of Agriculture and the law is entirely silent on the nature of the improvement, whether it is a brick, macadam, or common dirt roads. These details are left entirely to the state.

"If this law fails to work, responsibility will rest on the Department of Agriculture, for it is vested with all power," said Saunders. "Congress leaves hands off, and there will be no opportunity to say that Congress has played politics."

NEW TRAFFIC COURT ACCEPTS NO EXCUSES

New York—The first official report of New York's new Traffic Court, available today, shows that no excuses are accepted, every autoist or other person arrested for violation of traffic regulations being fined.

During the first thirteen days the court was in session 129 persons were sent to jail because they didn't pay their fines. Most of them still are there and others are following them every day.

Before the Traffic Court started, about one-fifth of all traffic violation fines were suspended. Now they must all be paid. The first thirteen days of Traffic Court netted the city $11,303 cash in fines.

There were 300 cases of speed limit violations in the 13 days, 20 chauffeurs were convicted of driving cars without numbers, three persons for driving cars while intoxicated and six for failing to stop after an accident, which is a felony.

Two drivers' licenses were revoked and one owner's number suspended. Court officials say conditions are much better in the streets since the new court has taken such vigorous action against violators of traffic regulations.

"Other cities in the United States would do well to follow suit," said Clerk of the Court Rowland J. Sheridan, today.

YESTERDAY'S RECORD OF DEEDS TRANSFERRED

A Smart Skirt and Blouse.

One of the most popular models for a mid-summer skirt. It is made of cotton corduroy and worn with a blouse of pink batiste.

A fascinating blouse of pale pink batiste is worn with the attractive skirt of white cotton corduroy pictured here. The skirt is a four-piece model closing at the front and has a removable one-piece circular yoke belt with straight trimming pieces inserted at the sides.

In medium size the skirt requires 2⅝ yards material. It is a model that will enjoy great popularity because of its smart simplicity. The home dressmaker today has a lesson in the cutting of the skirt, which is of utmost importance if the lines are to be preserved. The pocket and the back gore are laid on a lengthwise thread of material, with the front gore to the left, arranged in the same way. The piecing for the back gore and the trimming for the belt are placed along the selvage edge of the corduroy. The belt sections shown in the cutting guide are to be used in case a three-piece belt with extended sides is preferred to the one-piece girdle shown in the illustration.

The washable corduroys in white are among the most fashionable materials of the season for separate skirts, being particularly attractive in the fine cordings. Then there are other corded white cottons and a few of the rougher ratine weaves that are in great demand.

These smart skirts are not confined to development in tub materials, however, for they look exceedingly good in flannel, serge and taffeta.

Gratitude Versus Revenge

By ETHEL HOLMES

One day a party of ladies and gentlemen were making merry on the grounds of the hacienda of Senor Enrique Cosio, not far from the City of Mexico. One of the waiters who were passing refreshments, a boy of fifteen, spilled red wine on the coat and shirt front of a guest. The Spanish blood is easily excited, and the man who received this unwelcome baptism struck the boy across the cheek with a small cane he carried in his hand, laying open the flesh.

"I will be even with you for that blow some day, senor," said the boy as he went away. "You have spilled blood from my cheek, I will spill something more than wine on your shirt."

Senora Cosio saw the accident, and the blow that followed it. The boy went into the house, and she joined him there, and when, through wounded feelings rather than a wounded cheek he burst into tears, she put her arms about him and soothed him as if she were his mother.

The hatred he felt for the man who had struck him was only equaled by his adoration for the woman who had sympathized with him. And she did more for him than that. The next day she called for him, and when he came said to him:

"Pedro, you are too spirited for a servant, you must be something better. But you can do nothing without an education. Tomorrow you go to school and I will pay your tuition. You may repay me by work done before and after school hours."

"Ah, senora madre! How can I repay so great a benefit by such small service?"

Twelve years passed. Mexico was under the government of a so called president. He was really, as all Mexican presidents are, a dictator, and he was also a tyrant. While tyrannizing over the people whose government he had usurped he was also robbing them and depositing his gains in the United States, for he knew that his tenure of office would be short, and when his successor deposed him he intended to make for the coast, where he kept a yacht always with fires lighted, in which he proposed to escape.

Sure enough the day of retribution came. A young leader arose, whose influence had for some time been growing with the people, and one day the president learned that an army of revolutionists was marching on the capital. The tyrant fled, as he had intended, but the revolutionists got on his track and brought him back.

Those who had occupied the offices under him and were permitted to plunder on their own account put up a fight, and the new dictator found it difficult to maintain the lodgment he had effected. While the ex-president was lying in jail the new incumbent was defeating forces of the late government's adherents here and there till at last all were subdued. Then the late incumbent was summoned by the new. He stood before his conqueror with bowed head.

"You do not remember me, senor," said the victor.

"I do not, but I have been told who you are."

"Oh! Then you remember a scene that occurred a dozen years ago when I occupied the humble position of a menial in the household of Senor Cosio. Do you see this scar on my cheek? Perhaps you have forgotten that because I accidentally spilled wine on your snow white shirt front you laid open my cheek, leaving your mark as well."

"I remember," said the other.

"And the words I said to you. I have repeated them again and again since that day, now long passed, that I might give them to you on this day of my vengeance. I said to you:

" 'I will be even with you for that blow some day, senor. You have spilled blood from my cheek. I will spill something more than wine on your shirt.' "

"I am very rich. I will give you all I possess for my life."

"Were you to give me all the gold the conquerors took from the Emperor Montezuma, all that has been taken and yet remains in the soil of Mexico, it would not buy one drop of your blood."

The captive looked into the eye of his captor and saw—death.

"You will be taken from here," continued the new president, "to your prison. At midnight you will be taken out and shot. I will keep my promise to stain your immaculate linen with your blood. Guards!"

"Hold!" said the other. "I have one hope. When I was brought back to Mexico a woman came to see me. She gave me this paper."

He drew forth the paper and handed it to the dictator. While it was being read the captive watched eagerly the face of the reader. He saw indications of conflicting emotions. The conqueror crushed the paper in his fist, but the next moment reopened it and reread it again. Then he started to tear it, but refrained. It read:

Pedro—I beg you to spare Senor Gonzales. Give me his life. INEZ COSIO.

The contest between these few written words and a long cherished revenge, a revenge that was the basic cause of the revolution, at last ended in the triumph of the former. Gratitude for a kindness defeated revenge for an injury. The dictator passed into sober thought. Then he said:

"Return to the treasury of Mexico all that you have stolen, and you will be suffered to go to a foreign land."

"I accept the terms."

HE MOVED HIS WELL.

It Wasn't Pulled Up Nor Sawed Up, but It Did Change Place.

There is an old story about the man who pulled up a well and took it to a more desirable location and another about the man who took up a well, sawed it in sections and used one of the sections for a land roller. They were exaggerations, but the experience of Ezra Tetlow proves that a well cannot always be classed as a permanent fixture. Ezra had a well in front of his house. It had never been a success as a well. Ezra wanted it filled up. One way would have been to haul stones or earth and use the material to fill it. But Ezra had no team.

So he went at it with a shovel. Working on the side of the well next to the road, he began to dig and to throw the dirt into the well. He kept this up until he had filled it, which was not a difficult job, as the well was rather shallow.

But when the task seemed finished Ezra found that he had made a new hole by the side of the one he had been filling. There was but one thing to do —he proceeded to fill it in the same manner. Of course this resulted in still another excavation, which in turn received similar treatment.

As all of Ezra's digging had been on the side of the well nearest the road, the result was that the hole in the ground was finally moved out into the highway.

Judson Tolliver was commenting on the exploit one day down at the corners. "Queer thing Ezra did," he remarked. "You know that old well that stood in his front yard? Well, sir, he's moved it thirty feet from where it was —moved it clear out into the road!"

"How'd he do it?" inquired another representative citizen.

"You'll have to ask Ezra," replied Judson. "But he did it, sure enough. I saw the well in the road yesterday, and I saw the track he made movin' it. The thing plowed a furrow four feet wide all the way."—Youth's Companion.

OUR GOLD CERTIFICATES.

Why These Notes Have Never Been Made Legal Tender.

Answering the question, "Why are gold certificates not legal tender?" the New York Times says:

The first gold certificate act was passed in 1863, and at that time the issuance of these certificates was confined to certificates drawn to order. It was not until later that bearer certificates were put out.

These certificates were issued at the request of New York banks which at that time were handling large amounts of gold and which sought the issuance of gold certificates by the government as a matter of convenience, thus obviating the constant handling and rehandling of gold coin. These certificates were regarded not so much as money as warehouse certificates for money, being exchangeable at all times upon demand for the actual coin.

The question of making the certificates legal tender was not, to the knowledge of the authority consulted, discussed when this suggestion of the New York banks was carried into effect by act of congress. The fact that it was decided, to begin with, to limit these certificates to certificates to order would have been a barrier in the way of making them legal tender had the suggestion been advanced.

So much for the authorization of gold certificates and their not being made legal tender then. Financial authorities point out that there has been in the years since no practical need for taking this step. Gold certificates are in practice accepted as in every way as good as the gold itself, and they are immediately convertible into legal tender by surrender and exchange into gold.

ANTIDOTES FOR POISONS.

Practical Hints About Avoiding Death Dealing Drugs.

Poison looks innocent. That is why so many people are poisoned accidentally. Some poisons are sweet to the taste. That is why children may easily mistake them for sugar and water.

When you buy a poison ask for a distinctive label and have it state the proper antidote. Be particular to keep your poison in its distinctive package. Never tolerate its careless exposure.

In case of poisoning by any of the poisons most commonly taken by accident follow these rules:

Always remember that the first thing in all cases is to empty the stomach.

Poisoning by mineral acids may be neutralized by chalk, magnesia, even the plaster from the wall in watery solution.

For any burning or corrosive poison much help may be given after the vomiting by raw egg in milk.

White of egg is particularly helpful in corrosive sublimate poisoning.

Carbolic acid poisoning is difficult to deal with because the anaesthetic effect of the poison prevents the action of the usual emetics. A large drink of whisky or alcohol will help to modify the effects of the acid, and renewed efforts may then be made to induce vomiting. Raw eggs and milk are helpful, but the proper antidote is sodium sulphate.

Concentrated lye has brought death to many children. The antidotes are water containing vinegar and lemon juice to neutralize the alkali, then milk, oil or butter.

Opium poisoning requires stimulation after emetic treatment. Hot strong coffee should be given and the patient compelled to move about.

After you have produced vomiting by your emetic and have given whatever antidote is in your power, do what you can to make your patient comfortable. See that the extremities are warm, give plenty of air, keep the patient awake if the poison was a narcotic, otherwise as quiet as possible. Use all the common sense you can while you wait for the doctor.

But the best time for common sense is before the necessity arises. Remember the distinctive label on the package!

Adulterated Sugar.

Do you know it?

Only experts can tell adulterated sugar.

Many substances are used as adulterants.

Water is one of the things used in adulterating sugar.

Marble dust has been frequently used for this purpose.

Other materials, finely ground, have been added to sugar.

The most frequent addition is glucose, or corn sugar, which is much cheaper.

Glucose is less sweet than pure sugar, partly because of its lesser solubility in water.

In these days of pure food inspection there is comparatively little danger of buying adulterated sugar.

For White Furniture.

Use clear turpentine and a soft cloth to clean white enameled woodwork or furniture. It will remove every spot without removing one bit of the gloss, as soap often does.

TUB FROCKS.

Style Tips About This Season's Simple Wash Gowns.

At least three-fourths of the summer morning dresses are of voile, cotton voile naturally, which visits the laundress without ill effect. There are striped voiles, plaid voiles and dotted voiles, and there are flowered voiles combined with plain voile in this year's manner. One notes piping as a popular trimming this season perhaps because it is so easy to insert tubing of stiffening in a piping and give the skirt a modish flare. Not many of these tub frocks that one buys ready made, however, are provided with hoops or facings of stiffening. They are supposed to be distended over properly made petticoats, the material of the frock itself falling in soft folds. Moderation both of flare and of length is the rule that governs them, for a correct little morning frock is supposed to be simple, fresh and sweet, never compelling attention by an undue smartness or distinction of style. One of the best models for a morning frock has a tucked, gathered skirt with a yoke at the hips. This style is not particularly new, but it is always charming for a simple frock. A dotted blue and white voile, priced ready made at no more than $6, has a tucked skirt falling to the ankle. There are two three-inch tucks above a three inch hem, and the full part of the skirt is gathered to a deep hip yoke cut in pointed scallops at the edge. The waist is shirred at the shoulders and has three-quarter sleeves finished with turned back cuffs of hemstitched white voile. The fronts turn back in soft revers, edged with a tiny white ball trimming, and there is a surplice vest of white voile, to which is attached a wide draped collar hemstitched like the cuffs. The belt question is solved satisfactorily by a straight sash of the voile three inches wide. This hooks at one side, and two short sash ends falling over each other are tipped with white crochet balls.

Coloring Rugs and Carpets.

If the faded ingrain or other carpet shows no holes, it will pay to color it. After beating it and cleaning all spots with soap and water or gasoline lay it flat on the floor and follow the directions on the package. Apply while hot with a scrub brush. This will color one side. Fiber rugs and plain carpets may be freshened wonderfully in this manner. Use light blue on a blue rug, tan or orange for brown, light green for a green rug. Do not get the dye too dark or the rug will look muddy.

To remove ink from a rug or carpet immediately sop sweet milk over the spot and dry as much as possible with a dry cloth. Then apply gasoline to take out the grease that the milk would otherwise leave. To remove soot from a carpet sprinkle the spot with salt. Let the salt remain on the spot for about twenty minutes, then sweep it hard with a broom. The spot will disappear.

Breaking In New Shoes.

Sprinkle your shoes inside with a generous quantity of talcum powder. You will find this the greatest relief to the burning and smarting caused by the drawing of new leather.

Easy & Practical Home Dress Making Lessons

Prepared Specially for This Newspaper By Pictorial Review

An Exquisite Summer Frock.

One of the prettiest of the period fashions is this costume of crepe Georgette and silk crepe de chine with draped bodice and bouffant skirt.

A perfectly fascinating model is shown here carried out in crepe Georgette and crepe de chine. Any two materials, however, may be combined in duplicating the dress. The neck may be cut in round, high or V-shaped line and the sleeves may be long or short. The jumper is draped to form a girdle, while the draped skirt is built on a three-piece foundation. In medium size the dress requires 6½ yards if made entirely in the same material, 36 inches wide, with 1⅞ yard lining 36 inches wide for underbody and foundation gores. If contrasting fabrics are used, 3 yards will be needed of plain and 3½ yards of figured material.

First face the underbody from neck edges to 1 inch below small "o" perforations to form yoke. Close seams as notched and turn hem in right back at notches. Plait the lower edge of underbody placing "T" on corresponding small "o" perforations. Adjust belting for a stay.

Now, close the sleeve seam as notched, gathering along small "o" perforations. Draw gathers to required size and stitch straight bands of material or ribbon 1 inch wide over gathers. Gather sleeve sew in armhole of underbody, small "o" perforation at shoulder seam.

To make the skirt, first join the foundation gores as notched, then close center-back seams of foundation gathered skirt and over-skirt, from large "O" perforations to lower edges. Gather edges of gathered skirt and over-skirt between double "TT" perforations. Hem gathered skirt and arrange on foundation. Plait over-skirt at extensions placing single "T" on corresponding small "o" perforations; gather between the plaits. Arrange over-skirt on gathered skirt, center-fronts and center-backs even; stitch upper edges together, small "o" perforation at side seam of foundation. Stitch the remaining gathers along small "o" perforation in foundation to form a puff; regulate the fulness in gathered skirt underneath the puff. The ruffle comes next. Fold on slot perforations and gather. Then stitch to the gathered edge of puff, bringing front and back edges of ruffle to large "O" perforations. Tack the lower front and back ends of ruffle at the small "o" perforations in over-skirt and tack to the puff about 2 inches above the gathered edge. Adjust skirt to position stitch upper row of gathers in waist, center-fronts and center-backs even.

The jumper comes last. Gather lower edge and adjust stay underneath back. Stitch gathers and side edges to position. Gather along shoulder and make a row of gathers each side of small "o" perforations ⅜ inch apart. Stitch a piece of tape 2 inches long under gathers. Turn under the edge of extension in front on slot perforations, gather ⅜ inch from folded edge. Lap front over the back and stitch gathers in front along the back edge, over the stay; stitch lower edges together. Bring the 2 single large "O" perforations together and tack, forming an armhole. Adjust over the surplice waist.

SHOOTING WITH A RIFLE.

The Proper Way to Aim if One Aspires to Good Marksmanship.

Walter Winans, the famous American sharpshooter, who lives in England, writes to the Scientific American the following directions as to the proper way to aim a rifle:

"The way to shoot is, first, put a big ivory front sight in place of the black one used for target shooting.

"Most real objects one shoots at are more or less dark, and the black front sight is difficult to see on the object; the white one shows up at once.

"Next, have your hind sight put on the rifle at the distance from your eye that you can read print best.

"When shooting do not try to focus a black bullseye, a black front sight and a black hind sight and a half dozen other things alternately while you hold on to your rifle like grim death.

"Look at the object you want to hit. If it is moving judge how much allowance in front you must make, bring up your rifle to your shoulder, swinging it with the movement of the object you want to hit, and press the trigger as the butt touches your shoulder.

"The bullet will go where you want it to without your noticing the sights at all.

"If you want to be a good rifle shot at game, or as a soldier, join the nearest clay pigeon shooting club, and when you can break 90 per cent of the clays you can rest perfectly confident that you can hit a man every shot you fire if being charged by an enemy if you have a rifle in your hands instead of a shotgun.

"If you practice in a 'coal hole' rifle gallery at a stationary black bullseye with a black front sight and see 'three front sights' and a 'blurred back sight' you are not learning to shoot, but merely ruining your eyesight."

Cornish Pies.

There are several dishes peculiar to Cornwall, and a pasty is one. It resembles an apple turnover, but is composed of meat, potato and seasoning, finely chopped. Almost every kind of food is put into a Cornish pie. Squab pie is a great favorite. Herby pie is another peculiar dish, composed of nettles, pepper cress, parsley, mustard and spinach, together with thin slices of pork. Pies are also made with leeks and pilchards, goose feet, gizzard and blood, raisins, sugar and apples and mackerel, parsley and cream.—London Standard.

Her Proof.

"I've brought back those eggs you gave me this morning," said the new bride as she began to take the articles in question from her basket. "They're duck eggs."

"Duck eggs!" sneered the grocery boss. "You're mistaken, ma'am. I don't never sell no duck eggs."

"But I tested them," triumphed the matrimonial novice. "I dropped them into water and they floated."—Judge.

The KITCHEN CUPBOARD

THE CAKE BOX.

MAHOGANY CAKE.—The yolks of two eggs, half a cupful of milk, two tablespoonfuls of cocoa. Mix together and cook in double boiler, stirring until thickened, and when cooled add a cupful of sugar, half a cupful of milk with a scant teaspoonful of soda, two tablespoonfuls of melted butter, a cupful and a half of flour, a teaspoonful of vanilla and bake.

Frosting For Mahogany Cake.—Beat till stiff the whites of two eggs. Boil a cupful and a half of sugar in half a cupful of water till it stiffens in cold water. Add to egg whites, flavor with vanilla and beat till cool enough to spread.

Layer Chocolate Cake.—Put a lump of butter the size of an egg in the dish and two tablespoonfuls of cocoa and fill in with the butter. Mix them together, stirring until it is all smooth. Add a cupful of sugar, a cupful of sweet milk, in which you have put a teaspoonful of soda, an egg yolk, a cupful and a half of flour, a level teaspoonful of cream of tartar sifted with the flour, a teaspoonful of vanilla and a little salt. To put it together, boil seven tablespoonfuls of sugar and four of water, and when it "hairs" beat the whites of the eggs and stir the sirup in slowly. Let it cool and spread on cake.

Fairy Gingercake.—A cupful of molasses, half a cupful of sugar, a heaping tablespoonful of lard, an egg, a cupful of sour milk with a teaspoonful of soda stirred in until it begins to foam over the top of cup, a teaspoonful of ginger. About a pint of sifted flour, making a rather thin, light dough. It will be light like a sponge if not mixed too stiff.

Hot Water for Sick Headaches

Tells why everyone should drink hot water with phosphate in it before breakfast.

Headache of any kind, is caused by auto-intoxication—which means self-poisoning. Liver and bowel poisons called toxins, sucked into the blood, through the lymph ducts, excite the heart which pumps the blood so fast that it congests in the smaller arteries and veins of the head producing violent, throbbing pain and distress, called headache. You become nervous, despondent, sick, feverish and miserable, your meals sour and almost nauseate you. Then you resort to acetanilide, aspirin or the bromides which temporarily relieve but do not rid the blood of these irritating toxins.

A glass of hot water with a teaspoonful of limestone phosphate in it, drank before breakfast for awhile, will not only wash these poisons from your system and cure you of headache but will cleanse, purify and freshen the entire alimentary canal.

Ask your pharmacist for a quarter pound of limestone phosphate. It is inexpensive, harmless as sugar, and almost tasteless, except for a sourish twinge which is not unpleasant.

If you aren't feeling your best, if tongue is coated or you wake up with bad taste, foul breath or have colds, indigestion, biliousness, constipation or sour, acid stomach, begin the phosphated hot water cure to rid your system of toxins and poisons.

Results are quick and it is claimed that those who continue to flush out the stomach, liver and bowels every morning never have any headache or know a miserable moment.

GERMANS HOLD IN CHECK ADVANCE, SAYS BERLIN

(By United Press)

Berlin—"The enemy cannot boast it has progressed," declared the war office official statement today, referring to the British attack in the Pozieres sector.

The enemy attacks near Pozieres and southeast of Foureux woods were broken down, the statement asserted. Bitter hand to hand fighting occurred at Longueval and Delville woods, and the enemy grenade attacks at Soye Court were repulsed, the statement asserted and operations at Thiaumaunt proved unsuccessful. Russian attacks northeast of Swiniuthy gained ground, the statement reported. Counter attacks are proceedings near Postmyty. Austrian forces held the Russians back from advanced positions. The war office declared that six attacks around Bowakawgoda by the Russians proved unsuccessful.

BRITISH DRIVE CRACK REGIMENT FROM DELVILLE

London—British troops have driven the German Brandenburgers out of Delville wood, according to General Sir Haig's report to the war office today. The British commander-in-chief said the Fifth Brandenburgers were the Teuton troops thus ejected from the little forest area northwest of Zongueval, which had been the scene of hand-to-hand fights for the past week. One hundred stixy-three prisoners were captured in the Delville woods, "the whole of which is now ours." General Haig reported two German counter attacks were beaten off with heavy loss to the enemy.

Further progress was announced by the British commander-in-chief, who also related gains near Pozieres. Near Neuvechapelle he reported small fighting, "a small force of Germans entering our front trenches at two points, but were immediately driven out by counter attacks, leaving their wounded on the field of battle.

NEARBY RAILROADERS FAVOR BIG STRIKE

Syracuse—Central New York members of the four great railroad brotherhoods have cast their ballots on the question whether they favor a strike according to W. J. Welsh, general chairman of the Delaware and Lackawanna system of the Brotherhood of Railroad Trainmen.

In Central New York there are more than 2,000 members. It is not known how the men voted but reports from St. Louis are to the effect that 95 per cent. of the men are in favor of the strike, it is conceded that a majority of them here decided in favor of the fight.

The men are demanding an eight hour shift, with time and a half for overtime. The men do not believe that it will be necessary to call a strike as they are of the opinion that the railroads will grant the demands of the men.

Letters have been sent by the railroads to the office employes requesting them to remain loyal and give their aid in operating the trains in case there is trouble. Mr. Welsh says this is being done to scare the workmen by making them think they will lose their jobs.

It is not believed that the final result of the strike vote will be made for one or two weeks. At that time there will be a meeting with the managers of the railroads to get the final word from those officials. In case the demands are refused all the men will strike, tying up a great portion of the nation's railways.

Sunday Traveling.

Old time acts of parliament in Great Britain aimed to stop Sunday traveling. In 1669, for example, two men were found guilty of the crime of walking from Bristol to Bath on a Sunday and were at once fined 20 shillings ($4.80) each. All business was at a standstill on a Sunday. Nothing was allowed to be sold except milk. Of all the traders of England the milkman, and the milkman alone, was allowed to pursue his calling for the whole seven days of the week.

VALUE OF DANISH INDIAN ISLES

In an article in the Philadelphia Public Ledger Rear Admiral Caspar F. Goodrich presents some interesting facts concerning the strategic value to the United States of the Danish West Indies. He points out that were the islands in possession of an enemy various American interests might be menaced. From them, as a base, it is 1,200 miles to Charleston, our nearest important Atlantic harbor, and 1,300 miles to Norfolk, distances easily covered in three or four days by a fleet, which could fight an action and return with plenty of fuel in its bunkers. Moreover, raiding operations from the islands could, and doubtless would, seriously interfere with, if they did not wholly interrupt our foreign commerce, even at remote points, such as New York, Boston and Portland.

In the other direction lies Colon, the northern entrance to the Panama Canal, a little more than 1,000 miles away from the island of St. Thomas. It is against Colon that a hostile campaign would probably be directed. The possession of this gateway to the Pacific would restore the conditions of the war with Spain when the Oregon had to circumnavigate the whole of South America in order to join Sampson off Santiago de Cuba. It would then be impossible, in the time available, to transfer our naval vessels on the west coast to reinforce our battle fleet, and the war would undoubtedly be brought, for us, to a prompt and disastrous conclusion, since it is unthinkable that it would be declared by a nation less powerful than our own in Atlantic waters, or which, should it be superior, did not possess such a base.

A foreign nation, endeavoring to acquire the Danish West Indies, could have had no mere commercial or profitable colonial aim in view. There is but one harbor in the group that is especially fit as a naval base—Charlotte Amalia—on the south side of St. Thomas. It is rather restricted, but by skill and care it could be made to accommodate a fleet large enough to occasion us grave concern. As the ground rises rapidly behind the town and the harbor runs back in the land, it can be adequately fortified with slight difficulty. The other islands in the West Indies are French, British, Dutch or Cuban. We may, consequently, in the future, as in the past, count upon their neutrality, which may assume a "benevolent" character. The same may equally well be said of Bermuda and Canada. The harbor of St. Thomas is by no means ideal, but it can be made to serve. Its strategic position could hardly be bettered. The need of such a base for operations against us or for our defense should the ratifications of the present treaty with Denmark be exchanged, is manifest. Nowhere else can its like be found.

From a secure harbor for merchant steamers to a naval establishment and military outpost the path is neither hard nor long. It is wiser, however distasteful, to forestall any such maneuvers by a foreign power by purchasing the islands ourselves. We do not relish the idea of such a thorn in our side, such a threat to neighboring Porto Rico, to our naval station at Guantanamo (only 300 miles distant), to that at Key West (1,000 miles distant), to the free navigation of the Caribbean Sea, the Mona and Windward Passages (between Porto Rico and Haiti, Cuba and Porto Rico, respectively), and to our gul cities. It would be excessively awkward, too, were our enemy planted on the flank of our lines of communication with Vera Cruz and Tampico, should we be forced to intervene in Mexico.

As it appears that from any geographical quarter the Danish West Indies would be a valuable point of support for any European government wishing to quarrel with us, it is in the highest degree essential that we spare no effort to prevent their falling into unfriendly hands.

Notice From the Health Department

Fulton, N. Y., July 26, 1916.

To Whom It May Concern:

I hereby certify that there is no known case of infantile paralysis in the City of Fulton. The recent case died on the 24th instant after an illness of about one week. In my opinion, this was a true case of the disease. Every known precaution has been taken to prevent the spread of the disease and if no other cases develop within the next ten days there need be no further fear of the disease so far as the recent case is concerned. Any one desiring to come to Fulton need have no fear of encountering the disease as no case exists here.

SAYS FISH CAN REASON.

Maine Man Says They Warn One Another of Unfavorable Waters.

Bangor, Me.—Stephen Decatur Bridges of Verona, near Bangor, who is known as the salmon and alewife king of the Penobscot, is positive not only that fish have brains, but that fish reason and form dislikes and likes and tell their opinions to each other.

Bridges explains the disappearance of salmon from the Penobscot in two ways. Either "salmon tell other salmon how dirty its waters are and how it is not fit for any respectable salmon to live in" or "the fish resent it because at the hatchery in East Orland they are taken from the water and stripped of their eggs."

"The fish resent that because it is against nature," Mr. Bridges asserts. "They decide they are not being treated right and stay away."

Bristol (Conn.) Man Recovers From Terrible Shock.

Hartford, Conn.—Francis P. Bill of Bristol is recovering from the effects of having 66,000 volts of electricity course through his body. Physicians said his case was one of the most remarkable ever reported.

Bill was on the roof of a power house looking over the damage done to the wiring system by a storm when he accidentally made a contact with the high tension distributing frame, through which 66,000 volts of alternating current flowed. Most of his body was as black as jet as a result of the electric shock.

Creditors Meet.

Hunter Arms Co. Meeting Today.

Norwich, N. Y.—Before Federal Judge George W. Ray today there is being held a meeting of creditors of the Hunter Arms Company, of Fulton, to decide whether or not action is to be taken to recover about $30,000 of the company's funds which it is said was used to pay individual debts of the Hunter Brothers.

Trustees Frank B. Hodges, H. W. Smith, of Syracuse, and Frederick A. Gage, of Fulton, caused the meeting to be held. E. J. Mizen, of Oswego, is here representing a group of creditors. He has asked the trustees to start actions against various banks and individuals which had dealings with the Hunters.

In these suits it is charged that funds of the Hunter Arms Company were used to pay the debts and obligations of the Hunter brothers themselves, and that the banks and others received the moneys knowing that the money was coming from the company and not from the Hunters themselves.

The notice calling the meeting says that one creditor of the Hunter Arms Company only is anxious to start the suits and calls all the other creditors for their opinions regarding the advisability of such actions. There are numerous banks all over the country who had dealings with the Hunters. Nelson P. Bonney, of this place will look after the interests of the trustees.

Frank B. Hodges, one of the trustees says that the alleged discovery of the use of the company's funds to pay the debts of the Hunter brothers was made but a short time ago. The amount of funds used in this way was estimated by Mr. Hodges at $30,000. He said, however, that it might be larger. When asked by Attorney Mizen to start action against the banks the trustees refused to make such a move unless the creditors advised the action.

British Liner Apam to be Restored to Former Owner

(By United Press)

Richmond, Virginia.—Federal Judge Waddell today decided that the capture of the British Liner Apam should be restored to its former British owners. The decision is against the German crew which captured the vessel and brought her here.

The court held that the German government lost all claim to the Apam and her cargo of 4,000 pounds when on February 1st she was helped into the neutral waters of Hampton Roads. The intentions were of laying up the vessel indefinitely.

Newspaper Office is Wrecked by Bombs.

(By United Press)

Aurora, Mo.—The presses of the Menace, an anti-Catholic newspaper, were wrecked yesterday afternoon by three bombs. This publication has been particularly antagonistic to the Roman Catholic Church and has a circulation of over a million that reaches to every state in the Union. The editor was recently prosecuted for criminal liable and efforts have been made to exclude the paper from the mails.

It is one of the few so-called patriotic papers that has weathered the gale since the bygone years of the A. P. A., and still is a thorn in the side of the adherents of the Roman Catholic Church. No one was injured in yesterday's explosion, but the office was demolished.

COLORADO BREWERS TO LET THEM SELL IN THE STATE

(By United Press)

Denver, Col.—An amendment to the prohibition law and six other measures will be referred to the voters of Colorado at the November election.

The bill initiated by the brews to permit of the sale of Colorado made beer in the state is easily attracting the most attention. The other six include the medical examination and license act passed by the legislature but opposed by the chiropractors and other recent schools of drugless medicine.

Better facilities for the treatment of the state's insane, abolition of the state tax commission and extension of civil service are proposed. The use of state school funds for farm loans and a proposal relating to the running of cattle on the range are the two remaining measures to be voted on.

NATIONAL TENNIS CHAMP ON WAY EAST TO DEFEND TITLE

(By United Press)

Lake Minnetonka, Minn.—William A. Johnson, tennis champion of the United States, appeared here today in the Northwestern tourney at Deephaven. Johnson is enroute east to defend his title. His home is at Portland, Ore.

Other experts appearing on the courts today were H. V. D. Jones, Oregon champion; Clarence Griffin, national doubles champion, who is Johnson's doubles partner and G. Grant Wickersham, former Pacific Northwest and Oregon titleholder.

D. L & W. WILL BUILD ALL STEEL COACHES

(By United Press)

The Delaware and Lackawanna Railroad Company has awarded a contract for the construction of fifty-five new all steel passenger coaches from the Pullman Company of Chicago, the coaches to be delivered during the next four or five months. The cost of the equipment will be aproximately $715,000.

For the past few years the company has been abandoning the use of wooden coaches reinforced with steel; for the safer all steel type. In the freight service about the same percentage of cars are constructed FIVE ....: with steel underframes, and every new freight car ordered within the last few years has been of steel-underframe construction. The new coal cars are of all stell construction so that within a very few years both the passenger and freight service will be almost entirely equipped with steel.

JUST LIKE A WOMAN.

(By United Press)

London, July 8—The quick wit of a London barmaid saved her employer a heavy fine today when two detectives attempted an arrest under the anti-treating law.

"Two quarts of beer, please miss," ordered one of the men as the pair sat down at a table in the "pub."

The barmaid brought the beer, accepted the detective's money and was about to turn away when the sleuth arose with a triumphant smile.

"Now! I've caught you, haven't I?"

"Not on your life," was the quick come-back. "You ordered two quarts of beer and you got them. Now you drink them." Then, turning to the other detective, she asked "What's yours?"

British are Gamely Opposing Onslaughter.

London—The British front is withstanding Germany's most powerful attack of exceedingly hard fighting. Artillery hammering and hand-to-hand fighting has so far failed to dent the line at advance by recent British officers, General Haig so included in his report today.

The British commander-in-chief embellished his brief statement of today with such terms as "hand-to-hand struggle continuing without intermission."

There has been violent oppositions by the Germans and desperate enemy attempts.

It is the belief of military experts here that the Kaiser is now utilizing the reserve forces now concentrated in front of the British line from Verdun and other points on the western battle front in a bitter endeavor to wrest back from the British the land they have captured in the last few days. Despite this, Haig reports favorably concerning advanced progress today.

Berlin frankly admitted loss of the titanic line at Kovel, after the Russians had succeeded in gaining wonderful progress today in penetrating their advanced position.

WON'T CALL EASTERN LABORERS TO FIELDS UNLESS JOBS ARE WAITING

(By United Press)

Topeka, Kans.—The state employment bureau announced today that it won't call an army of eastern laborers to the Kansas harvest fields next summer until it has a job for every man called.

The bureau will make a canvas of farmers in the spring, asking each how many men he must have.

Under the present system harvesters are sent to the farmers as calls are made for them. The result has been that generally there is an estimate given out far over the number of men actually needed. Men who come from eastern places sometimes do not get sufficient work to pay them for their trip to the state.

YOUNGSTOWN DENTIST, 47 DAY FASTER, IS FASTING AGAIN

(By United Press)

Geneva, O.—Dr. H. G. Huffman, Youngstown dentist who three years ago fasted forty-seven days and regained his health after physicians said he would surely die of stomach trouble within a few months, is now nearing the end of his third long fast. He has not tasted food for twenty-nine days. Last year he fasted thirty-one days. Dr. Huffman told the United Press today that he would do without food this time a few more days so that his system might be fully rid of poisons.

Mrs. Huffman, who married the dentist at the completion of his fast last year at Camp Phoenix, near here, joined her husband in the food taboo a few days ago.

Huffman doesn't enter his fast gradually. He has a hearty meal and then just quits eating.

One of the prime necessities at Camp Phoenix is a soft bed, to afford a cushioning for the bones," says the dentist.

Two weeks after Huffman ends his fast he is strong and well. He is now mostly skin and bones.

UNCLE SAM HAS A GOOD WORD FOR BRICK ROAD

(By United Press)

Washington—Continuing its advice on road building, the United States office of Good Roads today discussed brick as a building material.

Forty-four years ago the first brick road in the United States was constructed in Charleston, W. Va.

"The experience of forty-four years," says the U. S. Office of Good Roads, "has demonstrated that it is entirely practical to construct satisfactory brick roads."

"These roads," says Uncle Sam's experts, "now are giving general satisfaction, when properly constructed and it is probable that their mileage will continue to increase rapidly."

The principal advantages of the brick road according to the government road service are:

1.—Durability under practically all traffic conditions.

2.—They afford easy traction and good foothold.

3.—Easily maintained and kept clean.

The only disadvantage attributed to this type of road is the high initial cost. This is largely offset, it is figured, by the low maintenance and general stamina of the road.

The best type of brick road, in the opinion of the government road experts, is a good brick laid on a sand cushion, with a substantial concrete foundation.

The most essential factor in the building of a good brick road is the selection of a suitable brick. The United States road men recommend bricks made from shales and fire clays of the "lean" varieties. The shales are red while the fire clays produce a light-colored road. The brick chosen should be hard, rough and uniform in size.

Although a definite speculation as to crushing strength is not necessary, good paving brick should withstand a pressure of from 15,000 to 20,00 pounds per square inch.

For the brick road, a concrete foundation is advisable, but where the traffic is light, broken stone will often suffice. Should stone be used, it should be put on in courses, the largest stones at the bottom, and should be from eight to ten inches deep.

The more satisfactory concrete base may be a composition of one part Portland cement, three parts sand and fice to seven parts broken stone or gravel. This should then be covered to a depth of two inches with a clean sand, spread dry. On this sand cushion the bricks are laid on edge and at right angles to the line of the road. Each alternate row should begin a half a brick in. Ramming and rolling complete the road.

CHICAGO RACE REVIVAL MEET ENDS—PONIES MAY BE BACK PERMANENTLY

(By United Press)

Chicago—Two weeks of a revival in horse racing ended here today with the staging of the Gold Cup Handicap, a $2,000 purse being split among the first four finishers. The revival was held under the auspices of the Illinois Jockey Club, composed of a score of Chicago merchants. They plan to meet shortly to determine whether an attempt will be made to make the return of horse racing here permanent.

WE ARE ALL LITTLE CHILDREN.

The editor of the Columbus Dispatch holds that we are all little children—and he proves it. He tells of a group of men who acted for all the world like a bunch of boys in exhibiting the scars of their youthful indiscretions—and he tells it delightfully, somewhat after the following manner:

"Whoever it was that said, 'He jests at scars who never felt a wound,' knew what he was talking about. But there are so few people who have never felt a wound that one seldom hears a jest at scars.

"This is suggested by the words of a little party of business men who assembled together, the other evening, to talk over industrial problems and spent most of the time in talking about personal matters. There was not a full-grown scar in the lot, but every one of the men present had some sort of trace of abrasion or incision about his person. One had a white streak across his thumb, which he exhibited with great satisfaction, and told with gust about the day, away back in his youth, when the knife slipped. Another had a brownish patch on his wrist, the result of a burn received one Fourth of July. Still another had a crooked finger joint, a souvenir of his baseball days. And there was one who rolled up his trousers and displayed a blurred place on the calf of his leg where he had been kicked by a colt.

"Industry was forgoten in relating the reminiscences. Bank accounts did not give one standing at the gathering. It was a personal matter, a thing to boast about, these little scars, and the evening had almost passed away before these men of affairs were willing to stop talking about them and get down to business.

"The point is, we are all little children, exhibiting our marks of triumph or disaster upon the least provocation—and gloating over the misfortunes which no longer bother us. Little children, grown gray—that is all! Time stiffens the joints and thickens the arteries and presses down the shoulders until they are rounded. But it touches not the heart."

BOOM TOWNS.

Every town tries to be a boom town. All of the cities strive for booms. But the truth is, the town or city that moves along in normal lines, and avoids the boom, is a better place to live than is a place where there is a boom on.

Detroit at this time is the boom city of the United States. The automobile industry is responsible for it. The boom started several years ago, and has steadily increased in volume until this time, when the city has actually become, in some respects, a very undesirable place to live. It is all right from a money-making standpoint; there is a lot of money being made by a few people in the place. But as a place of residence, it is not desirable, if the people themselves who reside there are to be believed.

In the first place, houses are so scarce one must pay an exorbitant rent, if he does not own his own home. In fact, it is almost impossible to secure a house fit to live in at a reasonable rate of rent. Then, the city has grown so fast, and improvements have been required tosuch an extent, that even if a fellow owns his own home his taxes amount to more than it would cost to rent a better house in some other city. The value of property for taxation has been increased tremendously, as well as the tax rate itself, and the man who owns his home is burdened at this time, and will be burdened for some time to come, to an extent that makes it exceedingly hard upon him.

The people of Los Angeles could probably tell the people of Detroit something of the evils of the boom. Los Angeles "enjoyed" a boom several years ago, and has hardly recovered from it at this time. They thought it was a wonderful thing at the time, and advertised it all over the world, but the truth is the boom broke more people than it made, just as the boom in Detroit is a bad thing for more people than it is a good thing for. And if ever Detroit experiences a letting up in the automobile industry—good night.

PROUD OF HIS NAMESAKE.

Lord Kitchener was once asked if he was not very proud when he heard people applauding him for the success of his military campaigns. He said that he was, but that he was much prouder of a namesake of his. Asked who the namesake was, he said, "Nobody; just a variety of wheat that is grown in Africa—Kitchener wheat."

While he was stationed in India a gentleman whom he had met in South Africa wrote to him that the wheat crop was in a poor way; that the rust attacked it every year, and that the farmers were having a hard time raising the grain at the time, whereas before the rust attacked it they grew great crops. The gentleman wanted to know if the general could help them in any way.

Kitchener had seen splendid wheat growing in Tibet, and remembered it. So he sent to that country for several bushes of the grain and forwarded it to his friend in Africa. In the fullness of time the wheat crop of Africa improved, and today there is a good variety of the grain, practically rust proof, known as Kitchener wheat—the wheat which the general sent to his friend having been given that name.

So this great man of war, whose untimely death the other day shocked the world, took more pride in the fact that he had helped to keep people alive than in the fact that he had helped to put people to death. Putting them to death was his occupation; he was not supposed to help them to live. But even the warrior bold, skilled in the art of destruction, came to know that it is a better thing to help people to live than it is to help them to perish.

And another thing is that this busy man of strife had time and went to the trouble and expense of assisting a lot of farmers he had never seen. Had he done something for a comrade in arms, nothing would have been thought of it; he might have been expected to do that. All of us are willing to help our fellows who are engaged along with us in our enterprises. But the man who steps out of the beaten path to assist a stranger, the fellow who has time to turn his hand to the doing of things entirely out of his line—that is the kind of man the world most needs—and most appreciates.

A ROMANCE OF BAGDAD.

Peculiar Story of Nazim Pasha and an Armenian Beauty.

A remarkable tale of Nazim Pasha, the commander in chief of the Turkish armies against Bulgaria in the Balkan war, is told by Sir William Willcocks, K. C. M. G., in an article in Blackwood's Magazine:

"After Nazim Pasha became wali of Bagdad there lived in one of the best houses in the place an Armenian girl of eighteen, who was very pretty, very wealthy and an orphan. All the young Armenians in the Turkish empire were eager suitors for her hand, but she would have none of them. The wali invited her to his palace and told her that in her unprotected condition she might get into trouble, but that if she were to marry a countryman of hers in his household she would have both a sterling husband and his own protection. She accepted, but on reaching her home sent the nazim word that she preferred remaining single.

"'You shall remain single for life!' said the wali, and put a cordon of soldiers round her house, which prevented her from leaving it.

"She escaped to the French convent one day, dressed as a French nun, and the cordon of soldiers moved to her new residence. After some delay she escaped as a French monk, took refuge on Lynch's boat and sailed for Basra under the British flag. Boats full of soldiers surrounded the steamer at Basra, but the girl ran across the deck, jumped into the Russian consul's boat and took refuge under the Russian flag. The consul saw her safely on to the British India steamer, and she descended at Bushire, in Persia.

"Not many months afterward Nazim Pasha himself was deposed and ordered to return to Constantinople. He returned there finally and was, as we all know, murdered by the Young Turks."

Milo Was a Glutton.

Milo, the famous athlete of ancient Greece, born 520 B. C., was victor at both the Olympic and Pythian games for six times in succession. On one occasion he ran four miles with an ox on his shoulder, killed the animal with a blow of his fist and then ate the entire carcass in one day. An ordinary meal for this gluttonous Titan was twenty pounds of bread, twice that much meat and fifteen pints of wine.

THE CITY

STEPS UP THE HILL SOLVE GRADE PROBLEM

Values of Adjoining Property In Salt Lake City Enhanced Thereby.

The accompanying photograph of the terraced steps on Fourth avenue, Salt Lake City, shows a combination of utility and beauty which has solved a problem of heavy grade on a city street, writes City Engineer Silvester Cannon in the American City.

Fourth avenue is 82½ feet wide, with a roadway between curbs of 30 feet, and extends from the stairway east about two miles. The stairs are located about 400 feet east of the road in the bottom of City Creek canyon. The total rise of the stairs is 43½ feet, and the horizontal length is 99 feet.

Before the improvement was made Fourth avenue was an unsightly and useless street at this point. It was practically impossible for vehicles to use it, and in the winter months even pedestrians climbed it with difficulty. It was out of the question to attempt the construction of a roadway that could be used by vehicles, as the grade approaching from above was 8½ per cent and the grade below 7 per cent, increasing in a vertical curve to 12 per cent at the foot of the stairs. The road was therefore closed to vehicles, and the terraced steps were put in for the use of pedestrians.

A straight stairway without intermediate platforms would have been possible on that slope, but would have been too fatiguing. Steps leading toward the center and out again were therefore resorted to. In order, however, to obtain between the stairs a slope light enough for sodding, retaining walls were built leading to and from the central stairway, with a pipe railing on the upper walls.

The white quadrangular spot to the right of the central stairway is the cover of a clean out box over an eight inch drainpipe emptying into the gutter at the foot of the stairs. In the left side a high retaining wall is visible, which was built to create a level building spot, on which a residence is now in course of erection. An electric lamp at the upper end of the central stairway furnishes the light.

Values of adjoining residential property have been distinctly enhanced, and this section of Fourth avenue, with the City Creek park at its base, has become one of the most attractive districts in the city.

Home Garden Movement.

There are various angles from which to praise the home garden work which teaches things that cannot be learned inside a classroom, says the New York Press. The youth gets the joy of "seeing things grow." He acquires a capital counterirritant for the supposedly artificial atmosphere of the apartment house. He comes into touch with the laws of nature, the pulse of living things, the creative forces. He works in good wholesome earth. He learns something of where his food comes from. He loses the illusion of the tin can, hermetically sealed, germ proof, wax paper school of household economy.

Many of us must live in cities, and living in them does not bring half the evils that the "back to the farm" advocates would have us believe. But we make the cities difficult to live in by not doing the things that these home garden children are doing—holding our feet on the ground and keeping in touch with mother earth.

The New Municipal Dock at St. Louis.

The new municipal dock and warehouse on the Mississippi river at St. Louis have just been opened to traffic. This dock marks the beginning of the practical revival of Mississippi river traffic along modern lines. In the past all the loading and unloading of boats have been up steep levees by wagon. The new type of dock fits any stage of the river. Loading and unloading are entirely mechanical, by electric crane, the connection between rail and boat being direct.

St. Louis has just come into possession of eleven miles of double track along its river front. This municipally owned railroad gives the city control of her entire commercial water front.

PROTESTS AGAINST THE POST OFFICES DOING A BANKING BUSINESS

The recent order from the post office authorities at Washington instructing postmasters in Oswego county towns as well as those all over the country to act as collection agents for the federal reserve banks by receiving checks drawn on state banks not members of the reserve system has brought a flood of protests upon the postal authorities, from representatives and senators in Congress.

Some of the Congressmen when they received word from bankers "back home" lodged objections in which they called the new plan "revolutionary and unjustified."

The action of the postmaster general was taken at the instance of the Federal Reserve Board which requested that he "authorize postmasters to receive checks from federal reserve banks, drawn upon state banks that are not members of the reserve system that they be requested to collect these checks in currency, and remit the currency to the federal reserve bank by registered mail, the federal reserve bank of the district to pay all expenses for postage and registration fees upon funds thus remitted."

The order it is said would deprive small country banks of the exchange fees on such collectons. It is said there are about 8,000 country banks that are largely dependant on exchange fees for profits and that the new rule might force several of them to close their doors.

So far no action has been taken to rescind the order.

ODD FELLOWS' PICNIC THURSDAY

The seventh annual picnic of the Odd Fellows' Picnic Association will be held at Long Branch, Thursday, August 3. Those attending from Fulton will leave by trolley at 10:15 a. m., and 1:45 p. m. Other lodges attending will be the Oswego, Phoenix, Baldwinsville, Jordan and Warners.

It is expected that there will be a large attendance of Rebekahs and a parade will be given by them on the grounds for which four prizes will be given for the best drills. There will be two prizes each for the largest percentage of membership in line and for the largest number in line.

A varied program of sports has been arranged and a jolly good time is being anticipated by all those who expect to attend.

THE INDEPENDENTS TO PLAY BALL

The Independent baseball team left today by automobile for Adams, where they will play a game with the Adams team today and tomorrow they will play the Rowan Stars at Oswego.

LARGE PICKEREL CAUGHT.

One of the largest pickerels caught this season in Neahtawanta Lake was landed last night by Dr. Clare Whitbeck. This fish weighed sixteen pounds and will compete for the gun club prize.

DEMOCRATIC CLUB WILL BE ORGANIZED IN SYRACUSE SOON

Preliminary plans for the organization of Wilson-Republicans clubs throughout Central New York have been made. Organizers are shortly to be sent into every city of any size in this section and every effort made to get Republicans, dissatisfied with the nomination of Justice Hughes to declare himself for the president.

The movement originated in New York city where the first club secured a large membership and is still growing. The prime movers in this organization elated by their success there have decided to branch out and make it a state-wide organization.

The first meeting in Central New York is to be held in Syracuse within the next ten days.

NEW TENNIS COURT COMPLETED

The First Ward Athletic Club has added the finishing touches to it new tennis court and the society is now open for membership. A meeting will be held at their field Monday night for the election of officers and the various committees. A plan is under way at present for the promotion of a tournament. Prizes will be awarded to those making a creditable showing.

Those entered thus far are: A. E. Black, Harry Griffith, Thomas and John Gillard, John Painter, Clayton Hill, William Smith, Edward Rugg, Albert Painter and Frank Blake.

Fully one hundred dollars have been spent in laying out this court and a small taxation will be imposed on members to defray expenses for the general upkeep of the grounds.

COMMITTEE WILL WAIT ON MR. LANSING TO OFFER HIM NOMINATION

Syracuse, N. Y.—Gubernatorial booms are going to be a minus quantity in Democratic political circles for a few days, or at least until Secretary of State Lansing makes up his mind whether he wants to run against Governor Whitman for the state's highest office this fall.

Democratic leaders who have not as yet pledged their support to any of the numerous candidates in the field are laying plans to draft the secretary from his Cabinet position into the governorship race according to reliable reports.

So anxious are they to get Mr. Lansing to run that a committee of them from all parts of the state will go to Henderson Harbor or Watertown, where he is spending his vacation and formally offer him the nomination. It is believed that it will be several days before he makes up his mind, or at least announces his decision and in the meantime all the other candidates will lay low.

Though the chances are very remote that the secretary will accept, nevertheless the followers of Democracy feel that he should be asked, for the Wilson administration, may desire to put him forward for the effect it will have on the presidential campaign in placing New York State in the Democratic column with a large majority for Wilson.

The make-up of the committee which will meet Mr. Lansing cannot be named, but it is a representative group of Democrats. The body will not ask in the name of the Democratic organization, but in the name of the Democrats of the State. Should Mr. Lansing accept and allow himself to be the candidate there is not any doubt but that the entire Democratic state organization would be behind him to a man. Some leading Democrats who know of the coming conference are certain that if he accepts Democrats all over the state will follow him without any dissension. Mr. Langsing's decision will probably be made in Washington, for it is presumed that he intends to follow the desires of the administration.

Conferring with Mr. Lansing is not the result of the inability of the state Democrats to find a suitable candidate, but the desire of the New Yorkers to help in the presidential fight. It is understood that the administration is uncertain about New York considering that Hughes is a native son and former governor and consequently has a large personal following.

With this idea in view and in the hope that a federal official heading the state ticket would swing the state to the Democratic column the administration is willing to make a sacrifice of Mr. Lansing to be sure of New York state's electoral votes. Mr. Lansing will follow the president's wishes and if it is decided that as a Democratic candidate for governor he could assure the Wilson followers of success the deal will be consumated and Mr. Lansing will be asked to accept.

However, the committee is only hoping that such may be the result for there are many things to be said on both sides on the question. It is almost unprecedented for a federal office holder, especially a secretary of the state to be relegated to a state ticket and this undoubtedly will stand in the way of the administration giving the plan its approval. On the other hand it is not in the least unusual for a state official to be an aspirant for a federal position, but when the tables are reversed the situation is complex.

While the negotiations are under way Democrats all over the state will hold aloof on the question of other candidates. As soon as Mr. Lansing announces his decision the campaign will open in earnest.

Grass Grows In Tree.

Wetmore, Kan.—In the E. W. Thornburrow yard in Wetmore is a large bunch of blue grass growing in the fork of an elm tree ten feet from the ground. Every fall the residents of Wetmore, who are watching this curiosity, expect the grass to be winter killed, but every spring it shows up green and strong and matures seed. The grass has been growing in the tree for three years.

Movies Draw More Than Church.

Belleville, Kan.—"Where the People Go" is the title of an interesting compilation prepared during the social survey taken in Belleville. It shows that during the year 105,000 attend the moving picture show, 93,000 religious services, 8,698 church socials and picnics, 12,400 the county fair and farmers' institute, 5,600 the Chautauqua and 2,870 go to ball games.

NATIONAL GUARDSMEN MUST PAY THEIR OWN EXPENSES HOME

Militiamen, who have been mustered out of the service because they have dependent relatives will have to pay their own railroad fare and their own expenses home.

This is the announcement from the headquarters of General Wod. It is explained after investigation that this rule is a government regulation and that the army officers could do nothing in the matter.

In view of the fact that when a soldier in the regular army has served the term of his enlistment he receives transportation to the town or city where he entered the service, it had been naturally supposed that the federal government would allow return mileage to any soldiers of the militia who went to the border.

When the militia units went to the border they carried with them in their ranks scores of men who were married and the sole support of their families. Anticipating that there would be war with Mexico hundreds of firms and corporations throughout the country announced they would continue to pay militiamen in the service of their country.

When it became apparent that the president was going to use the state soldiers for patrol duty only, many of the business firms cancelled their offers to pay wages of the militiamen to their families. As a result of that action, added to the fact that many of the guardsmen worked for small concerns which could not afford to continue their soldier-employees' salaries, even if they so desired, much suffering began to result from the call to arms. Relief societies were formed, and they, with prominent citizens throughout the country, urged the War Department to issue instructions which would relieve the situation. Thereupon orders were issued that all militiamen who left dependents at home could by submitting two affidavits from disinterested parties obtain their discharge from the army.

This ruling was hailed with great joy in homes all over the United States and the necessary legal documents were forwarded to General Funston and the other proper authorities. General Funston at once released scores of men.

The hope of their families to have them back home soon, however, was in many instances short lived. For when the men left the government service, with scarcely any pay, they found that they could not get transportation home.

The railroad fare from Brownsville and the attendant expenses are about $60 per person. Consequently men whose releases were due to the fact that they were poor found themselves confronted by a situation alarming to themselves and to their children. They began to write leters home expressing surprise that the government refused to give them transportation to the place where they were mustered into the service.

An investigation has revealed that under the regulations, a militiaman when discharged ceases to be a member of the government army machine, and therefore, ranks as a private citizen, and that, as far as the army is concerned, transportation cannot be furnished him.

It is probable that those organizations and societies throughout the country who are interested in the welfare of the dependent families of militiamen will make strong representations to Washington. Many of the men are said to be practically stranded on the border while their families are in dire want at home.

FOUR BROTHERS, EACH SIX FEET, AT BORDER

They Are McDonalds, and Their Comrades Call 'Em "the Big Macks."

Savannah, Ga.—"Twenty-four feet of men." That is what members of Battery A, Chatham artillery, call the four McDonald brothers—Bill, Bob, Alex and Bernard. They are known also as "The Giant Quartet," "The Big Macks" and the "Fighting Four." But their father, Bernard L. McDonald of the city health department, towers over them all; he's six feet two.

Bill is the youngest and shortest, being scant six feet. Bob, next, is the tallest, exceeding Bill in height by an inch and a half. Alex, the eldest, and Bernard are just an inch shorter than Bob.

The four are a quartet in the musical sense also, each being possessed of a pleasing voice. Alex has been "end man" in most of the local amateur minstrel shows.

All four went with their battery to Mexico.

BREMEN!

Ottawa—The naval department today denied that there was any foundation for the story published in New York that the German super-submarine Bremen had been captured and taken into Halifax.

A BOY'S STRANGE ESCAPE.

Lies In Dugout While Bombs Are Thrown on Him.

London.—One of the most extraordinary experiences was gone through recently by an English boy in woodland fighting in the region of Bazentin-le-Grand and Longueval.

He now lies in a field hospital smiling because the world seems to him like paradise after an infernal dwelling place.

He went with the first rush of men into Mametz wood, but was left far behind in a dugout when they retired before the violent counterattack. Some German soldiers passed this hole where the boy lay crouched and flung a bomb down on the off chance that English soldiers might be there. It burst on the lower steps and wounded the lonely boy in the dark corner. He lay there a day listening to the crash of shells through the trees overhead—English fire—not daring to come out. Then in the night he heard the voice of his own countrymen, and he shouted loudly, but as the English soldiers passed they threw bombs into the dugout. The boy was wounded again.

He lay there another day. The gunfire began all over again and lasted until the Germans came back. Another German soldier saw the old hole, threw bombs down as the safe thing to do, and the boy received a third wound. He lay in the darkness one more day, not expecting to live, but still alive, still eager to live and to see the light again. If only the English would come again and rescue him! He prayed for them to come, and when they came, capturing the wood completely and finally, one of them, seeing the entrance of the dugout and thinking the Germans might be hiding there, threw a bomb down, and the boy was wounded a fourth time. This time his cries were heard, the monotonous repetition of this ill luck ended, and he was rescued.

FLOG "DIPS" OUT OF OWN.

Detroit Police Have Novel Way of Getting Rid of Pickpockets.

Detroit, Mich.—The police department has hit upon the plan of flogging "dips," or pickpockets, as the best means of ridding the city of them.

This came out when Attorney Thomas Mahon made a request of Commissioner Gillespie for an investigation of the police department to determine who has been applying the "lash." Investigation has developed that a "lash" has not been used, but instead the "dips" have been flogged with pieces of rubber hose of the garden variety.

Recently half a dozen "dips" were arrested. The men were taken to court and released on their promise to leave the city. That afternoon they were taken in a patrol wagon to the bank of the River Rouge.

Three detectives, each with a three foot strip of hose, took positions on the bank where the "dips" when they stepped out of the wagon would have to pass them. As the pickpockets jumped out the detectives began to swing the pieces of hose, landing on the backs and arms of the "dips." Some of them cried out in pain, others ran to escape the flogging and most of them had to wade or swim the river. As they left a warning was shouted to them to never return.

United States Interests Are Solely In Peace and Its Future Guarantees

By President WOODROW WILSON

IF it should ever be our privilege to suggest or initiate a movement for peace among the nations now at war I am sure that the people of the United States would wish their government to move along these lines:

First.—Such a settlement with regard to their own immediate interests as the belligerents may agree upon.

WE HAVE NOTHING MATERIAL OF ANY KIND TO ASK FOR OURSELVES AND ARE QUITE AWARE THAT WE ARE IN NO SENSE OR DEGREE PARTIES TO THE PRESENT QUARREL.

Our interests are only in peace and its future guarantees.

Second.—A universal association of the nations to maintain the inviolate security of the highway of the seas for the common and unhindered use of all the nations of the world and to prevent any war begun either contrary to treaty covenants or without warning and full submission of the causes to the opinion of the world—A VIRTUAL GUARANTEE OF TERRITORIAL INTEGRITY AND POLITICAL INDEPENDENCE.

MOTION PICTURES IN BRAZIL

They Have Some Curious Rules In the Theaters That Show Them.

South America is fast becoming a paradise for the motion picture theater, but some curious rules prevail. For example, the best motion picture theaters in Rio de Janeiro do not allow patrons to drop in or out at will. A film is advertised to begin at a certain hour of the afternoon or evening. At the appointed time doors are closed, or in most cases a heavy and highly decorated curtain is dropped, and the show in the auditorium begins its functions.

A rather novel arrangement, also noted in other Brazilian cities, is the waiting lobby immediately in front of the entrance proper. After purchasing a ticket the patron enters the lobby or corridor, takes a comfortable seat and waits until the termination of the first section of the play, the time of which may be a few minutes or half an hour. While waiting one may listen to the band of music, which may be heard equally well by those within the lobby or in the audience.

At times the crowds become congested and all the lobby seats are occupied. In such cases the ticket seller withholds further admissions, and the crowd remains upon the street, but the brilliant electric lights (if night) and the music of the band continue to swell the number of waiting patrons.

The night is the most popular hour for the crowds, as at that time the whole family turns out, and every one who can afford an automobile presses it into service. At one of the best motion pictures in Buenos Aires a writer counted more than 200 machines drawn up in lines awaiting the closing of only an average attraction. The hour was near midnight, and about as much ceremony was observed as if the finest opera company had been the star performers.—Argonaut.

GOLF CLUB FOR MEN ONLY.

Women Players at Greensburg, Pa., Sneer at the Venture.

Greensburg, Pa.—Steps are being taken toward the organization of a new golf club in Greensburg. The Greensburg Country club has an excellent course, but many of the men players are dissatisfied because so many women members have become devotees of the game. It is planned to make the new club strictly for men.

"The women talk too much," said one male expert. "It is impossible to make a good shot with all their chatter going on."

A woman golfing enthusiast when told of what was on foot retorted indignantly: "Let the old things organize a new club if they want to. They are jealous of some of the scores we have been making; that's the whole trouble."

CITIES MUST PAY FOR ALL OF STREET IMPROVEMENT

Second Deputy Commissioner of Highways, Fred W. Sarr, has notified all cities throughout the state through the city clerks that the state department through an amendment to the state highway law has been relieved of the working of repairing state highways in the incorporated cities of the state.

The amendment provides that the repairs to all state highways inside the city limits of the cities shall be made at the expense of the cities themselves. The same law also turns back to the cities the moneys they have paid under the old highway law for the maintenance of the improved highways.

WESTERN UNION WILL FORWARD FUNDS AT HALF RATE

Relatives and friends of National Guardsmen on duty on the Mexican border can send funds to them at half the usual rates, so the Western Union telegraph company has announced.

Mr. Chadwick's machine suffered a badly bent fender on the front of his car.

WOMAN NAMED WARDEN OF THE VALATIE FARM

Albany—Announcement of the appointment of Mrs. Jane L. Armstrong of Rochester as agent and warden of the Valatie Farm for Women was made by Superintendent of Prisons Carter today, simultaneously with the news that John H. Mealey had offered his resignation from the post, effective August 15.

Mrs. Armstrong, who is the wife of former Senator William W. Armstrong, is the first woman to be appointed to a wardenship of a penal institution in the state. Her appointment had been urged by representatives of women's clubs and prison reform associations in various parts of the state.

ADMIRAL CAMERON McRAE WINSLOW, NOTED NAVAL SEADOG, RETIRES TODAY

(By United Press)

Washington—Rear Admiral Cameron McRae Winslow, commander of the Pacific fleet, one of the navy's old seadogs and incidentally, one of its richest men, retired from active service today on his sixty-second birthday—that being the statutory age for retirement.

Rear Admiral Winslow's wealth—he married a daughter of the Sugar King, Havemeyer, never interfered with his service. He did a lot of work.

Included was the feat of taking the Battleship New Hampshire right up to its wharf at New York, without the aid of any help but his channel sense. This, by the way, was termed by Admiral Goodrich, his superior officer—Winslow then was a captain—as the finest piece of seamanship he ever saw.

Admiral Winslow was boosted five numbers in rank when as Lieutenant C. McR. Winslow he cut the cables in Cienfuegos Harbor, Cuba, during the war with Spain—with the Spaniards firing from a distance of 150 yards.

In this engagement a Marine was killed and nine men—including Lieutenant C. McR. Winslow—wounded. Winslow was wounded in the hand. His promotion came when he was recommended for "extraordinary heroism."

Winslow and his men went out in sail and motor launches. Winslow was in charge. With the big guns on the ships out in the harbor firing at the cable office—they wrecked it before Winslow reached shore—Winslow went into the face of a Spanish bombardment. He got by with it in excellent shape—some casualties reported, but the work done.

Admiral Winslow has done a lot of sea duty. He has done some land duty, too—enough to be known to New Yorkers for his stay as supervisor of New York harbor in 1909, 1910 and 1911, and to those at Newport, R. I., when he was at the naval war college in 1904.

At the time of his retirement Winslow was a full Admiral, being entitled to that rank by virtue of his command of the Pacific fleet. He served as a member of the Slocum commission when the burning of the New York excursion steamer was investigated.

Winslow was born in Washington in 1854. He was appointed to the Naval Academy by the President in 1870, and graduated in 1875.

A Novel Introduction

By WILLARD BLAKEMAN

I had been at the Chocabassett inn, a summer resort, a couple of days when a young lady arrived whose appearance struck me favorably and forcibly. I was standing on the porch when she came up the steps, and, though she did not notice me, I had a very good opportunity to observe her. "If she is so attractive in appearance," I remarked to myself, "begrimed with engine dust, what must she be in evening dress?"

The next morning I went down to breakfast, forgetting to lock the door of my room. On returning to get a cigar, what was my surprise to see the young lady whose appearance I had admired coming out of the apartment. I doffed my hat and stood looking at her inquiringly. She had taken the key, which I had left inside, from the lock and was putting it on the outside. Having locked the door, she turned and faced me. Noticing by my expression that something was wrong, she looked at me inquiringly.

"I fancy you have made a mistake," I said.

"How so?"

"You have evidently mistaken my room for yours."

"Not at all; this is my room."

I beckoned to a chambermaid who was passing and asked her to call for the clerk of the house. He came up and, after telling him of the situation, I asked him what was the number of my room. He said he would have to go back to the office to find out, whereupon I said:

"You needn't do that. Go into the room with the lady and learn whose baggage is there."

He opened the door and entered the room, the lady following him, I following the lady. I had put my trunk in a closet, removing what I especially needed to the bureau drawers. The consequence was that the room appeared to be empty. The girl looked about her, and I saw by her expression that she was puzzled. The clerk opened the closet and displayed my trunk with men's garments hanging above it. The girl looked astonished. He then opened a bureau drawer, and there lay a number of laundered shirts. The girl was astonished.

"I returned to my room after breakfast," she said, "remembering that I had left my portmonnaie in this little place on the bureau. I took it without looking about me."

"That's exactly where I left my money," I said, and, lifting the lid of the place referred to, I displayed—emptiness.

"Great heavens!" exclaimed the girl. "Can I have taken your property?" She produced a roll of bills and with trembling hands counted them. "Oh, my good gracious! I didn't have but $7; there are thirty here."

Had I acquiesced in her statement, as I should have done, the episode would have been ended, and my acquaintance with the lady would have remained undeveloped. But I especially desired that the acquaintance should continue. I did not attempt to soothe her feelings. I did not say that I believed her story or that I disbelieved it.

"I wish you both to come to my room," she said, evidently much troubled, "that I may show you there is $7 in the same place relatively as this."

"Please excuse me," I said coldly. "It would not be the part of a gentleman to ask for proof in such a matter from a lady."

She cast a half troubled, half indignant glance at me; then, turning on her heel, she said to the clerk imperatively, "Come with me."

He seemed much surprised that I did not at once warmly exonerate the lady and followed her as she had commanded.

I knew very well that the episode had not ended, and I was not mistaken. Later in the day the landlord came to me and said that the lady who had mistaken my room for hers desired to see me, that she might convince me of her innocence of any wrong intention and that she had taken my money by mistake. She was waiting for me in the parlor. I went there at once and approached her with serious mien.

I permitted her to labor through a defense that no lawyer would give a fig for, I wearing an expression of doubt, and when she could go no further from sheer worry I broke into a smile.

"Do you suppose," I said, "that I would suspect that what you did this morning was intentional?"

"Then why have you acted as if you have?" she exclaimed, both relieved and irritated.

There was a pause. I couldn't give the true reason, yet I must get out of the hole somehow.

"I have a reason," I said—"a very important one. But I cannot at present give it to you. Should you care to know it, say, six months hence I will tell it. Possibly the time may be shorter. It may be a few weeks, a few days. We shall see."

I did not doubt that she would keep in touch with me till she got that reason. I was formally introduced to her, and she came for me every day while we were together at the inn to extract it from me. While I was putting her off I was talking and acting very sweet to her, and before we left the place had made such headway that I confessed the true cause.

She pretended to be very angry with me for my action in the matter, but this did not prevent her accepting future attentions, and in the end she accepted me as well.

BREAKING IN YOUR MAID.

Practical Ways to Teach Her Without Also Befuddling Her.

In teaching a new maid you will have to be patient and try not to tell her too many things to do all at once—that is, impress one duty at the time. If she will wear the neat print frock, white apron and tiny cap of the regular dining room maid they will help to give her proper pride in learning to serve correctly.

If soup is dished in the kitchen teach her to bring in the plates not more than two at the time on a tray. Have the large service plates in place and let her place the soup plates in them from the left hand. In removing they are taken one at the time, not piled, also from the left. Everything is served from the left hand, as it is more convenient in every way. A point you should insist upon is that she be very careful not to touch the edges of any dish with her thumb in passing, and the way to avoid this is to have a tray upon which dishes with vegetables may be carried, a serving spoon or fork, or both, in each dish.

Teach her to have the glasses filled before guests are seated; also to have the bread either on a bread tray or a slice or roll within the fold of the napkin. Salt and pepper casters as well as coasters for iced tea glasses, bread and butter plates, spreaders, spoons, knife and fork, etc., all should be in place. This relieves her and makes for a quiet, pleasant meal.

In removing all plates and dishes after serving they should not be piled nor placed noisily within hearing. Crumbs are to be removed with a napkin in her hand on to a plate held in her left hand. Dessert is served from the left. After dinner coffee is placed at the right hand with sugar and cream, if liked. If large cups of coffee are served with the meal they should be placed at the right hand from a tray with the greatest care not to spill any in the saucers.

Many women select all white for maids, but the striped blue or gray and white or plain blue with small white apron and a tiny cap are a good choice. If a maid must help in the kitchen the big apron covering her entire dress is easily slipped off before entering the dining room.

Wise Precaution.

In making up wash materials one always has to take into consideration the fact that the fabric may shrink after washing. If you wish to avoid undoing the hem in order to lengthen it again try this method: Before you hem the bottom of the skirt run a tuck in the hem on the wrong side. Sew this tuck with long stitches nearly at the top of the hem, then finish the hem as usual, taking care not to take stitches of the tuck with the hemming. If the skirt shrinks it is a matter of a few moments to rip the long stitches and let it down without undoing the hem.

For Afternoons.

Colored print dresses are quaintly embellished by roll over collars of white muslin with colored hemstitched border.

Tennis Togs.

Tennis frocks of white tub silk or white crepe de chine with finely plaited skirts are considered extremely chic.

FOR YOUNG FOLKS

Sleepy Time Story About a Beautiful and Loyal Maiden.

HER LONG AND WEARY WAIT

Legend of the Lowly Place of One of Our Common Wayside Plants—Game and Puzzle to Amuse Small People A Handsome Prince.

Tonight, said Uncle Ben to little Ned and Polly Ann, I am going to retell an OLD GERMAN LEGEND.

Once upon a time a beautiful maiden who lived in a little village in Germany had a lover, a great, stalwart fellow named Bertold.

Thuda was a very pretty girl and had many admirers. Indeed, not a girl in the village was so sought after.

However, she only cared for Bertold and as Bertold was as fond of her as she was of him they decided to marry.

As it happened, to their dismay, one day the king of their country and the king of another land decided to go to war, and all the young men were taken away to fight, whether they were willing or not.

"I'll never forget you, my Thuda," declared Bertold.

"Come back, come back soon, my dearest!" cried the unhappy Thuda.

"I will, I will!" said her lover. "You will wait for me?"

"Yes, yes," answered Thuda. "Ever will I be looking adown the road, hoping to see you coming."

The soldiers marched away, and Thuda began her weary waiting. Every day she stood by the roadside patiently waiting for the day to come when she would see Bertold marching along the path toward her. A month passed, a year, and still Thuda stood patiently by the roadside. Two years passed, three, five, seven—yet she still waited. Ten years passed, then more years—twenty years, thirty. Thuda was an old woman. Her beauty was gone, but still every day she stood by the roadside waiting.

Forty, fifty years passed away. Thuda was a little old shriveled up woman, still waiting by the roadside.

People jostled her aside, wayfarers pushed her out of the path, but still she waited until finally she shrank into such insignificance that instead of a girl or woman she became a low growing plant which we call plantain or waybread.

It still grows by the roadside, no matter how it is trodden upon or jostled aside. It is always there, and whenever we see it patiently uprearing its long, slender leaves we are reminded of poor Thuda waiting for the lover who never came back from the war.

A Rainy Day Game.

Here is a game that is popular with French children. Perhaps it may help you to pass away some dismal moments when it rains steadily. Choose a letter of the alphabet, "D," for instance. Give pencil and paper to each player and tell him to write the name of a country, river, mountain, city, soldier, artist, writer, musician and statesman, all beginning with the letter "D." At the end of five minutes the lists are closed. One reads the names from his list, and those having the same names on their lists scratch them off. The winner of the contest is the one having the most names not on the lists of the others. The fact that his names are more uncommon shows that he has greater knowledge or memory.

Charade.

My first is a title of honor used
By a nation well known to fame.
My second, in skeleton, is much abused
And for many a robbery is to blame.
My whole is a beast of burden, small,
Whose voice gives forth a strident call.
Answer.—Don, key.—donkey.

FOR IRONING DAY.

Hints That Help Make a Bugbear a Day of Ease.

With the onslaught of warm weather and the wearing of wash dresses ironing day becomes an important feature of the week. Even the girl who presses her own blouses and handkerchiefs has to consider it seriously, so it may not come amiss to give a few hints about keeping the iron in good condition.

Never put a hot iron on the back of the range unless you stand it on end or lay it on its side, for it will otherwise collect any tiny particle of grease or stove black that it comes in contact with. Rub your irons vigorously before you put them on to heat with a piece of ordinary pumice stone slightly dampened. This not only removes all particles of dirt and rust, but polishes them and makes them iron smoothly.

When you are ironing starched clothes be sure to put a handful of salt on to a piece of newspaper and rub your iron in this from time to time to remove the starch that adheres to the hot metal.

In pressing crepe de chine, georgette crepe or any thin silk use an iron that is fairly cool, as a very hot iron wrinkles the material and takes the color out. In pressing ribbons wipe them with a cool iron, using a piece of linen or a handkerchief to protect the ribbon. A dampened ribbon ironed with a hot iron will turn very stiff, but if a fairly cool one is used will remain supple and smooth.

If you want a white shirt waist fairly stiff, but not starched, iron it with a hot iron while it is very wet. Pongee also must be ironed while wet, as otherwise it will not be spotless. If you want the pongee very soft, however, let it dry and then iron it without sprinkling, using strength to press out the wrinkles. Never dampen pongee as the spots will show.

If you want to keep your plaited frills looking like new, baste the bottom or the edge into place before you wash them, the plaits can thus be readily ironed back into place, and then the basting may be removed.

Prepared Specially for This Newspaper By Pictorial Review

Child's Surplice Frock.

A dainty little dress of pink batiste made with a long waist that fastens in surplice effect and has a scalloped skirt attached under a belt of ribbon.

Fashioned in surplice effect front and back, the long plaited blouse of this dress, boasts a very pretty line. Pale pink batiste is used to develop the frock, the lower edge of the skirt being scalloped, then trimmed with insertion and edging. This trimming is repeated on the waist and sleeves. The waist closes in the back and has a removable vest, with neck outline in two styles. If the short sleeves are not desired, provision is made for long one-piece sleeves, gathered to a band.

In average size the dress requires 2⅝ yards 36-inch batiste, with 5 yards of insertion and 8 yards of edging.

By folding the batiste in half, the various sections of the pattern will be cut in duplicate. The home dressmaker should study the cutting guide to see how to use her material to best advantage. The skirt is shown placed on a lengthwise fold of the material with the piecing coming next, on a lengthwise thread. The collar comes next, but this may be omitted, if the low neckline is used. The front of the waist, resting on a lengthwise thread, precede the back, also on a lengthwise thread. To the right of the back, on the selvage edge, is the band, then comes the sleeve. The front shield is placed on a lengthwise fold of material, while the back is laid along the selvage edge. The belt may be laid on either a crosswise or lengthwise fold.

If the dress is made of flouncing instead of plain material, cut off the front edge of the front and back edge of back on slot perforations. Cut off lower edges of skirt and sleeve on small "o" perforations. Place patterns on material with front edge of front, back edge of back and lower edges of sleeve and skirt along bordered edge of material.

Medium size requires 5 yards of flouncing 18 inches wide.

The Kitchen Cupboard

THE CANNING KETTLE.

CHERRY LEAF PICKLES.—Green cucumbers about an inch in diameter should be used for this recipe of delicious pickles. In a jar place a thick layer of well cleaned cherry leaves, then a six inch layer of cucumbers until the jar is filled, having a layer of cherry leaves last. Over this pour a salt brine made of one cupful of salt to about ten quarts of water. Every morning for two weeks mix the leaves and cucumbers well up from the bottom of the jar with the hands. At the end of this time drain off the brine to the last drop. Cut the cucumbers into pieces about an inch long. Place in quart jars, scattering mixed pieces through. Then make a sweet sirup as for any sweet pickle, fill the jars and seal. At the end of about two weeks reheat the sirup and seal the jars for winter use.

Currant and Raspberry Jelly.—Pick over the currants, but do not remove the stems, wash and drain. Pick over the raspberries. Use equal parts of currants and raspberries. Mash a few in the bottom of a preserving kettle, using a wooden potato masher, and so continue until all the fruit is used. Bring to the boiling point and let simmer until the currants look white. Strain through a coarse strainer, then allow the juice to drop through a double thickness of cheesecloth or a jelly bag. Measure, bring to the boiling point and let boil five minutes. Add an equal measure of heated sugar, boil three minutes, skim and pour into jelly glasses. Place in a sunny window and let stand twenty-four hours. Cover and keep in a cool, dry place.

Currant Jelly Without Cooking.—Jelly made by the cold process is considered more delicate than that made by boiling, but it does not keep quite as long. Wash and mash the currants well, let the pulp stand a little while and then strain. Place the juice in a stone jar and put in a cool place for twenty-four hours. Remove the scum from the top, strain and to each pint of juice add a pint of sugar. Stir until the sugar is dissolved and seal in glasses. In twenty-four hours you will have a transparent jelly. No heat is required.

Bottled Gooseberries (Cold Water Method).—Put in glass jars well washed gooseberries. Fill the jars as full of water as they can hold, fastening on the lids under the water, not taking the jars out until rubber and cap are in place and fastened down tightly. They will keep a year. Rhubarb and huckleberries may be bottled the same way.

RETURNS AFTER THIRTY YEARS

Sailor Had Been In Almost Every Port, and Parents Didn't Know Him.

Townsend, Del.—Mourned as dead for thirty years, David Guessferd returned to the home of his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Guessferd, who live on a farm near here.

When sixteen years old young Guessferd went away on a boat plying between Smyrna and Philadelphia as a sailor. He was anxious to see more of the country, so obtained a berth as a sailor on a vessel plying between New York and the East Indies, and that was the last heard of him.

He has been in practically every port in the world and on one occasion was wrecked in midocean and he and the captain of his vessel were the only survivors. He is said to have accumulated considerable money and will remain with his parents. They did not know him.

DRAINED ALL THE LAND.

Water Over Low Tract Disappeared When Ditch Is Dug.

Rockport, Mo.—The outlet ditch that drains Lake Nishnabotna at Langdon is the talk of the whole Missouri bottom. The effects have been almost miraculous.

It seems that when the ditch drained the Nishna, water standing all over the bottom, whether it had a connection with the ditch or not, disappeared, often in the night, leaving the ground fit for cultivation within a few days.

The Nishnabotna river has been standing full of water for about a year, and as the water level was almost as high as the great body of surrounding land, the water soaked through and saturated it all.

MOTORCAR "DEADLY WEAPON"

Judge Says It Is Used For Offensive and Defensive Operations.

Portland, Ore.—That a motorcar under certain conditions is a dangerous weapon was held by Judge Robert Morrow in the circuit court. The case was that of C. A. Warriner, accused of assault with a dangerous weapon in having with his motorcar ridden down a motorcycle on the Columbia highway which carried H. H. Beckman and his wife. Mrs. Beckman was badly injured.

Judge Morrow fortified his decision with citations from American precedents and observations on European battlefields, where, he said, the motorcar was employed as a weapon of offense and defense.

IMPATIENT NATION

Guatemala, Mexico's Southern Neighbor, Suffers From Raids.

BIG LOSS BY DEPREDATIONS.

Northern Border of Country Attacked at Intervals, and Valuable Stores of Chicle Are Taken and Readily Sold to Nearby Dealers, Who Ship to United States.

Guatemala City.—The people of the republic of Guatemala, Mexico's neighbor to the south, are about as nearly out of patience with the Carranza government as are those of the United States. The depredations along the northern border of this country, which began as soon as Carranza found himself accepted by the American government as a real ruler, have continued at intervals ever since.

The damage suffered by the citizens living on the frontier has not been so great as that inflicted on Americans along the Texas, Arizona and New

PRESIDENT ESTRADA CABRERA.

Mexico border, because the dividing line is much shorter and the country is less thickly settled.

The tactics against Americans, however, seem to be the same as those employed in the north—the quick raid upon some isolated and unprotected hamlet, the shooting of a few inoffensive and unarmed people, the looting and the hurried get away.

Although the Carranza government has steadily disclaimed all responsibility for these incursions and has placed the responsibility upon the omnipresent bandits, enough evidence has been collected by government agents to show that many of the attacks were participated in by men known to be Carranza partisans maintaining a loose sort of military organization.

Among the few Americans in the northern part of Guatemala these attacks by Mexicans are spoken of as "chewing gum raids." In almost every case, particularly along the frontier of the department of Peten, the object of the maurauders is to steal the laboriously obtained and valuable stores of chicle from which chewing gum is made and for which the forests of Peten are famous.

The chicle finds a ready market among dealers near by and is shipped out of the country as a Mexican product, usually to the United States.

A trip through the interior of the country is sufficient to convince the traveler that the republic was never in a more peaceful condition. The only revolutionary efforts that have been discovered have been those of Mexicans, most of whom are known to be in Carranza's pay. These gentlemen have been promptly deported.

United States silver dollars in the district between Guatemala City and Puerto Barrios, the Atlantic port, are much more in evidence than they are along Broadway. No one seems to be able to explain the influx of coins but they are welcomed, and the tattered money of the republic is a bad second in popularity.

Only second in importance to the business boom among all classes is the effective solution of the high cost of living problem.

Bread forms the most important part of the people's food, and bread has been steadily rising in price on account of the control of the grist mills by a few large syndicates. President Estrada Cabrera called a halt on this by nationalizing all the water powers of the country, setting up mills and leasing them under suitable regulations.

These mills cut the price of bread, and the syndicate, unable to compete with them by using steam power, found their grip on the pantry of the republic broken.

Fish Yields Diamond Ring.

Grand Rapids, Wis.—Andrew Musial, a fisherman, is a great admirer of suckers—the fishy kind. The other day while busy with rod and line in the Wisconsin river he pulled up one of these despised specimens and when cleaning it found a valuable diamond ring in the entrails.

Cripple Stops Runaway Horse.

Shamokin, Pa.—Although handicapped with a permanently crippled leg, Constable Weary in a crowded thoroughfare made a flying leap at a runaway animal's head and was dragged a considerable distance until the horse was stopped.

MUST BE EIGHTEEN TO DANCE.

Girls if Younger Must Have Guardian's Permission.

Cleveland.—Girls who pride themselves on how young they look will have to take along their birth certificates when they go dancing at municipal dancing halls.

Those who can prove they're more than eighteen may keep on dancing after 9 o'clock. Those who not only look younger than eighteen and really are will have to press into service a parent or a guardian. No, no such luck. Any Tom, Dick or Harry won't do as a guardian. The powers that be won't put up with it. The guardian has to be a regular guardian, manufactured by a court of justice.

City Dance Hall Inspector John, dance hall chaperons and dancing masters got together at a meeting in the city hall recently and tried to have the "younger set" barred from the floors after 9 o'clock, parents or guardians notwithstanding.

GET $8,000 FOR KINDNESS.

Boy and Girl Rewarded For Favors to Invalid Woman.

Pittsburgh.—Henry Paul McPeake of this city and his sister, Miss Lois McPeake of Canonsburg, have just been made aware that it pays to be kind to an old invalid lady, in the fact that her will, filed for probate here, provides for the boy in the sum of $5,000 and $3,000 to his sister.

Some years ago when Mrs. Anna Sutton Leech, a wealthy resident of Pittsburgh, was at a sanitarium at Markleton there was also there as a patient young McPeake, who is a son of George C. McPeake, Republican nominee for the legislature in Washington county, and when Lois came to visit her brother they got acquainted with the lonely widow. Between them they contributed to make life a little pleasanter for Mrs. Leech, and she promised not to forget them. She died recently.

UNCOVERED HEIRLOOM.

Silver Watch Was Lost and Lay In Ground Six Years.

Dayton, Wash.—An heirloom watch, lost six years ago by George Jones, came to light recently when County Commissioner Lee Lindley turned a furrow in a field he was plowing and brought the relic to the surface.

Jones lost the watch while at the Lindley farm and had never been able to find it, although he had looked carefully many times.

It was in a silver case, which was badly discolored from long contact with the earth, but after Lindley had shaken the dirt from it and wound it it ran as well as the day it was lost.

Indian Gold Heart Balm.

Sisseton, S. D.—The first breach of promise suit in which Indians were both plaintiff and defendant was decided when Miss Agnes Bear was given a verdict of $3,500 against Smiley Finley by a jury here. MANY DECIDED IMPROVEMENTS AND CHANGES ARE BEING MADE

The public schools of the city are all undergoing repairs. The Fourth street school receives the addition of a new hardwood floor in the assembly room and drawing rooms, to the latter new desks have been added, thus equipping the drawing room nicely. Paint too, has been liberally applied which makes the old structure look like a new place.

The State Street School is being improved both inside and out. The interior is receiving new decorations and an abundance of paint, while the yard is being improved in appearance by plants, flowers, etc. This school is at present very well equipped considering the attendance of the school and with the present improvements completed it will add greatly to the beauty of the city.

Phillips Street School is also included in the list of alterations and is having new improvements. Painting of ceilings and laying of floors also being done there. New rooms will be fitted up to accommodate more pupils.

The Walradt Street School is having the addition of another room which will be utilized in case of necessity.

The Erie Street School grounds are undergoing changes. The grade of the lawn being changed and general surroundings improved. This school also is a convenience to that locality. It being necessary for the children to walk nearly a mile heretofore in order to attend school. This has been eliminated by the construction of the Erie Street School.

Prof. Fairgrieve stated this morning that changes would be made in some of the grades this year.

INVESTIGATIONS BEING MADE FOR INSANITARY CONDITIONS

Dr. A. L. Hall, city Health Officer, has been making investigations throughout the city for the purpose of cleaning out the unhealthful and unclean conditions which may be found and the following notice is being placed on several properties:

STRICT REGISTRATION WILL BE REQUIRED BY INTERNAL REV. OFFICERS

Every ounce of cocaine, morphine, or any other habit forming drug in this country and in this whole internal revenue district is to be checked up and registered by agents from the internal revenue department at Washington.

This will include the accounts of all doctors and druggists in all the twenty-two counties. This work is in connection with the enforcement of the Harrison drug law and is being done to ascertain whether physicians and druggists are following the law.

Every ounce and fraction of an ounce of drugs that has passed through their hands since the law went into effect must be accounted for.

When the law went into effect March, 1915, druggists, physicians and others were required to inventory the drugs on hand. The two internal revenue agents assigned to this district will take this inventory, add to it all the drugs that have been bought subtract those sold and see that the difference, or the quantity on hand tallies with what it should be from the inventory.

This question has arisen in connection with the law. Must a physician who carries a stock of drugs at his home office as well as his down town office register both places.

Internal revenue officers in this district maintain that the physician must register at both places and if the doctor practices from his home he must also keep an account of the drugs there.

Objections to keeping two accounts have been voiced by some physicians. They claim they cannot afford to buy in separate lots, that they are not given as low prices as they would be purchasing in larger quantities.

The government, however, evidently believes that unless separate accounts are kept there might be some opportunity to get around the law although physicians everywhere are trying in every way to obey the law's requirements.

PRICES WILL ADVANCE

Prices of fruits, salmon and other western products are expected to advance after September 1, when the increase in freight rates from that section goes into effect.

The Inter-state Commerce Commission recently authorized the increase and the railroads will put it into effect in about a month.

The extra charges will of course first be paid by the shippers, who will in turn raise the price to the consignees to cover the extra cost. The retailers and wholesalers will then raise their price to the public to cover the raise of the producer.

TIME IS THE TEST

The Testimony of Fulton People Stands the Test.

The test of time is what tells the tale. The public soon finds out when misrepresentations are made, and merit, many months ago local citizens publicly endorsed Doan's Kidney Pills; they do so still. Would a citizen make the statement which follows unless convinced that the article was just as represented? Below is testimony such as the sufferer from kidney ills is looking for.

Mrs. P. Coleman, 204 Pratt street, Fulton, says: "Doan's Kidney Pills are most beneficial in relieving lameness across the back. They also remove headaches, dizzy spells and that feeling of languer and weariness so common when the kidneys are inactive. I used Doan's Kidney Pills and they promptly benefited me. I cheerfully confirm the public endorsement I gave Doan's Kidney Pills some time ago."

Price 50c., at all dealers. Don't simply ask for a kidney remedy—get Doan's Kidney Pills—the same that Mrs. Coleman had. Foster-Milburn Co., Props., Buffalo, N. Y.

HEN FRUIT MUST BE FRESH IF SHIPPED BY PARCEL POST

Shipment of rotten eggs by parcels post must be stopped according to an order from authorities at Washington following complaints to the department of agriculture and the Department of justice.

Officials of these departments will send instructions to district attorneys in all states ordering them to make a thorough inquiry of the trade and discover if possible whether any bad eggs are being shipped in interstate commerce.

The department of agriculture which is charged with the administration of the pure food and drug act will co-operate in gathering evidence. Wholesale prosecutions will follow discovery of any tangible evidence that rotten eggs are being shipped. The fact that complaints from many sections have come in simultaneously have led officials to believe that there is collusion among the shippers.

CATHOLIC PICNIC WILL BE HELD IN FULTON NEXT SAT.

Plans have been made for one of the largest Catholic picnics ever held in Fulton, to take place a week from today. Mason Andrews is president of the picnic organization and will have the assistance of a number of committees, who are laboring to make the affair a success. Michael Bray is chairman of the Sports Committee, who will arrange for various field events including baseball games, races, tug-of-war and other features. Dinner will be served at noon to the large Sunday School and members of the parish.

NARROW ESCAPE FROM DROWNING

A canoe belonging to John Ward and occupied by himself and a companion was tipped over last night in the river. Mr. Ward stated this morning that considerable difficulty was met with owing to the stiff current where the accident occurred and the escape from drowning was miraculous.

After clinging to the boat for a short period they floated into the river basin where they were rescued.

P. O. WAR VETERANS WILL BE GRANTED LEAVE OF ABSENCE

Spanish American war veterans in the employ of the post office department may be granted leaves of absence for as many days as may be necessary to attend the national encampment of the United Spanish War Veterans' Association if they are members, at Chicago. The encampment opens September 4th.

"AL. G. BARNES WILD ANIMAL CIRCUS PRIZE CONTEST."

Are you in on it?

Then get busy and send in a list of wild animal names to the Wild Animal Editor of The Evening Times.

Remember, though, that in spelling the names of wild animals you are to spell them correctly, and use only letters to be found in the first sentence of this article.

There's going to be a lot of really worth-while prizes for the boys and girls that send in the largest list of names.

The first prize will be Six Reserved seat tickets, the second, Four; the third three; the fourth, two reserved seat tickets. Besides there will be a fifth prize of two general admission tickets and eighteen sixth prizes of one general admission ticket each to the Al. G. Barnes Big Four Ring Wild Animal Circus which exhibits in Fulton on August 5th, in afternoon and evening performances.

There will be a big, mile-long, six-band, glittering parade at 10:30 in the morning and a big, free high dive act at one p. m. The doors will open at 1 and 7 o'clock and the circus will be on at 2 and 8 p. m.

But to win one of the prizes, kids, you'll have to hurry, for letters are pouring in. You can get papa or mamma or teacher to help you.

Children of 7 or 8 years are just as apt to win prizes as boys and girls of 15. And you must be 15 years old or under. You must live in or near Fulton. The Evening Times wants to help you win a prize.

Besides all this you will get to see and shake hands with Al. G. Barnes himself, the greatest, most fearless animal trainer in the world, at the Times office when he distributes the prizes for this paper.

The lists of names must be accompanied by the coupon clipped from a copy of The Times and answers must be in not later than 6 p. m.

And Here's a Tip For You.

There are lots of wild animal books at the public library to be had for the asking. At school in the libraries are lots more, and by looking at these you will find the names of loads of wild animals. Now get busy.

You can win a ticket to see this most wonderful circus, with 1,000 animals, each and every one trained to act, if you will use your brains and your pencil.

Notice From the Health Department

Fulton, N. Y., July 26, 1916.

To Whom It May Concern:

I hereby certify that there is no known case of infantile paralysis in the City of Fulton. The recent case died on the 24th instant after an illness of about one week. In my opinion, this was a true case of the disease. Every known precaution has been taken to prevent the spread of the disease and if no other cases develop within the next ten days there need be no further fear of the disease so far as the recent case is concerned.

Any one desiring to come to Fulton need have no fear of encountering the disease as no case exists here.

2 American Troopers Killed; 1 Wounded in Fight With Bandits

(By United Press)

El Paso—Two troopers of the Eighth Cavalry were killed in a running fight with Mexican bandits, near Fort Hancock early to-day, according to reports reaching here. The detachment of American cavalry killed five Mexicans.

The Americans killed were Privates J. J. Twomey, of Troop F, and Customs Inspector R. Woods. L. Tomson, also of Troop F, was wounded. The bodies of five men were found along the lines of the bandits' retreat. Three other troops of the Eighth Cavalry were rushed from El Paso to Fort Hancock, by a special train. Their instructions were to follow the bandits' trail into Mexico if necessary or expedient.

The bandits were surprised by the cavalry patrol and immediately left for the Mexican line. About 700 shots were exchanged. It is supposed the bandits were Villistas on their way to raid some American ranch.

MILITIAMEN MAY STAY ON BORDER 3 MONTHS

(By United Press)

El Paso—Three months, it is estimated, will be required for completion of a course of training for the militiamen in the El Paso military district. This statement is projected in orders received here today. Army officers predicted it might mean the militia would remain on the border for the next three months.

Washington—Colonel Herbert J. Slocum, of the Thirteenth Cavalry, commandant at Columbus, N. M., at the time of the Villa raid, was exhonerated from all blame, according to reports given out by the War Department today.

DEUTSCHLAND'S CREW WILL SAY TO U.S. TODAY, AUF WIEDERSEHEN

(By United Press)

Baltimore—At 1:30 this afternoon the tug Timmons started her engines and began clearing away the barges obstructing the passage of the German super-submarine Deutschland now snuggling at the foot of Andre street, giving every indication of immediate departure.

The Bremen will reach the three-mile limit to-night and then, or early tomorrow morning the Deutschland will go down the bay. This prediction was made by a member of the big U-boat's crew in saying Auf Wiedersehen to a friend on Locust Point today.

Two Officials High Up Blamed for Causing Sunday's Explosion

(By United Press)

Jersey City—A. M. Dickman, Lehigh Valley agent, and Alex Davidson, superintendent of the National Storage Company, were arraigned before Judges Mark A. Sullivan and George Tenant today, charged with manslaughter, in connection with the Black Tom explosion yesterday. Their cases were postponed until Friday morning at ten o'clock, at the request of R. S. Hupsteth, district attorney. The defendants were released under $5,000 bail. T. B. Sansom, president of the Johnson Lighting Company, for whose arrest a warrant was issued, did not appear.

EXPLOSION THE RESULT OF VIOLATION OF LAW

(By United Press)

New York—Complete investigation into the shipment end of the uniquest business conducted by state and Federal authorities seems certain this afternoon, as a direct result of the monster explosion that occurred at Black Tom Island Sunday.

Such announcement came today when Prosecuting Attorney Hupsteth, at the preliminary hearing of the two men arraigned on charges of manslaughter, declared every railroad terminal in New Jersey has been flagrant violators of statutes regarding the storage of high explosives.

DAIRY BUSINESS MUST IMPROVE

Investments In Herds Bring Disgustingly Small Returns ---Farmers' Hired Help Get High Pay.

The Wicks legislative committee, which has been investigating the dairy industry of the state, after holding ten hearings throughout Southern and Central New York, one of which was in Oswego, has concluded that these hearings show that ninety-nine per cent. of the dairymen in this state are up in arms over the present milk prices.

The dairymen claim in the most emphatic language that they cannot make a living unless there is some immediate readjustment.

A survey of 558 hill farms in Chemung county, mainly dairq, show an average labor income to the farmer of $277 per year, a sum lower than that received by the hired man.

Figures compiled by experts, placed at the disposal of the committee, prove that the dairyman can justly demand higher prices.

So acute has the situation been found in some sections that talk of a strike similar to the Chicago troubl has been heard, unless increased prices are not embodied in the new contracts that are to be made one month hence.

Dairymen in county after county during the past four weeks have told the committee that they are making little or no money on their herds—on account of the advances in labor, grain and supplies. Thely show figures which they have themselves compiled or which have been compiled in greater detail by the county farm agents.

In Delaware county, the richest farm section of the state, small gains from dairies have in many instances compelled the farmer's wife to aid in milking and the chores. Dairymen state that if they could receive what the ordinary business man does for his labor and investment that an advance of at least twenty-five per cent. must be paid them by the larger milk concerns.

The investigations thus far conducted by the committee—still preliminary in a way, would seem to indicate that, among other things, there will be a standardization of ice cream before many months. After investigating many ice cream concerns, the committee is of one opinion—that the public should know the ingredients of the ice cream it buys.

So far the work of the committee has been entirely along dairy lines, although the poultry and live stock end will be taken up when counties are visited in which dairying is secondary. Much valuable data has already been secured. The committee will hold meetings in Northern New York during the week starting today.

D., L. & W. MEN WANT 8 HOURS

Rumors that the Lackawanna switchers will be granted an eight-hour working day, beginning August 1, are without foundation, according to officials of the company.

If an order of this description were issued it would affect a large number of men making their homes in this section of the state. It would also mean that about one-third more switchmen would be needed.

The railroad employes who are assigned to the work of keeping the time of the engine crewmen and switchmen have received no instructions to alter the system now in force; but would of necessity have to arrange for crew shifts if an eight-hour working day were about to be inaugurated.

It is understood that a meeting of the various brotherhoods will be held in New York tomorrow. It is expected that the result of the mail vote on the proposed strike will be announced at that session.

SOLDIERS TO GET TRANSPORTATION

Actuated, perhaps, by floods of complaints that have been coming from all sides that militiamen at the border have been released from duty without money to get home and are forced to pay their own expenses from the border to their home towns, the War Department has issued an order that men discharged because they have dependent relatives at home will in the future receive their carfare home at the rate of three and one-half cents per mile.

The confusion leading to the announcement that men would have to pay their own expenses arose because of a decision of 1903, which reads: "A soldier discharged on his own request, for his own pleasure or convenience, is not entitled to travel pay." Under the old order only men honorably discharged at the end of their enlistment are entiled to transportation.

Status of the men who were discharged far various reasons before the end of the time for which they had enlisted were recently referred to the controller of the treasurer for decision and his report now reads as follows:

"Section 128: An enlisted man when discharged from the service, except by way of punishment for some offense, shall receive three and one-half cents per mile from the place of his discharge to the place of his acceptance for enlistment, enrollment or original muster into the service at his option."

ROOKIES IN WAR GAMES THAT CLOSE CAMP TODAY

Plattsburg, N. Y.—Under the personal direction of Major General Leonard Wood, Commander of the United States Army, Department of the East, 7,000 citizen rookies in training here for several weeks started a series of war games today which will close the senior camp for this year.

Participating in the mimic campaign are a lot of New York society young men. The 7,000 includes four regiments of infantry, two squadrons of cavalry, a field artillery detachment and several hundred regulars. The active operations are under the personal direction of Major Peter Murray, Camp Commander and Quartermaster Major Frank Lawton.

NEW PIPE LINE CARRIES WATER INTO NEW PARK

Water in a portion of the downtown section was shut off this forenoon, to permit the laying of a tap into the strip of land lying north of the library. This tap will permit, if it is so desired, the erection of a fountain in the park.

HAS BORED CIVILIANS TO UNTIMELY DEATHS

New York—Samuel Donniss, who never so much as killed a mosquito because he doesn't believe in the slaughter of animals, but who is said to have bored dozens of civilians to death with his arguments, entered the workhouse here for a two year visit because he hailed so many strange persons on Broadway to tell them about himself.

Samuel developed a habit of stopping in front of butcher shops to harangue buyers of meat. He scolded small sized strangers for wearing slaughtered shoe leather. He yowled at women with birds on their hats, and when he was sentenced one reporter said he raged and stamped his rubber clad feet so much it was apparent that any hornet wandering into his cell will take its life in its stinger.

WEATHER FORECAST

Moderate west to north west winds. Thunder showers this afternoon. Tuesday, partly cloudy and not quite so warm.

PREPARATIONS MADE FOR NEW PARK ON RIVER BANK

Work has been begun under the direction of Robert Hunter to remove the old hydro-electric plant, situated on the west end of the Battle Island dam. John Murray is assisting Mr. Hunter and all obstructions will be removed to permit of preparing the ground for the park which Mr. F. A. Emerick will donate. Mr. Emerick expects to spend in the neighborhood of $20,000 in completing the plans.

A Macadam road under construction will reach from the West River road to the shore of the river; from there the road will wind along the river bank to a point near the old dam and then west to the state road.

It is rumored that Mr. Emerick hopes to establish a game preserve in the park, but this rumor is unconfirmed.

HOT WEATHER AND COATS

The hot weather has made it pretty plain that man is a foolish animal. No other animal in the world, in fact, is half so foolish. For throughout the heated term men have insisted upon wearing coats; in fact the dining cars, cafes, churches and place of all society functions have insisted upon men wearing their coats while at meals, religious worship, etc., and society insists upon following the mandates of society, of course. We believe we read of an exception in one or two Syracuse churches last week, but the rank and file follows custom.

Imagine, if you can a sheep insisting upon wearing its fleece through such weather as we have had, if it could hang it on a limb. Indeed, nature does that very thing—she hangs the fleece on a limb, in a sense, in that she thins the wool, and drops out the feathers of fowls, and lessens the fur that grows upon her children, at this season of the year. She clothes them according to the weather. But man, the foolish animal, refusing to follow the mandates of Nature, follows the mandates of other men—and wears a coat when a coat isn't necessary, in fact when it is a burden.

But we are gradually learning a little more as we go along, in that more and more men refuse to be bound by the artificial rules of society. More and more of them are discarding their coats during hot weather, and some of the restaurants and hotels have rooms especially set aside for serving men in shirt sleeves. That is progress to some extent. But there cannot be much progress until men leave off their coats at all time during the heated term, and refuse to pay any attention to the "fashions."

As for collars—a foolish fashion in the beginning—we have come nowhere near the point of sensibility in the matter of collars. A few men have been bold enough to discard coats; no one has been bold enough to appear "in company" minus a collar. And of all the disagreeable, uncomfortable, useless appendages that was ever invented, place your money on a collar as being it.

Not a single poem has so far been published in which the "boys in khaki" was the soulful refrain.

It is also reasonably certain that the good listener would know more about the subject being discussed than the talker.

Ask the man! To have the Fulton Evening Times delivered to your home every evening.

Hot! Hotter! Hottest! Yesterday had them all beat for solid discomfort.

Now for a solid week of Chautauqua entertainment.

Boys and girls! Get into the animal contest. It will do you good.

The Chautauqua will be a big event. The entertainers and other attractions are all high-class and the very best that money can secure.

SELECTED EDITORIALS

Christian Science Monitor:

Judgment in the eastern roads' freight case, which has been before the Canadian railway board for two years, has just been rendered. When the interstate commerce commission of the United States, in 1914, gave its sanction to increased rates on certain of the roads with which the Dominion lines compete, it was but natural that they should move for a similar rise in revenue. In the mean time operating expenses have increased, and earnings have lessened, so that, broadly speaking, problems of fiscal administration have grown more acute. Sums available for equipment have not increased, and consequently there has been some decline in the quality of the service. For these and other reasons, therefore, the request of the roads for a right to charge more for transportation of goods has been granted; not, indeed, to the extent that the roads hoped, but, on the other hand, in a way that will appreciably increase income, since traffic of good for export has increased much since the war opened.

Canada pioneered the way for the United States in flexible, yet authoritative, national supervision of railway operations, so far as the rights of shippers and of investors are concerned. Canada came more quickly and readily to this point of view than did its neighbor on the south, in part, no doubt, because of the close relations between the railroads and the Canadian state and the amount of national capital invested in them. At any rate, whatever the explanation of the fact, it is true that from the first the Dominion railway board, in its dealings with the operators, and with their employees, has had a moral as well as legal authority which has not been conceded in the United States until a comparatively recent date. Now the roads south of the line are coming to favor a measure of supervision which they at first bitterly fought, though of course not to the point of open defiance of the interstate commerce commission's rulings.

One characteristic of the Canadian board's recent decree is its method of dealing with the issue before it. It has declined to make a flat rate increase, such as the roads desired. It treats each road and each competing center as a special problem, and names for it the fair, new rate. The task was more difficult; it called for more study; but its outcome is more equitable and the board is seeking to dispense justice and equity.

Worcester Telegram:

Men of the British navy have taken many submarines of the enemies out of their wire traps. That they must make these undersea boats over and send them out as English submarines to torpedo other craft of the enemies is taken for granted, though it is not admitted in the official reports. Worcester men may have made some of the wire in the traps which have captured the German and Austrian submarines, and there may be some satisfaction in that part of the work. Englishmen whose duty it is to take in the trapped diving boats, do not like the work. It is the most grewsome of all the ghoulish business of the great war in Europe they claim.

An English doctor who has been with the "rescue" crews, tells the story, but he admits there is no sense of rescue about it, for nothing is done to raise the submarine from the trap until all on board are dead, and it is the most horrible of all the deaths of war, the doctor claims. When a submarine strikes one of the thousands of wire nets set all around the British Isles, there is no known means of escape. Every move of the boat means more mixing up with the enmeshed wires. And the wires also telegraph the capture to a naval station automatically. Then a destroyer boat hurries to the trap like a hunter who discovers that game has been caught in his deadfall. The destroyer takes a position above the submerged boat.

And the doctor is still more graphic in further description. "Then there is nothing to do but wait, sometimes for hours, sometimes for days. Officers and men of the waiting vessel know what's going on down in the green depths. They know that in time bubbles will come to the surface and oil will spread over the sea. The destroyer waits for the bubbles, 'death bubbles' they call them, for they tell of death struggles going on in the submarine." That may seem simple to people who never tried it, and of course an Englishman should not bother about how much an enemy of his country suffers in war time.

Still men are all more or less human in their thoughts, if not in their acts, and the doctor says it is frightful there over an expiring corps of men who are experts in the worst kind of warfare practiced. They suffer until the horrible end, and in some cases it appears that the waiting men safe above them suffer more and longer until the death bubbles rise to the top and show through the oil, and then the hoisting crane comes and lifts up the submarine and the net and the disentanglement takes place.

And you may expect to read what the English naval men find in the German submarine. On that point the doctor says: "Seamen who fought through the maelstrom of Skager Rac will tell you their story, but no sailor speaks of the sights seen in a recovered submarine. Those sights make strong men weak and drive sensitive men delirious with horror." Then there is something about the war which is not allowed even to get as far as the censors. It is too horrible for the observers to talk about. And sailors are not as a rule squeamish. For that reason and some others, it is probably not true that for months, as the cable reports have it, the German people have been urging the Imperial government to turn the submarines loose to do their worst with the peaceful shipping of all nations.

IT ISN'T YOUR TOWN, IT'S YOU.

If you want to live in the kind of a town
Like the kind of a town that you like,
You needn't slip your clothes in a grip
And start on a long, long hike.
You'll only find what you left behind,
For there's nothing that's really new.
It's a knock at yourself when you knock your town.
It isn't the town—it's you.

Real towns are not made by men afraid
Lest somebody else gets ahead.
When every one works and nobody shirks
You can raise a town from the dead.
And if, while you make your personal stake,
Your neighbors can make one, too,
Your town will be what you want to see.
It isn't the town—it's you.

FERTILIZERS FROM WASTE.

Garbage is Valuable When Returned to the Soil.

A survey of the nation's resources in fertilizer materials has drawn attention to the large supply of these to be found in the accumulation of garbage in cities. This waste material contains nitrogen, phosphoric acid and potash, which are recognized as essential to the production of large crops. Valuable as these elements are to the farms of the country, the garbage in which they are found is a source of trouble and expense to the cities. It seems, therefore, that this garbage can be disposed of most advantageously by returning it to the soil in the form of fertilizer.

In cities of 100.000 people or more the reduction of garbage by methods which furnish a residue fit for fertilizer use has proved to be a profitable municipal enterprise, and in smaller communities it might well be self sustaining. Numerous analyses of raw garbage show that on the average grease constitutes 3.5 per cent and of the fertilizer ingredients, potash 0.3 per cent, bone phosphate 1 per cent and nitrogen in the form of ammonia [illegible] per cent. On this basis the value of a ton of raw garbage is about $5, the grease being worth $3 and the fertilizer ingredients about $2.

Since the grease is of more value than the fertilizer the reduction process is primarily designed to recover the grease. There are three principal methods of doing this. The garbage is cooked and steamed and then pressed dry and degreased in gasoline, or the garbage is dried directly in rotary hot air kilns and then degreased in gasoline, or it is dried and degreased in one operation.

As raw garbage contains 70 per cent water and 3.5 per cent grease, the yield of the tankage residue or fertilizer should be about 25 per cent. Thus four tons of raw garbage should be made to yield one ton of dried tankage and $12 worth of grease. In the retail market the dried tankage sells for about $10 a ton and at wholesale for $7.50.

At present, however, only six cities in the United States operate their own reduction plants and about twenty send their garbage to privately owned plants. These produce in the course of a year 160,000 tons of tankage or fertilizer, made from 1.045.000 tons of raw garbage. If all of the 199 cities in the United States which have a population of 30.000 or over should adopt this method of garbage disposal the total yield should be from 637,500 tons to 937.500 tons of fertilizer per year. This would be worth from $4.780.000 to $7.000.000. Additional fertilizer material could also be obtained in the cities from dead animals, street sweepings and stable manure.

UNHURT IN LONG FALL.

Metal Worker Dropped Seven Stories and Then Got Up to Walk.

San Francisco.—Bryant J. O'Connor, a metal worker, fell seven stories to the pavement recently from a scaffold on a San Francisco office building and surprised horrified spectators by rising and attempting to walk away.

He was restrained and taken to an emergency hospital, where an examination showed that no bones were broken and that O'Connor's injuries were confined to minor bruises and scratches.

The Right Flavor.

The oxen had belonged to an old sea captain, and their new owner was unable to back the animals round in a narrow street despite all efforts with voice and ox goad.

The old captain appeared on the scene. "Hard aground, are ye?" he called. Then, seizing the ox goad, he raised the old boat steerer's cry, "Starn all!" The huge hulks slowly backed at the familiar call. "Larboard all!" The beasts swayed sideways, turned to the right, and the thing was done.

KNOW WHEN TO STOP.

Do not grasp after too much lest it all slip from your hand. The greatest error of our nature is not to know where to stop, not to be satisfied with any reasonable acquirement, not to compound with our conditions, but to lose all we have gained by an insatiable pursuit after more.— Burke

Carpets and Rugs.

Carpets and rugs were originally employed by oriental nations for sitting, reclining and kneeling purposes during devotion. When introduced among the western peoples they were for a long time used for purely ornamental purposes, covers for tables or couches and for laying before altars or chairs of state upon great occasions. Carpets were brought to Europe by the Moors, but it was well into the eighteenth century before they came into anything like general use.

Startled the Natives.

Herrara, the Spanish historian, says that Pizarro when he landed in South America owed his life and those of his companions to the fact that one of the party fell off his horse by accident. The natives had succeeded in cutting off the retreat of the Spaniards to their ships, when one of the riders was thrown. The Indians were so astonished at the dissolution of partnership that they took flight at once. They had supposed horse and man to be one animal.

Divides the Waters.

Situated exactly at the highest point of the divide of the Rocky mountains, on the Crow's Nest division of the Canadian Pacific railway, in British Columbia, is a hotel. When it rains in the mountains the water which falls on the eastern slope of the hotel roof trickles away to join a tiny rivulet, which in due time mingles its waters with the Atlantic. The water falling just beyond the ridgepole, on the other side of the roof, flows westerly and ultimately into the Pacific.

He Loved His Enemies.

James MacNeill Whistler looked upon life as upon a kind of warfare and was never so happy as when he was quarreling with somebody. He is quoted as having said when asked if he did not have many friends: "Yes, I have many friends, and I am grateful to them, but those whom most I love are my enemies, not in a Biblical sense. Oh, no, but because they keep one always busy, always up to the mark, either fighting them or proving them fools."

MANY TYPES OF BARGES STUDIED

A study of the type and size of boats that will be best fitted for the barge canal is being made by Superintendent of the State Department of Public Works Wotherspoon. This data being compiled, will cover craft operated singly or in pairs or in fleets. The data will be published for the information of boatmen and others who may be planning the construction of boats for service on the canal.

On account of the uncertainty that still exists there are very few craft being built for such service. Several types of craft have been suggested by designers and navigators, ranging in size from 150 feet length and 22 feet in width, to 300 feet long and 42 feet wide.

Only one of the larger sized boats could pass through together. Some of the men who have grown old navigating the Erie canal insist that it will probably be demonstrated by actual experience that boats of about the size and type of those that have of late years been plying the Erie canal will be most satisfactory for use on the new barge canal, when navigated in fleets towed by a tug. The size of the boats, however, they say, might be increased somewhat.

It is a fact, however, that very few of the boats still running on the Erie canal are kept in good repair. Occasionally there is a skipper who keeps his craft well painted, but as a general proposition the boats are evidently being neglected as if they would no longer be serviceable after the barge canal has been completed and is fully in operation.

A CITY OF TREES.

Brooklyn Park Department to Shade Many Streets and Bare Spots.

A contribution to the "city beautiful" is being made by Park Commissioner Raymond V. Ingersoll of Brooklyn, who is developing in that borough what is said to be one of the most extensive tree planting plans ever undertaken by a municipality. While the plan contemplates the planting of trees along certain thoroughfares by the park department, the commissioner is interesting property owners all over the borough in the beautifying of their property by encouraging them to plant trees. These are offered the benefit of expert knowledge on the subject, and their trees are not only planted by the department, but are cared for as well. This is done at a cost price.

"The beautifying of the city by the planting of trees is a subject in which I have long been interested," said Commissioner Ingersoll. "Trees have been dying off in Brooklyn at the rate of about 25,000 a year, and even the replacing of these would be an important matter. Instead of remaining content with simply replacing the loss, we are setting out thousands of additional trees this year. Not only are citizens being encouraged to plant trees, but we are also endeavoring to bring about co-operative planting by streets or blocks. For instance, the Prospect Park Citizens' association gave orders last year for the planting of 350 trees. In East New York orders for tree planting were taken by the boy scouts."

So far, in pursuance of the plan, 80,000 trees have been set out in Brooklyn. For the suburban planting the department advocates the American elm, gingko, European linden, Scotch elm, pin oak and red maple. Plane sycamore, red oak and Norway maple are found best for city planting. On the blacklist the city places the silver maple, poplars, catalpa and willow. The park department furnishes upon application the tree, with all necessary accessories, such as soil, stake, tree guard and netting. It performs all the necessary labor and even cutting the sidewalk to allow for the planting. It attends to the obtaining of the permit, and all the property owner is expected to pay is $8 for each tree.

It is guaranteed by the department to replace each tree that dies within three years of planting, but it reserves, however, the right to decide on the species of tree to be planted, as well as the location and distance from other trees. This is necessary to insure a uniform system of tree planting. Once planted the department will give the tree the same care and attention that it bestows upon other trees, but it is up to the property holder to see that the new ornament to his property is properly protected. A newly planted tree should be watered once a week if the weather is dry. At least six gallons of water should be given at a time. The new tree owner is warned not to water the tree every day, and he is also told to notify the department if his tree is injured or needs attention.

A special fund has been established with the approval of the comptroller for the specific purpose of tree planting. The money obtained from paid tree planting goes into this fund. Last year there were set out in the borough 1,200 trees that were paid for. The plan for a universal tree planting system was made possible by Frederic B. Pratt, head of Pratt Institute, who gave $5,000, and it is this money that is being used in the adornment of Eastern parkway.

CHAUTAUQUA WEEK DOINGS

An Interesting Program for Each Day---Band Concerts, Lectures, Sessions for the Children, Etc.

Negotiations have been made and everything is in absolute readiness for one of the best Chautauqua weeks available. Every morning there will be a series of lectures given by Dr. Koch, a member of the faculty of the University of North Dakota on Shakesperian plays. Miss Mildred Luce, the children's supervisor, with extensive experience in the middle western Chautauqua circuit will meet the little folks in the park for a rehearsal of an historical pageant to be given by them on Saturday afternoon.

Today, Hon. Joseph P. Hanley will lecture on the "Modern Crusade." He has a forceful, breezy western style and brings out the necessity of certain much needed crusades of our national life.

This evening John B. Ratto, of Chicago, who is probably the leading impersonator of the Lyceum platform makes up with grease paint and wig before the audience and his transformations are so complete that they create the greatest interest. His impersonations are of certain of the best recognized types which make up our complex American civilization.

On Tuesday afternoon a thoughtful discussion of our crying need of a simplified judicial procedure will be the subject of a lecture by Judge Kavanaugh of the Superior court of Chicago, who with rare skill and logic establishes his case. He has studied court procedure in Europe and speaks out of the settled conviction which he has found after years of experience.

Tuesday evening the Ben Greet players with a stronger cast than ever before present that Shakespearian masterpiece of dramatic possibility "The Merchan t of Venice." This company delighted Fulton last year in "Much Ado About Nothing" but it will appear to even better advantage in this great play. "The Merchant of Venice." Eric Blind, who has played with Sir Henry Irving and Beerbohm Tree will play "Shylock" and Miss Grace Halsey Mills, who has scored a success with this company will play the part of "Portia." The role of Jessica is taken by one who has been very successful in "Daddy Longlegs" during the past season.

Wednesday afternoon Miss Elsie Baker and her company will prove one of the strongest attractions of the week. Miss Baker has made over forty Victor records and possesses a contralto voice of the rarest quality. She sings with a sympathetic appreciation which is unusual and her charms of personality helps to create an impression which lasts in every community long after the close of Chautauqua week. William Durieux a cellist of rare technique and unusual skill assists Miss Baker and Mr. Hauser an accomplished pianist completes the trio.

In the evening Dr. Conwell, of Philadelphia, delivers his famous masterpiece. "Acres of Diamonds." This lecture has been given more frequently and widely than any other in America. He has delivered it over fifty-four hundred times and now as finer decades ago it possesses an irresistible charm. The proceeds of this lecture which aggregate nearly a million dollars, Dr. Conwell has devoted to the education of worthy young men and women.

Thursday, Cimera, a Bohemian with a band of twenty-seven pieces will delight the people of this city. His program is a well selected combination of classical and popular music and is assisted by Miss Lillian Heyword, who possesses a fine lyric soprano. This is one of the most attractive features of the Chautauqua circuit.

Friday afternoon Mrs. Rorer, our greatest national authority on domestic science and the author of a cook book, bearing her name, will speak on "Home Advancement," and Alton Packard, a cartoonist, of national repute will create many a good laugh at his evening performance. The Marigold girls a tuneful quartet of young ladies will offer a musical prelude both afternoon and evening.

On the last afternoon, after the children's pageant the five artists will give one of the strongest concerts of the week. Miss Van DerVeer, Mr. Reed Miller and Mr. Frederik Wheeler have all made Victor records and have been connected with some of the strongest musical organizations of New York city. Miss Marie Stoddard is the accomplished soprano of the quartet, and Miss Barbot is an unusually skillful accompanist.

In the evening the week will be brought to a close by Dr. Edward Amherst Ott, whose reputation as a lecturer is written large from coast to coast. His lecture a year ago "Sour Grapes" will be remembered by Fultonians and he will equal his former effort by presenting, "The Haunted House" this year.

The crew in charge of the tent and equipment at the park, who will assist in making the people of Fulton feel at home under the canvas include the following: Mr. Harold Gibbs, of Colgate University, manager of properties; Mr. Alvin Hornney, of Morningside College, at Sioux City, Iowa, cashier; Mr. Earl O'Brien, of Rochester Business Institute, gate man; Mr. Robert Barnhart, of Mechanics Institute, Rochester, reserve seat usher, and Mr. Harold Oevendorf, of the Clarkson Institute of Technology, reserved seat cashier.

INDEPENDENTS' TOUR WAS UNSUCCESSFUL

The Fulton Independent baseball team experienced much difficulty on their northern trip last week. Saturday they faced the strong Adams team, made up of fast Syracuse semi-pro material. The result was 9—0 in favor of Adams. Painter worked good for Fulton, but owing to the poor support given by his team mates they were unable to land the game.

One hit was allowed by Pitcher Boyle, of Syracuse, it going to the credit of Dingle, the local second sacker. Many errors were made by the Independents, both in the infield and outfield, which were due to the fact that the team carried along a supply of rubber gloves, making it impossible for them to hold the sphere.

Sunday the Diamond Match Factoryteam, of Oswego, was opposed by the Independents and better results were obtained. Oswego won by the score of 10—7, but a much better game was played. The game was fast from the start and good ball was displayed.

MARCHING CLUB TO REORGANIZE

The Fulton Continentals are making preparations to re-organize their marching club. William S. Hillick is first lieutenant of the organization which has sixty-five members signed so far. It has been the Republican Marching Club of this city for the past twenty-five years and in that time has appeared in nearly every procession in the county and in different parts of the state. Practice drills will commence in the near future.

FUNERAL WEDNESDAY

The funeral of Mr. Frank Barnes, who died at his home, 404 South Third street, yesterday, will be held Wednesday morning at nine o'clock at the Church of the Immaculate Conception, Rev. Father Lindsman officiating. Mr. Barnes, who is fifty-nine years of age, has been in poor health for a number of years. Besides his wife he leaves to mourn his death two daughters, Anna and Marguerite, and two sons Frederick and John; one brother, Hiram, of Little Falls, and one sister, Mrs. Nellie Huntley, of Colosse, N. Y.

PERCHWAY—RICHARDS

The wedding of Mr. Mahlon Perchway to Miss Lottie Richards, occurred at the Church of the Immaculate Conception this morning, the Rev. Father Lindsman officiating. The couple were attended by Mr. and Mrs. William Breem.

At the conclusion of the wedding ceremony a breakfast was served at the home of the bride.

After a brief honeymoon Mr. and Mrs. Perchway will make their home in this city.

Merchants War on Dirt.

An effort is being made by the Chestnut Street Business Men's association of Philadelphia to have the city authorities keep Chestnut street free from dust and dirt.

In order to co-operate in this task some of the members of the association, according to George Albert Drovin, the secretary, have issued instructions that all store sweepings as well as those from the sidewalks are to be gathered up each day and placed in receptacles in the rear of the building.

A pamphlet recently issued by the association to its members sets forth the following pertinent statements:

"The more dirt the fewer dollars to the merchants.

"Dirt and dust mean time spent each day in cleaning stock and fixtures, and time costs money.

"Dirt and dust in some lines cause deterioration and loss on merchandise

"Pull together with the rest of us and help keep the street clean."

Local and Personal

Considerable confusion prevailed last night in the down town section of the city. A large touring car with a party of four young ladies, short circuited a wire leading to their Klaxon horn, which insisted on making a loud monotone. The car started the noise while on the outskirts of the city which continued until they found one of our local garages. A large crowd pursued, amazed by the loud shriek, and after repairing the horn the tourists drove away in the utmost embarrassment, with a large crowd surrounding them to bid them good bye.

LOVE FEAST FOR G.O.P. AND MOOSE

Such is the Promise of Leaders of Both Parties---Notification of Hughes Takes Place Tonight.

By Perry Arnold
(United Press Staff Correspondent)

New York—Former Justice Charles Evans Hughes has been working for six weeks as Republican nominee, but tonight he will go through the function of being formally told that the representatives of the G. O. P., in convention assembled at Chicago last June, voted him their standard bearer.

A survival of the days when there were no telegraphs and news moved slowly by courier and coach, the "notification ceremony" tonight was to be transformed into a "love feast" by the Republicans.

Carnegie Hall, seating nearly 4,000 people, will be packed with old line Republicans, new line Republicans, former Democrats, Progressives and just plain people. Before this audience—and through the press associations and newspapers—Governor Hughes will make his preliminary appeal for Republican votes.

As arranged for today, there were to be just two speeches—a very brief one from Senator Warren G. Harding, who was chairman of the Chicago convention; and who was appointed chairman of the notification committee. Harding will gently break the news to Hughes that he was named Republican presidential nominee. Hughes will respond in a speech of probably five or ten thousand words—his "keynote" for the campaign.

The former Governor has been working on this speech ever since he got the unofficial word from Chicago that he was nominated. In it he will give his views on practically every policy of interest to the public. He will make a powerful appeal for unity of effort, announce a welcome to progressives of all types, and probably indicate what issue he considers of paramount importance in the coming campaign.

Immediately after the formal notification ceremonies in Carnegie Hall, members of the Republican national committee, the campaign committee, the senatorial and congressional campaign committees, and scores of specially invited Republican and Progressive leaders, will be Hughes' guests at a reception at the Hotel Astor.

There was a report circulated here today that Colonel Roosevelt and former president Taft might publicly bury the axe of their political and personal quarrel by both being present.

PARTIES AGREE TO PASSAGE OF COMPENSATION ACT

Washington—Passage of a Workmen's compensation act for government employes, on lines suggested by the American Federation of Labor, today was agreed on by Democratic and Republican leaders.

For six years it has gone through all the stages of congressional action except final passage. Something always stopped it there. This year the federation demanded of both conventions the passage of the bill before congress adjourned to take up the Fall campaign, on pain of the federation's doing a little campaigning itself.

The bill provides, in case of:

Death—Thirty-five per cent. of wages to widow or widower, until their death or remarriage, with 10 per cent. additional for each dependent child.

Partial Disability—Two thirds of the difference between wages earned before and after injury. Refusal of a partially disabled man to do what work he can do makes him ineligible to any payment.

Medical care for a reasonable time after an injury is suffered in government service is provided: and in case of death, $100 for funeral expenses is allowed.

Intoxication or wilful carelessness in duty makes a federal employe ineligible to benefits under the act.

OSTEOPATHS HAVE NEW CURE FOR CATARACT

Kansas City.—Twilight sleep, hay fever, cataract, and catarrhal deafness were among the important subjects on the program of the twentieth annual meeting of the American osteopathic association which opened a week's session here today.

Dr. R. H. Dunnington, of Philadelphia, will announce the details of his discovery of an osteopathic method of curing cataract without surgery.

Pressure anesthesia will be demonstrated. Clinics will be conducted in curing catarrhal deafness. Prevention of infant mortality will be considered by the women's department. On the program are doctors Dunnington, of Philadelphia; Kellogg, of Providence, R. I.; Sherwood, of Lancaster, Pa.; Bumpus, of Denver; Smith, of Indianapolis; Decken, of Minneapolis; Fulham, of Frankfort, Ind.; Montague, of Muskogee, Okla.; Ferry, of Nevada; Parsons, of Roswell, N. M.; Baughman, of Burlington, Ia.; Anna Stoltenberg, of Brunswick, Mo.; Smith, of Kokomo; Armstrong, of New Berne, N. C.; Edwards, of St. Louis; Deason, of Chicago; Goodfellow and Ruddy, of Los Angeles; Granberry, of New Jersey; Nicholl, of Philadelphia; Goehring, of Pittsburgh; Josephine Pierce, of Ohio; Elizabeth Broach, of Atlanta; Catherine Lynch, of Los Angeles; Jenette Bolles, of Denver; Moore, of Iowa Falls; Proctor, of Chicago; Wright, of Fond du Lac, Luedicke, of Denver; Dymond, of Des Moines and Clark of Indianapolis.

FARMERS SEE PLOWS TEAR UP BIG FIELD

St. Louis—The first practical demonstration of tractor farming ever held in the Mississippi valley began here today. Thousands of farmers went to Kinlock, in St. Louis county, where for five days the latest power-driven agricultural implements will be demonstrated on a two thousand acre farm.

Under the auspices of the National Tractor Farming association, harrowing, plowing, seeding, spreading, pulverizing, threshing and harvesting will take up the morning sessions. Each afternoon forty power-driven plows will tear up the ground. The dynamometer tests of draw bar pull of the various makes of plows attracted considerable attention as did the belt work exhibit.

ROWLEE AND DISTIN REUNION NEXT WEEK

On Wednesday, August 9th, the Rowlee-Distin reunion will be held at the Fair Grounds. About 150 persons participate in this event annually. Mr. John Rowlee is president of the associationthis year and will with his committee arrange a splendid program, including ball games, races of various kinds and other athletic events, after which a bounteous dinner will be served.

ORGANIZATION IN RURAL LIFE

More Thoroughly Appreciated Than Ever Before.

A SOCIAL IMPROVEMENT.

The United States Department of Agriculture Seeks to Promote the Welfare of the Farmer by Advocating Concerted Effort Along Many Lines.

The value of organization in rural life is now more thoroughly appreciated than ever before, and the United States department of agriculture is devoting much attention to assisting co-operative farmers' associations of various kinds. In an article on this subject published in the new year book of the department some of the purposes which may be served by organized activity among farmers are stated to be the introduction of new crops, the maintenance of standard strains of seed, the control of plant and animal diseases, the development of established industries, such as dairying and cattle raising, road improvement, the marketing of farm produce, the improvement of credit facilities, the securing of better facilities for insurance and communication and the improvement of rural social life.

Two general types of organizations are now being utilized in the agricultural extension work. County organizations, often called farm bureaus, are being formed to take the initiative in securing local support for the county agents. Many of these organizations include business and professional men as well as farmers. It is clearly apparent, however, that the farming people themselves should control and in the end determine the character and work of these organizations.

Another type of local organization is the small community club. Where a considerable number of these clubs exist in a county they are often federated to form a county organization of some kind. In the southern states about 500 communities were organized during the year ended June 30, 1915. These community organizations are engaged in the promotion of some special work, such as the co-operative breeding of live stock, purchasing and selling things required or produced on the farm and studying and demonstrating better farm practices. In the northern and western states the county agents were instrumental in forming 875 local organizations during the same year. These included farmers' clubs for general purposes and associations for the improvement of crop production, the breeding of live stock, cow testing, purchasing and marketing.

The value of organization in the development of established industries is best illustrated by the department's work with dairymen. One of the essentials for profitable dairying is the keeping of accurate records of the milk and butter fat production of individual cows. The department of agriculture therefore furnishes information to farmers who wish to form what are commonly known as cow testing associations to determine which cows are yielding a satisfactory profit. In co-operation with certain states the federal department maintains a number of dairy extension specialists, who not only aid in the establishment of these associations, but give assistance to farmers who are not obtaining adequate returns from their animals. There are now over 200 of these associations in the United States, with a total membership of more than 5,500 farmers, owning not less than 100,000 cows.

Co-operative bull associations have also been found of great value in the improvement of dairy herds. The dairy division of the bureau of animal industry is prepared to give farmers information on how to organize and conduct the business of such co-operative associations. This division also assists farmers in the organization of co-operative creameries by furnishing them with advice in regard to buildings, equipment, operation and management. Blue print plans for suitable buildings with estimates of the cost and a list of the necessary machinery, etc., are furnished when circumstances make it appear that a co-operative creamery would be successful.

FORTUNE AWAITS TWO GIRLS.

Man Will Leave $70,000 Estate to a Maid and a Clerk.

Chicago.—An unusual situation due to the dearth in domestics came to light recently when the Illinois free employment office announced that a man worth $70,000 who is adding $1,000 a year to his belongings is willing to give his fortune at the death of himself and his wife to two girls, one a domestic and another a clerk, if he can find them.

He wants a girl, preferably of Swedish or German descent, for general housework and another for clerking in his store, which is in a town of 2,000 sixty miles from Chicago. He will pay the girls $2 a week, with board and lodging, while he or his wife live.

DROWNS IN SET TUB.

Despondent Over Illness, He Commits Suicide In Novel Manner.

New Britain, Conn.—In a fit of despondency arising out of illness with alcoholic gastritis, Ricard Sederval, aged twenty-seven years, committed suicide by drowning. He lay across set tubs in the cellar of his brother's home at 102 Linwood street and held his head under water until he died.

After returning home he put up a pair of horses in the barn and then went into the cellar of the house. He was found fifteen minutes later by his sister-in-law. When the police arrived at the house they found Sederval's helper holding the dead man's head out of the water.

THE CITY BEAUTIFUL

STEPS UP THE HILL SOLVE GRADE PROBLEM

Values of Adjoining Property In Salt Lake City Enhanced Thereby.

The accompanying photograph of the terraced steps on Fourth avenue, Salt Lake City, shows a combination of utility and beauty which has solved a problem of heavy grade on a city street, writes City Engineer Silvester Cannon in the American City.

Fourth avenue is 82½ feet wide, with a roadway between curbs of 30 feet, and extends from the stairway east about two miles. The stairs are located about 400 feet east of the road in the bottom of City Creek canyon. The total rise of the stairs is 43½ feet, and the horizontal length is 99 feet.

Before the improvement was made Fourth avenue was an unsightly and useless street at this point. It was practically impossible for vehicles to use it, and in the winter months even pedestrians climbed it with difficulty. It was out of the question to attempt the construction of a roadway that could be used by vehicles, as the grade approaching from above was 8¼ per cent and the grade below 7 per cent, increasing in a vertical curve to 12 per cent at the foot of the stairs. The road was therefore closed to vehicles, and the terraced steps were put in for the use of pedestrians.

A straight stairway without intermediate platforms would have been possible on that slope, but would have been too fatiguing. Steps leading toward the center and out again were therefore resorted to. In order, however, to obtain between the stairs a slope light enough for sodding, retaining walls were built leading to and from the central stairway, with a pipe railing on the upper walls.

The white quadrangular spot to the right of the central stairway is the cover of a clean out box over an eight inch drainpipe emptying into the gutter at the foot of the stairs. In the left side a high retaining wall is visible, which was built to create a level building spot, on which a residence is now in course of erection. An electric lamp at the upper end of the central stairway furnishes the light.

Values of adjoining residential property have been distinctly enhanced, and this section of Fourth avenue, with the City Creek park at its base, has become one of the most attractive districts in the city.

Home Garden Movement.

There are various angles from which to praise the home garden work which teaches things that cannot be learned inside a classroom, says the New York Press. The youth gets the joy of "seeing things grow." He acquires a capital counterirritant for the supposedly artificial atmosphere of the apartment house. He comes into touch with the laws of nature, the pulse of living things, the creative forces. He works in good wholesome earth. He learns something of where his food comes from. He loses the illusion of the tin can, hermetically sealed, germ proof, wax paper school of household economy.

Many of us must live in cities, and living in them does not bring half the evils that the "back to the farm" advocates would have us believe. But we make the cities difficult to live in by not doing the things that these home garden children are doing—holding our feet on the ground and keeping in touch with mother earth.

The New Municipal Dock at St. Louis.

The new municipal dock and warehouse on the Mississippi river at St. Louis have just been opened to traffic. This dock marks the beginning of the practical revival of Mississippi river traffic along modern lines. In the past all the loading and unloading of boats have been up steep levees by wagon. The new type of dock fits any stage of the river. Loading and unloading are entirely mechanical, by electric crane, the connection between rail and boat being direct.

St. Louis has just come into possession of eleven miles of double track along its river front. This municipally owned railroad gives the city control of her entire commercial water front.

PROBLEM OF PAYING FOR STREET PAVING

Method of Meeting Cost an Important Matter For Cities.

A serious financial problem in most cities, says the Municipal Journal, is that of raising the funds for paving all the streets, maintaining the pavements in good condition and repaving them when this is necessary. This requires an average of perhaps $3,000 to $6,000 per year per mile of street throughout the city for interest, sinking fund, maintenance and repairs. (It will run much higher than this in most large cities.) In the cities having between 30,000 and 50,000 population by the 1910 census there was an average of about 140 miles of street per city. At $5,000 per mile per year it therefore would cost each city an average of $700,000 a year to keep all of its streets paved and in repair. Of this 140 miles only an average of 40½ miles of street per city was paved, but even this calls for an average annual payment of $222,500 per city. The smaller payment would amount to $5.70 per capita per year, the larger to about $18.

As a matter of fact, these cities average about $100,000 expenditure each year, paid from the city treasury. How much is paid by abutting owners we cannot say, but it is probable that it is at least as much more and possibly twice as much. Of the $222,500 named above about two-thirds was capital charges for construction and one-third for maintenance and repairs. The latter is generally paid entirely by the city, but the cost of construction is in many and probably most cities shared by the abutting owners. A common rule in New York state is that the owner on each side pays one-third the cost and the city the remaining third and also generally the street intersections and paving in front of public property. Some cities charge the entire cost against the property owners; others pay it from the city treasury.

If the city pays one-third of the construction cost and all of the maintenance cost the sum of these two would equal about one-half of the total cost of paving and maintenance. In the case of the cities referred to above and on the basis of 40¼ miles of street pavement per city this would give an average payment by the city of about $2.85 per capita per year. The census report gives the actual payments by these cities as averaging a few cents over $2 per capita.

The sums raised for street paving are seen to be enormous and are probably increasing rather than decreasing, and the method of meeting the cost is a most important matter for cities to consider. There are three general methods in common use—the city to pay all construction costs, the abutting property to pay all and each to pay part. Of these the last seems to be the most popular.

GARDEN WORK FOR CHILDREN

Chattanooga, Tenn., Has Organized a Good Plan For Young Workers.

"Every one grieves to see children ground in the mills or sweated in the factories and shops," says Dr. P. P. Claxton, United States commissioner of education. "It is a crime to sap their strength and ruin their health by forcing them to toil in the heat and turmoil of indoor industries. Yet there isn't a doubt in the mind of the serious social and economic worker that all children should learn to work. Work is good for them, and they enjoy it. And what work could be more ideal than work in a garden?"

Chattanooga, Tenn., has organized a plan for introducing school and home gardens that is considered one of the best yet devised for interesting various community groups in home garden work.

The Chattanooga plan, according to reports received by the bureau of education, enlists federal, state, city and local association agencies in the work. The following are actively represented in the movement for school gardens: United States department of the interior, bureau of education, through the commissioner and an assistant in home and school gardens; city of Chattanooga, department of education and health, through the commissioner of education and health, superintendent of schools and garden supervisor; federation of district leagues, representing the eleven districts; directors of home gardening; principals, teachers, parents, pupils; the newspapers.

To Restrict Height of Buildings.

In a recent address delivered before a conference of mayors and other city officials in Tonawanda, Pa., Lawson Purdy, president of the department of taxation and assessment of New York city, talked on limiting the height of buildings and restricting the use of property, and he advised the city officials to start to regulate the height of buildings in small as well as large cities before it was too late to impose restrictions without doing damage. He said that the study of New York city conditions led to the conclusion that to secure the best development of a city in the interest of landowners and all the inhabitants it was essential to exclude factories from residential and business territory and to impose such restrictions upon height and area that no building would be allowed which did not provide for itself adequate light and air and which usurped more than its share of the street for pedestrians or vehicular traffic.

THE APPEARANCE OF CITY STREETS

Those In American Towns Are In Bad Condition.

SIDEWALKS CLOGGED UP

The Surface of Streets and Sidewalks Should Be Smooth and Free of Obstruction—This Will Also Reduce Cost of Cleaning and Increase Traffic Facilities.

By FRANK KOESTER,

City planner and consulting engineer, New York, author of "Modern City Planning and Maintenance," etc.

The appearance of a city and the impression which visitors, as well as residents, receive is dependent far more than is popularly supposed upon the appearance of the street itself—that is, the street surface—as considered apart from the buildings.

In order that the streets may have the best possible appearance they should be constructed by competent and experienced engineers and when in use must not be allowed to deteriorate. Repairs should be made at the slightest sign of a break. If the repairs are neglected the breaks become rapidly larger, with a consequent quickly mounting increase in the cost of making the street good again, while during the time the breaks exist the appearance of the street is spoiled, and unless the breaks are thoroughly repaired its appearance is never as good as before.

Americans have in reality little or no conception of the condition in which a street should be maintained until they have seen the remarkable smooth and clean streets of European cities. Their excellence, which might easily be rivaled by American streets, is due to the thorough methods of construction and the high degree of engineering skill retained.

One of the unmitigated evils suffered is the constant tearing up of streets for the purpose of laying pipes of various kinds. In streets properly designed the piping systems for gas and water and conduits for electric cables should be provided in ample capacity, with a sufficient number of side outlets to take care of future connections.

One of the greatest defects of American streets consists in their being defaced by a multitude of minor obstructions, extending from half an inch to one or two inches above the surface, such, for example, as the extremely numerous and poorly fitted manhole covers of sewer and electric cable pits and underground trolley channels, protruding gas and water valve caps and the poor junctures of the street railway rails with the street surfacing. The smooth surface of the street is thus entirely destroyed, the cost of cleaning and flushing increased and danger and interruption to traffic and wear and tear on vehicles greatly augmented.

The discharge openings of the gutters to the sewer pits are badly constructed and unsightly and dangerous in the extreme. The holes are so large that it not infrequently happens that children fall into them and are drowned. Such openings need not be placed exactly at the corner and the street immediately before them need not be sunk so sharply, but, instead, an easier grade should be provided and the openings protected by well designed gratings with a clearance between bars of not more than one and one-half inches.

It is advisable in the streets most used for promenading to have iron or steel gutter covers at crossings the width of the sidewalks, both for the main street and for the side street, thus affording a smooth promenade from block to block and saving the necessity of stepping down into the streets and out again at every crossing.

What has been said with reference to the appearance of the streets is equally applicable to the appearance of the sidewalks. It is even more important that they should be as smooth as possible and entirely free from obstruction of every character.

City officials of some American cities are following the example of those of European cities in this respect, and improvements are gradually being effected.

Coloring Rugs and Carpets.

If the faded ingrain or other carpet shows no holes it will pay to color it. After beating it and cleaning all spots with soap and water or gasoline lay it flat on the floor and follow the directions on the package. Apply while hot with a scrub brush. This will color one side. Fiber rugs and plain carpets may be freshened wonderfully in this manner. Use light blue on a blue rug, tan or orange for brown, light green for a green rug. Do not get the dye too dark or the rug will look muddy.

To remove ink from a rug or carpet immediately sop sweet milk over the spot and dry as much as possible with a dry cloth. Then apply gasoline to take out the grease that the milk would otherwise leave. To remove soot from a carpet sprinkle the spot with salt. Let the salt remain on the spot for about twenty minutes, then sweep it hard with a broom. The spot will disappear.

In the Height of Fashion.

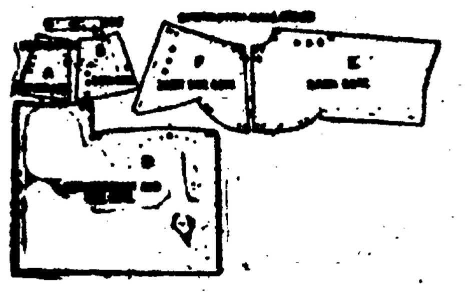
The fashionable stripe skirt worn with a bodice of taffeta corresponding with the overskirt. The underblouse is of crepe Georgette.

One must have one of the new striped skirts made in bouffant effect to wear with a quaint little bodice, to be in the height of fashion. Taffeta with a satin stripe is used for the skirt shown here. The overskirt, jumper and frill about the bottom of the skirt are of plain silk, while the underblouse is crepe Georgette.

In medium size the costume requires 3¾ yards 36-inch striped and 4 yards 36-inch plain taffeta and 1¼ yards crepe Georgette.

The home dressmaker who wishes to make this skirt to use with separate waists, will find it easy to construct. The foundation is a short, three-piece affair, over which the skirt is draped. To start the foundation, join the front and back gores as notched, then close the back seam from large "O" perforation to lower edge and finish edges above for placket. Form an inverted plait at center-back, creasing on slot perforations bring folded edge to center-back seam and tack. Sew the belt to the upper edge of foundation as notched, center-fronts even, easing in fulness.

Now, take the front and side gore, cut in one, and gather upper edges between double "TT" perforations. Adjust to position on foundation gore, center-fronts even; stitch gathers at upper edge to position along upper edge of belt, bringing the side edge to large "O" perforation in belt. Stitch the remaining gathers to position along upper crossline of small "o" perforations in foundation gore.



Gather along crossline of small "o" perforations and stitch along lower line of small "o" perforations in foundation, bringing large "O" perforations together. Bring the single small "o" perforations in front gore to corresponding perforations in front foundation gore and tack.

For the gathered back and short side gore, turn the hems before joining two sections as notched. Close center-back seam from single large "O" perforation to lower edge, finish edges above for a placket. Gather upper edge and the lower rounded edge between double "TT" perforations. Arrange on foundation, center-backs even; stitch upper edges together bringing front edge to small "o" perforation nearest center-front in belt and bring the small "o" perforation near side seam of short side gore to remaining small "o" perforation in belt. Tack the remaining gathered edge of side gore, and back gore along lower line of small "o" perforations in foundation bringing the seam to single large "O" perforation in foundation back gore. Bring the single small "o" perforations along the side edge of back gore to corresponding perforations in side gore. Finish the lower edge of the skirt with a ruching of silk, using narrower ruchings for the overskirt and collar.

Child's Dress in Empire Style.

Daintiness, comfort and style are embodied in this little Empire frock of percale. Hemstitched lawn forms the collar and cuffs.

The smart fashions for children show nothing more practical than this pretty little frock of striped percale made in Empire style. A turn-down collar and cuffs of hemstitched lawn trim the neck and sleeves, while the attached two-piece skirt is gathered at the top.

To reproduce the model in medium size requires 2¼ yards 36-inch percale and ¾ yard 27-inch lawn for the trimming. The little frock can be made very quickly. If the home dressmaker has any doubt about any parts of it, these may be dispelled by a careful study of the construction guide. The preliminary stey is to close the underarm and shoulder seams of the waist as notched, then turn the hem in front. Now, lap the right front on left, center-fronts even, and stitch lower edge to position. Gather lower edge of waist between double "TT" perforations and adjust stay to position under gathers. Sew the collar to the neck edge single large "O" perforations and center-backs even.

To make the sleeves, first form an inverted plait, bringing "T" perforations together on the large "O" perforation. Close seam as notched. Close seam of elbow cuff as notched, sew to sleeve, small "o" perforation in cuff at seam of sleeve and bring seam of cuff to inverted plait in sleeve. Sew sleeve in armhole as notched, small "o" perforation at shoulder seam easing in any fulness.

Next, join gores of skirt as notched; turn hem on small "o" perforations, gather upper edge between double "TT" perforations. Sew to lower edge of waist, center-fronts, center-backs and under-arm seams even.

This cunning little frock may also be made of flouncing or lace.

CHICKEN A LA KING.—Take the breast of a boiled chicken and cut it into small pieces. Place it in a saucepan together with green peppers, cut into dice, which have been cooked in butter. To this add double cream, salt and pepper to taste and chopped truffle. Cook for five minutes. Then add the yolks of two eggs, a little butter and a little finely chopped tarragon.

Pot Roasted Chicken.—Select a five pound fowl. Cut up and make a soup of it, adding carrots, potatoes, onions, also one pound of shin meat. When the fowl commences to get tender, remove pieces of breast, legs, wings and all nice pieces from soup, put in spider and brown in butter, then add just enough water to prevent burning and simmer until tender. Thicken gravy and serve. Use the other parts as soup.

Veal Tongue a la Tartare.—Have ready six veal tongues which have been boiled till tender, the skins removed and discarded. Roll neatly and press between two plates until cold. Dip each in egg and breadcrumbs, brown well on each side in hot butter. Dish them upon cold tartar sauce, garnish with pickles and serve. They are delicious when cut in small bits and heated in a Hollandaise or any good sauce that can be made in a chafing dish.

Mock Venison.—Slices of saddle of mutton, one large tablespoonful butter to every two slices of mutton, one tablespoonful currant jelly, one gill Madeira, salt and cayenne pepper. Put butter into chafing dish and when hot add the mutton. Cover and cook two minutes; when real hot turn and cook two minutes longer. Add salt and a pinch of cayenne, jelly and Madeira. Simmer six minutes and serve hot on hot plates.

A MODEL TEACHER

Must Be Stylish as Well as Pretty, Says Principal.

ICHABOD CRANE TYPE EXTINCT

Brains, Beauty, Charm, Magnetism, Attractiveness, Poise and an Overdose of Common Sense Are General Attributes For a Modern Instructor, P. M. Fisher of Oakland, Cal., Thinks.

Oakland, Cal.—"There goes a schoolmarm. You can tell them by their dowdy dress and their prim manner."

"Oh, can you, though?" asks Principal P. M. Fisher of the Oakland Technical high school, who has drawn up the plans and measurements of the ideal teacher and declares that more and more of them are conforming to the standard. He has named the requirements necessary for the successful pedagogue, and those who are deficient can spend their vacations in catching up.

Brains, beauty, charm, magnetism, attractiveness, poise and an overdose of common sense are the general attributes. The old type of teacher is extinct, he says.

"The day of the Ichabod Crane type of teacher is gone," said Principal Fisher to his teachers. "The time when the lame, the halt and the blind were naturally elected as the custodians of the desk and the wielders of the birch is also passed. Today the teacher is more likely to look like a fashion model than like a frump. She has no narrow views, no old maid ways. She is brought into contact with many sides of life and to qualify she must feel and understand. She must be superior not only mentally, but morally and physically as well. She must be a well poised expert, human and efficient."

In the scale in which Principal Fisher would weigh the prospective teacher personally would have to outbalance education. It is also as important that she be well formed as well informed.

"No teacher needs to be a Venus; neither should she dress like a dress model," the principal elucidated, "but she must be wholesome and pleasant to look at, and her dress should be both becoming and businesslike without being designed especially to attract notice on its own account.

"But that is not all. Though she have the beauty of Helen of Troy, the style of Gaby des Lys, the brain of Mme. de Stael, still she would not qualify 100 per cent unless she had a voice tuneful as a thrush, soothing as the lapping of summer waters on a sandy beach.

"The voice should be free from all acid qualities, gentle and friendly," in the opinion of the Oakland educator, "and in character the teacher must be neither too insistent nor overstrenuous. Her mission is to call out a response in her pupils, not to set them on edge. The driving quality is too often apt to drive diffident natures to the wall. Instead of drawing them out she is likely to shut them up like clams.

"As gentle as a nun, yet she must be firm as a soldier. The pupil who tries to get through school by dodging and fourflushing she must call promptly."

An Oversight.

"Mother, how deep is the ocean?"

"I don't know, dear. It's too deep to measure."

"Well, why didn't they measure it before they put the water in?"—Browning's Magazine.

FULTON ASTONISHED BY SIMPLE MIXTURE

Fulton people are astonished at the INSTANT action of simple buckthorn bark, glycerine, etc., as mixed in Adler-i-ka. ONE SPOONFUL removes such surprising foul matter it relieves almost ANY CASE of constipation, sour stomach or gas. Because Adler-i-ka acts on BOTH upper and lower bowel, a few doses often relieve or prevent appendicitis. A short treatment helps chronic stomach trouble. W. H. Gayer & Son, druggists. adv.

WAR AND INSANITY

Has Not Driven Mad So Many Soldiers as Was Expected.

FIRST REPORTS EXAGGERATED

Dr. Dumas, Who Has Treated All Cases of Mental Trouble In One of French Armies, Describes Queer Illusions of Demented—Cases of General Paralysis Few.

Paris.—The war has not driven mad so many persons as was expected in the early stages. Statistics thus far show that the first reports of men going crazy under the infernal fire of modern artillery were exaggerated.

A report made by Dr. Dumas, who has treated all the cases of mental trouble in one of the French armies, covers 1,198 cases of derangement, of which only 3½ per cent were cases of general paralysis, while in most asylums in time of peace the proportion is 15 per cent. This he takes as conclusive evidence that the fatigues and commotions of war have no influence upon the development of this form of insanity. General paralytics, however, when they become delirious, rave about the war, the same as cases in which the symptoms are quite different, and Dr. Dumas concludes that the life of the combatant often simply gives a war color to delirium that would have existed under normal circumstances, but in a different form.

Horror inspired by battle scenes sometimes works directly on the nervous system, developing symptoms such as hysteria, speechlessness, deafness, loss of the sense of feeling, fits of mental confusion or paralysis, not always accompanied by hallucinations or delirium. Optimism of the most exaggerated type is the dominating note in the hallucinations of the paralytics, and Dr. Dumas considers it a wonder that officers do not in fits of exaltation give absurd heroic orders that lead to disasters. In one case a lieutenant who declared to the doctor that he had "cleaned out a German trench with two machine guns that he had carried on his back from a point several miles in the rear" had remained in command of his section until forty-eight hours before he was examined. A few days later a captain was brought to Dr. Dumas fresh from the command of his company suffering from an equally radical fit of "exaggerated optimism."

A considerable number of the mentally debilitated have the mania of invention. Dr. Dumas is of the opinion that the number of these cases outside the army would be found greater in proportion if the minister of munitions could make public the correspondence he receives from civilians. Among the debilitated were several men and officers who didn't know where and for whom they had been fighting. One declared that he was unaware that France was at war.

NATIVE HAWAIIAN INDUSTRIES.

To Be Revived and Developed In Recently Established Village.

Honolulu.—The island of Hawaii has set aside at a point near Hilo, the chief city and seaport, a large area of forest land for the purpose of a unique public park. Within the boundaries of the park will be established and maintained village exhibits, where native industries will be revived and developed on a commercial scale.

The Hawaiian village will show the olden time grass houses, which will be inhabited by carefully selected Hawaiians. Here will be made the lauhala hats and mats, together with the beautiful koa bowls and vessels for which the islands were famous.

BEAR CUBS CAUGHT.

Gentle as Puppies After Their Mother Was Driven Away.

Estacada, Ore.—Fred Bannister of Estacada returned recently from a trip in the interests of the forestry department near Cary's Hot Springs, on the Upper Clackamas river, bringing with him two brown bear cubs.

These cubs are about three months old and were captured by Bannister after the mother bear had been driven off and the youngsters allowed to climb a tall tree.

Temporarily the animals, which are as gentle as puppies, will be kept in Estacada, where they are furnishing much amusement for young and old.

HUGHES' COLLAR IN MUSEUM

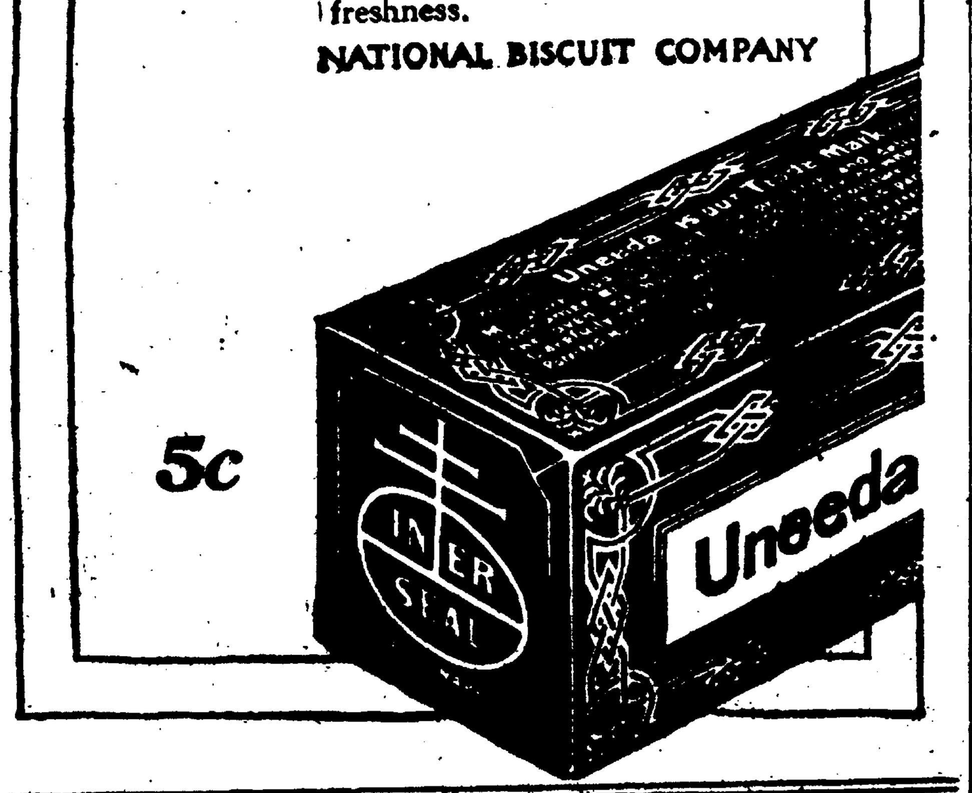
Candidate Adds One to Collection of Those of Notables.

Bridgehampton, N. Y.—Among the many unusual letters received by Charles E. Hughes, the Republican nominee for president, was one asking him for a collar, preferably one which he had worn. Mr. Hughes sent the collar.

The letter came from the owner of a collar factory which has a museum in which are kept as exhibits collars worn by illustrious men. Several presidents have contributed, and there are any number of lesser dignitaries represented in the collection.

Ham Thirty-seven Years Old.

Liberty, Mo.—Dan Rhodus has a country ham hanging in his smokehouse at his home, near Mosby, which was cured by his father in 1878, thirty-seven years ago. It is plump and of fine appearance, although seemingly as solid as a rock.



No better way to satisfy an enthusiastic appetite than with Uneeda Biscuit. A delightful food, as appetizing as it is nourishing and wholesome. Perfect baking, perfect protection, they come to you with oven-freshness.

BASS BITE HARD IN COOLED WATER

The Method Used by New Yorker Is to Snare the Yellow Fellers By Using Ice.

Syracuse—Hibbard Raymond, of Pultney, N. Y., a member of the Lake Keuka West Branch Fishing Gang, has discovered a marvelous way to snare bass in hot weather. He related his piscatorial Utopian triumph at a meeting of "the bunch" the other evening.

"Bass mind the ho weather as much as humans," he began after a few preliminary puffs on his pipe. "In these roasting days you have to humor them if you pull them aboard. The idea came to me the othernight, while I was musing about fishing in general. Said I to myself: 'Fish probably like these cool spots on these hot afternoons as well as men. Why not make a place for them to cool off in and catch them out of it?'

"The next day was a scorcher. I dug a large cake of ice out of the ice house of Billy Gibbon, tied a big rock to it, and dropped the whole in between some of those lonely 'bull weeds' in that rocky cove north of Fish Point, that 'Sunfish Purd' Fowler maintains is the best bass spot in the lake. A couple of hours later I went back and drifted past the spot with two 'beauts' of golden 'shiners.' Bingo went my reel. I eased up some slack and then came up with my rod like 'Bo' taught me to do. A pretty fight a two bass; one two and a half and the other three pounds, went to their happy hunting grounds in my boat. I wheeled after a few minutes and brought my bait over the ice again. Zing! shot out my line and a bass well over four pounds came in. I had only ten 'shiners.' I caught eight bass out of that refrigerator of mine. Muffed two good bites."

"Tried it since?" asked "Godfish Ed" Prentiss.

"No, but I'm at it again soon," announced "Shiner Hib." "Ice is scarce but it's cheap fishing."

"Sounds like you have made a discovery that will revolutionize fishing in all parts of the world south of this latitude," observed "Tick" Prentiss after a period of deep retrospection. "It's reasonable that fish would get into that cool water about the ice on hot days like we've had. Bass like the shallower water when its temperature is right. How do you account for their apparent hunger in your refrigerator?"

"The cool water is refreshing and their appetites are sharpened," replied "Shiner Hib." "Man loses his appetite with his ambition out in a hot sun. He gets in a shady spot where the breeze is blowing and both return, at least his appetite. Bass are not different. They are logy in warm weather and you have to cool them off to get them biting. That is the reason that fish bite better after a rain. They are refreshed.

"I'm one that will test it out," said "Sunfish Purd." "Any time Hib can get ten big bass, something out of the ordinary is bound to have happened. Why he gave up bass fishing three years ago after fighting a twenty foot stick for two hours, thinking he had the largest fish in the lake. He couldn't catch trout on spoons and has been having indifferent success with "sawbellies." I tell you boys Hib has found something. Its the biggest thing I ever heard of and I believe its the real dope.

MUCH INTEREST BEING TAKEN IN REGULAR WEEKLY SHOOTS

The Fulton Rod and Gun Club is one of the largest and strongest clubs in Central New York, with B. J. O'Grady, president, and John Murphy secretary.

At their regular weekly meet Saturday in which Taggett and Watson shot off for the Dupont trophy Taggett won in a 25 bird event by one, the score being Taggett 23, Watson 22.

In the 50 bird event Wise was high man with 45 straight birds to his credit.

Following is the score: Fred Wise, 48; J. Watson, 44; G. Pagett, 41; Dr. Kennedy, 42; Boland, 23; Besaw, 20; Lawton, 21; Tackett, 22; Wilson, 20; Fuller, 18; Bidwell, 17; Mathias, 21; Westover, 20; Nichols, 19.

Watson and Wise shot the Red targets: Watson 2, Wise 1.

This entitles each of them to a knife made and presented by Foster Bros.

There will be a contest for a fish supper in the near future the date of which will be announced later.

SEVERED MUSCLES TRAINED.

Stumps of Amputated Arms Made to Operate False Hands.

Zurich.—Three professors of Zurich university have been experimenting in the hope of training the muscles in the stumps of amputated arms to connect with artificial hands in such a way as to open and close the fingers.

Professor Sanerbach, one of the professors, says in a German medical magazine that the anatomical difficulties have been overcome so effectually that all that is now required for complete success is a somewhat better artificial hand, and he expresses expectation that this soon will be invented.

PRESS YOUR FINGER—PRESTO! PAIN FLIES!

"Zone Therapy" Cure For Headache, Toothache and Hay Fever, Says Doctor.

Pittsburgh.—How the most irritating toothache may be relieved by pressure on certain fingers, and the cure of lumbago, hay fever, wry necks and other ailments accomplished by almost the same process, was outlined here recently by Dr. Fred Kellogg of Providence, R. I., before the Pittsburgh Osteopathic association, which brought him here to lecture on "zone therapy."

Dr. Kellogg, in describing "zone therapy," used stereopticon slides to illustrate his claims for the treatment. According to him, one has but to press a toothbrush against the roof of his mouth to effect a cure for headache. All one has to do when suffering with a troublesome case of hay fever is to press the forefinger of either hand on a hard object. Dr. Kellogg stated that he generally used an aluminum comb to curb the disease.

"Zone therapy," said Dr. Kellogg, "will cure many ills which so far have baffled medical science."

GIRLS IN LOVE TO SAVE PENNY A DAY

When a Quarter Is Obtained It Is to Go to Needy Families of Soldiers.

Philadelphia.—Is the possible war responsible? Or is it just a feminine desire to do what other girls are doing? Miss Nathalia Schaeffer is asking herself these questions. They refer to the epidemic of engagements among her friends which seems to be following her invitation to join a club for engaged girls only. The organization, she explained in her invitation, was to be known as the Engaged Girls' Contribution club, and its purpose was to be the helping of families of soldiers in need.

Miss Schaeffer is twenty-three, blond and pretty. Otherwise the Engaged Girls' Contribution club might never have been organized, because she might not have become engaged recently. Who the bridegroom to be is remains a mystery, as she refuses to disclose his name.

But because of her engagement she thought of other engaged girls and one evening at her home here figured out the club which would bring engaged girls together and do some good besides. Members are to save one penny each day until a quarter shall have accumulated, which they will send to the mayor of whatever city they live in to be turned into a general fund for soldiers' wives and children. It is to be known as Cupid's fund.

LORD'S PRAYER ON PINHEAD.

Letters U. S. Also Engraved on Point of Needle.

Grand Rapids, Mich.—Godfrey E. Lundberg of Spokane, Wash., has engraved the Lord's Prayer, containing sixty-five words, a total of 254 letters, as well as seventeen punctuation marks, on the head of a gold pin forty-seven one-thousandths of an inch in diameter. He also has inscribed the letters "U. S." on the point of a fine cambric needle.

When placed under a hundred diameter microscope the letters stand out boldly and can be read more easily than newspaper type.

The two articles will be placed in a New York museum for exhibition. Lundberg says three years were required to complete the Lord's Prayer.

"GONE TO FRONT," SAYS SIGN

Dr. William Nichols Takes Novel Method of Notifying Patients.

Philadelphia.—Dr. William Nichols, major in charge of the surgeons connected with the Sixth regiment of the national guards of Pennsylvania, took a novel method in informing his patients who might call upon him professionally of his having been called to the colors. On the shutter in front of his home and office, in this city, he had a sign placed with the caption, "Called to the Front."

Underneath this he gave the address and name of a fellow practitioner, whom he directed his patients to call upon when in need of medical attention.

SAFE ON A COWCATCHER.

Motorcyclist Seated There on His Machine When Struck by Train.

Millville, N. J.—While Charles Norberry was riding a motorcycle he was struck by a West Jersey and Seashore railroad train at the East Main street crossing and received only slight bruises.

The motorcycle, with Norberry still on the seat, was fastened to the cowcatcher until the train was stopped 500 feet from where the accident occurred.

Somebody Fooled School Board.

Lowell, Mass.—A woman without authority suspended afternoon sessions of the public schools of Lowell by telephoning the central fire station to sound the no school signal. When Superintendent Molloy heard the bells he telephoned the fire officials, who declared that the woman had said she was in the school superintendent's office.

Russian Lines Bite and Germans Retire From Two Sections

(By United Press)

London—Wireless reports received at Rome and forwarded here today, assert that Germany is withdrawing her heavy artillery and her food and munition depots from Como, in the face of the Russian enveloping movements. The same report said that Balzimir and Volhymskey, in the same sector on the east have already been evacuated.

London—No change in the situation was reported today by General Sir Douglas Haig, British commander-in-chief in France. Haig related that north of Balzimir a hostile attack against British trenches was successfully repulsed and said there had been heavy artillery during the night.

Paris—Two German surprise attacks, directed at the French lines at Lihous, were repulsed, the official communique declared today.

Berlin—Fierce fighting along the British front, north of Somme, is reported in the war office statement today. It was stated that General Haig's men penetrated a narrow front toward the western portion of the Foureaux woods, but were driven out by fierce counter attacks.

Petrograd—Trudging through marshy lands sometimes, waist deep in water, Russian forces drove back Teuton lines from Dniester river to Koropiecz and elsewhere along the east front and have pressed the Germans and Austrians hard, according to to-day's war office statement.

Germany Repudiates Englane's Terms for Relief of Poland

(By United Press)

Washington—Germany has refused to agree to England's terms for Polish relief. Her answer to England and to the circular note of the State Department, of July 6, expressing hope for a relief agreement, was cabled from Berlin by American Ambassador Gerard and given out by the State Department today.

Kaiser Would Unify Germany for Peace

(By United Press)

Berlin—The Kaiser today inaugurated a speechmaking propaganda throughout Germany to unify the empire on Germany's peace terms and to prepare the public mind for peace.

Under the auspices of The German National Committee, an organization having the approval of the official censorship, fifty well known German orators will make the same speech in fifty German cities today. The speech is unofficially known to represent Chancellor von Bethmann Hollweg's peace term views.

The speech is being awaited with the keenest interest by both friends and foes of Dr. Hollweg.

This propaganda may mark the beginning of re-established friendly relations between the Chancellor and those with whom he has politically disagreed on the conduct of the war. Dr. Hollweg is the man who engineered the ousting of Grand Admiral von Tirpitz and his submarine warfare campaign and kept friendly relations with the United States when a break seemed imminent.

It is known that the Moderate, Conservative, National-Liberal and Catholic elements have been striving to make a reconciliation between the Chancellor and the Pan-German element.

PAPER CO.'S CANADIAN LANDS MAY BE SOLD SOON

Unless the Canadian interests mixed up in the disputed ownership of 17 acres of timber lands in Chicoutimi, Canada, in which the Battle Island Paper Company had an interest, the American creditors of that concern will have the property sold.

The Canadians, who have been instrumental in holding up many of the propositions put forward by the Oswego and Onondaga county men have only a few days more in which to file an appeal from the judgment of the lower courts, which upheld the Americans' contentions. Unless this appeal is taken the petition for the sale of the property will be asked immediately. This appeal will be filed by A. Guy Daley, as chairman of the bondholders' committee of the bankrupt paper company.

In case another appeal is taken the case will then go before the King's Bench, the highest of the Canadian courts. In order to do this, however, the consent of the other creditors must be secured, and the Americans do not believe that this can be done.

The battle for the property has been under way for two years. It started when the Battle Island Company went to the wall and has been hanging fire since, with the Canadians fighting against a disposal of the property so that the Hunter creditors could realize upon it. The Ontario Paper Company wanted to buy the land, but was prevented by the objections of the Canadians.

The legal battle has been based on the question of a servitude of the paper company, the courts having held that the claims of the bondholders should have a preference over those of the Canadian concern.

THURSDAY LAST DAY OF TIMES ANIMAL CONTEST

The Evening Times Wild Animal Prize Contest.

To the Wild Animal Editor:

I hereby certify I am not over 15 years of age and I submit

.... names of wild animals in your prize contest for free tickets to the Al. G. Barnes Big Four Ring Wild Animal Circus exhibiting in Fulton on Saturday, August 5th.

Name ....

Address ....

(Pin one of these coupons on your list)

Well, we simply never knew there were so many wild animals before. Lists in Tthe Evening Times Wild Animal Contest are still pouring in and several little boys and girls have gone clear back into the jungles of Africa and brought out fearsome animals we never knew existed.

The kids in this contest, winning free tickets to the A. G. Barnes Big Four Ring Wild Animal Circus which shows in this city Saturday in afternoon and evening performances, are learning a lot and so are we. And just think what it is going to be like to look up the names of these wild animals and read about them, then go to the circus and see these wonderful and fierce animals do the marvelous things that remarkable man, Al. G. Barnes, and his trainers, have taught them to do. Isn't it dandy? And you can win if you'll try.

Do you know the conditions of the contest? If not, get a copy of yesterday's Times at The Times office, or any news stand, and read them. Then get busy.

No more interesting feature is presented by the Barnes Wild Animal Circus than the corps of equestrians, in fact, the Barnes show has more of them than any other circus. Instead of people appearing as riders, trained animals perform the acts.

In one act a company of Rocky Mountain goats appear as riders of galloping horses. Apes, chimpanzees, monkeys and dogs also work in the act.

A quartette consisting of a leopard, lion, grizzly bear and goat ride together in a very remarkable exhibit. This act involves one of the greatest attainments known among animal trainers, as the lion, leopard and bear are deadly enemies and most feared foe of the horse, yet they have been trained to work harmoniously together.

Another spectacle, almost unbelievable, is a horse carrying man-eating African lions. These lions leap from the ground onto the backs of running horses and from the backs of the horses through hoops of fire. The training of these animals consumed months of time.

Astonishing indeed, are the feats performed by a group of seals and sea lions. These cumbersome animals have been taught to ride horseback and at the same time juggle small articles such as billiard balls on the tips of their noses.

The horses and ponies ridden by these wild animals are members of the Barnes troupe of world's premium stock. This horse troupe numbers 550 members and no finer, more beautiful nor better educated horses exist.

Forty fun-making ponies, mules, bears, elephants, dogs, goats and monkeys provide the fun spots on the program. They're real grouch dissolvers.

Hours for performances are 2 and 8 p. m., with doors opening at 1 and 7 p. m. The parade will start promptly at 10:30.

And remember, Thursday is the last day. Your list must be in by Thursday, 6 p. m., at The Times office. Remember, now, get your list to the Wild Animal Editor, The Times, not later than 6 o'clock Thursday evening, and watch Friday's paper for announcement of distribution of prizes.

Deutschland, Barring Accident, Will Ship Down the Bay Today

(By United Press)

Baltimore—It looked along the old Patapsco this forenoon as though at last the German super-submarine Deutschland was ready for her dare-devil trip back to Germany. A myriad of maneuvres, including a melo-dramatic search for mines in the harbor, resulted in no get-away. Rumors wafting on the Patapsco breezes said the Deutschland will quit the harbor to-day.

Affairs began to warm up around the Deutschland's pier soon after sunrise. The tug Timmins took a drag onto a launch and dragged the harbor. Coleman, the pilot who steered the submarine into this port will take her out again. Plans of the promoters call for him to pilot the Deutschland down the bay.

Forty Lives Lost When Chilean Steamer Sank

(By United Press)

San Diego, Cal.—The Chilean steamer Ecuador was wrecked near Coronel today. Forty persons were drowned.

The Lloyds register does not give the Ecuador as a Chilean ship, but as the property of the Argentine Navigation Company of Buenos Aires. This vessel was 181 feet long and 660 tons burden.

REPUBLICAN LEADERS LAUDING THE KEYNOTE

By Percy Arnold
United Press Correspondent

New York—Charles Evans Hughes' "Keynote" for the coming campaign pleased all Republicans today. Party confreres who aspired to hear the former Justice formally accept the nomination last night were unanimous today in praising the striking sentences with which the candidate outlined the work ahead of the G. O. P. He proceeded to convict President Wilson, the U. S. Senate and the Congress for their failure to give the people an honest, clean-cut conduct of affairs.

New York—Charles E. Hughes today declared for a Women's Suffrage amendment to the Constitution, in a telegram sent to Senator George Sutherland of Utah. "My view is that an amendment should be submitted and ratified," the Republican candidate said in the telegram to the Utah Senator.

Last Minute News

Washington—Charging that President Wilson violated the law by making the Farm Loan Board Democratic, instead of non-partisan, the Republicans of the Senate banking committee today succeeded in holding up the confirmation of W. S. A. Smith, of Sioux City, as a member.

THE INDIVIDUAL DOLLY

A young woman who is by no means old enough to be styled venerable, although some years past her childhood, confesses that she is still as fond of dolls as she was in extreme youth. If it were not for fear of heartless ridicule she would be glad to spend a little time each day fondling the doll which was with her much in other days and still has a place among her most precious hidden treasures. Perhaps the oldest of us, if brought to the stool of honest confession, would be compelled to admit—regardless of our sex—that we, too, have dear dollies which we bring out of their secret hiding places from time to time and gaze upon with undying affection and fondle and love and caress with all the ardor that filled our hearts in the days that are no more. Most of us are stillchildren in a very real sense and at certain periods we revert to our childhood and bring forth the precious objects of our affection, shedding tears over them, it may be, and doing our best to convince ourselves that the years have brought no real changes, taken nothing away, added nothing, but left us untouched by their corroding fingers, and dealt no less kindly with the treasures and the fancies of youth.

Indeed, the secret of abiding youth is found in the ability to dwell in the blessed land of childhood a portion of each day. Our dolls may be of various sorts, but we are doing wisely if we have continued to love them and cherish them and fondle them and breathe out our confidences to them from time to time, not permitting any of the experiences of life to dull our ardor or quench our enthusiasm or diminish our zeal or in any manner steal the charming landscapes of Childland. Only those grow old who easily forget their early days the very beginnings of the great adventure which men call life. Only those cease to have faith in God and man who have lost the recollection of their young romances, the shining hours when earth and heaven were one and the future not half so charming or inspiring as the present. There are more of these old-young folks in the world than one might suspect and some of them look cold and stern outwardly. Yet their hearts are still as tender and impressionable as in childhood and their most cherished comrades are the children of the new generation.

There were 91 automobiles passed the corner at First Street and Broadway last Sunday within fifteen minutes. Many of these will appreciate the new First street pavement when it is completed.

AMERICAN CITIZENSHIP

We have always believed that the public schools should pay considerable attention to the principles of good citizenship as they proceed in the work of informing the intellect and shaping the character ow their pupils. The four potent influences in the life of the ordinary child are the home, the school, the church and the street. All but the last mentioned ought to be powerful in developing the better qualities of the child. They do not perform their whole duty unless they instruct the rising generations in American citizenship. One of their aims should be the strengthening of patriotism. They should send out into the world lovers of the country. Their work should be of such a character as to benefit the republic.

It is to be hoped that the schools of the immediate future will do more than is being done now to impress upon the mind, the heart and the conscience of their pupils the dignity, the responsibility and the privileges of citizenship. We have no wish to criticize the schools of today; while far from perfect they are doing a very good work. Still, something is radically wrong with the average citizen. Many voters have improper conceptions of citizenship. They are too prone to follow men rather than principles. They are too often swayed by personal prejudice or selfishness. They do not take pains to post themselves concerning the principles or the personality of the individuals who ask for their support at the polls. Too seldom does conscience go into the citizen's ballot.

It is said that youthful impressions are usually lasting. If we test the statement by our own remembrance of the events of the passing years most of us will admit its truth. We recall incidents that occurred in our extreme childhood. We remember many things that were committed to memory in the formative period of childhood. Impressions made upon our minds in those days when neither business nor the cares of life distracted the attention, remain with us. They are seldom shaken off.

That's the reason we feel that citizenship properly taught in early childhood would remain one of the cardinal principles of the life of the average American. We believe the schools should begin quite early to teach pupils the peculiarities of our form of government and the tremendous responsibility resting upon the citizens who are responsible for the character and conduct of the public officials, as well as for the general progress of the government of both state and nation.

The large attendance at the Chautauqua the first day was very gratifying to those interested in the enterprise.

Be friendly with your friends and happiness is likely to be your portion.

Gratitude is the fairest flower that ever bloomed in the human heart.

SELECTED EDITORIALS

Peoria (Ill.) Journal:

While other states have wrestled with the free text books problem for many years, it has remained for Kansas, the pioneer in many advanced legislative and governmental experiments, to get down to business and make actual provision for supplying the public school pupils with books printed by the state. The last legislature appropriated $250,000 for a text book printing plant, and if the project pans out as planned, the books will be printed at a sufficient profit to the state to necessitate no further outlays on account of depreciation or increased expenditures.

Public printing is not always economical, by any means, but it has proven the only effective counter in many states to the graft scandals which inevitably seem to result from the distribution of contracts among private firms. The extortion of the text book trust has been notorious for many years, especially in Illinois, and frequent efforts have been made to stop it by a free text book system; but various sorts of objections have thus far precluded the taking over of the book business by the state.

Illinois will watch the Kansas experiment with peculiar interest. Whether it results in any huge economy to the school patrons or not, it must be regarded as worth while if it removes the school from the clutches of the text book trust.

Boston Evening Transcript:

The wonderful thing about the fireflies is their beautiful restlessness. One is always reminded by it of the Indian name for the fireflies; the Indians call them the Movers. Why the Movers? Because in the Indian tongue the term "the Movers" signifies the Restless Ones, and means the spirits of the dead, or of certain dead who cannot stay still in one place. They are the spirits who pry into things, and who spy you out if you tell the secrets of the dead; that is, if you tell the folklore stories. Therefore no Indian will tell a story in the season of the fireflies. Hard luck for the scientific gents, for the professional folktale authorities who have taken the period of their Summer vacations to collect Indian folklore! The Indian story teller becomes silent the moment the first firefly, the first Mover, appears, and never will resume his function until the last one is gone. Winter, and the fire smouldering in the middle of the tepee, and the children's eyes gleaming like coals in the recesses behind the women, is the time for stories. Then the Restless Ones are far away.

The Utica Observer:

The Department of Agriculture of the United States is of the opinion that the decrease in the output of meat in the West has been halted, and that from now on the production will slowly increase. The decline heretofore has been due largely to the settlement of public lands and the consequent reduction of the range of feeding.

The increase will come about, it is believed, because of the increase of the stock on these farms, because of the improvement of the stock ranges in the forest preserves, and because of the better management in feeding and caring for the stock.

The increase will be accompanied by a higher cost of production, consequently there is no promise of lower prices. Moreover, the increase in the population of the country and consequently the advance in the consumption will tend to keep prices up.

An Unromantic Lover

By M. QUAD

Copyright, 1916, by the McClure Newspaper Syndicate.

Henry Strong was a farmer's hired man, strong and rugged and willing to work from sun to sun without a complaint. If any one had asked the farmer about his hired man he would have replied that nothing ailed Henry. So it would have been with every one who knew him, man and woman, except Nettie White, the daughter of another farmer a mile away. Her complaint would have been that he hadn't a speck of romance in his nature.

After courting Nettie White for six months the time came when he admitted to himself that she would make a good wife for him. Nettie White was not entirely satisfied with his courtship, but she got to like Henry Strong for his candor and honesty.

Henry's education had been gained at a little country schoolhouse. Once in awhile he would pick up the weekly paper and read for half an hour, but he had never read a book of any kind. On the contrary, Nettie was quite well educated and had read every book she could lay her hands on. She had read of chevaliers, knights and heroes galore, and she had wished many a time that Henry would come riding with steed and lance and bear her off. Alas for Henry! His "steed" was the old white mare which was plowing out the corn, and his lance was a well worn hoe which he used in the potato field.

On summer nights, when they sat on the front steps and the full moon rose up in all its radiance and the whippoorwill sang from the grove back of the barn, Nettie looked for Henry to say something—something about the romance of the evening. But what Henry said was:

"I wonder if it is true that the moon is mostly composed of buttermilk!"

At length Henry proposed marriage. Perhaps he was as romantic about it as he could be, but there was no emotion in his voice and no weakness in his knees as he leaned his chair back on its hind legs against the house and carelessly said:

"Oh, Nettie, I almost forgot what I was going to say to you this evening. I guess we had better be married some day. What do you think about it?"

It is useless to tell what she thought about it, but after that evening they considered themselves engaged.

One day Henry's fiancee got a brilliant thought. Henry might not be romantic, but he might be heroic, which is mostly but not quite the same thing. If she could make a hero of him she would at least be half satisfied. She thought the thought over for several days and was then ready to put a plan into execution.

Not far from Nettie's house was the house of a farmer's daughter, who frequently exchanged visits with her. By cutting across an old pasture a quarter of a mile's walk could be saved. In that old pasture Henry's employer kept a bull.

Henry Strong was plowing out potatoes one forenoon about 11 o'clock, and he was neither feeling romantic nor heroic when a scream startled him. It was a scream of a woman in peril—deadly peril. He looked up to see Nettie White in the old pasture with the bull. She had her arms outstretched toward him imploringly, and as he mounted the fence she cried out:

"Oh, Henry, that bull will gore me to death! If you love me"—

"Can't you see," replied Henry as he settled himself on the top rail, "that the bull is lying down and chawin' his cud under that tree yonder? If he wasn't he wouldn't hurt a fly. One of the gals at the house was ridin' on his back this very mornin'. What you doin' in that field anyhow?"

Miss Nettie was so chagrined and indignant that she turned and walked across the field with her head held very high and her lips compressed. If there had been forty more bulls she wouldn't have even looked back over her shoulder.

There was a second attempt to arouse the heroism of the lover. He had asked if she did not want to go fishing in the river, half a mile away. She would be happy to go. It would be helping her to carry out her second scheme.

After they had reached the river and fished side by side for half an hour she arose and wandered away for a few yards and began a fresh attack on the finny tribe in water about two feet deep.

Suddenly, as Henry was thinking of pumpkins and squashes, there was a scream and a splash, and he calmly and slowly looked up. The girl was in the water. She held out her hands to him in an appealing way. He knew the depth of the water at that point and said, "I don't see how you managed to fall in, but catch hold of that bush there and pull yourself out."

And when the bedraggled and dejected girl reached home she vowed a solemn vow to herself that never, never in this wide world would she be the wife of Henry Strong. But after awhile common sense got the upper hand again and three months later they were married, and it wasn't two weeks more before she was saying to her mother:

"Henry has no romance about him nor is he anything of a hero, but he chopped two cords of wood yesterday, and that is more than any other man in Medana county can do. I can't get him to read and he don't care for whippoorwills, but you ought to see how beautiful he peels the potatoes and cuts the ham for breakfast."

FOUR BROTHERS, EACH SIX FEET, AT BORDER

They Are McDonalds, and Their Comrades Call 'Em "the Big Macks."

Savannah, Ga.—"Twenty-four feet of men." That is what members of Battery A, Chatham artillery, call the four McDonald brothers—Bill, Bob, Alex and Bernard. They are known also as "The Giant Quartet," "The Big Macks" and the "Fighting Four." But their father, Bernard L. McDonald of the city health department, towers over them all; he's six feet two.

Bill is the youngest and shortest, being scant six feet. Bob, next, is the tallest, exceeding Bill in height by an inch and a half. Alex, the eldest, and Bernard are just an inch shorter than Bob.

The four are a quartet in the musical sense also, each being possessed of a pleasing voice. Alex has been "end man" in most of the local amateur minstrel shows.

All four went with their battery to Mexico.

GIVE THE HORSE GOOD CARE NOW

Suggestions for the proper care of horses during the hot weather have been made by a prominent veterinary surgeon. They are as follows:

1—Shade is never fatal to a horse; stop in the shade occasionally.

2—If you load with some judgment and do not try to establish a speed record you will have a horse when the other fellow has a skate.

3—Water your horse often. To be sure of horse never complains of being dry, but a driver is supposed to have horse sense enough to attend to that. Water in small quantities will not injure a horse that is working. Limit the amount when the horse is going to stand to a few swallows. Dry hay is dry eating, either sprinkle the hay lightly or water the horse after he has fed.

4—Ever wear a burdock leaf in your hat? Try it on your horse, except that it is well to substitute a wet sponge, never a dry one and put it on top of the horse's head.

5—Never mind the style in horse hats; always use a canopy top hat if any at all. The ordinary bell shaped hat is worse than useless. The horse might better be bare headed.

6—Some folks appreciate a bath. You need not bathe the horse as you would a poodle, but when the day's work is done sponge off the harness marks, swab eyes, nose and dock. It is all right to wash the feet, but never mind the legs.

7—A lot of people count on a little blow-out on Saturday night. Give Dobbin one too, a bran mash slightly warmed is a strong favorite.

8—Never turn a hose on a horse. More than one valuable animal has been foundered, especially when hot, by this well-meaning piece of ignorance. When the mercury crawls up toward eighty sponge the horse off with a little water and vinegar instead.

9—Sometimes it is so hot that a horse sweats in the stable at night. Under such conditions some persons have sense enough to hitch the horse out of doors with plenty of bedding underneath.

10—Horses can suffer sunstroke just the same as men. If your horse suddenly stops sweating, breathes short and quick, ears drooping and legs braced out, there is danger of heat prostration. All of these symptoms may not be present at the same time. Any of them indicates a dangerous condition.

11—The first thing to do when a horse is overcome by the heat is to get him in a shady spot, strip off the harness, sponge him all over, wash out his mouth and shower his legs. It is an excellent plan to wrap his head with a wet, cool cloth. Two ounces of aromatic spirits of ammonia diluted in a pint of water is excellent. A pint of warm coffee also has a good effect.

12—A horse sometimes gets off his feed just as humans do. He needs a little extra attention then. Give him oat meal gruel or barley water to drink and feed two quarts of oats mixed with bran and slightly moistened with water. Add a little sugar or salt to make it tasty.

Rising to the Occasion

It was in a dangerous spot off the coast of Ireland, and the steamship was a trifle off its course. It had, in fact, taken the wrong turning.

"Breakers ahead! We are lost!" yelled the lookout from his point of vantage in the bows.

"Begorra," cried the Irish cook, "we're not lost if that will save us!" And he seized a belaying pin and hit the lookout such a blow as completely to daze the man.

"How Dare You?"

"How dare you?" bellowed the captain angrily. "Why did you strike that man?"

"Well," replied Pat, "he yelled, 'Break us a head or we are lost!' And, sure, I did exactly as he tould me, sir. And I'll break a dozen, sir, if that'll save the ship bedad!"

RECEIVERS MUST PAY INTEREST

In winding up the affairs of the Empire Uited Railways for the summer at Syracuse, Saturday afternoon Justice William S. Andrews, in special term, ordered that the receivers of the system pay the interest due on the balance of the moneys due for the payment of the twelve cars purchased for the city of Oswego under a car trust. These cars cost $52,980. At the time of the purchase $10,980 was paid in cash and on June 1. $10,600 was on the original purchase price and $1,272 interest.

The Justice also ruled that the temporary receivers, H. S. Holden and S. L. Allen should pay the $75 per month rental out of the whole amount of $155 for rentals of the station property at Oswego.

The bondholders committee also asked Justice Andrews for a compilation of the franchises, properties, etc., of the system. The matter was held in abeyance pending an agreement between the bondholders' committee and the readjustment committee of the system.

All matter relating to the lines will now be held over until Justice Andrews returns from his vacation some time in September.

CITY CLERKS HAVE TO CHASE LICENSE PAPERS

City Clerks throughout the state are having a hard time trying to find out what becomes of the marriage licenses that are not returned and of which there are no records of the marriages ever having taken place. In many cases it is known that the parties have married, but the officiating clergymen have failed to return the certificates.

In many cities it is found that foreigners, after securing their license have thought it was a marriage certificate and have had it framed and use it to adorn the walls in their homes and have not gone to the trouble of having a ceremony performed. In many cases the couples have been informed of their mistake and the belated ceremonies have been hastily performed.

The city clerks also find that in many cases the marriage licenses have not been used nor have they been returned. In some cases investigation discloses that the contracting parties have changed their minds. In rare cases the licenses have been returned. In others they are still missing.

Mute evidence of domestic tragedies stare at one from many books in the offices of the city clerks. The facts are not always obtained as there is more or less secrecy about some of the records and again in other cases the true facts are not revealed by the bare figures and the other facts in the case must be known.

It is said that there is nothing in the state law that requires city clerks to go ahead and keep their records clear, but clerks in many cities are anxious to do so and launch hundreds of queries on the track of missing licenses that are never answered.

HUNTERS, IT IS ALLEGED, USED CO FUNDS ILLEGALLY

Norwich, N. Y.—At a special term of the Federal court here Saturday afternoon Federal Judge George W. Ray, the trustees in bankruptcy for the Hunter Arms Company of Fulton, were directed to investigate the charge that about $30,000 of the company's funds had been used to pay individual debts of the Hunter Brothers.

The request was made by Attorney E. J. Mizen, of Oswego, counsel for the trustees in bankruptcy, asked that suits be started against various banks to recover moneys paid them by the Hunter brothers from the company's funds.

Nelson U. Bonney, of this place appeared for the trustees. Several New York banks sent requests to Judge Ray asking that the funds of the company not be used to prosecute lawsuits for the collection of the money. Judge Ray adjourned the hearing after hearing the arguments and directed the trustees to report to him at the earliest possible date. He will render his decision at that time.

"MERCHANT OF VENICE" TONIGHT

In Cast Will Be Seen Players Who Have Aided Famous Stars in Shakespearean Productions.

This evening the Ben Greet players present a remarkable cast for the production "The Merchant of Venice." Ben Greet players delight Fultonians last year in "Much Ado About Nothing" and this year should prove more popular because "The Merchant of Venice" gives a better opportunity for the exercise of their dramatic talents. Among the cast Mr. Eric Blind has a record of successful experience with Sir Henry Irving. His interpretation of "Shylock" reminds one of the interpretation of this great master. He has also played with Beerbohm Tree and Margaret Anglin. He has also been associated with Granville Barker.

Miss Grace Halsey Mills, manager of the settlement playhouse of New York city, will play the interesting role of "Portia."

Miss Carson, who plays "Jessica" starred last season in Henry Miller's "Daddy Longlegs."

Miss Francis, who plays "Nerissa" was with Cyril Maude in "Grumpy."

Mr. Brahm, who appears as "Lorenzo", has signed a contract to appear with Beerbohm Tree next season, and Mr. Carr, stage manager has been the assistant stage manager to Mr. Tree.

The Chautauqua platform entertained about a thousand people last night and certainly pleased the audience. John B. Ratto with his various interpretations made a decided impression on his audience. Mr. Ratto made up with paint and wig so cleverly that those present were held to the point of interest. He impersonated the various humorous types of mankind with appearance and dialect that it is needless to say that he is the cleverest of his kind.

The Highland Band also gave numerous selections. The band was dressed in Scottish Highland attire and depicted Scottish tunes by means of bagpipe and drum. They displayed wonderful talent and were met with hearty applause. Provisions have been made by th meanagement to reserve seats for an evening performance but seats can not be reserved only for one performanc at a time. A lost and found department has been installed.

OPEN AIR BAND CONCERT

There will be an open air concert given by the band at Lower Falls, First and Worth street, Wednesday evening and it is expected there will be a large attendance at this free entertainment.

The West Side Park Committee will serve ice cream, pop corn, Coney Islands, and soft drinks, the proceeds to be used for beautifying the park.

BALL PLAYING IS TABOO IN ALL CITY STREETS

As a result of an accident which occurred on West First street, last night, Chief Dyer has placed a ban on ball playing in the streets. The son of Mr. and Mrs. John Harrigan was struck by a touring car belonging to Frederick Burden, while participating in a game of ball. This is the second accident of that nature within twenty-four hours and both were due to carelessness in playing in the road.

Fortunately no serious results have been ascertained, but to check the possibility Chief Dyer announced today that all ball playing in the streets must cease. Coasting and riding on sidewalks will also be stopped.

ENTERTAINED IN HONOR OF MR. & MRS. PERCHWAY

Mr. and Mrs. James Caldwell gave a miscellaneous shower last evening at their home in West Sixth street, in honor of Mr. and Mrs. Mahlon Parchway, who received many beautiful and useful presents, consisting of cut glass, silver ware, linen and Haviland China. The evening was spent in music and merry-making.

Those present were: The Misses Anna and Pearl Pringle, Ruth and Mildred Blackley, Hazel Sawyer, Agnes Besaw, Eva Reyes, Mr. and Mrs. William Taylor, Mr. and Mrs. Frank Ya Beef, Mrs. John Keyes, Miss Mae Whalen, Miss Cora Gallon, Mr. and Mrs. J. J. Perchway and Mr. and Mrs. James Caldwell.

Quicksands.

Quicksands have a horrible fascination for writers and readers of fiction, and the reality is every bit as bad as fancy paints it. One of the most remarkable quicksand accidents occurred years ago in New Zealand. Two prospectors were wading across the mouth of a small stream running into the sea in the north island of New Zealand. Both stepped into the quicksand. One who merely touched the edge of it got loose. The other sank rapidly and, in spite of his companion's efforts, was sucked under. When an attempt was made to recover the body it was found that the sand was enormously rich in gold. From a single ton of it $1,500 worth of gold was washed.

Highly Trained Animals With Circus Coming Saturday.

ONLY FEMININE PRESS AGENT WITH CIRCUS

We received a visit this morning from the only woman press agent for a circus, Emma C. Miller, traveling four days ahead of the Al. G. Barnes wild animal circus, to exhibit in Fulton, Saturday, August 5th.

In glowing language and much enthusiasm, Miss Miller tells some of the wonderful things the 1,00 animals of the Barnes circus do.

There are four baby elephants and their mammas, every one does a circus stunt. One big elephant plays football and three of the monster paryderme do amazing posing acts with three pretty girls. Others carry Shetland ponies, swung in soft velvet cradles, in their mouths, and still others perform in the ring with Shetland ponies.

In this greatest animal circus dainty Dot Whitney dances in a den of lions. Great Royal Bengal Tigers jump through hoops of fire. Herr Louie Roth puts his head in a lion's mouth. Later the same animal takes a strip of raw meat from his naked lips.

A singing donkey and bucking mules. The only perfoming Llamas, camels and zabras; boxing kangaroos, wrestling bears, riding and driving ostriches. Fifty aerial and trapese monkeys; roosters that draw a baby carriage; goats that walk a tight rope, pigs that ain't pigs, but are actors; juggling and musical seals and sea lions; seals that ride running horses and a baby elephant.

Samson, a monster Nubian lion is hoisted to the top of the tent, surrounded by sky rockets. 550 finest breed horses and ponies, do all kinds of dancing and posing acts. There are sixty-five acts given in the show's program, each one different from the preceding one.

Besides being a great amusement institution the Barnes show affords more opportunities for natural history and animal physocology than can be found anywhere else. As attested by boards of education all along the Barnes itinerary, giving full holidays, sending teachers and pupils to the show. Business men realize the Barnes show is exceptional and city chamber of commerce bodies would greet Mr. Barnes and his show in person, to show their appreciation of his great aggregation.

COMPENSATION LAW IS LIBERAL

With the legislative wheels all greased for the quick passage of the Federal Compensation Law at Washington, Oswego county employes of Uncle Samuel are studying the terms of the bill by which they are to benefit.

The measure provides in case of:

Death—Thirty-five per cent. of wages to widow or widower, until their death or remarriage, with ten per cent. additional for each dependent child.

Total disability — Two-thirds of wages. In no case to be less than $33.33 per month.

Partial disability—Two-thirds of the difference between wages earned before and after injury was received. Refusal of a partially disabled man to do what work he can do makes him ineligible to any payment.

Medical care for a reasonable time after an injury is suffered in government employ is provided, and in case of death $100 in funeral expenses is allowed.

Intoxication or wilful carelessness on duty makes an employe ineligible to benefit under the act.

This bill is one that has been up before many Congresses and has gone through all the stages but final passage. This year the American Federation of Labor got busy with assurance of quick passage.

MYSTERY SURROUNDS MAN WHO DROPPED LEG

Syracuse—Syracuse police have a mystery on their hands in the finding of the badly decomposed right leg of a man on a dumping ground in Hood avenue, near Star Park.

A woman living in the neighborhood says she saw the man who dropped the leg. He had it tied in a bundle, wrapped in newspaper. He tossed it into a ditch, and then attempted to cover it up with ashes and other refuse. After the man had disappeared others who had seen him went to the place, uncovered the bundle, unwrapped it and found the human leg.

The police are trying to get track of the man.

PACKING CASKS STANDARDIZED

County farm bureaus throughout the state are reminding their patrons of a Federal law that went into effect July 1 regarding the standardization of barrels for the packing of fruits, vegetables and other dry commodities, other than cranberries.

According to the new law the barrel shall measure up as follows: length of stave twenty-eight and one-half inches; diameter of heads, seventeen and one-eighth inches; distance between heads, twenty-six inches; circumference of bulge, sixty-four inches; outside measurements, and the thickness of staves not greater than four-tenths of an inch. Provided that any barrel of a different form shall have a capacity of 7,056 cubic inches shall be a standard barrel.

A penalty of $500 fine or six months imprisonment is provided for the offense for offering for sale a barrel containing fruits or vegetables or other dry commodity of less capacity than the standard barrels. Provision is made, however, that this law shall not apply to barrels used in packing and shipping commodities sold exclusively by weight or numerical count.

It is also provided that barrels for foreign shipment may be made of any dimensions specified by the foreign purchaser, so long as they do not conflict with the laws of the country to which they are consigned.

It is the intent of this law to create a standard barrel so that the term "barrel" when applied to any commodity shall mean a certain, definite amount. It does not prohibit the selling of anything by the peck, bushel, quart, pound, etc., but only applies when it is sold by "the barrel."

Some of the farmers are likely to object to the bill at first, but it is believed that after it gets in working order that it will work to the advantage of all.

QUARANTINE RAISED

The residence of Mr. and Mrs. Frank Brown of No. 310 South Seventh street, was released from quarantine yesterday. The quarantine had been placed there only temporarily as a means of precaution as the Brown children had been associated with a child who had died with an ailment resembling infantile paralysis.

FORMER ENGINEER NOW EDITOR

Mr. Mercer Weiskoten, who at one time was engineer on the barge canal and made his home in this city is to take the place of Ross W. Kellog as editor of The Seneca County Press at Seneca Falls, Mr. Kellog having resigned. At present Mr. Weiskotten is editor of The Mohawk Valley Register at Fort Plain. This position he will retain, but he will make his home at Seneca Falls.

INJURED AT PAPER MILL

While working at his machine yesterday in the Eureka Paper Mill Mr. Frank Abbott got caught in one of the machines. Fortunately only slight injuries were inflicted. A doctor was summoned and found that bruises and a few abrasions had resulted from the accident. Mr. Abbott was removed to the hospital where he was resting comfortably today.

HIGH'S ALUMNI REORGANIZES

At a recent meeting of the Alumni Association of Fulton High School, committees and officers were elected for the nucleus of what will become a society embracing only graduates of the local school.

The society was started during the regime of Principal B. G. Clapp and the sum of $100 was accumulated for the purpose of awarding a scholarship to the deserving student graduated from the high school. This sum has been taken over by the new society, part of whom were members of the former society and after an amendment can be made to the constitution the money will be used according to the demands of the old by-laws.

A get together outing will be held at Pathfinder Island for the purpose of fraternizing and to form a more social body. This will take place August 29.

One of the most interesting committees appointed is the gymnasium committee. It is the duty of this committee to originate and perfect plans for the building of a gymnasium in this city. It is something that Fulton has never enjoyed, although attempts have been made by interested parties. This committee is now at work securing support for this endeavor.

The next meeting will take place at the Library August 8th.

U. S. WANTS NEW INFORMATION

Engineers and Manufacturers Asked to Provide Data Concerning Ability to Make War Supplies.

To ascertain if government supplies can be made here, and to what extent, is the purpose of the blanks received by civil, mechanical and electrical engineers in this city.

The blanks are sent out by the committee on industrial preparedness of the Naval Consulting Board of the United States, of which Thomas A. Edison is chairman. The purpose of the inquiry is for the purpose of taking an inventory of the manufacturing plants of the city. A letter from President Wilson accompanies the letter to assure the manufacturers that the inventories are of a strictly confidential nature. The information is to be used exclusively for the army and navy and for systematically organizing the resources of the country for public service in national defense.

The committee is undertaking to supply the basic information needed in preparing the industries for the support of the army and navy in any possible crisis, through co-operation of the nation-wide engineering organization made up of the entire membership of the American Society of Civil Engineers, the American Society of Mechanical Engineers, the American Institute of Electrical Engineers and the American Chemical Society.

The blanks when filled in will give the name and nature of the establishments, the officers and principal stock holders and whether or not they are American citizens, the value of the plant, the location and number of the buildings, the population of the city, ground area of the plant and facilities for enlargement, fire protection, the amount of power developed in the plant, provisions for feeding and housing employes, telephone and telegraph equipment and much other data to enable the engineers to get a correct estimate of the plant.

The engineers are asked when the idle season for the plant comes and the percentage of men and tools idle during that period. The materials used and manufactured are tabulated and from whom they were purchased is also asked. Whether or not the materials are imported is one of the main questions. Just what proportion of the employes are American citizens is another vital query.

To prepare for any possible emergency such as is now in force in the European countries the committee wishes information as to how much of the work could be done by women, if night work is possible and if the employes are willing to work over time. The railroad facilities are carefully noted and the manufacturer asked if he could bid on government contracts in time of peace or would accept a minimum educational order to familiarize his men and organization with the work.

MOTION PICTURES IN BRAZIL.

They Have Some Curious Rules In the Theaters That Show Them.

South America is fast becoming a paradise for the motion picture theater, but some curious rules prevail. For example, the best motion picture theaters in Rio de Janeiro do not allow patrons to drop in or out at will. A film is advertised to begin at a certain hour of the afternoon or evening. At the appointed time doors are closed, or in most cases a heavy and highly decorated curtain is dropped, and the show in the auditorium begins its functions.

A rather novel arrangement, also noted in other Brazilian cities, is the waiting lobby immediately in front of the entrance proper. After purchasing a ticket the patron enters the lobby or corridor, takes a comfortable seat and waits until the termination of the first section of the play, the time of which may be a few minutes or half an hour. While waiting one may listen to the band of music, which may be heard equally well by those within the lobby or in the audience.

At times the crowds become congested and all the lobby seats are occupied. In such cases the ticket seller withholds further admissions, and the crowd remains upon the street, but the brilliant electric lights at night and the music of the band continue to swell the number of waiting patrons.

The night is the most popular hour for the crowds, as at that time the whole family turns out, and every one who can afford an automobile presses it into service. At one of the best motion pictures in Buenos Aires a writer counted more than 200 machines drawn up in lines awaiting the closing of only an average attraction. The hour was near midnight, and about as much ceremony was observed as if the finest opera company had been the star performers.—Argonaut.

GOOD NEWS FROM CAMP OF CO. D

County's Soldiers Have Hardest Time Fighting Weaponless Enemy, and Then to Get News Through Lines.

(Special to The Times.)

McAllen, Texas—Company D's boys have settled down to a steady routine of drill, drill, drill, drill, down here on the border. They drill in the rain, they drill in the sun, they drill in the early morning hours, they drill in the evening, they drill at noon—in fact life is just one long drill.

Once in a while to vary the monotony a skirmish line will be formed about the camp to suppress a "surprise attack" by the "enemy." The last time this was tried it was raining.

Although the troops have not yet entered upon war against the Mexicans, yet they are engaged in the most deadly warfare against another enemy, an enemy perhaps just as deadly—Old Man Fly.

The army officers, from General Funston down, seem to have but one object in view—that is to make the sanitary conditions of all the camps as nearly perfect as possible and promptly to nail and refute stories of poor food and bad surroundings that the state guardsmen write back to the folks at home about and which the home folks carry right down to the newspaper offices.

Steps have already been taken to court martial two Wisconsin guardsmen who sent telegrams to Senator LaFollette complaining of their food. The facts are these: New York guardsmen set out with only five days' travel rations, ate them up, got hungry, raided all the wholesale houses around the railway station at Cleveland. Feneral Funston immediately telegraphed to all the state organizations enroute to supply their men with ten days' travel rations. Some of them had rations left when they reached here, the Wisconsin boys among them and they were forced to eat it up before they got any more. That is all there was of it.

Following are some of the regulations distributed by the sanitary officers of the camp here:

Flies are great nuisances in camp and spread disease. Every effort will be made to keep down their number and prevent development.

Any area on which flies are seen to cluster will be burned over at once thereby destroying their food and eggs. Fly paper will be hung from the ridges of the kitchen tents and requisition for the same should be made of the regimental quartermaster.

The articles which attract flies will not be allowed to remain exposed.

Tentage and company streets will be ditched so as to effectively carry off all storm water. The vicinity of bath houses will be so ditched and drained as to prevent any accumulation of bath water.

Bedding and equipment will be exposed to the sun and wind for at least two hours each fine day. All tentage shall be struck and furled for this purpose at least twice per week.

All clothing will be maintained in a cleanly condition. It must be washed in the bath houses or sent to the laundries.

Every member of the command will be inspected by a medical officer as to quality when issued.

Food will be prepared and served in a cleanly manner. It will be habitually protected against sun, dust and flies. Company cooks and mess equipment and kitchen areas will be neat and clean at all times.

Individual mess kits will be cleaned at the cook tent immediately after use. Cooks will maintain a supply of hot water for this purpose.

The keeping in tents of uneaten portions of rations is strictly prohibited.

All members of this command are warned against patronizing places off the reservation in which ice cream or drinks are sold which are not free from flies and not maintained in a cleanly condition.

No hucksters will be permitted in camp other than for delivery of supplies to the general messes.

The bringing of melons into camp from the great difficulty of disposing of the rinds is prohibited.

Each company will construct and maintain a company incinerator of the type approved by the camp sanitary officer.

Greasy water in the kitchens will be evaporated in the incinerators. To this end all proper economy in the use of water in kitchen will be enforced.

Great care will be taken in fitting the men with shoes. The tip of the toes should not be less than one half inch from the tip of the shoe when the full weight of the body is thrown on the foot being fitted.

A sufficient supply of socks, free from holes shall be maintained by each man.

The semi-monthly physical examination of the men required by war department orders will be completed before the fifteenth of each month and again before the thirtieth of each month. A company officer shall be present when such examination is made by the medical officer.

Any man who has a fever of 101 will be transferred without delay.

Inoculations against typhoid fever and vaccinations against smallpox will be prosecuted systematically under the prescribed methods until the command is thoroughly protected against these diseases.

The Homeric Controversy.

It was about the year 1795 that the "Homeric controversy" began. About that date F. A. Wolf, in his prolegomena, argued that the Homeric poems were composed of independent epic songs, collected and arranged by Peisistratus about 530 B. C. Wolf's theory created a great stir among scholars and poets and inaugurated the fight which enlisted most of the learned men of the day. Mr. Andrew Lang, in "Homer and the Epic," 1893, vigorously defended the "one author" theory as opposed to the idea of Wolf that the famous poems were composed through ages by many different persons.—New York American.

Early Landholding.

Nothing is clearer than the fact that the system of landholding in the most ancient races was communal. Private right in land was for a long time unknown, the source of life being held in common between the members of the tribe. Not only land, but all property that in any way had to do with the general welfare, was looked upon as belonging to the whole tribe in common, no individual having the right to call it his own. Gradually and after a very long time, under the old regime the right of private ownership began to creep in until at last it became the recognized rule pretty nearly everywhere.

Cooking Beef.

Beef when boiled loses nearly one pound to every four pounds and when roasted eighteen ounces.

CRIMEAN VET'N MARRIED 50 YRS.

With His "Girl" He Spends the Day on the Lake—Says French Fighting Is Old Sport.

Syracuse—"Yessir, I'm lucky to be here," declared James Bourne, 362 Hudson street, only living survivor of the "Charge of the Light Brigade," as he reached for his hat and motioned for his "girl"—his eighty year old wife—to get ready to follow him to Skaneateles today, where they went to celebrate the fiftieth anniversary of their marriage.

"I'm lucky to be here,' he repeated, as he sank into a chair waiting for his wife. "I had quite a time."

When the Crimean war broke out, so Mr. Bourne tells it, he enlisted as a private, and a little later was made a sergeant for bravery on the battlefield of Alma. Besides, he fought at Balkalava, Sebastapol and Inkerman. In the charge of the light brigade Mr. Bourne had his horse shot from under him, the bullet cutting through the instep of his fot. The animal fell upon him and he lay for twenty hours covered with blood and entrails. After tearing at the sides of the horse and digging into the ground until the flesh was worn off his fingers and the bones protruded, he released himself. During that time he had nothing to eat or drink and was in agony from his wounds. He dragged himself back to the British lines a distance of two miles, steadily growing weaker from the loss of blood. If I could only have had a drop of water," he said, "no matter how dirty it might have been, I would not have minded it so much."

He was removed to a hospital and Florence Nightingale attended him, he says, and now he cannot say enough in praise of the famous nurse.

For his services Mr. Bourne was decorated with the Victoria Cross. He also received the Alma, Turkish, English and Inkerman medals. He has them all now.

After he recovered from his injuries suffered in the battle of Balkalava, he joined the Queen's Own Rifles, crack sharpshooters of the British army at that time. In a later battle he was in fourteen bayonet charges in two hours and escaped with a few scratches, while in the same battles two of his brothers were killed.

Although an American citizen Mr. Bourne is drawing a pension from the British government.

He came to this country forty years ago and went to Philadelphia where he had charge of the estates of several rich people. Then he came to Syracuse as gardener for the John Greenway family and later opened his own greenhouses and still runs and manages them doing practically all of the work connected with them himself, with what aid his wife can give him when she can spare the time from her housework.

Comparing the present battles with those in which he took part Mr. Bourne says he believes there is not a great deal of difference. "War is war," he declared, whether in the nineteenth or twentieth century. He scoffed at the claim that this was the first war that had been fought out in the trenches.

"We had 'em. Lots of 'em," he said. "Trench warfare is nothing new. We fought that way in the Crimean."

CHURCH CORNERSTONE LAID 80 YEARS AGO

Next Sunday being the Feast of The Transfiguration, there will be an appropriate service at All Saints' Church. In conjunction with this there will be a celebration of the eightieth anniversary of the laying of the corner stone of the church. It is expected that a large congregation will be present for these services.

PRELATES AT K. OF C. NATIONAL CONVENTION

Davenport, Ia.—Between 5,000 and 6,00 delegates and half as many visitors are here today for the opening of the three day session of the supreme convention of the Knights of Columbus. Special trains brought visitors from Chicago and Omaha.

Residents of the three cities have raised an entertainment fund of $10,000 to entertain the visitors. The Iowa Council subscribed $3,000.

Some of the most prominent catholic prelates in the land are here. His Excellency Most Rev. John Bonzano, the Apostolic Delegate to the United States, will be celebrant of the solemn Pontifical Mass at Sacred Heart Cathedral, and will be one of the speakers at the banquet which will follow the fourth degree exemplification. Most Rev. James J. Keene, Archbishop of Dubuque, will deliver the sermon at the Pontifical mass.

Rt. Rev. James Davis, bishop of Davenport, extended an invitation to every cardinal, archbishop and bishop in America to attend and many have accepted.

Among the notable speakers here are: James A. Flaherty, of Philadelphia, supreme knight; John H. Reddin, of Denver, supreme master of the fourth degree; William P. Larkin, of New York, supreme director; E. G. Dunn, of Mason City, past state deputy of Iowa and Hon. M. J. Wade, judge of the Federal court, southern Iowa district.

OLD TIME PITCHERS

Some of the Former Stars Who Won Fame on the Diamond.

THEIR FEATS OF ENDURANCE.

Spalding All Alone Twirled the Old Boston Nationals to Victory Four Years In Succession — Radbourne's Great Record—Some Sad Finishes.

What becomes of all the great pitchers who thrill the baseball populace for a day? That depends upon the age in which they lived. If a man won his fame in the period from twenty to forty years ago he probably went back penniless to manual labor whence he came, or else he found an early grave. But if he was fortunate enough to make his baseball fame within the last score of years he may still be drawing a good salary from some club treasury. Or he may be enjoying prosperity as a successful business man.

A. G. Spalding was one of the few men who won nation wide fame on the diamond in the earlier period, was absolutely unspoiled by it and then followed it up with even greater fame in the business world. Spalding jumped into the limelight as a seventeen-year-old boy with the Rockford (Ill.) club way back in 1867. Talk about the endurance of the modern twirling giants! Just consider what this original iron man did in the early seventies. During that period he was a member of the Boston Nationals, and he won the league championship for his team four years in succession. He was Boston's only pitcher, and he twirled every game the team played, though in those days games were scheduled only every other day and the season was shorter than it is now.

Old timers love to dwell on the prowess of Charles Radbourne, who shone with quite as much brilliance as Spalding until consumption cut short his career, about twenty-five years ago. Radbourne was a member of the Providence team, and when Charles Sweeney deserted that club in midseason only Radbourne was left for slab work. But that didn't bother Radbourne, for he not only jumped right in and did all the pitching, but made a new world's record by winning eighteen straight games and the championship for Providence. This gameness, however, cost Radbourne his life, for his health broke under the strain, which was generally credited with having caused his consumption.

From day laborer to the world's premier pitcher and then back again, is, in brief, the history of Amos Rusie, who from 1889 to 1894 thrilled the baseball world. Rusie had a narrow escape from being cast into the utter darkness of oblivion before he could get started. The first day he entered the big league he was weighed by Bancroft, the manager of the Cleveland team, and found wanting. After watching him pitch one game Bancroft let him go. But John T. Brush, owner of the Cincinnati club, had faith in this youngster, gave him his chance, and suddenly the recruit blossomed forth into the greatest pitcher of his day. But prosperity and the applause of the unthinking crowd were too much for Rusie.

Then there were Tim Keefe and John Clarkson, about whose respective merits the fans are still divided. In 1888 Keefe won nineteen straight games for New York, while in 1899 Clarkson pitched seventy-two games for Boston, winning forty-six of them. These two men, whose exploits were heralded from one end of the country to the other, were radically different in temperament. Clarkson utterly ruined his health by not taking proper care of himself and died in an insane asylum. But Tim Keefe retired with money in the bank.

Probably more printers' ink was used to tell of the exploits of the eccentric Rube Waddell than any other baseball player that ever lived. Rube was always good for a story, no matter what he did. On the diamond this man was forever breaking records, first in jumping from one team to another and then by making new strikeout records. Probably his greatest feat was when he called in all the outfielders and then retired the side in order. But consumption finished his broken down constitution.

Cy Young belongs to a different school of pitchers. He was a shining example of baseball longevity founded upon clean living. This marvelous man, who broke into major league baseball in 1890, pitched every season for twenty-two years, a record still unequaled.—Philadelphia Ledger.

The Fragonard Panels.

The celebrated Fragonard panels had their inception, it is said, in the lavish expenditures of the Countess du Barry. They were designed for her chateau but never adorned it, owing to a dispute between the painter and the king's favorite. Mme. du Barry, notwithstanding her lowly origin, was extremely critical in matters of art and was dissatisfied with these pictures, which are among the greatest prizes of the connoisseurs of today.

Color Blindness.

The ratio of color blind people to those of normal sight is about 65 to 4,554. This does not mean that all of the sixty-five are absolutely color blind, but that that is the ratio of those who are more or less affected. Color blindness is said to have been discovered by the famous Dr. Priestley in 1777.

Try to be happy in this present moment and put not off being so to a time to come.

Damascus Olive Groves.

There is an ancient custom under which the olive groves around Damascus are guarded by official watchmen to prevent the trees being stripped by thieves. But on a certain date the governor or some magistrate issues a proclamation warning all owners of olive trees that they must pick their fruit, for after a certain date it becomes public property. If a farmer has his crop only half gathered when that date arrives the public will gather it for him.—London Globe.

Hogarth Used to Forget.

William Hogarth, the famous English artist, was so absentminded he caused his friends much entertainment. When he was prosperous enough to have his own carriage he first used it to make a call upon the lord mayor. When he came out of the Mansion House it was raining hard, and the artist tramped the entire way home, wet to the skin. When asked why he had not come in his carriage he said he forgot all about it, and a messenger had to be dispatched to the coachman to tell him to return.

Teacher—Now, boys, I want to see if any of you can make a complete sentence out of two words, both having the same sound to the ear.

First Boy—I can, Miss Smith.

Teacher—Very well, Robert. Let us hear your sentence.

First Boy—Write right.

Teacher—Very good.

Second Boy—Say, Miss Smith, I can beat that. I can make three words of it—wright, write right.

Third Boy (excitedly)—Hear this—wright, write rite right.

Carpets and Rugs.

Carpets and rugs were originally employed by oriental nations for sitting, reclining and kneeling purposes during devotion. When introduced among the western peoples they were for a long time used for purely ornamental purposes, covers for tables or couches and for laying before altars or chairs of state upon great occasions. Carpets were brought to Europe by the Moors, but it was well into the eighteenth century before they came into anything like general use.

SEEK THE TRUTH.

Strive to be true in all things. It is wondrous how the truer we become the more unerringly we know the ring of truth, discern whether a man be true or not and can fasten at once upon the rising lie in word and look and dissembling act.—F. W. Robertson.

CANDIDATE'S WIFE

Some Interesting Facts About the Life of Mrs. Charles E. Hughes.

PREFERS HOME TO SOCIETY.

She Is No Clubwoman and Is Also Said to Be Anti-suffrage—She Delights in the Fine Arts of Homemaking.

Women all over the United States are asking about Mrs. Hughes, wanting to know something about this quiet little woman whose husband is the Republican candidate for president.

Washington has discovered that Mrs. Hughes is about the only person in its official "Who's Who" who has successfully managed to keep out of the limelight of official and social publicity.

Mrs. Hughes is not a clubwoman. She has always preferred to capitalize home. To her nothing else has ever mattered quite so much. Society, except where it was necessary as a part of her husband's official life, has never interested her.

It is rumored that Mrs. Hughes is an antisuffragist. She has been so close to her own family and her home that she has not seen the urgent need of suffrage for women as women more in public affairs see it. Always Mrs. Hughes has spent much more time in study, charity and church work than in any other pursuits.

Mrs. Hughes is an ardent advocate of all kinds of athletics. She has personally superintended the education of her three daughters, Catherine, Helen and Elizabeth. Helen graduated two years ago from Vassar, and next fall Catherine will be a student of Wellesley.

Perhaps the charity that has been of first importance to Mrs. Hughes during the past few years is the woman's evening clinic in Washington, which gives medical advice to working women for a nominal fee.

The friends of Mrs. Hughes, who know her best, speak of her as a splendid representative of American woman, a woman whose home and family have always come first even when her duties as wife of a member of the supreme court were the heaviest. With Mrs. Hughes the fine arts of homemaking are the best. She is proud of her reputation of being an excellent cook.

Mrs. Hughes sews, because to her it is a much more fascinating occupation than bridge, and it has been said that this clear thinking woman, with her steady, quiet eyes, believes that the modestly dressed woman is always sure of being herself, because she is bigger than the dictates and vagaries of every passing fashion.

Footgear.

The shops are put to it these days to keep up with the demand for fanciful sport shoes. Woman has become used to having her feet exquisitely dressed and refuses to don any old shoe for athletics. The country club type of sport shoe is of white washable kid with trimmings of colored glazed kid in the shape of tip and "saddle," as the shoe salesman calls the curved strip of kid which crosses the toe back of the tip. All white shoes are of washable kid and come in high or low style, the high laced sport shoe with white rubber sole being on the whole smarter than the low Oxford. Still, many women prefer the Oxford, which leaves the ankle free, and the new glazed kid trimmed white Oxfords are very smart indeed.

That Berry Tart.

Mix together with a knife or fork a quarter of a pound of butter with a pound of self raising flour and a pinch of salt. Beat two eggs, mix with two cupfuls of milk and add slowly to the flour and butter. Mix well and roll out in a thin sheet. Cut with a circular cutter and put the circles in muffin tins. Fill with rich stewed raspberries, bake for a quarter of an hour and serve very cold with whipped cream.

Illusive Collars.

Collars are very smart, and they have to be watched every minute if one wishes to keep up with their fashions.

TUB FROCKS.

Style Tips About This Season's Simple Wash Gowns.

At least three fourths of the summer morning [illegible] are of voile, cotton voile naturally, which visits the laundress without ill effect. There are striped voiles, plaid voiles and dotted voiles, and there are flowered voiles combined with plain voile in this year's manner. One notes piping as a popular trimming this season perhaps because it is so easy to insert tubing of stiffening in a piping and give the skirt a modish flare. Not many of these tub frocks that one buys ready made, however, are provided with hoops or facings of stiffening. They are supposed to be distended over properly made petticoats, the material of the frock itself falling in soft folds. Moderation both of flare and of length is the rule that governs them, for a correct little morning frock is supposed to be simple, fresh and sweet, never compelling attention by an undue smartness or distinction of style. One of the best models for a morning frock has a tucked, gathered skirt with a yoke at the hips. This style is not particularly new, but it is always charming for a simple frock. A dotted blue and white voile, priced ready made at no more than $6, has a tucked skirt falling to the ankle. There are two three-inch tucks above a three inch hem, and the full part of the skirt is gathered to a deep hip yoke cut in pointed scallops at the edge. The waist is shirred at the shoulders and has three-quarter sleeves finished with turned back cuffs of hemstitched white voile. The fronts turn back in soft revers, edged with a tiny white ball trimming, and there is a surplice vest of white voile, to which is attached a wide draped collar hemstitched like the cuffs. The belt question is solved satisfactorily by a straight sash of the voile three inches wide. This hooks at one side, and two short sash ends falling over each other are tipped with white crochet balls.

ANTIDOTES FOR POISONS.

Practical Hints About Avoiding Dea Dealing Drugs.

Poison looks innocent. That is why so many people are poisoned accidentally. Some poisons are sweet to the taste. That is why children may easily mistake them for sugar and water.

When you buy a poison ask for a distinctive label and have it state the proper antidote. Be particular to keep your poison in its distinctive package. Never tolerate its careless exposure.

In case of poisoning by any of the poisons most commonly taken by accident follow these rules:

Always remember that the first thing in all cases is to empty the stomach.

Poisoning by mineral acids may be neutralized by chalk, magnesia, even the plaster from the wall in watery solution.

For any burning or corrosive poison much help may be given after the vomiting by raw egg in milk.

White of egg is particularly helpful in corrosive sublimate poisoning.

Carbolic acid poisoning is difficult to deal with because the anaesthetic effect of the poison prevents the action of the usual emetics. A large drink of whisky or alcohol will help to modify the effects of the acid, and renewed efforts may then be made to induce vomiting. Raw eggs and milk are helpful, but the proper antidote is sodium sulphate.

Concentrated lye has brought death to many children. The antidotes are water containing vinegar and lemon juice to neutralize the alkali, then milk, oil or butter.

Opium poisoning requires stimulation after emetic treatment. Hot strong coffee should be given and the patient compelled to move about.

After you have produced vomiting by your emetic and have given whatever antidote is in your power, do what you can to make your patient comfortable. See that the extremities are warm, give plenty of air, keep the patient awake if the poison was a narcotic, otherwise as quiet as possible. Use all the common sense you can while you wait for the doctor.

But the best time for common sense is before the necessity arises. Remember the distinctive label on the package!

Adulterated Sugar.

Do you know it?

Only experts can tell adulterated sugar.

Many substances are used as adulterants.

Water is one of the things used in adulterating sugar.

Marble dust has been frequently used for this purpose.

Other materials, finely ground, have been added to sugar.

The most frequent addition is glucose, or corn sugar, which is much cheaper.

Glucose is less sweet than pure sugar, partly because of its lesser solubility in water.

In these days of pure food inspection there is comparatively little danger of buying adulterated sugar.

KNOW WHEN TO STOP.

Do not grasp after too much lest it all slip from your hand. The greatest error of our nature is not to know where to stop, not to be satisfied with any reasonable acquirement, not to compound with our conditions, but to lose all we have gained by an insatiable pursuit after more.—Burke

Easy & Practical Home Dress Making Lessons

Prepared Specially for This Newspaper By Pictorial Review

Pretty For Youthful Figures.

No more effective combination of white linen and check gingham may be found than is shown in this suit combining a middy blouse and circular skirt.

Practical for morning and informal wear is a dress like this, combining a separate blouse of white linen, smocked and trimmed with checked gingham, with a one or two-piece circular skirt, made with a plait at center-front and center-back. In medium size the dress requires 4 yards 36-inch gingham and 2¾ yards 36-inch linen.

The middy forms very pleasant work for the home dressmaker, because it develops quickly. First, gather the shoulder edge of front as indicated, then adjust the stay to position under gathers. Close underarm and shoulder seams, then turn the hem in front at the notch. If the blouse is cut to be slipped on, over the head, work eyelets and lace to position. Adjust shield to position underneath front, bringing large "O" perforation to corresponding perforation in front. Hem lower edge and sew the collar to neck edge, notches and center-backs even.

Next, gather the upper edge of the pocket between double "TT" perforations and sew pocket strap to gathered edge of pocket, notches even. Stitch pocket on front between indicating small "o" perforations, leaving the pocket strap free. Slip belt underneath pocket strap and close underneath the left strap; center-front of belt indicated by large "O" perforation. Tack pocket strap on belt, upper edges even.

Next take the sleeve, close seam as notched, then close seam of cuff and sew sleeve in armhole.

More buttons may be added to the trimming, or the pockets may be omitted.

HOW TO CONQUER HEAT.

One way to take the hot weather is to stew, fret, fan yourself and force your neighbor into company with your misery by asking him, "Is it hot enough for you?" Another way is to take it as an adventure. To be prepared for meeting the heat you should drink no liquor, eat moderately and reduce your clothing to—or, if your courage is great, below—the minimum prescribed by custom, advises the Waterbury (Conn.) Democrat.

The adventure itself is to prove yourself superior to the heat. Man, the master, can live in both hot and cold climates. His progress is marked by ever increasing fear of things outside of himself and ever increasing dominion over matter. His being—spiritual and eternal, most people call it nowadays—cowers no more. Look upon the sun and its warmth—pretty well tempered to us—as the friend and not the tormentor of humanity.

This establishment of a friendly relation with the source of heat waves helps some. But it is not enough. There is left the necessity for calling upon your inner strength to meet the heat and prove yourself the better in the encounter. You may not win. But you will be calmer and more self respecting and "feel better" if you attempt the mastery than if you sink down at the first approach of heat and wait for its blows.

One of the earliest of the American bearded freaks was Louis Jasper, who lived in southern Virginia at about the time of the close of the Revolutionary war. His beard was nine and a half feet long and corrspondingly thick and heavy. He could take his mustache between his fingers and extend his arms to their full length and still the ends of the mustache were over a foot beyond his finger tips.—Exchange.

The KITCHEN CUPBOARD

THE CANNING KETTLE.

CHERRY LEAF PICKLES.—Green cucumbers about an inch in diameter should be used for this recipe of delicious pickles. In a jar place a thick layer of well cleaned cherry leaves, then a six inch layer of cucumbers until the jar is filled, having a layer of cherry leaves last. Over this pour a salt brine made of one cupful of salt to about ten quarts of water. Every morning for two weeks mix the leaves and cucumbers well up from the bottom of the jar with the hands. At the end of this time drain off the brine to the last drop. Cut the cucumbers into pieces about an inch long. Place in quart jars, scattering mixed pieces through. Then make a sweet sirup as for any sweet pickle, fill the jars and seal. At the end of about two weeks reheat the sirup and seal the jars for winter use.

Currant and Raspberry Jelly.—Pick over the currants, but do not remove the stems, wash and drain. Pick over the raspberries. Use equal parts of currants and raspberries. Mash a few in the bottom of a preserving kettle, using a wooden potato masher, and so continue until all the fruit is used. Bring to the boiling point and let simmer until the currants look white. Strain through a coarse strainer, then allow the juice to drop through a double thickness of cheesecloth or a jelly bag. Measure, bring to the boiling point and let boil five minutes. Add an equal measure of heated sugar, boil three minutes, skim and pour into jelly glasses. Place in a sunny window and let stand twenty-four hours. Cover and keep in a cool, dry place.

Currant Jelly Without Cooking.—Jelly made by the cold process is considered more delicate than that made by boiling, but it does not keep quite as long. Wash and mash the currants well, let the pulp stand a little while and then strain. Place the juice in a stone jar and put in a cool place for twenty-four hours. Remove the scum from the top, strain and to each pint of juice add a pint of sugar. Stir until the sugar is dissolved and seal in glasses. In twenty-four hours you will have a transparent jelly. No heat is required.

Bottled Gooseberries (Cold Water Method).—Put in glass jars well washed gooseberries. Fill the jars as full of water as they can hold, fastening on the lids under the water, not taking the jars out until rubber and cap are in place and fastened down tightly. They will keep a year. Rhubarb and huckleberries may be bottled the same way.

Not a Bite of Breakfast Until You Drink Water

Says a glass of hot water and phosphate prevents illness and keeps us fit.

Just as coal, when it burns, leaves behind a certain amount of incombustible material in the form of ashes, so the food and drink taken day after day leaves in the alimentary canal a certain amount of indigestible material, which if not completly eliminated from the system each day, becomes food for the millions of bacteria which infest the bowels. From this mass of left-over waste, toxins and ptomain-like poisons are formed and sucked into the blood.

Men and women who can't get feeling right must begin to take inside baths. Before eating breakfast each morning drink a glass of real hot water with a teaspoonful of limestone phosphate in it to wash out of the thirty feet of bowels the previous day's accumulation of poisons and toxins and to keep the entire alimentary canal clean, pure and fresh.

Those who are subject to sick headache, colds, biliousness, constipation, others who wake up with bad taste, foul breath, backache, rheumatic stiffness, or have a sour, gassy stomach after meals, are urged to get a quarter pound of limestone phosphate from the drug store, and begin practicing internal sanitation. This will cost very little, but is sufficient to make anyone an enthusiast on the subject.

Remember inside bathing is more important than outside bathing, because the skin pores do not absorb impurities into the blood, causing poor health, while the bowel pores do. Just as soap and hot water cleanses, sweetens and freshens the skin, so hot water and limestone phosphate act on the stomach, liver, kidneys and bowels.

AID CITY WORKERS

New York Enlarges Studies For Municipal Employees.

AIM IS TO IMPROVE THEM.

Success of Experiment Results In Organization of a Great Continuation School at City College For Those Who Wish to Advance Themselves.

New York.—An advisory board was recently organized here to take part in the direction of courses at the College of the City of New York, of which Dr. Sidney E. Mezes is president, to train young men for the municipal service.

The following men were appointed by Mayor Mitchel to serve on the newly created advisory board: Alfred D. Flinn, deputy chief engineer of the board of water supply; Michael Friedsam, well known in the mercantile world; Public Service Commissioner Henry W. Hodge, Curt G. Pfeiffer, Civil Service Commissioner Henry Moskowitz, President Charles Straus of the board of water supply, Commissioner of Accounts Leonard W. Wallstein and Gano Dunn.

In the last four years the City college has granted special student privileges to persons in the city employ, with the view to improving the efficiency of the municipal service and aiding individuals to advance. Last year the experiment was made, in cooperation with New York university, of conducting special courses for those in the city service in the municipal building.

The success of the experiment last year influenced the mayor to appoint the advisory committee and lay plans to organize a great continuation school which will aim to improve all those in the service who wish to avail themselves of the opportunity and to stimulate men to study for advancement in the city employ.

SORRY $54,923.15 WORTH.

Last Year's Conscience Fund Breaks All Records.

Washington. — Contributions to the treasury's conscience fund for the fiscal year ending June 30 amounted to $54,923.15, making a total of $496,-763.54 returned by persons made uneasy by frauds against the government.

Figures compiled at the treasury department show the returns were much larger during the past year than ever before, chiefly because of two contributions, one for $30,000 and one for $10,000.

It was in 1811 when the first $5 came with a letter saying the writer had taken that amount from the government. It is an unwritten law of the department that no effort shall be made to learn the identity of these contributors, and even where the writer has confessed to theft the money has been accepted and no effort made to prosecute. From 1811 until 1827 there were no receipts. Since then, except for 1848, not a year has passed without amounts coming in.

SOLDIER FUGITIVE PARDONED.

Kentuckian Says He's Now a Corporal In United States Army.

Frankfort, Ky.—A fugitive for twenty years, Milton Franklin, under sentence of life imprisonment, was pardoned recently by Governor Stanley a few hours after he had appeared at the Frankfort reformatory and surrendered to Warden Wells.

Franklin was convicted of murder in the Floyd county court twenty years ago. He escaped from the Johnson county jail, where he was held pending an appeal. According to the story he told reformatory officials, he enlisted in the United States army soon after his escape and is now a corporal stationed at Columbus, O., on recruiting duty.

Wed When Two Steamers Met.

Dawson, Yukon.—Miss Cassie Henderson, daughter of Robert Henderson, discoverer of the Yukon, was married on the steamer Casca when twelve miles above Dawson. The bridegroom was Irvine Crowther, employed with the Yukon Gold company on one of its dredges on Bonanza. Mr. Crowther and the Rev. Mr. Ross went up the river in the launch Reindeer, and the wedding took place immediately after the boats met.

PIGEON WAKES BOYS TO DELIVER PAPERS

Hartford (Conn.) Lads Promptly Aroused at 5:30 Every Morning by Pet Bird.

Hartford, Conn.—Herbert and Steward Carlson, brothers, are paper carriers in South Manchester and in order to get the papers around in time it is necessary for them to arise each morning at 5:30 o'clock. Ordinarily an alarm clock would be necessary to get them out, but they have a better method. They are called each morning by a pigeon.

About a year ago Steward Carlson found a pigeon that had met with an accident. It was only a squab. Its wing seemed to be broken and one leg was damaged. The boy took it home gave it attention and the wing grew stronger, the leg improved and after awhile it learned to fly. Instead of flying away it remained in the neighborhood and became a chum of the boys in the territory.

The pigeon must have noticed the two boys leaving the house each morning about 5:30 o'clock and appointed itself an alarm clock. Every morning now, just at 5:30, the pigeon leaves its coop, flies to the window of the room in which the boys sleep and coos and pecks at the screen until they awake.

THIS SCHOOL IS RUN LIKE BASEBALL LEAGUE

Four Classes Vie to Win Games and Maintain Batting Averages by Getting High Grades.

Fort Dodge, Ia.—The following formula has been instituted in the high school here for a new game of baseball played with students and textbooks and recitations:

One recitation group equals one ball player.

One high school class equals one ball team.

One day's recitation equals one inning.

One week's work equals one game.

Average of grades made by the different recitation groups equals batting averages of the individual players.

Class with highest averages wins inning.

It is the result of studies in motivation for high school work undertaken by W. H. Blakely, principal, and is printed in a current issue of the School Review, published by the University of Chicago Press.

Mr. Blakely has 400 boys and girls engaged in an opening series of games between the four classes. The students and teachers both are said to be very enthusiastic about the scheme.

The work of figuring the averages and the standing of the teams and their members is left to the arithmetic classes of the commercial department. The bookkeeping classes keep records and typewriting classes publish the reports and scores.

Students In Kansas University to Get Seats For Their Convenience.

Lawrence, Kan.—Left handed students in Kansas university will have seats made for their special convenience when the classrooms are opened next fall.

John M. Shea, superintendent at the university, announced that five dozen left handed chairs had been ordered from a Grand Rapids machine firm and that they will be distributed as needed among the classrooms.

The difference between the new chairs and those previously used is that the arms are on the left side instead of on the right side. The company that made the chairs had never received a similar order, Mr. Shea said.

HONEYMOON RIDE COSTLY.

Detroit Bridegroom Gets Into Cell For Speeding In New York.

New York.—Thirty miles an hour in Detroit may not seem as fast as thirty miles an hour in New York, especially when the driver of the automobile is on his honeymoon.

William Berman, a wealthy real estate operator, married recently in Detroit, found this out when he was arrested at Twenty-third street and Fifth avenue for speeding and also learned that the mention of Henry Ford as your friend fails to impress New York cops.

At the West Twentieth street station he lacked $50 of the $500 bail required, so he spent two hours in a cell until a friend put up the money.

AUTO OWNER NO DISTINCTION.

More Gold Watches and Pianos In One Kansas County.

Troy, Kan.—Owning a motor car is not the only way in which to gain distinction in Doniphan county. You can achieve almost the same exclusiveness by owning a gold watch, a piano or four dogs.

Although there are only 586 autos in the county, there are just 508 gold watches—that is, according to the assessors' reports—and 551 pianos.

Warring Nations at Their Last Stand as Third Year of War Begins Today

By J. W. T. Mason
(Written for the United Press)

New York—The warring nations of Europe are at their last stand, as they enter today upon the third year of the conflict.

Two years of prodigal expenditures, of enormous losses and of indecisive victories and defeats have led up to the final phase of the great struggle which discloses neither side able as yet to dictate terms to the other. The Allies and the Central Empires have not even decided among themselves as to the details of their own terms. This must be the principal work of their statesmen during the third year of the war.

The two years of conflict have demonstrated that in a war as complex as is the European struggle, other forces beside those controlled by the militarists play an increasingly important part in the final outcome. The present war map, showing the German lines extending far into enemy countries, and showing also the loss of Germany's colonial empire, is but one element that must enter into any discussion of peace. Lines on either side may hold, but once the enemy establishes a definite superiority in man-killing power, this fact will have a new bearing on peace negotiations.

Three other influences are at work in the final phase of the war: financial, economic and food. Financially, Europe at large is approaching a limit of impossible taxation after the war, to pay the interest on the money now being so readily borrowed under the influence of patriotic fervor. Belligerent statesmen are entering upon the third year of the war with serious financial misgivings that will probably stimulate interest in peace as new borrowings of billions become necessary. It is practically certain that in some of the warring nations, thinly disguised socialistic seizures of property will have to be made, to pay the war bills, even if the war doesn't last a day longer. If peace continues to be evasive far into the third year of the war, there will be few countries that in the end will be able to avoid widespread confiscation.

Economically, the two years of warfare have not been disastrous for any of the principal belligerents. Workingmen's wages, in general, have risen higher than the increased cost of living. The dispatch of so many millions of men to the front andthe use of so many millions more in munitions' factories, have caused a scarcity of ordinary labor throughout Europe.

The Central Empires, however, will feel a serious economic strain when the war is over, because their supply of raw materials is rapidly becoming exhausted. The Allies have been able to import raw materials continuously during the war; while Germany and Austro-Hungary have had to live on their reserves. How to purchase raw materials from abroad in sufficient quantities to provide for the millions of Teuton soldiers returning to workshops and factories after peace is declared, will present a serious problem for Berlin and Vienna to solve.

For two years, the supply of food in the Teutonic countries has been constantly dropping. The enforcement of a low dietary scale upon the Germans has undoubtedly had some depressing moral effects, but there is as yet no evidence that actual starvation for the mass of people is imminent. If the Russian armies, however, can reach the grain fields and cattle pasturages of Hungary and Galicia before the August harvesting is over, the Teutons may yet be starved into surrender. But as the third year of the war begins, it seems as if the Russian offensive started too late to accomplish this objective.

A ROMANCE OF BAGDAD.

Peculiar Story of Nazim Pasha and an Armenian Beauty.

A remarkable tale of Nazim Pasha, the commander in chief of the Turkish armies against Bulgaria in the Balkan war, is told by Sir William Willcocks, K. C. M. G., in an article in Blackwood's Magazine:

"After Nazim Pasha became wali of Bagdad there lived in one of the best houses in the place an Armenian girl of eighteen, who was very pretty, very wealthy and an orphan. All the young Armenians in the Turkish empire were eager suitors for her hand, but she would have none of them. The wali invited her to his palace and told her that in her unprotected condition she might get into trouble, but that if she were to marry a countryman of hers in his household she would have both a sterling husband and his own protection. She accepted, but on reaching her home sent the nazim word that she preferred remaining single.

"'You shall remain single for life!' said the wali, and put a cordon of soldiers round her house, which prevented her from leaving it.

"She escaped to the French convent one day, dressed as a French nun, and the cordon of soldiers moved to her new residence. After some delay she escaped as a French monk, took refuge on Lynch's boat and sailed for Basra under the British flag. Boats full of soldiers surrounded the steamer at Basra, but the girl ran across the deck, jumped into the Russian consul's boat and took refuge under the Russian flag. The consul saw her safely on to the British India steamer, and she descended at Bushire, in Persia.

"Not many months afterward Nazim Pasha himself was deposed and ordered to return to Constantinople. He returned there finally and was, as we all know, murdered by the Young Turks."

Milo Was a Glutton.

Milo, the famous athlete of ancient Greece, born 520 B. C., was victor at both the Olympic and Pythian games for six times in succession. On one occasion he ran four miles with an ox on his shoulder, killed the animal with a blow of his fist and then ate the entire carcass in one day. An ordinary meal for this gluttonous Titan was twenty pounds of bread, twice that much meat and fifteen pints of wine.

MUST BE EIGHTEEN TO DANCE.

Girls if Younger Must Have Guardian's Permission.

Cleveland.—Girls who pride themselves on how young they look will have to take along their birth certificates when they go dancing at municipal dancing halls.

Those who can prove they're more than eighteen may keep on dancing after 9 o'clock. Those who not only look younger than eighteen and really are will have to press into service a parent or a guardian. No, no such luck. Any Tom, Dick or Harry won't do as a guardian. The powers that be won't put up with it. The guardian has to be a regular guardian, manufactured by a court of justice.

City Dance Hall Inspector John, dance hall chaperons and dancing masters got together at a meeting in the city hall recently and tried to have the "younger set" barred from the floors after 9 o'clock, parents or guardians notwithstanding.

GET $8,000 FOR KINDNESS.

Boy and Girl Rewarded For Favors to Invalid Woman.

Pittsburgh.—Henry Paul McPeake of this city and his sister, Miss Lois McPeake of Canonsburg, have just been made aware that it pays to be kind to an old invalid lady, in the fact that her will, filed for probate here, provides for the boy in the sum of $5,000 and $3,000 to his sister.

Some years ago when Mrs. Anna Sutton Leech, a wealthy resident of Pittsburgh, was at a sanitarium at Markleton there was also there as a patient young McPeake, who is a son of George C. McPeake, Republican nominee for the legislature in Washington county, and when Lois came to visit her brother they got acquainted with the lonely widow. Between them they contributed to make life a little pleasanter for Mrs. Leech, and she promised not to forget them. She died recently.

Objects to Love.

What a blessing it is to love books. Everybody must love something, and I know of no objects of love that give such substantial and unfailing returns as books and gardens.—Bettina von Hutton.

CHEER UP! YOU CAN'T HELP YOUR BALDNESS

It's Hereditary, Says Miss Osborn, and Not Due to Fever or Tight Hats.

Washington.—According to Miss Dorothy Osborn of the Ohio State university, baldness in men is inherited just as much as horns in sheep.

Family histories which she has gathered show that neither typhoid fever nor tight hats cause baldness, but if your father was bald then you are doomed.

Baldness in women is more frequent than is generally known, she declares, "because women can conceal their baldness much more easily than men." She finds that a woman is bald only when she inherits it from both parents. If one of her parents was bald, however, she may transmit baldness to a half of her sons. If a mother is bald all her sons will be bald, no matter whether the father is or not. Her daughters will not be bald unless the father was also.

IS SORRY FOR ALL SHE SAID, WIFE ADVERTISES

That Being the Case, She Can Come Back Home, Replies Lone Husband.

New York.—If you don't know just how a wife should reply to her husband's announcement that he isn't going to be responsible for her debts any more perhaps this card, which was printed in a newspaper in Mineola, N. Y., may help you—and perhaps it may not:

Mrs. Herman Ertel wishes to announce that after leaving her husband for six months she is now sorry for it and wishes to return, being sorry for all she has said. She promises to do all in her power ever after to make their home a happy one.
MRS. HERMAN ERTEL.

Herman Ertel, who is an engineer and lives on Mineola boulevard, advertised six months ago that his wife's debts wouldn't be paid by him. He said, not in these exact words, but to this general effect:

"I have been receiving letters from my wife, Hedwig, of such a pleading nature asking me to let her come and live with me again, saying she was lonesome and now realized all I mean to her, that my heart melted. I have agreed to try married life again. My wife agreed to make a public declaration of her mistakes and a denial of the accusations she has made against me."

The "Sting" of Death.

The sting of death physically is nothing. A man who has lost consciousness in the water, a man who has been under an anaesthetic, a man stunned in an accident—these have been in effect dead, and yet they know nothing of death. In speaking of it the most glaring contradictions pass quite naturally for axioms. It is the "gentle hand," but it is also the "grisly terror." It is "beautiful" and "wonderful," but it is also "terrible."—London Spectator.

THE TOWN SLOUCH

By ELLIS M. CLARKE

Cy Cawkins Has Offered to Help at th' Washin' by Doin' th' Collectin'. He's Needin' a New Suit.

A man will put his clothes on like he'd toss 'em in a ditch,
Contented if he's got 'em safely buttoned up an' sich,
While a woman goes about it with a cautious-like intent
To be in trim condition if there's an accident.

Trouble is th' realization of worry.

He Didn't.

The wife of a clergyman warned him as he went off to officiate at a funeral one rainy day:

"Now, John, don't stand with your bare head on the damp ground; you'll catch cold."

Back Yards and Character.

"Back Yards and Character" is a theme State Health Commissioner Dixon of Pennsylvania selected recently for one of his weekly talks on health and hygiene. Dr. Dixon said:

"Bret Harte once wrote a story in which he pointed out that for an insight into the occupant's true character one must look at the back and not at the front of a man's house.

"This brings us again to the question of back yards. Is yours as clean and well kept as you can make it, or is it littered with trash, cans, kindling and other rubbish? Are the garbage and waste properly covered and free from flies? Are the stable and outhouse fly breeding centers for the neighborhood? You have work ahead of you for your health's sake and for the sake of decency if any of these conditions exist.

"If there are children in the family the back yard should be their playground. A doll house, a turning pole, a swing or a tent will provide almost unlimited entertainment and help to keep children off the streets."

Hoboes as Cleanups.

If you have tramps or vagabonds you don't want, just put them on the train for Bellevue, O. They'll be cheerfully received. The new official system in that place makes the advent of a few "boes" a joyous occasion.

The "bum" is a municipal asset to Bellevue. Here are a few of the things they have done for this town of 6,000:

Polished the streets, carried off the rubbish from every back yard, put the baseball diamond in fine condition and started a sewer system for the city. After the sewer is completed they'll be put to work paving new streets.

The hoboes do these things willingly, cheerfully—after they've seen the stone pile. They are given their choice of the two.

Allies' Attacks, Says Berlin, Fail on Front Extending Many Miles

(By United Press)

Berlin—Repulses of all attacks along the Flanders front, except on the high road between Marcourt and Clery, were completely demolished and German trenches were occupied, was announced in the War Office statement today.

In this game of destroying German trenches, the statement said, the enemy lost heavily. British patrols were particularly active in the Ypres sector, the statement said, but were everywhere repulsed.

In the Somme sector around Maurepas the enemy in the evening vainly attacked our lines with strong forces following sanguinary defeat at Monacu farm through our quick counter attack. South of the Somme local fighting is in progress near Belois and Estres. Progress in German counter attacks was also reported in the statement.

Steamer Sunk Was 6th By Same Submarine

(By United Press)

London—The Dutch steamer Zeeland was submarined during the night. The crew were landed at South Shields. They assert that the German submarine's captain had boasted to them that he had sunk five ships prior to torpedoing the Zeeland.

The Zeeland was a steel steamship of 1,293 tons. She was registered at Rotterdam and was 231 feet in length.

(By United Press)

Washington—Representative Dallivas, of Massachusetts, this afternoon moved in the House the breaking of diplomatic relations with Great Britain, because of her refusal, July 25th to admit Thomas Hughes Kelly, of New York, and Joseph Smith, of Massachusets, two American citizens entrusted with funds and relief supplies for the Irish revolution sufferers.

ENGLAND WOULD HAVE FULL RESTORATION

London—England regards as an essential part of any peace negotiations complete restoration by Germany of Belgium and Servia, both materially and economically, and the repair of devastated portions of France and Russia, Premier Asquith today declared in a speech in Commons.

G. A. R. ENCAMPMENT IN AUGUST MAY BE THE LAST

Kansas City, Mo.—Twenty thousand veterans of the Grand Army of the Republic will mobilize here August 29 for the fiftieth national encampment. The fact that this will be the golden jubilee reunion, that it may be the last great encampment and that it will be the first in this section of the country in many years may send the crowds of visitors to 125,000.

While the young blood of the country is mobilized on the Mexican border, the "boys of '61" who fought to save the union will gather here for what promises to be the final review.

When the grey-haired and stooped veterans pass in review, few are expected to march. With the armies of today thoroughly motorized, the old men who wear the bronze button will not feel that it is a disgrace to pass in review in automobiles. Kansas City will furnish the motor cars.

All contestants for free tickets to the Al. G. Barnes Big Four Ring Wild Animal Circus, which exhibits at Fulton, Saturday, August 5th, must have their list of names at the Evening Times office not later than Thursday (to-morrow) at 6 p. m. If you have not yet started, get busy at once for there will be thirty-five prizes and even if your list of names is small you will stand a good show of getting at least an admission ticket, if not a reserved seat ticket. If you already have your list in then help your brother or sister get a free ticket.

One big, thrilling, amazing feature on the program of the Barnes Wild Animal Circus is a lion act. 30 of the full grown, jungle bred African man-eaters being assembled therein.

This group represents the largest lion act ever successfully presented to the public and the entire lot are handled at one time by one man—Herr Louie Roth, a lion tamer of international fame. The group, if placed on the market, would easily sell for $50,000.

Armed only with a small whip, Roth crowds his way among the snarling, ferocious beasts and in a fearless manner institutes some of the most thrilling spectacles ever witnessed. Mounting the entire number into pyramids and piles on the floor; the trainer sits and lies on the topmost and fiercest one. Placing his head in the mouth of another and feeding the man-eater raw meat from his lips is part of the trainer's work. The act ends with the lions doing a free-for-all hurdle race around the arena.

A list of the successful contestants will be published Friday evening.

SONNY FAILED TO OBEY MAMMA

Syracuse—Just because a boy, whose mother had given him his father's amputated leg to bury, was in a hurry to get to the ball game and threw the severed limb upon a public dump, the police have been running around in circles for the past few days trying to solve the "murder mystery."

Today the officials found the boy and he admitted that he wanted to see the Stars play Albany and it was nearly time for the game, so instead of taking the leg and giving it a decent burial, as his mother had directed, he just tossed it on the refuse heap, covered it with ashes and went joyfully on his way to see the Senators win.

The leg was found the same day by a woman who saw the boy "plant" it. She sent a distracted call to the police and it was exhumed and taken to the morgue. The story spread and the amateur detectives got busy.

Day and night they worked, digging over tons and tons of refuse, garbage, tin cans, decomposed animals, etc., hoping to find the rest of the body. One man found a statue with the head broken off and with a yell of triumph brought it to the police and was convinced it was not a human skull only when it was split up with a hammer.

Then the guilty boy who lived near the ball park became scared at the rumpus he created and confessed to his mother that papa's leg was not buried. She informed the police, the volunteer sleuths were called off and today the health authorities have charge of the whole matter, including one badly decomposed limb.

Latest reports had the wife of the former owner arguing for a burial permit.

BOARD OF HEALTH CARDS MUST STAY

Two men were brought to court this morning charged with violating the city ordinance in removing the placards which were placed on premises bearing unsanitary appearance.

Considerable time was spent by the Board of Health in distributing these signs and it is the Board's intention not to have them removed without authority. Both Health Officer, Dr. Hall and Chief Dyer, said today that the charge is serious and the next case would be pressed with vigor. This morning's offenders were both foreigners, one claiming that a local refuse collector tore down the sign while on his tour about the city and that this same collector of antiques told him that he was a member of the health board. The case will be arraigned tomorrow, and it is the desire of the authorities to thresh out the truth of the statement.

Deutschland Didn't Stir Restless Waters of Hampton Roads

(By United Press)

Norfolk, Va.—At noon today Norfolk and Newport News were nearly blind from the strain of looking across the turbulent waters of Hampton Roads, in the hope of seeing the German super-submarine Deutschland coming in or going by on her way out to sea.

The Deutschland by the best word reaching the harbor was somewhere near Tinicum Island and the harbor. At nine o'clock she was reported fifteen miles below Tinicum Island and near Cape Charles. It was confidently expected that she would slip through the line of waiting craft about the middle of this afternoon.

Bandits Cross Line, Troops in Pursuit

(By United Press)

El Paso, Tex.—On reports that 150 Mexican bandits crossed the Rio Grande at Finlay, Texas, eight miles west of Fort Hancock, two troops of U. S. Cavalry and one motorcycle corps and ten loads of infantry were rushed from Fort Bliss today to Fort Hancock.

The raid is believed to be in retaliation of the killing of four bandits Monday.

U. S. ASKS FOR MERCY FOR SIR ROGER CASEMENT

(By United Press)

Washington—The United States Government today made formal application to Great Britain for clemency in the case of Sir Roger Casement, convicted to die on the scaffold tomorrow. President Wilson instructed the State Department to forward at once the resolution passed by Cnogress urging Great Britain to extend clemency in the treatment of Irish political prisoners.

RAILROAD MEN AGREE TO CONFER WITH BOARD

(By United Press)

Washington—The executive board of the Big Four Brotherhood, which are threatening a nation-wide strike of 400,000 railroad employes, and the general conference committee of the roads, have agreed to a resolution of conference to begin in New York August 8th, according to information received at the United States Board of Mediation today.

HUNTING WILL BE AN EXPENSIVE SPORT

With prices already from 20 to 40 per cent. higher than they were a year ago and a prospect of going still higher by the time the hunting season opens in the fall, sporting ammunition will be carefully conserved by the sportsmen this year.

The war is responsible for the increase, because practically every concern manufacturing cartridges neglected the sporting sizes to make ammunition for European belligerents at much greater profits, when the war broke out.

Last fall it was impossible to get some sizes of sporting cartridges, but local dealers have placed their orders for this fall and have been assured that they will be filled, enabling them to carry a full line. The prices, however, will be higher and for the man who does target or trap shooting, the expense will be prohibitive in many cases.

The average increase in the prices of shot-gun shells amounts to 20 per cent. for 10, 12 or 16 gauge. Black powder cartridges average about 75 cents for a box of 25 while the nitro loads, with chilled shot charges cost 80 cents, 90 cents and $1 a box, according to the quantity of powder and shot used.

Rifle cartridges of the 30-30 size have jumped from 90 cents to $1 during the past two weeks with a prospect of going higher. Early last year they were 70 cents and then went to 80 cents and 85 cents for a box of 20 during the hunting season. Remington automatic .35's could not be procured at any price last fall and are now selling at $1.15 having jumped from $1. Twenty-two longs that last year cost 25 cents for 50 are now retailing at 35 cents.

Allies' Attacks, Says Berlin, Fail on Front Extending Many Miles

(By United Press)

Berlin—Repulses of all attacks along the Flanders front, except on the high road between Marcourt and Clery, were completely demolished and German trenches were occupied, was announced in the War Office statement today.

In this game of destroying German trenches, the statement said, the enemy lost heavily. British patrols were particularly active in the Ypres sector, the statement said, but were everywhere repulsed.

In the Somme sector around Maurepas the enemy in the evening vainly attacked our lines with strong forces following sanguinary defeat at Monacu farm through our quick counter attack. South of the Somme local fighting is in progress near Belois and Estres. Progress in German counter attacks was also reported in the statement.

Petrograd—A Russian wedge separating the Austrian and German forces was thrust still further forward today. Not only has the separation been virtually accomplished, but today's unofficial advices here indicate rapid progress of the movement from the south, enveloping Kovel.

Steamer Sunk Was 6th By Same Submarine

(By United Press)

London—The Dutch steamer Zeeland was submarined during the night. The crew were landed at South Shields. They assert that the German submarine's captain had boasted to them that he had sunk five ships prior to torpedoing the Zeeland.

The Zeeland was a steel steamship of 1,293 tons. She was registered at Rotterdam and was 231 feet in length.

WOULD HAVE U.S. SEVER ALL TIES WITH BRITAIN

(By United Press)

Washington—Representative Dallivas, of Massachusetts, this afternoon moved in the House the breaking of diplomatic relations with Great Britain, because of her refusal, July 25th to admit Thomas Hughes Kelly, of New York, and Joseph Smith, of Massachusets, two American citizens entrusted with funds and relief supplies for the Irish revolution sufferers.

ENGLAND WOULD HAVE FULL RESTORATION

(By United Press)

London—England regards as an essential part of any peace negotiations complete restoration by Germany of Belgium and Servia, both materially and economically, and the repair of devastated portions of France and Russia, Premier Asquith today declared in a speech in Commons.

G. A. R. ENCAMPMENT IN AUGUST MAY BE THE LAST

Kansas City, Mo.—Twenty thousand veterans of the Grand Army of the Republic will mobilize here August 29 for the fiftieth national encampment. The fact that this will be the golden jubilee reunion, that it may be the last great encampment and that it will be the first in this section of the country in many years may send the crowds of visitors to 125,000.

While the young blood of the country is mobilized on the Mexican border, the "boys of '61" who fought to save the union will gather here for what promises to be the final review.

When the grey-haired and stooped veterans pass in review, few are expected to march. With the armies of today thoroughly motorized, the old men who wear the bronze button will not feel that it is a disgrace to pass in review in automobiles. Kansas City will furnish the motor cars.

WEATHER FORECAST

Moderate south winds, generally fair to-night and Thursday. Increasing cloudiness and warmer to-night, Thursday probably showers.

THE REAL "YELLOW PERIL"

Long and laboriously have the moral influences of this country wrestled with the boys, who, with minds filled by "yellow-back" literature, and later by "yellow" movies, have run away from happy, but commonplace existence to fight Indians or encounter other heart-thrilling adventures.

Such boys have been for generations a fruitful source of anxiety and romance. They have given a distinctive tone to American civilization. They have contributed bravery and brawn to the steadily extending frontier. They have leavened the indomitable spirit by which the dark swamp and the dark forests have been turned into golden fields of grain and the teepees of the Indians have given place to the skyscrapers of cities.

And now, at this late date, the Indians have turned the tables upon us. Two Indian youths of the Carlisle schools, their mind fired by society novels and movies, have run away to New York to seek adventures in drawing rooms.

Unfortunately they have been apprehended and sent back. This is all the more a pity, because New York drawing room manners and morals, if society novels and movies be true to life, might have been greatly improved by the young Indians.

The whites have taken from the Indians the woods and prairies, the plains and hills. Surely in the wise plan of Nature there is some place left into which Poor Lo might fit. And anyone who carefully canvasses the situation is apt to conclude, as did the two Indian boys, that the place to which the Indian is best fitted today is the New York drawing room.

The gradual improvements being made in the Evening Times are being appreciated if the large number of subscribers that are being added daily is any criterion to go by.

Judging from the customs prevailing at the shore resorts, no man need expect to make his fortune on bathing suits guaranteed not to shrink.

And to think that a few weeks ago we were wondering if it would ever stop raining!

THE CALL OF HUMANITY

Americans shudder when they compel themselves to read the graphic narratives printed from time to time in our newspapers and magazines concerning the horrors upon which the inhabitants of Europe are supping at this time. And yet few are able to conceive the real situation. We know in a general way that men and women and children are dying, some from the effects of wounds, many from downright starvation. Yet we are but dimly conscious of actual conditions over there and what we have done to feed the hungry and clothe the naked is but as a drop in the bucket when compared with the awful and urgent need.

The Federal Council of the Churches of Christ in America has issued a pathetic statement and an earnest appeal to the people of America on behalf of the starving victims of the ambition of world rulers. It is an impressive presentation of the sufferings of mankind in this most sorrowful hour of human history and a call to duty which Americans cannot in conscience and safety ignore. This appeal of the leaders of all the Evangelical churches for the relief of a distress so acute that one shudders to think of it will surely meet with a fitting response from all sorts and conditions of Americans. The sooner this is done the fewer lives will be lost.

There is such widespread woe in the world today as to deepen the conviction in thoughtful minds that this is probably an extraordinary and wholly exceptional epoch in the evolution of our race; and there are earnest people whose mental sufficiency and poise have never heretofore been challenged who find a recurring wonder in their minds if this be not the day when War on his red horse should take peace from earth and Famine on his black horse, with a pair of balances in his hand, should weigh and dole out the dwindling food supply. It is, indeed, a time for strange and startling thoughts, but no less for practical action.

Good pavements are essential to the growth of any city.

SELECTED EDITORIALS

The Buffalo Times:

In this great rush to care for the guardsmen who have been sent to Texas, along the Mexican border, it does appear that the regular army men have been seriously overlooked. Somehow or other, of course, we have come to look upon the regulars in the Army and Navy as superhuman, capable of enduring every conceivable hardship with something to spare, and, accordingly, there has never been the fine consideration that is now showered out to the militiamen at the front.

By reason of this situation the hearts of the regular soldiers and sailors of the United States are hurt. They feel that they are being regarded as outsiders by the general public.

"They are sending the boys in the National Guard stationed along the Mexican border all manner of luxuries," explained a regular army man. "The regular soldiers, the men who are actually down in Mexico where things are doing, are ignored by the people. No luxuries, no phonographs, no candies, no tobacco, nothing for the ones who are having the real hardships."

There is a great deal of truth in the foregoing. The regulars are overlooked in the enthusiastic desire of the folks at home to make camp life a bit easier for the militiamen. It would seem only proper that some of the books and tobacco and the other good things that are sent to the front should find their way into the tents of the regular soldiers at the front.

The Watertown Times:

President Wilson has high ideals and expresses himself in beautiful phrases, but the trouble is with his accomplishments. His speeches and letters show back bone but his acts do not. He is conducting his administration with the typewriter; they say he is an expert stenographer and evidently he likes to use it. He has talked beautifully about economy in government but he signs a $42,000,000 pork barrel bill for the benefit of southern creeks while the country is calling for enormous expenditures for preparedness. He had a splendid opportunity to show a real back bone by vetoing this bill, but the southern congressmen would not let him. Now they are trying to hold him up against a veto of the immigration bill with its abhorrent literacy clause, by saying that he shall not have his child labor bill unless he signs the other. The child labor bill is also opposed by the southern democrats, although the sentiment of the rest of the country is for it. Of course the federal government cannot regulate the terms of labor in any state, for it is purely a state matter, but it can, through the interstate commerce law, forbid the exportation of the product of child labor from one state to another. President Wilson has written very touchingly and very strongly on the matter. We must wait to see what he will do about it.

Springfield (Mass.) Republican:

Insurance companies, of course, keep a close watch upon fire losses, not only from month to month, but from day to day, for it is with them a matter of business. But such a waste is of no less interest to all of us, for every owner of abuilding is interested in that which affects the rates he must pay. For the first four months of this year the fire loss in the United States and Canada amounted to $97,555,420, as compared with the loss of $70,108,600 for the same period in 1915 and of $88,162,450 in 1914. Last year's record as a whole was by comparison a favorable one, and this year starts off badly. March was an especially bad month, with fire losses amounting to $38,820,250, while the April loss is only $12,681,050. Nowhere in business is preparedness more to be desired than in guarding against the loss caused by fire. Carelessness and criminality are always playing too large a part in this matter. We are making progress in the direction of better regulation of building in the cities, but more than all else eternal watchfulness and honesty are needed.

Journalistic Enterprise

By OSCAR COX

A few days before the breaking out of the pan-European war, during a conference between the kaiser at Berlin and his generals, a suspicious sound was heard by the assembled magnates. The room was examined, and a small auger hole was found to have been freshly bored in woodwork from an adjoining room. It was evident that the opening had been made by some one with a view to overhearing what passed at the meeting.

That an outsider could have contrived to conceal himself in the room which had been examined before the conference began, was out of the question.

An official of the secret police was called in at once and given orders to make an extraordinary effort to discover who had been spying on government secrets and arrest the person. Special orders were given to see that he did not get out of Berlin or, if that were impossible, to catch him before he passed out of Germany.

A rigid examination of the servants—indeed, every one who had been seen at the palace during the meeting—was made, and it was found that one of the lackeys had mysteriously disappeared.

It was also learned that the missing man spoke English. There was no doubt that he was an English spy who had donned the imperial livery. The fact that no such person had been hired convinced the investigators that he had secured a suit of livery and mingled among the servants on the day the meeting took place. Only a few took note of him, and none of them saw him more than once or twice and then only for a few moments.

No further clew was picked up for two days; then came a telegram from the chief of police at Cologne that the engineer of the 9 a. m. train from that city to Liege, while oiling his engine before starting, had been approached by a suspicious looking person, who had offered him a hundred English sovereigns if the driver would slow up at Duren, ten miles out of Cologne that the briber might leave the train. The engineer had endeavored to detain the man till the police could be notified, but he had slipped away. Whether or not he was on the train, which pulled out on time, was not known.

The chief of police in Berlin was absent from his office when the telegram arrived, and there was more than an hour's delay in the receipt of the reply which was to telegraph ahead to stop the 9 a. m. train and have it searched. As soon as this order was received the chief of police transmitted it to the superintendent of the railroad, who said that about half an hour before a government officer had ordered the superintendent to give him a locomotive to catch this same train. It had been furnished him, and he had left five minutes after he had made his demand.

A telegram was sent to Berlin asking if any government officer had been ordered on such service, and a negative reply was returned. The officer at Cologne at once wrote a telegram to stop the engine, but learned, to his dismay, that the telegraph line on the road was down. The complication was thus doubled.

Meanwhile the engine was steaming toward the border, there being no one on it except the government officer who had obtained it, the engineer and a fireman. The government officer continually consulted a time table and on reaching a station not far behind the train he was chasing ordered the engineer to slow up.

"But, excellency," protested the engineer, "the train is within a few miles of the border. If you are intending a capture you must make it before we pass beyond German soil."

"It's not for you to give instructions to the kaiser's representative," replied the officer sternly. "Your sole duty is to obey."

The engineer slowed down, wondering what this all meant. It was not till the officer's watch indicated that the train ahead had passed into Belgium that the driver was ordered to put on full steam. The engine had crossed the border when the officer ordered the engineer to stop while passing through a small town. Then the officer jumped down and walked away, and the engineer saw him no more.

Within an hour after his disappearance the managing editor of the American Sentinel newspaper was handed a cablegram.

"Good for Billy!" he exclaimed and hurried to the composing room.

The next morning in the first column on the first page appeared the following scare head:

"The Kaiser's Generals Notify Him That Unless He Mobilizes at Once They Will Not Be Responsible For the Situation."

Below appeared what could only have been obtained for publication surreptitiously.

Billy Hathaway of the Sentinel staff had gone abroad for news. The only parts of the story that need to be suppressed are these:

He procured from a Berlin tailor for a goodly sum a suit of imperial livery. Having got wind of the meeting of the kaiser and his generals, he went to the palace with the auger in his pocket, joined the servants, bored a hole and listened to what was said. He had a confederate, who offered a bribe to the engineer of the train and cut the telegraph wires. This enabled Billy, who had managed to procure an officer's uniform, to get a locomotive and leave German territory for Belgium, where he could send his cablegram.

WILL SLOAN'S LINIMENT RELIEVE PAIN?

Try it and see—one application will prove more than a column of claims. James S. Ferguson, Phila., Pa., writes: "I have had wonderful relief since I used Sloan's Liniment on my knees. To think after all these years of pain one application gave me relief. Many thanks for what your remedy has done for me." Don't keep on suffering, apply Sloan's Liniment where your pain is and notice how quick you get relief. Penetrates without rubbing. Buy it at any Drug Store. 25c.

KANSAS WOMAN WHO GOT FACTS

Industrial Welfare Commission Largely Due to Efforts of Miss Bressette in Canvassing State and Legislators

Topeka, Kan.—The women workers of Kansas owe an unusual debt of gratitude to Miss Linna Bresette, deputy state factory inspector. It was through her efforts that Kansas now has an industrial welfare commission to regulate the hours of labor, wages and conditions of the women, girls and minors employed in all industrial and mercantile pursuits.

Two years ago an earnest effort was made to get the Legislature to pass a minimum wage and a maximum hour law. It was shown that Australia and other countries had similar laws and information was furnished that some regulation was needed in Kansas. The business men said that business conditions were not the same throughout the state, that a flat rate law would often work a hardship on many industries. The pressure they brought to bear defeated the women and the proposed laws.

When the Legislature adjourned Governor Hodges named Miss Linna Bresette as a special inspector for women workers under the bureau of labor. She was directed to gather the information needed to pass the minimum wage law or create an industrial welfare commission to handle the problem. How well she did her work is shown by the fact that the Legislature passed the bill creating the commission practically as she wrote it.

Miss Bresette had the facts. She went out into the state, visiting factories and stores, shops and other places where women work, and gathered her information first hand, from the women and from the factory owners and managers. She had the figures to show that a flat wage scale for every girl was not suitable for Kansas. It might not be even suitable to one industry. Conditions varied so greatly everywhere that a flat rate of wages or hours would help some and ruin others even in the same line of business. When Miss Bresette completed her work she asked the Legislature to pass the welfare commission law. The commission is to be composed of the labor commissioner, a woman and a man, the last two named by the Governor to serve without pay but with funds for their expenses.

When Miss Bresette completed her investigations and was ready for the work before the Legislature she had found that: Thirty-four per cent. of the women workers of the state received less than $6 a week; 21 per cent. worked more than 10 hours a day; 50 per cent. worked nine hours or over; women who have the longest hours get the smallest wages; many married women are in active industrial life from necessity and assist in the support of a family. Many young and inefficient workers are to be found among women workers, chiefly because of a lack of education and training, others because of a lack of aim, hope or desire for advancement.

A great many of the factory managers, owners, merchants and others employing women were found to realize the necessity of regulation by the state. Many had undertaken humanitarian propositions of their own with more or less success. Some had found the employees willing to help the employers, while others found the employees were at least atempting to "sponge" off the employer.

"The big and successful business houses and the big factories are always the easiest to get along with," says Miss Bresette. "Some of the small ones were just as nice, but the most opposition came from the smaller institutions. Many times I have had men tell me, 'If you would quit smiling, we would fight this out.' But I just kept right on smiling and the men kept right on giving me copies of the payrolls and doing the things they should have done without being told.

Miss Bresette gathered all of this information in a period of two years and then she had a law drafted giving a Commission power to make orders after a hearing effecting the wages paid, the hours, cleanliness, rest and many other conditions which may arise in mercantile and manufacturing establishments. She had the law introduced into the Legislature and then began on the members. Many knew all about the law and were for it before it reached the Legislature. Others knew nothing of it, of conditions of women workers, and they didn't believe half of it, any way. It was up to Miss Bresette to convince them.

Any time any legislator bobbed up with a question Miss Bresette had the answer or knew where to get it and did get it. A few business men came around to oppose the bill, but they didn't stay long. Then they sent some lawyers to contest it, but the lawyers were talking second-handed and couldn't be effective except to say that the plan was unconstitutional, in contravention of the bill of rights and taking property contrary to law.

Miss Bresette talked so convincingly, so earnestly, she had so much information, so many experiences to tell, so many real facts and so many figures that the Legislature gave her the law she wanted.

MAGICAL USIT

Now all you ladies who suffer (yes, suffer, for you do) from unsightly wrinkles can drive them away forever. Usit, the pure nut-oil skin, the "Arab's Secret," a preparation used by famous Eastern beauties for centuries can be purchased at any first-class drug store.

This wonderful preparation (not a face cream), is positively guaranteed to clear the complexion of all wrinkles, whether caused by age, worry, work or exposure. Rub it into the skin with the finger tips at night just before retiring, and in a short time every wrinkle will disappear, your hungry, faded skin will get back its healthy color, its well nourished smoothness, and the lines in your face will be replaced by youthful roundness. No other treatment is necessary.

Usit is well named the "Wrinkle Chaser" for no wrinkles can exist where it is used. It is guaranteed to contain nothing that will cause hair growth.

Go to your druggist today and get a bottle of Usit for 50 cents. Try it tonight and see how fine your face feels in the morning. But remember Usit is put up only in opal bottles. Take nothing else.

The most painful cases of sunburn are relieved instantly by Usit.

NEW AGREEMENT AFFECTS E. V. MEN

Employes on the Oswego city lines, as well as those on the Oswego division of the Empire United Railways, will, in all probability, be included in the new agreement that is being framed today at a meeting at Lakeland, N. Y., between officials of the railways and representatives of the Amalgamated Association of Street and Electric Railway Employes of America.

Discussion of the terms of the agreement has been under way for some months, final settlement having been delayed until today.
to the public and the entire lot are

International vice president George Keenan will do the greatest share of the talking for the men while the company will be represented by Receiver C. Loomis Allen and Manager Cherry.

It is believed that the terms of the new contract will be in substance about the same as those now in force on the other roads throughout Central New York, on which the employes are affiliated with the Amalgamated Association. It will cover all the men employed on the cars, at the sub-station barns and power houses of the company.

With this agreement signed practically all the roads in this section will have been brought into line, with the exception of the Syracuse and South Bay line and this is expected to follow shortly.

LECTURE BY DR. RUSSEL CONWELL

Audiences Never Tire Hearing Noted Clergyman Give Lecture, "Acres of Diamonds" ---At Chautauqua Tonight.

Dr. Russell H. Conwell, the foremost American lecturer, will be the feature of the Chautauqua this evening. He has been lecturing steadily for fifty-five years, being associated in his early days with such lecturers as Philip Gough and Henry Ward Beecher. His well known American classic, "Acres of Diamonds" will be the subject of his lecture this evening. He has delivered the same lecture no less than 5,400 times. When he delivered it the five thousandth time he was greeted by an audience which included the governors of eleven states and was presented with a purse of $5,000. He has earned nearly $1,000,000 from this one lecture and has devoted the entire proceeds for the education of young men and women.

Over 1,600 of them having been the recipients of his general assistance.

Although Dr. Conwell is advanced in years and will probably never lecture again in this locality, he still retains his old time vigor and will make a strong appeal to Fultonians.

To-morrow is one of the most popular days of Chautauqua week, known as "Band Day" and never has the Redpath System presented a better trained, and more pleasing, musical organization than Cimera's Band. Signor Cimera, the leader, is a bandmaster of wide experience and recognized ability. He has been a member of Sousa's band, Innes Band, Pryor's band and has led Kryl's band, an organization well known in the middle west. He conducts with unusual skill and has the members of his splendid organization under the most perfect control. While he is a Bohemian he leads an American band of twenty-six members, many of whom are soloists of ability.

The spectacular electrical effects of the anvil chorus in the evening program never fails to meet with enthusiastic approval. The band is assisted by Miss Lillian Heywood, who possesses a fine lyric soprano voice, which recently captured the prize at the international Welsh Eisteddfod.

Miss Elsie Baker delighted a large audience this afternoon. As a result of injuries r eceived in an accident Miss Baker is compelled to sing from a wheel chair, and yet she has never broken an engagement and still retains her full vocal qualities.

Mr. William Durieux, cellist of rare technique, entertained the audience this afternoon, displaying wonderful talent. He was for a number of years a professor in the noted Royal Conservatory of the Hague. In this country he has appeared with such musicians as Walter Damrosch, Modest Altscheiler, Victor Herbert and Max Fieldler. For sometime in the past he has been cello soloist for the Kaltenborn string quartet.

Trap Shoot Saturday.

The weekly shoot of the Fulton Game and Gun Club will be held Saturday afternoon at the grounds at Stop 7. A red bird contest will be among the new features that will be introduced and Earl C. Foster of the Foster Brothers' Knife works has donated hunting knives to be awarded to the prize winners in the contest. All cars will stop at the grounds and a large crowd is looked for.

SAFEGUARD YOUR CHILD

If your child is pale, dull, at times flushed, irritable and fretful you should attend to this condition at once as the chances are your little one is suffering from worms. POSTMASTERS RELIEVED OF COLLECTING REVENUE

Oswego county postmasters will not have to collect checks for the Federal reserve banks until some future time, according to a notice sent out by the post office authorities at Washington, to the effect that the order had been temporarily suspended.

It is believed this action was taken because of the vigorous objections made on the part of some Congressmen who, acting at the request of some of the smaller country banks, opposed the measure. The country banks contended that to have the postmasters cash the checks would deprive them of a large revenue.

The order was suspended at the request of the governor of the Federal Reserve board.

PROVISIONS AND LIVE STOCK MOVE QUICKLY

Shortage of freight cars is again delaying shipments throughout Central New York. Embargoes are being announced daily by many railroads. The Boston and Maine is the latest line to place an embargo on all carload and less than carload lots because of a lack of rolling stock.

The only exception noted is on provisions and live stock consigned to points on the B. and M., or to the United States government.

FULL POSTAGE A REQUIREMENT

A notice received at the local post office from the department at Washington says that notwithstanding the fact that special attention has been called repeatedly to the rates of postage applicable to articles mailed in the United States and addressed for delivery abroad, the department continues to receive complaints on account of the receipt in foreign countries of much short paid mail from the United States. Postmasters have been asked to call attention to the regulation, which requires the collection of double the amount of the deficient postage upon the delivery of the short paid articles in international mails. Whenever it is practicable to do so the postmaster is directed to inform the senders of short paid articles to prepay the postage on such articles, and hold the articles until the senders supply the necessary postage stamps or specially authorize the despatch of the articles as short paid.

As the failure to properly prepay letters for foreign countries appears to be the result, in many cases, of an erroneous impression as to the application of the United States rate, the postmaster has also been asked to give notice to the public that the only foreign lands to which the two cent rate applies are Canada, Cuba, Mexico, the republic of Panama, the Canal Zone, Bahamas, Barbadoes, British Guana, Dutch West Indies, Leeward Islands, Newfoundland, Germany (by direct steamer), England, Scotland, Wales, Ireland and the city of Shanghai, China. To all other places the rate is 5 cents for the first ounce or fraction thereof, which must be fully prepaid or the letters become liable on delivery to a charge double the amount of the postage it lacks.

OPEN AIR BAND CONCERT

There will be an open air concert given by the band at Lower Falls, First and Worth street, Wednesday evening and it is expected there will be a large attendance at this free entertainment.

MANY DONT'S FOR FACTORY OWNERS

Comprise Eleven and If Obeyed Operatives Should Have One Grand Time in Canning Factories.

The maze of legislation affecting canning factories, about which there has been some misunderstanding, has been boiled down into a series of eleven don'ts, by the State Industrial Commission. They are:

Don't employ children under fourteen years of age.

Don't employ children between fourteen and sixteen unless each child has a working certificate, and that certificate is on file in your office.

Don't require or permit children between fourteen and sixteen to work in any one day before eight o'clock in the morning or after five o'clock in the afternoon more than six days in any one week.

Don't require or permit women between sixteen and eighteen years of age to work more than ten hours in any one day, or fifty-four hours in any one week, or before six o'clock in the morning, or nine o'clock in the evening.

Don't require or permit women eighteen years of age or upwards to work more than twelve hours in any one day, or more than sixtysix hours in any one week, or before six o'clock in the morning, or after ten o'clock at night, during the period between July 25 and August 5th.

Don't require or permit women eighteen years or upwards to work more than ten hours in any one day, or more than sixty hours in any one week, or before six in the morning, or after ten at night during the period between August 5th and October 15.

Don't require or permit women employes to work more than six days in any one week.

Don't fail to apply to the state industrial commission for a sixty-six hour permit for the period between June 25th and August 5th.

Don't fail to post the daily hours of labor notice.

Don't fail to keep a time book giving the names and addresses of all women employes and the hours worked by each of them in each day.

Don't neglect to provide slate platforms on wet floors where employes are required to stand. Keep toilets and cloak rooms clean and sanitary and properly guard all exposed gears, pulleys and belts.

JUNIOR FASHIONS

Southampton—There are few better places to study children's clothes than at a resort frequented by modish people. At such places one sees little that is freakish or fussy in junior attire. Practicality is in fact, the prime requisite in this department of dress, for children give little thought to their clothes, and the constant changes necessitate many visits to the laundress. Then children grow so fast, that clever mothers study the problem of buying the smallest possible outfit that will keep the child fresh and presentable, since the next younger member is apt to resent hand-downs that are seldom in perfect condition when she gets them.

Wash Fabrics

Wash fabrics are worn the year round by children of the well-to-do, and school frocks of the Winter differ little from Summer outfits and need almost as frequent washing. Ginghams of good quality that hold their shape and color with the heavier grades of tailored cottons make ideal dresses of this sort. Simplicity of cut, very little trimming and great nicety of detail marks the attire of these children who can have everything of the best, and usually the cost is far from low for such dainty simplicity, but with a few good patterns and careful stitching duplicate garments are easily made at home for a fraction of the cost.

Sweaters and Long Coats

Sweaters and later, long all-covering coats, make the light weight washable frock as practical in nipping winds, as in warmly heated places. And the children are particularly attractive in the brilliant hued garments donned by all ages here this year, when the other half of the world wears only the colors of grief. The coat of velours cord and plaided or striped wool fabric that slips over the summer frock when cool winds blow, is all right for early Autumn wear, but later this coat needs the warmest of linings, plenty of pockets and some of the many forms of the convertible collars, that are a predominant feature of adult wraps. Pile fabrics of all sorts are to be greatly worn next season both for whole garments and as trimming. Many of the furs are prettily reproduced in these fabrics, and they offer great opportunity for lengthening a too short garment, while matching cuffs and collars make the rebuilt garment fresh and up-to-date.

Combinations.

Combinations of material continue to be modish, so that it is an easy matter to prolong the life of an outgrown dress, by adding a little new material which may either match or contrast in color and weave. Mohair is once more endorsed and there are a number of fabrics woven either wholly or partly of this wool, that make pretty and excepteionally practical dresses for the youngsters, since they shed dust and grime, and yet are easily cleaned when necessary. The striped and plain combination suits and dresses of the Summer come in very similar styles for Fall, and coats are rather smarter in contrast than when matching the dress or skirt.

Wash Crepes

Especially pretty and practical for the very little girl, are frocks of white crepe weaves, in soft dainty cotton that washes readily and needs no ironing. A pretty style in one piece cut, buttons continuously from the top of the shoulder to the end of the sleeve, and is trimmed with one of the featherstitched braids that closely resemble hand work. Half a dozen of these slips can be made in less time than one elaborate frock would take, and the child looks better dressed in their simple freshness than in a garment at many times the cost. All white is usually a most satisfactory choice for the littlest girl's dress. Colored sweaters and hats offering all the needed relief.

PECULIARITIES ABOUT CROOKS

Cleveland Prosecutor Says 90 Per Cent Are Bachelors—Favors Early Marriages.

(By United Press)

Cleveland—After an investigation of 400 criminal cases, James J. Lind, Cleveland chief police prosecutor, has found out that nine-tenths of all crooks are unmarried. Two thirds of the men jailed were between the ages of 21 and 30, according to his figures available here today.

"It seems that conditions in unmarried life tend to make men criminals or that persons with criminal instincts are inclined not to marry," concluded Lind after his investigation.

"In 400 cases which passed through my office there was no definite economic condition that would result in crime.

"Only about half of the married prisoners had children and many of the married ones were separated from their families.

"As a rule women who take up crime are also single or at least separated from their husbands or families.

"This is hard to prove because women prisoners are not inclined to tell the truth. When a woman lands in jail she generally claims to be married and says if her husband hears of her predicament he will forsake her forever. She also claims to be the mother of several small children, dependent on her care—all of which, nine times out of ten, is untrue.

"If a married man gets into trouble he generally commits a real crime, not a misdemeanor. If a married man with children finds his way behind the bars, it is usually money troubles which have placed him there.

"But if any particular class of the human family is a menace to the rest, unmarried men are the guilty ones.

"The way to lessen crime is to advocate early marriages. What a man needs to keep him out of trouble is a good home environment.

"If mothers realized this they would cease opposing early marriages."

FRANCE HONORS 1ST WAR VICTIM

By Henry Wood
(U. P. Staff Correspondent.)

Paris—France paused today in tribute to the memory of Corporal Jules Andre Peugeot, the first Frenchman killed in the present war.

It was at Jancherey on the Upper Rhine, at ten o'clock a. m., August 2, 1914, about twenty-four hours before the war actually was declared between Germany and France, that Peugeot was shot to death by Lieutenant Mayer, at the head of a German patrol squad.

A national subscription is today being collected under the patronage of the Minister of War and the Minister of Public Instruction for the erection of a monument to Corporal Jules-Andre Peugeot on the spot where he fell.

It is proposed that the name and heroic acts of Peugeot pass down in history as have those of Marschal des Logis Pagnez, the first victim of the war of 1870, who was killed at Niedbronn.

Peugeot twenty-one, was a corporal in the sixth company of the 44th regiment of infantry. Early in August he was stationed at Joncherey, two kilometers from Delle and twelve kilometers from the German frontier.

On the morning of August 2, he had just finished placing a sentinel and returned to the house of A. M. Daucourt, when the latter's little daughter came running in crying.

"The Prussians! The Prussians."

Rushing outside, Corporal Peugeot found himself facing a mounted German patrol of seven members under command of Lieutenant Mayer of the Fifth Regiment of Chasseurs stationed at Mulhouse.

Peugeot gave the order to halt, to which Mayer replied by drawing his revolver and firing three shots into the body of the corporal. The latter fell to his knees, discharging his gun before he could take aim.

By this time a few of Peugeot's men had rushed up, one of whom, named Monnier, killed Lieutenant Mayer with two shots from his rifle. In the fight that followed, participated in by some French dragoons who had come up at the sound of the firing, all the Germans were killed with the exception of one who escaped.

Peugeot was the only French soldier killed in the fray. He has since been cited to the order of the day for his bravery.

PLAN TO PREPARE HIGH SCHOOL BOYS FOR WAR

Chicago—A coast to coast round up of high schools for the purpose of installing rifle clubs was the plan announced by officials of the American Rifle association here today. Before taking up the work of teaching high school boys to shoot, effort will be made to organize clubs in all prep schools, colleges and universities not yet represented in the association.

HIS LUCKY NUMBER 13.

Farmer Tells How Mystic Numerals Stuck to Him.

Live Oak, Cal.—No matter how other people may feel about the number 13, Howard Grimes of Douglas county, Ore., considers it a messenger of good luck rather than a harbinger of evil.

Grimes was in Live Oak recently on his way to Davis, where, although he is sixty-four years of age, he is taking a course in agriculture.

On the back of his auto hung its license No. 1313. When reminded of its hoodoo proclivities the Oregonian smiled and volunteered a bit of history.

"I was born on Sept. 13, 1852," said he, "and was the thirteenth child in the family brood. When thirteen years old I left home to make my fortune. At twenty I married, and our wedding fell on the 13th of the month.

"While riding a Northern Pacific train in 1912 I was in berth 13 and the train was wrecked. Every occupant in that car was injured but myself. In 1913 I made a little investment in mining property and cleaned up $16,000. I took the money and purchased $1,300 acres of land, and I am farming a part of it and learning how to farm it better."

YOUTHFUL SNAKE HUNTERS.

Boys Handle Dangerous Reptiles Like Professional Charmers.

Galena, Kan.—Two small boys, Willie and Robert Shorl, the elder of whom is about fourteen, have produced a new sensation in the vicinity of their home at Five Mile, where they have a cage full of writhing snakes of many varieties. They play with these reptiles without the least sign of fear, going through with all the stunts of professional snake charmers.

The collection consists of black snakes, blue racers, chicken snakes and three ugly looking rattlers. On Saturdays they usually go to Snake branch and hunt for more reptiles. However, these new reptiles are not placed with their "pets," but kept in a seperate cage, and are usually shipped to owners of small shows and museums, from whom they get from $3 to $5 for each reptile.

Neither of the boys has ever been bitten. The older boy gave a lecture on snakes before the pupils of the Shoal Creek school. He surprised teacher and pupils alike by his classification of reptiles, giving their Latin names and discussing the harmless or dangerous varieties, taking each from a box as he explained their varied habits.

A TRUCELESS WAR

The Unending Struggle Between the Sea and the Shore.

VICTORIES ON BOTH SIDES

Sometimes the Ocean Lashes Its Way Through Rocky Cliffs, and Sometimes the Wind and Land Combine to Beat the Billows Back to Defeat.

It is a truceless war that the waters of the world are waging against its lands. John Oliver LaGorce, associate editor of the National Geographic society, has prepared for that institution a study of this striking struggle between the earth and the sea with the shores lines of the world as the far flung theater of war.

After calling attention to the fact that the processes which have transformed the polar regions from dense jungles of tropical growth into lands of perpetual ice and snow, which have brought the tops of mountains to the bottom of the sea and the bottom of the sea to the tops of mountains, are still going on, although the hands upon the face of the clock of geology move so slowly that we cannot perceive their movement, Mr. LaGorce continues:

"Along every coast line on the face of the earth there is perpetual warfare between the land and the sea, with the wind as the shifting line, now throwing its weight into the balance on the one side and now on the other. Here the land is taking the offensive, driving the sea back foot by foot, always with the aid of the wind; there the sea marshals a great drive and eats its way landward slowly and laboriously, but none the less successfully.

"The varying fortunes of this relentless and age long war which neither truce nor treaty will ever bring to an end can be read in the shifting sands of the seashore. At many points along the coast of the northeastern states are found bold cliffs, and the charging sea attacks them with the shot and shell of loose shingle. Some of them, however, are adamant and impregnable in their frontal fortifications and hold out against the sorest siege, but between them have occurred stretches of softer rock which have been literally pounded to dust by the ocean's heavy artillery, thus permitting flank attacks on the hitherto unconquered defenses.

"Along the southeastern coast, however, the rock bound cliff is the exception and the long stretches of glittering sand the rule. Here the sandy beach reaches out farther and farther into the sea, and the water is thus enabled to penetrate farther and farther into the land because the attack of the sea is usually a frontal movement and that of the land frequently a wedge attack. Thus we can account for the long straight shore on the one hand and the split on the other.

"The formation of the beach immediately guarded by the Cape Henry light is not changing so rapidly as is the case only a few miles on either side because of its somewhat protected position, due to the many sand bars or reefs far out from shore which, acting as the first trenches, serve to break the charge of the white horses of Father Neptune as they dash in from the ocean, and because of this knowledge of defense it is plain to be seen that a good quarter of a mile of beach has been added by the defender since the old light was erected.

"Rockaway beach, Long Island, grows westward at the rate of nearly a mile every twenty years. At Nag Head, N. C., the land has extended into the sea at the rate of thirty-five feet a year. In 1804 Dr. Nathaniel Bowditch prepared a chart of Salem and Marblehead harbors, giving the soundings over various ledges of rock. Ninety years later similar soundings were taken, and in all cases the water was found to be considerably deeper, once again telling the tale of endless warrings.

"On the shore of Cape Cod, near Chatham, the land is retreating at the rate of a foot a year, and on the southern shore of Marthas Vineyard it is giving up the fight to the enemy at the rate of three feet every twelve months, while on the southern face of Nantucket the retreat has been as much as six feet a year, the records tell us.

"In its incessant warfare against the land the sea literally takes its captured hosts and makes them do battle under its command. The bowlders that are shattered from the face of a cliff are dashed up against it again and again, hammering others loose, the while being worn round and smooth as the projectile of big guns must be. As the process goes on these huge shells are worn down and crumbled until there remains nothing to tell the story of forced fighting against their own stronghold save grains of sand on some distant beach or the soft carpet spread upon the floor of the sea many fathoms deep.

"How rapidly this process goes on is sometimes strikingly shown. A schooner laden with bricks is beached on some bare shore in a storm. These bricks are rolled and tumbled a distance of five miles or so in the course of a year, and by that time attrition has usually completed its work. Authorities say that on the shores of Cape Ann a fragment of stone as big as a nail keg has been worn completely round by its constant turning during the course of but five years."

A propensity to hope and joy is real riches, one to fear and sorrow real poverty.—Hume.

CRITIC OF PRINCE.

Admiral Holtzendorff Quit Navy Because of Kaiser's Brother.

DEMANDED A FREE HAND.

German Chief of Navy Staff Received Imperial Promise and Was Reinstated—Said Prince Henry Spoke English Too Much—Made Him Unpopular.

Berlin.—Admiral Henning von Holtzendorff, chief of staff of the German admiralty and as such receiving a large share of credit for the German achievements in the great battle off Skagerrak, attained his present office in September, 1915, not contrary to the wishes of Grand Admiral von Tirpitz, as has been stated, but against the recommendation of Prince Henry of Prussia, the emperor's only brother.

Prince Henry is ranking grand admiral and inspector general of the German navy. This is an honorary office, still one of great influence. When the war opened in August, 1914, Holtzendorff was in retirement, like Hindenburg. The victor of the battle of Tannenburg, now the idolized field marshal of the German empire, had been allowed in time of peace to leave the army. He could not get along amicably with all of his superior officers. Holtzendorff retired because he dared to criticise Prince Henry's exaggerated ideas of discipline. The prince admired his mother's country so much that he spoke English almost all the time on board ship. The questionable taste of preferring it to his native language made him unpopular, although his subordinates were naturally debarred from showing disapproval.

Admiral von Holtzendorff, who had commanded the German high seas fleet for several years, came in direct opposition to Prince Henry when the ranking grand admiral paid more attention to the ornamental side of seamanship than to actual efficiency. On a tour of inspection, if he found the brass fittings of the ship not as brightly polished as he thought they ought to be, he would order the man who had done the work brought to him and personally sentence him to solitary confinement. Holtzendorff was unable to get his way, and he was allowed to retire.

Prince Henry declined to receive the salute of Admiral Holtzendorff when the two happened to meet, and when the emperor invited Holtzendorff to return to his naval duties the admiral declined unless he were given the post of supreme authority, where he would not be interfered with by Prince Henry.

No man in the German navy represented to the same extent as did Admiral von Holtzendorff the ideas of naval warfare which the United States government was in September of last year insisting that Germany adopt.

The emperor cut the Gordian knot. Actuated by the country's highest need in time of war, exercising that genius for choosing the right man for the right place which he inherited from his grandfather, William I., Holtzendorff was made chief of staff, with the imperial promise that he should have a free hand.

The admiral's father was president of the court of appeals in Gotha, where the son as a little boy was the terror of all his schoolteachers. Full of vitality, grasping his school work without effort, he was full of boyish pranks and early gave indication of extraordinary ability in thinking and acting for himself. As a middle aged man he was, however, a distinguished citizen of Gotha, director of the Gotha real estate credit bank, a famous old institution.

In 1892, when he was thirty-nine, he held the rank of captain in the navy and was attached to the staff of the chief commander, later on to the staff of the maneuver squadrons. In 1895 he was sent to cruise in Chinese waters as captain of the warship Kaiser. His naval career came after his marriage. Inheriting several estates with his brother, Arndt, younger than himself, the family was nevertheless poor. Arndt von Holtzendorff went into business and stayed there. He is now director of the Hamburg-American line at the main office in Hamburg.

Henning von Holtzendorff made a rich marriage, his wife being the widow of a millionaire by the name of Klotz.

CURIOUS CORDOBA.

This Spanish Town Is So Compact It Looks Like One Building.

Cordoba is scheduled on the European itinerary as a half day stand. Those who go from Seville to Granada and those who go from Granada to Seville take Cordoba on their way. Fifteen minutes for the cathedral, five for the alcazar, an hour for luncheon and on to further discoveries—that is the Cordoba program. The hotels of Cordoba are, in consequence, unpalatial, a circumstance in itself which endears the little town to the judicious. I do not believe there is a lift in all Cordoba, and if your wife wishes for any reason to buy a new hat she must go out of the hotel for it, and then it will be three years old.

At night all the tourists are gone to Seville or Granada, and you and the Cordobans and the stars share the amenities of Cordoba's one boulevard, of which everybody is very proud, because it is much superior to anything that Paris or even Madrid can show. It was a lucky chance which caused them to build Cordoba so handily between Seville and Granada. It has provided a still little backwater for the traveler's repose, a spot where he may forget that American bars exist, eat his meals untroubled by the squeaking of a tango band and adventure himself among the mysteries of a bill of fare jelly printed in blue and illegible Spanish.

You could put your hat over Cordoba, and very little would protrude. It is the compactest little town. From the tower of the cathedral it all looks like one building. You can hardly perceive the streets, so closely do they wriggle among the houses. The roofs are yellow, brown, gray, red; the walls and their shadows every color in the world. Among the buildings the green of palms, orange trees, lemon trees, chestnuts, soothe the glare struck eye. The Guadalquivir snakes through its rich plains from the faraway flat hills (red, gray brown, yellow), and over all are the great sky of the south and the huge sun of the south, which imposes silence on the world till night shall set the guitars a-buzzing.—William Caine in Century.

CAUSE OF RHEUMATISM.

Cavities Holding Pus, It Is Claimed, Breed the Dread Ailment.

In the American Magazine is an article on rheumatism by Dr. Arthur R. Reynolds, who says:

"The cause of rheumatism is pus formed and imprisoned in some part of the body. It gets into the circulation and is carried by it to the region affected. These pus places may be in spots more or less closed up, so they are not easily drained. They may be located about the teeth, at the end of the roots of dead or diseased teeth, in the crypts of the tonsils, in some of the sequestered places in the nostrils, in the bony sinuses of the head. They may be in the bladder, the kidney, the gall ducts or other places. The pus producing spot may be as small or smaller than a pea or it may be larger. Its existence is frequently unknown to the patient, especially if it be hidden in soft tissue like the tonsil. It may even exist in the bony socket of a tooth without giving pain.

"Several different organisms produce pus, and any or all may produce rheumatism when transferred to the joints or the heart.

"The physician today seeks for the pus cavity when he meets a patient with rheumatism, and he endeavors to clean it up. Rheumatic pains have been stopped with magical promptness by simply extracting the offending tooth. It is not always easy to find the pus places in the hidden parts of the body. The X ray shadowgraph is essential in locating the trouble. It shows definitely and accurately all trouble about the roots of the teeth, and its use is therefore of the first importance in ferreting out the pus in the deep structures."

Duncan Smoked In Church.

Sir Walter Scott in his "Heart of Midlothian" refers to one Duncan of Knockdunder, an important personage, who smoked during the whole of the sermon from an iron pipe tobacco borrowed from other worshipers. We are told that at the end of the discourse he knocked the ashes out of his pipe, replaced it in his sporran, returned the tobacco pouch to its owner and joined in the prayer with decency and attention.

Domestic Strategy.

Husband—I am not ready to go out yet. Wife—But I am, and we must go immediately. Husband—But, my dear, your hat is not on straight. Wife—Dear me! Isn't it? Wait a minute till I go to my room and put it right.

Exit wife for half an hour, and her shrewd husband completes his work.

POCKETS A FEATURE.

No Museum or Godey's Book Reveals More Piquancy Than the New Ones.

Separate sport skirts are now quite as likely to be of silk jersey, khaki kool or la jerz, as of linen, even if the knitted silk, wool jersey or the velvet coat is worn. They are very lovely in white, and the advantage of being washable and needing no stiffening makes them invaluable at the shore. While there are some skirts laid in long, narrow pressed plaits, most of the sport skirts are cut flaring and in few gores. Their novel feature lies in the pockets, on which much personal ingenuity is displayed. Pockets, whether slashed or patch, are cut in odd shapes. The crescent tops are one of the favorite outlines. The upper edge will often have a tiny plaiting of a contrasting material. The belt, which is of the same material generally, may have this same plaiting along the edge and buttons with as many as three buttons. Sometimes pockets are found in the belt. They are little slashes, which are often faced, as are the up to date buttonholes, and are only large enough to hold a watch or key.

Sand Toys.

There are some children who will always be satisfied to spend a morning on the beach with only the little tin bucket and shovel or a few old shells. But there are others, and they are the majority, who want more play toys for the beach or sand pile than merely these. For them there comes a set of wooden blocks, with a hollowed circle on one side, into which is molded a letter of the alphabet. With these molds a child can pat out on the dampened sand any combination of letters which he likes. These surely rank among the useful toys and are worth purchasing for the educational value which they possess.

Another toy which will teach a principle of physics is the sand wheel, a wooden paddle wheel caught between two wooden boxes. Through the top one either sand or water may be slowly poured to turn the wheel beneath.

A small wooden auto on wooden wheels will cart the sand for a fort.

CHILD ROBS KAISER OF ONE RESERVIST

Little Girl Convinces Him United States Is "Good Enough to Fight For."

Francis Hummel, professor of German at the Curtis high school, Staten Island, was observed the other day on a ferryboat that was conveying Troop F on its way to Van Cortlandt park. The observer was a girl, a former pupil—surprised to see the professor in a private's uniform of the United States service. She had known him as a champion of the kaiser's cause.

"Why, Herr Hummel," she said with smiling eyes, "you astonish me! I could only think of you in a German uniform, fighting, as you have frequently spoken of doing, for the fatherland."

The professor did not smile. He said with gravity:

"Yes, my dear young lady, I had thought that never would I fight for any country but the fatherland. Yet you see, I have two children born in America. And the other day I saw one of them as I sat on my porch, and she was happy and healthy—full of life—playing about the lawn.

"As she romped she held an American flag. She waved it in full happiness and triumph. I said to myself then: 'If that flag is good enough for my children to live under it is good enough for me to fight for.' I promptly enlisted."

HIS HONEYMOON HALTED.

Returns to New York From Far Northwest to Answer Call to Arms.

"Major, I'm ready to report for duty," said a tanned and almost breathless youth who dashed into the armory in New York. "I had some time getting here, but I'm on the job."

The young man was Felix Mandell, a private. He married three weeks previously and went to the Canadian northwest to spend his honeymoon. He learned from a guide that trouble with Mexico was expected, and he sent a messenger to the nearest point of civilization to ask his mother about it by wire.

Mrs. Mandell replied informing him of the mobilization order. It cost her $30 to get her dispatch to him by runners. The young chap immediately upon receipt of the news started for civilization and traveled day and night until he reached New York. He sped from the railroad station to the armory.

EXTRA PAY FOR REGULARS.

Will Be Allowed 20 Per Cent Increase For Foreign Service.

Extra pay for foreign service will be allowed the American troops serving across the Mexican border under a decision by Comptroller Warwick of the treasury. Enlisted men will receive 20 per cent addition and officers 10 per cent.

The comptroller also gave the opinion that government employees who enlist in the national guard are entitled to full pay from the civil position for the first thirty days of their service, except that the combined salaries of officers will be subject to the $2,000 limitation provided by law.

HOW TO ADDRESS LETTERS TO SOLDIERS TO INSURE DELIVERY.

Letters to the guardsmen on the Mexican border have begun to accumulate in the postoffices because of insufficient address.

It is essential in order to insure prompt delivery that the address should contain the addressee's name, together with his rank and the unit to which he is attached. As an example a proper address for all classes of mail should be in the following form:

"Private John Doe.
"Co. A, 7th Regiment, N. G. N. Y., Military Camp,
Brownsville, Tex."

How Would You Like This For Your Rest Gown?

Design by Franklin Simon & Co., New York.

BEAUTIFUL in material and design is this simple negligee put up in either pink, light blue or orchid silk crape. Over this comfortable, kimono-like slip goes a shadowy lace coatee trimmed with narrow shirred ribbon, rosettes and a streamer down the front. The effect is feminine and graceful to a degree and universally becoming. ANNA MAY.

An Interesting Summer Frock.

Dotted muslin combined with dainty pink net forms this pretty costume, youthful in its charm. Narrow bands of silk outline the waist.

The little frills and furbelows and the gathered skirt with deep shirred tucks make this summer frock extremely interesting. It is fashioned of dotted muslin and trimmed with plaited frills of plain pink net, which give an indescribably dainty air to the design. The dress closes in the back and there is an underblouse of linen lawn, with or without sleeves. In medium size the design requires 1½ 36-inch lining for underbody and foundation gores, 9 yards 40-inch muslin and 2 yards of net.

The costume consists of underbody, sleeves, outerwaist, foundation and outer skirt, all of which are properly marked for joining. The construction must be studied carefully before sewing is commenced. Then take the underbody. Face front and back then close underarm and shoulder seams and turn the hem in the back. Plait the underbody as notched and adjust a 3-inch belting underneath plaits for a stay.

When used for formal occasions the sleeves are omitted, as the illustration indicates.

For the outer waist close the underarm and shoulder seams then turn under the hem. Gather along the shoulder seam and the lower edge and stitch a band of tape the length of the shoulder stay, under the gathers at the shoulder seam. Close seam of sleeve ruffle and gather between double "TT" perforations. Sew to armhole edges, notches and shoulder seams even.

The outer waist is now ready to be arranged on the lining. The center fronts and back of each piece must be even. Bring large "O" perforations near shoulder seams together and tack. Stitch lower edges together and upper row of gathers to position.

If it is desired to trim the waist with a band and ruffle, stitch a bias band of material (1 inch wide when finished) to position on outer front and back leaving band free a little above center-front; cross band in surplice style and bring around to center-back for closing. Gather upper edge of ruffle between double "TT" perforations. Sew to lower edge of band, from center-front to center-back.

The foundation gores are joined next, then the center back seam is closed from large "O" perforation to lower edge and the edges finished above for a placket. Then close the center back seam of the flounce. Gather between double "TT" perforations. Stitch frills to lower edge, neatly facing the seam and sew to lower edge of foundation, center fronts and backs even. Sew to lower edge of waist.

Now, form a shirred tuck in the outer skirt, creasing on slot perforations. Gather 2 inches from folded edge and draw gathers to fit stay pattern; the stay pattern is only given for size to draw in gathers. Close center-front and center-back seams, leaving back seam free above large "O" perforation for a placket. Plait lower front edge placing "T" on corresponding small "o" perforations and tack. Gather upper edge between double "TT" perforations. Adjust stitching upper edge over upper row of gathers in waist, small "o" perforation over under-arm seam of underbody.

The simple girlish costumes of the artist Reynolds will be strikingly featured for the remainder of the season.

Left Behind

His wistful eyes are dim with tears,
His heart is lead today,
As forth amid the shouts and cheers
The soldiers march away.
They're off to great Adventure's shore,
The true romance to find;
They're answering the call of war
And leaving him behind.

Ah! Why must he stand idly there
All hope of glory gone,
A sorry figure of despair
While they go marching on?
Why must the cruel hand of chance
Stretch forth, so stern and grim?
Why must the country of romance
Deny its door to him?

But every hero may not share
The great and splendid deeds
Of those who nobly do and dare
To serve their nation's needs.
And though the savage battle light
Still beckons him away,
He's just a little young to fight—
He's eight years old today!

GERMAN SOLDIER FOUGHT IN TWO ARMIES OF ALLIES

Deserted Both Teuton and French and Joined Belgian Forces.

The record of Max Kohler, a clever and crafty German, aged twenty-six who made a brief appearance at Marlborough street police court, London, is interesting. His record follows:

Served in the German army and deserted.

Served in the French army and deserted.

Joined the Belgian army.

Married a French girl in Paris two years ago.

Married an English girl six months ago.

Was being taken from England to France as a deserter in the Sussex when she was torpedoed.

Was rescued and taken to Folkestone where he escaped rearrest and went to London.

Worked in the west end and was again arrested when he admitted that he was a German.

Kohler speaks English, French and German fluently.

At the age of twenty Kohler was called up for service in the German army, but after a few weeks' service he deserted from the army and made his way to England and then to America. He served in a weird variety of occupations. He is an electrician by profession, but he has been a sailor, a mechanic, a waiter, a pantryman, a fitter and an associate of criminals.

From America he went to France and for some time lived in Paris, where he was captivated by crime. Bonnot, the famous motorcar bandit, was one of his friends. A few months before war broke out he married a French girl in Paris. He joined the French army at the outbreak of war and was among the first troops to be sent to the front. On the very first day he was in action—Aug. 22, 1914. He was reported to be missing, and later it was found that he had deserted and had been taken by the Germans at Charleroi. He told them he was a German and persuaded them to allow him to make his way through Belgium to Holland.

He then saw a chance of going to England. He posed as a Belgian refugee and as such was admitted. He visited several towns in England and Scotland, where he obtained employment in a well known munition works. That was in the early part of 1915.

In Newcastle he made the acquaintance of the daughter of the foreman of one of the departments in the munition works, proposed to her, was accepted and they were married about six months ago.

NEW STYLES FOR MEN.

A Novelty Resembles the Fatigue Hat of National Guardsmen.

Fashions for men have begun to take a surprising turn. From Spain recently came something quite new in the form of the sandal coat, which, according to prediction, will be popular when the hot weather sets in. And now a new style hat for men has been found to rival the old standby sailor. It made its appearance in New York, where it attracted considerable attention.

The new model is very like the broad, flat fatigue hat of the national guardsmen. The hats were seen on five or six fashionably dressed men. These hats are being sold in some Fifth avenue shops, where it was stated that they were originated to supplant the Mexican sombrero.

First Offense.

"Prisoner, you are accused of stealing a watch. Is this your first offense?"

"Yes, your honor."

"But it seems to me I remember sentencing you not more than a year ago."

"Yes, your honor, but it wasn't a watch that time. It was a diamond pin."—St. Louis Post-Dispatch.

The KITCHEN CUPBOARD

SUMMER'S VEGETABLES.

STEWED NEW CARROTS.—One bunch new carrots, a tablespoonful butter, a tablespoonful flour, a tablespoonful finely cut onions, a tablespoonful finely cut parsley, teaspoonful salt and a dash of pepper. Wash, scrape and cut the carrots into thin pieces; put in saucepan, cover with boiling water, boil thirty minutes or until tender without cover. There should only be a cupful of water. When tender add the onions and flour, which has been mixed with cold water. Boil five minutes, add butter, salt, pepper and parsley.

Stuffed Green Peppers.—Wash half a dozen large green peppers, put them in boiling water five minutes, rub off the skins with a wet cloth, cut off the stem and remove the seeds and stuff the peppers with any kind of cold meat, minced fine, and an equal quantity of stale bread. Replace the stems, set the peppers in a deep dish, pour in as much cold gravy as the dish will hold and bake in a moderate oven for half an hour. They may be stuffed with sausage meat and bread. Serve in the dish in which they were baked.

Corn Fritters.—Materials: Two cupfuls of corn that has been put through the food chopper, a cupful of flour, a cupful milk, a teaspoonful baking powder, two eggs, a teaspoonful salt, dash pepper.

Utensils: Mixing bowl, two measuring cups, teaspoon, tablespoon, food chopper, flour sifter, egg beater, iron griddle.

Directions: Put the corn in bowl, add the milk, salt and pepper; sift flour and baking powder together into corn, beat egg until light and add. Mix well. Fry on greased griddle by placing a tablespoonful on at a time.

Brussels Sprouts au Gratin.—Boil the sprouts tender in salted water, drain and cut each sprout in four pieces. Cook together a tablespoonful each of butter and flour, and when they are blended pour upon them a scant pint of milk. When you have a smooth sauce stir the quartered sprouts into this. Season to taste, turn all into a greased pudding dish, strew thickly with crumbs and bits of butter and bake to a light brown. Serve in the dish in which they were baked.

Peacock Men to Join National Federation

Oswego county will be well represented in a nation wide federation of evangelistic clubs which is now in process of formation. The clubs which are to be admitted to membership are the business men's organizations that have been started in cities where Billy Sunday has conducted a campaign, and also of clubs formed by evangelists of lesser renown in other cities.

Fulton is in the list with a Luther Peacock league, named after the evangelist of that name who recently conducted a campaign here.

Syracuse falls in line with its Billy Sunday Business Men's League.

Phoenix has a religious club that was started during the Billy Sunday campaign in Syracuse and augmented by the Peacock campaign in Fulton.

Watertown has a Biederwolf campaign organized after the evangelist of that name finished his campaign there.

In addition to these there are similar organizations in Trenton, Scranton, Paterson, Omaha, Wilkesbarre, Philadelphia, Wheeling and other places. All these will be asked to unite into a national organization.

Cortland has an active Billy Sunday Club as well as Homer a village nearby. Both these will also be absorbed according to the plans of the leaders.

According to the present plans of the men backing the scheme. Invitations will be issued to all these societies to send representatives to Syracuse to perfect the organization and elect officers. A headquarters will be chosen, probably in Syracuse from where all the business will be directed.

No definite date has yet been set for the convention, but it is likely it will not be held until fall when all the pastors of the churches interested in the movement have come back from their vacations. Letters, however, will be sent out to all the clubs interested to sound out sentiment and prepare in a general way the plans that will be followed when the delegates get to Syracuse.

Conley Bros.' Store In New Hands Today

One of the city's business land-marks, the Conley Brothers' cigar store, newsstand and confectionery store today passed from the hands of the originators of the enterprise into those of a former employe of the Conleys—Horace J. Sylvester.

Mr. Sylvester enjoys the reputation of being one of the city's hustling young men, whose experience in the store which he has bought will equip him for continuing the business along modern lines.

Seventeen years ago the Conley Brothers began, in a modest way, their business career at the present location in East Second street. Trade prospered and little by little the store and stock grew and increased in comprehensiveness until the place came to be looked upon as one of the city's assets.

In addition to extending the felicitations of this newspaper to the new proprietor, The Evening Times gives to the Conley Brothers its hearty bon voyage.

WOMEN DRUNKARDS MORE PERSISTENT THAN MEN

(Special to Evening Times.)

Denver.—Drunkenness among women has been slower to decrease under the state prohibition law than among men, juvenile court authorities said here today.

Prohibition has cut down the number of cases before the various city courts, 75 per cent. Habitual men drunkards have almost disappeared. While drinking by women shows a marked decrease the percentage of habitual "woman drunks" who have reformed falls much below that of the men.

Juvenile court officer John Phillips, who meets these cases because children generally suffer when their parents get drunk, said women become liquor victims through environment, despondency and out of revenge.

"Once a woman is cursed with the habit," said Phillips, "her downfall is much faster than a man's because of her frailer physical makeup. Women addicted to both the liquor and tobacco habits, it is almost impossible to cure."

Pozieres Captured By Gen. Haig's Troops

(By United Press)

London—After three days of desperate hand-to-hand fighting at Anzac, soldiers of Great Britain's armies have taken the whole of the village of Pozieres. "The whole of Pozieres is now in our hands," General Haig reports today. "Westward the troops have further advanced, capturing two of the enemy's trenches and taking many prisoners.

"BUY A YARD OF LUMBER" DEPARTMENT STORE SIGN

(By United Press)

Chicago—Along with fancy ribbons, women's silk hose and sport shirts, lumber can now be bought over the counter at department stores, it was discovered today.

It can be bought by the yard, odd lengths can be secured in the bargain basement, and various kinds of fancy grains are carried for the more particular lumber customers.

The reporter went out to investigate. Entering a loop department store he queried the floor walker who conducted him to the "lumber yard."

"Yes, this is the lumber counter," said the sales girl, and the reporter learned that he could secure wood with which to make a kitchen cabinet or he might buy a piece with a knot in it out of which he could model a wooden leg.

"Lumber at three cents a stick," and "Buy a Yard of Lumber" are examples of the bargain cards placed at the lumber counters.

Department store lumber yards are a reality in thirty-six large cities in the country the store people here declared today. One western firm makes a specialty of jobbing this lumber, supplying odd lengths and short pieces of lumber that would otherwise go to waste.

CIVIL WAR ARTIST DIES AMID PICTURES

Burlington, N. J.—William D. T. Travis, a painter, who was war artist for "Harpers" and "The Illustrated News" during the Civil War, died today at Nosilla, his country home here. He was seventy-seven years old.

For thirty years Mr. Travis had worked on an allegorical painting, "The March of Mortality." He finished it a few weeks ago and his last days were spent gazing at it. It was said that he had refused substantial offers for the picture before it was finished. The canvases that he worked longest over he loved like children and refused to part with. His studio is lined with them.

Mr. Travis was commissioned by General Grant to paint thirty-five views of the Army of the Cumberland, containing equestrian portraits of all the generals. He was born in Staunton, Va. His father was John Welsh Travis.

Company D's Men Get Plenty of Good Food

(Special to the Evening Times)

McAllen, Texas—If you were to sit down today to three meals like these below would you kick?

Breakfast—Oatmeal, jam, milk, prunes, bacon and fried potatoes.

Luncheon—Pork and beans, tomatoes, onions, prunes, bread and lemonade.

Dinner—Goulash, potatoes, bread, marmalade and coffee.

Probably not.

But that's exactly what the Oswego county members of the National Guard are eating down here. The correspondent made an inspection of the three brigades in which New York state troops are stationed and found the above on the menu of Company D of the Third Infantry. The men are well fed. Of course one could find better on Broadway or other places, but the fact remains that the soldiers are eating better food and more of it than can be purchased in any of the towns around where the camps are stationed.

Each company in each regiment has its own mess with the exception of the Seventy-first where all the companies and all the officers have the same fare. But the menus will constitute a meal fairly up to the average and in many instances far above. Each cook or mess sergeant is entitled to draw anything the quartermaster has on hand and the only difference lies in the method of preparation.

There has been no illness resulting from the food, according to headquarters. The hospital list shows no serious alimentary troubles.

Many of the commands differ as to the proper food the men should have. For instance one Colonel contends that fresh meat should be served but twice per week in this climate. Another says the men should have meat once a day. Another holds that the men can get along on meat three times per week.

Enough rations are on hand here to keep the men in the field for twenty-eight days if orders come, according to Captain J. O. Steger, new head of the quartermaster's depot here. He has issued a list of sixty articles of food from which all supply officers can choose while in camp.

New England Roads Lose Rate Decision

(By United Press)

Washington—Proposed increased rates on inter-state shipments of milk and cream and their by-products, in New England, were today found not justified by the Inter-State Commerce Commission. The decision disposes of the New England section of the nation-wide investigation in milk routes. Approximately $500,000 revenue is announced lost to the New England carriers by the decision.

WOMEN TO ROPE STEER AT WYOMING CELEBRATION

(By United Press)

Cheyenne, Wyo.—The National Council of Women Voters, holding their annual convention here simultaneously with the twentieth annual Frontier Days celebration, will see their sisters rope a thousand pound steer and break a wild horse.

Events for women are scheduled for every one of the four days' Frontier program which opened today. Some of the past champions in the broncho busting and roping events for for men are entered. A heavy attendance is expected from Colorado, Cheyenne being the favorite "oasis" closest to the Colorado prohibition desert.

POLITICAL LEADERS OF OLD PARTIES WORRIED BY SUFFRAGE MYSTERY

(By United Press)

Atlantic City, N. J.—Politicians here got their ears close to the ground in anticipation of the emergency-called convention of the National American Woman Suffrage Association which opens here September 6th. This was shown by letters and telegrams pouring in on suffrage leaders here to-day.

With the leaders of the Women's forces determined to follow up the victories gained at the Democratic and Republican national conventions, the action to be taken by the delegates here promised to hold as much interest for the political wiseacres as the Maine elections.

Moreover, this interest is being stimulated by the air of mystery which hovers over the suffrage convention, as comparatively little news has leaked out to date concerning either the program or the plans of the leaders. Nor will the women at the head of the movement relieve the anxiety of the watchful political waiters with any advance information on the subject.

"We have called the convention so that every phase of every subject which concerns our cause, our policies and our organization may properly be considered," said Mrs. Carrie Chapman Catt, president of the National American Woman Suffrage Association, when interviewed here today.

"But what action are you going to take?" demanded the interviewer.

"That will be for the convention to decide," was the smiling reply. "You may state, however, that no voice will be silenced and no opinion suppressed." Further than that Mrs. Catt would say nothing.

Sixty-seven State suffrage organizations, covering every State in the Union, are affiliated with the national suffrage association, and will be represented at the convention, which will extend from September sixth through the tenth. Altogether, more than a thousand of the most representative women of the country will be in attendance.

Although the official program has not yet been made public, it is known that a three-sided debate between the supporters of State action, federal action and those who believe in both, will be one of the big features of the convention.

In the South the feeling is said to be strong against the national suffrage association abandoning any policy that would lead to a straight fight for a federal suffrage amendment.

In other sections of the country, however, notably in those States where amendments to the State constitutions take years of work and are regarded as practically impossible, the sentiment is reported to be equally strong for the abandonment of State campaigns and a concentration of the National's machinery for a drive on Congress.

Both of these factions will be well represented at the convention, as well as those suffragists who believe in a continuation of the policy of combined federal and state action, which has won twelve States for suffrage and converted millions of voters to believe in it all over the nation.

The clash between these factions will be watched with interest by the politicians, because the outcome may have a decided effect upon the fall campaigns of both the leading parties.

EX-CONVICTS NEAT

Leave Missouri Penitentiary With Stylish Suits.

NOT SPOTTED BY OUTSIDERS.

Even the Children of Jefferson City Can't Recognize Freed Prisoners in Their Tailored Checked Suits, Attractive Ties and Stylish Hats.

Jefferson City.—The man who is released from the Missouri penitentiary today does not have the appearance of the one who was liberated a few years ago, and he is no longer spotted by the children in the town as an ex-convict.

Instead of the suit of a dull brown mixture, the coarse shirts and the heavy, squeaking brogan shoes that marked him a few years ago, the present warden, D. C. McClung, has made it possible without additional expense to the state for the men to leave the prison in neat suits of fine checked patterns, such as any man might select.

These suits are made to measure of cloth manufactured in the prison. And in addition to these suits the freed convict wears attractive shirts, pretty ties and stylish hats.

By careful buying Mr. McClung has bought shirts that would retail at three or four times the price. Neat overcoats are given the men who go out in cold weather. All this work comes under the head of the commissary department, which has undergone an overhauling.

Carl McClung, son of the warden, has taken the commissary out of a small dungeon of a room to a good, clean building that formerly was used as an overall factory.

All the edibles and wearing apparel are kept in this building. Every piece of clothing, every bag of flour and every pound of all stuffs used is ticketed and can be checked up.

In a small store where the convicts may buy, run by Carl McClung, the convicts are charged just what the food would cost them outside except in the case of a few items, which are sold at less than cost.

PONY SAVES BOY'S LIFE.

Keeps Vicious Bull Away From Young Master in Nebraska.

Fairfield, Neb.—A pet pony ridden by Aubry Craft, son of Albert Craft, living north of this place, is believed to have saved the boy's life while he lay unconscious after an attack by a vicious bull.

When the boy failed to return after having gone for the cattle a search was started. He was found lying in the pasture, his face badly torn. He was unconscious. Near by was his pony.

The tracks in the dirt showed the little animal had raced round and round the unconscious boy, keeping away the bull that had attacked him. Later, when driven near the bull, the pony attempted to attack the animal.

CAT DIVES FOR FROG.

Maine Man's Story of His Wonderfully Bright Angora.

Bangor, Me.—Warren Clement of Millvale while at work in his hayfield heard a lot of splash in a pond near by and, thinking that perhaps a horse mackerel had got into the sheet of water, noiselessly approached the spot and was astonished, although he knew that he had one of the brightest cats in Maine, when he saw his pet Angora coon cat dive from a stump and disappear in the water, only to reappear within a few seconds bearing a frog in its mouth.

Depositing the now lifeless frog on the ground, the four footed coon gained the stump again, crouched, another spring, another dive, another swim and another frog.

WENDELL'S SON LICKED BULLY

Boston Mother Had Boy Taught to Use His Fists.

Boston.—A Boston mother, a leading figure in feminine activities, has sent her boy to a boxing instructor to learn to protect himself against a bully.

The son was taught to use his fists. The next time the bully molested this boy he met scientific resistance which made him let the youth alone.

The mother is Mrs. Barrett Wendell, president of the Special Aid society. Her husband is Professor Wendell of the department of English at Harvard.

"I would advocate the same teaching for the girls," said Mrs. Wendell. "Probably some jiujitsu might answer."

IMPORTANT CHANGE IN CHAUTAUQUA RULINGS

A business session of the local Chautauqua Society was held last night, directly after the entertainment, when it was voted to raise the membership of the present society to seventy-five members. There will also be a reserved list for those wishing to join and in the event of a vacancy the name of the first applicant will be elected to membership.

"DAYLIGHT SAVING" PLAN ADOPTED

Blewett, Wash.—Is the first in the U. S. to adopt the war-time "daylight saving" plan of setting all clocks ahead one hour during the summer months. The workday here commences at 5 a. m. The town belongs to a Lumber company which fixed the clocks.

"DAN" RETURNS TO OLD POSITION AT THE QUIRK

Daniel Darleigh, who recently tendered his resignation as manager of the Quirk Theatre, has signed a new contract with the Wallace Amusement Company, lessees, and will remain in his former capacity as manager of the playhouse. The theatre is now closed for a few days and Mr. Darleigh is enjoying a brief vacation.

FUNERAL DISK EULOGY.

Minnesotan Would Provide a Substitute For Clergymen.

Lake City, Minn.—James Scott of this city is planning a series of disk phonograph records for use at funerals in remote places. The records will contain a funeral oration, a song by a quartet and a prayer.

Various types of records are planned. According to Scott, a Presbyterian will have a strong Presbyterian program. Baptists will have characteristic sermons.

If a strong eulogy is desired it will be forthcoming. The entire program will not cost more than $1.

Deed Blown Ninety Miles.

Pocahontas, Ark.—A deed of trust, the property of S. D. Wright of Judsonia, which disappeared during the tornado there last month, has been found at Maynard, ninety miles from Judsonia.

TIME TO DUCK?

The statement that a prominent life insurance official is looking over large corporations who contemplate the addition of group insurance "for the benefit of their employees" is interesting, to say the least. When a large insurance company and a large corporation get together to hatch up schemes for the benefit of the employees of the corporation it is time for all honest men to seek shelter. Just how far this movement will go remains to be seen. We will predict, however, that it will not be long lived. Sooner or later the wage earners who become involved in it will decide that they had rather have a piece of bread and butter right now than roast turkey in heaven.—C. L. Blaine.

MINERS RETURN TO WORK.

Workers In Pittsburgh District to Have Grievances Considered.

About 32,000 mine workers in the Pittsburgh district have gone back to work as a result of an order received by President Van Bittner of District No. 5, United Mine Workers of America, from John P. White, president of the United Mine Workers of America.

The order, which came in the form of a letter, advises the mine workers of District No. 5 of the action taken in the appeal of the special convention of District No. 5 regarding the objections to the tentative agreement entered into by the Pittsburgh Coal Operators' association and the representatives of District No. 5. The action taken in the special convention is as follows:

"First.—The international executive board decided that the appeal of the special convention of District No. 5 be referred to a special committee of international executive board members with full authority to visit Pittsburgh, work out a solution of the question if possible on a basis that will be reasonably satisfactory and with full authority to act in the matter.

"Second.—That it is the sense of this board that the Pittsburgh miners return to work under the tentative agreement, with the understanding that if any changes are made that they be retroactive to the date of resumption of work—that is, if any changes are made in the tentative agreement that has been signed by the district officials that they be retroactive to the resumption of operations of the mines."

The committee of international board members promises to visit Pittsburgh immediately and to proceed as quickly as possible to the consideration of the wage scale in the Pittsburgh district.

COMPENSATION RULING.

Supreme Court of New Jersey Gives Pay For Slain Man.

The New Jersey supreme court has handed down an important opinion in confirming the decision of Judge William M. Seufert of the Bergen county courts in the suit of Mrs. Louis R. Walters of Ridgefield Park against the American Paper company of Bogota, in which the plaintiff sought to recover compensation under the workmen's compensation law.

On Christmas eve, 1914, Walters, who was a night watchman in the paper mill of the defendant company, was murdered by another employee of the plant. The company insisted it was responsible only in a case of accidental death. Judge Seufert ruled that the law must be construed from the employee's viewpoint and that as Walter's death resulted from something he had not expected or designed it was due to accident, and he allowed Mrs. Walters the usual amount provided by law. Then the paper company appealed.

AUTO SHOW FOR THE COUNTY FAIR

Mr. C. I. Kingsbury and H. Putnam Allen are completing plans for what should be one of the most successful county fairs ever held by the Fair Society. The week of August 15th has been selected and many new events will take place, among which will be an automobile show. This will mean an innovation in connection with county fairs. The fact that this is the first time that auto displays have been held makes the various dealers in this vicinity hustle for space at the exhibit.

The race program will be even more interesting than heretofore and liberal prizes will be given and good races assured.

Thursday, August 17th, is set aside as Governor's day and an invitation has been extended to Governor Charles S. Whitman to be present.

VERY FEW APPLICANTS FIT FOR ENLISTMENT

Out of 210 men who applied for enlistment in the United States army in this district during the month of July only forty-one were accepted, according to the report of the chief recruiting officer at Syracuse. This is the same number of men as were accepted during June, but there were thirty-seven less applicants during the past month than the one previous.

This district covers all the recruiting stations in Syracuse, Utica, Watertown and other places.

GOOD MORNING, JUDGE.

John Perkins was arraigned this morning in city court for public intoxication. John pleaded guilty, but it was claimed by the Hulett and Taft paint store that John manipulated a can of paint during his soiree and that he had started on a tour to paint the town grey, instead of red.

John was forced to admit that he had barrowed the paint and after a heart to heart talk with the judge, Perkins was given a six months' sentence, but was placed under the guidance of Chief Dyer, the sentence to be suspended until his next appearance in court.

CROWN PRINCE FIGHTS RENEWED OFFENSIVE NEAR VERDUN'S FORTS

By H. L. Keen
United Press Correspondent

London—Fighting around Verdun today took the center of interest in the daily war office reports. Frank admission was made in the Berlin official statement that French attack at three points again engaging the German line around the fortress city, has been successful.

From the Berlin and Paris War Office reports it is apparent that the French activity in this sector almost partook of a general offensive movement against the German army of the Crown Prince.

Berlin admits that French troops yesterday gained a footing on Tupper ridge, just below Bucherville, on the Meuse, at the northern point of the German encircling attempts. The same success of a French drive southwest of Fleury was admitted. There was apparently a slight lull in the fighting along the Anglo-German fronts. General Haig early this morning merely reporting artillery firing and stated that the British were consolidating their positions.

WICKS MEN TO MEET IN OSWEGO

Farmers Will Get Last Chance to Air Grievances, of Which They Have Many Just Ones

The Wicks Investigating committee, which has been probing dairying conditions throughout the state, will hold a meeting in the municipal building in Oswego tomorrow. This meeting will be the last of a series of sessions in Central New York. Starting Monday the committee sits at Utica and on following days at Rome, Oneida, Syracuse and Oswego.

The investigators have questioned farmers about prices they are getting from the distributors for milk and cream and have, in the past few weeks, unearthed many startling facts. It is said that some of the farmers have been running their dairies at a loss and that when new contracts are made they will insist upon at least a twenty-five per cent. increase in the price they are receiving. On the other hand the distributors have testified that they are taking but a small profit and then if the farmers raise the price they will in turn be forced to raise the price on consumers.

The hearing in Oswego will be presided over by Senator Charles W. Wicks with Judge George W. Ward, as counsel for the committee to do the questioning.

The committee plans to carry the investigation into every county of the state before going to New York city where much time will be spent in an investigation of the affairs of some of the larger milk combines. The committee numbers nine members, five assemblymen and four senators.

Farmers who have testified in other cities before the committee have declared that the cost of labor has gone up to such a point that in many cases they are not making any more and, in some cases not as much, as their hired men. Others reported that they were about breaking even on their dairies and others claimed they were losing money.

In some quarters it is said that the farmers will refuse to sell their milk at all when the present contract runs out, unless they get a higher price from the distributors. They point to the fact that the milk producers around Chicago, a few months ago, won a similar strike and they do not see any reason why they should not adopt the same tactics.

NO CHANGES IN THE DISTRICTS

There will be no changes in northern New York's Assembly and Senate districts, at least until after the next election and after the next regular session of the Legislature.

This became certain today, when Governor Whitman announced that he would not call a special session of the legislature to remedy the defects in the reapportionment act uncovered by the Court of Appeals. The old line will therefore have to be followed in the coming election.

Republican leaders had tried to get the Governor to call a special session, saying it was advisable. They received but little encouragement, however, and were told that the Governor's views on the subject were unchanged.

The only other excuse for the calling of a special session of the legislature was the lack of funds to take care of the votes of the soldiers now at the border. Attorney General Woodbury has held that an "imperfect state of war" exists and thus the constitution can be complied with. Inquiry at Albany has disclosed the fact that there is sufficient funds on hand to pay the extra expense of taking the votes of the National Guardsmen.

The uj-state Republicans desired the special session of the legislature to remedy the defects in the reapportionment act, because many party petitions had already been placed in circulation. Senator Henry Walters, of Syracuse was one of these. All of his petitions were withdrawn after the court of appeals held that the re-apportionment act was not legal.

British Liner Sunk By German Torpedo

(By United Press)

London—The liner, Britanic, owned by W. H. Cockerline & Co., has been sunk, it was announced to-day. The Britanic was unarmed.

The Britanic was a steel screw vessel of 3,487 tons, built in 1904. As the British press bureau confines all announcements as to loss of steamers to the mere announcement of their sunk, whether by a mine or torpedo, it may be assumed that she was torpedoed, in view of the information obtainable.

WORKMEN OF ALL KINDS FIND QUICK SERVICE

Demands for skilled and unskilled labor throughout the state has never been in as great demand as at the present time, according to reports from every section of the state.

The greater demand at the present time is for the unskilled man, farm hands, laborers and for help in hotels and restaurants, so the state employment bureau heads declare.

The call for unskilled and semi-skilled machine workers is less, although first class machinists are still in great demand. The call for hotel help and the shortage of domestics is as great as ever.

Calls for help from farmers all over the state are being heard, but it has been impossible to fill many of them. Many up-state cities have sent representatives to New York city to go to Ellis Island and get immigrants, but now this source has also been exhausted.

LAST DAY OF CONTEST CLOSES AT 6 O'CLOCK

The Evening Times Wil d Animal Prize Contest.

To the Wild Animal Editor:

I hereby certify I am not over 15 years of age and I submit

.... names of wild animals in your prize contest for free tickets to the Al. G. Barnes Big Four Ring Wild Animal Circus exhibiting in Fulton on Saturday, August 5th.

Name ....

Address ....

(Pin one of these coupons on your list)

At six o'clock to-night the contest will close in the Wild Animal Contest and thirty-five boys and girls will be made happy by being presented with free admission to the Al. G. Barnes Circus, which shows here Saturday.

These children will get to see that most wonderful of all animal aggregations in which more than 1,000 wild and ferocious beasts have been trained by Mr. Barnes and his assistants to perform remarkable feats of riding, diving, juggling, dancing, marching, poising, trapeze work, fire-juggling and other acts.

We are all sorry we could not give more prizes. Some amazing new animals were brought to light and now one of the greatest pleasures is to come.

EVERY PRIZE WINNER MUST BE AT THE EVENING TIMES OFFICE AT 9:00 O'CLOCK SATURDAY MORNING, at which time AL. G. BARNES, the world's greatest animal scientist and trainer, and owner of the Big Barnes shows, will meet the children, present them with their prizes and shake hands with them.

Now, prize winners, be prompt so as not to keep Mr. Barnes waiting if you want to see him. He is a busy man, but he loves children and he wants to see the little folks who have written so much about his pets. And the Times is glad it was able to help some of the little ones see this marvelous collection or performing animals. The Barnes show is a truly great circus.

Thrilling wild animals acts are presented by Miss Pearl Hamilton, who appears with a large number of leopards, jaguars and pumas—a mixed group and one of the hardest to control.

A large herd of elephants, especially well trained, are put through many interesting exercises. Camels, seals and sea lions, zebras, kangaroos, hyenas, dogs, monkeys, sacred cattle, ponies and horses to the number of several hundred are a part of the Barnes animal acting troupe.

Performances are given at 2 and 8 p. m., and the new, glittering six-band parade at 10:30 a. m.

Doors open 1 and 7 p. m. Free High-dive thrill at grounds, 1 p. m.

The names of all prize winners will be announced in The Times to-morrow evening. Watch for them and if your name is in the list be at The Times office Saturday morning at nine o'clock and receive your ticket free.

GEORGE B. PALMER

SIR ROGER CASEMENT'S LAST WORDS WERE, "I DIE FOR MY COUNTRY"

(By United Press)

London—Sir Roger Casement paid the penalty for treason today with his life. He was hung at Peutonville prison at 9:07 a. m., to-day. Ten minutes later his body was cut down, life being pronounced extinct.

The Irish leader's last words, spoken while he waited fearlessly for the drop to be sprung, were: "I die for my country."

It was said that he went calmly to his death led by a Catholic priest, who ministered to him when he retired last night for the last time at 10:30 o'clock, and when he arose early to-day.

The Irish leader has only recently been converted to Catholocism. Several of the Irish in the crowd outside of the jail fell on their knees and prayed fervently, during the tolling of the bell, which announced Casement's death. On the other hand, there were a few in the loges, men and women, who waved handkerchiefs. Instead of a silken cord an ordinary hempen rope was used to strangle the Irish leader.

Germans Hold Front Against Heavy Charges

(By United Press)

Berlin—Both British and French attacks on the western fronts yesterday failed, according to to-day's war office statement.

Strong English attacks on the Albert-Bapaume road, east of the Trones forest, broke down, it was asserted. French advances near Barleaux and Estrays were repulsed.

Paris—Material progress south of Fleury was reported in today's comminuque detail of French operations. Pressing their advantage French troops advanced to a point near yesterday's station. Seven hundred prisoners were captured, making a total of 10,100 captured on the right bank of the Meuse.

MAYORS' CONFERENCE FAILS; TIEUP CERTAIN

(By United Press)

New York—A tieup of 291 operatives on 450 miles of tracks on New York city railways, within twenty-four hours seemed certain at noon today, when the conference called by Mayor Mitchel and railroad company representatives failed to reach an agreement. Eight thousand men will be affected. Such an addition on lines on which strikes are already declared will bring the number of miles affected up to 1,010; cars tied up, 2,148, and total number of men, 15,000.

S., L. S. & N. BONDS ARE CALLED IN

September 5 has been decided upon as the last day upon which deposits of bonds with the bondholders' protective committee of the Syracuse, Lake Shore and Northern can be made, according to a letter the committee is sending out to bondholders. The letter says that $1,900,000 of the total face value of $2,500,000 worth of the company's bonds have been deposited with the committee.

Unless bondholders who have not turned their holdings do so before that date they will be entitled to only their proportionate share of what is realized from the sale of the railroad properties now in receivership. The committee asks that its hands be strengthened, so that when the foreclosure sale is forced by the first mortgage interests, a bid to the face value of the issue can be entered, and the full protection of the bondholders assured.

GAME WARDENS' MEW UNIFORMS

In the event that you should happen to come across a game warden, attired in a uniform constructed along the same lines and something of the same color as those worn by the soldiers at the Mexican border, it will not be necessary to inquire whether he has enlisted in the National Guard. He has not. Neither has he joined the Boy Scouts nor the Young Pioneers, nor the Uniformed Rank of the Hawks of America. He is still the fish and game warden, working at the same old job of keeping an eye out for violations of the conservation laws.

The change in raiment is because of a state order that all game wardens in the future shall be uniformed. This plan has been put into operation by the state officials, so it is believed that when a hunter or fisherman is approached in the field by a protector he may know that he is talking to a game protector. A recent case was cited to show where a hunter had shot and killed a game protector because he did not know that he was a state official. He claimed self defense and was acquitted.

WILL THE MERCHANTS STAND FOR IT?

There were some out of town representatives who tried to flim flam the Fulton Evening Times into going into a purported dollar day sale for the benefit of stimulating the patronage of papers of another city—and incidently, to pour dollars into their coffer by local merchants. How any self respecting newspaper could enter into a combination with foreign papers to take advertising away from Fulton is beyond our comprehension, as much so as how any merchant thinks he can afford to assist in paying expenses of an out-of-town paper to go into the homes of Fulton people to draw trade away from this city to foreign places. The merchants of Fulton are certainly not looking for any great rush of business from the citizens of Syracuse and we hardly think it profitable or necessary for them to go to Syracuse, New York, or some other city to inaugurate any kind of a sale for the people of Fulton. The trade-at-home spirit must predominate with the business man as well as with the customer if he wishes to

"WATCH FULTON GROW"

The fellow, who goes to a summer resort and puts in all his time in a close room playing poker, doesn't really need a vacation. He needs a guardian.

Many a man has gone to the city expecting to figure upon the first page of a newspaper, only to end up with it in the want column.

Formerly the farm hand had to milk the cows, but now that is not so important as ability to keep the automobile in repair.

If all of us got as rich as we expected to in our youth, there wouldn't be anybody left to do the work.

If you are not benefitted by a trip to the country, it is your fault, not the country's.

The clock should have nothing to do with your appetite.

THIS AGE OF HURRY

A great fault in nearly all lines of labor in this day is lack of thoroughness. We do things only for the moment. Men think they are too busy to stop to eat or sleep. Hurrying through one task in order to take up another one without waiting to give the job they have in hand proper consideration.

We all mean to do something great—to build up something permanent—but we put it off till a more favorable time, and to most of us that time never comes.

In our houses and our furniture one can read the character of the age. We prefer the cheap little Queen Anne cottage to the tough old houses that our forefathers built. We reck nothing of posterity. Our philosophy is expressed in the bull of Sir John Roche, "D—— posterity; what has posterity done for us?"

We reason that if our houses decay rapidly and our furniture soon falls to pieces, the demand increases and trade improves. What would become of carpenters and joiners if things never wore out?

Two hundred years ago when a man built a house he built it to last until the end of time. He sank the foundations deep; he used solid and durable woods if he did not use stone; he spared no pains to make the structure permanent.

His furniture was built with the same solidity. The chairs might be stiff and clumsy, but they wore well. During 200 years they have rendered people uncomofortable, and they still are serviceable.

Is the change for the cheaper and shoddy in our homes not only an indication of, but a constant innuence for less careful work along all lines of endeavor? Are we not disregarding thoroughness in our hurry to accomplish much?

The Prohibition National convention reaches out in all directions and as the Register says: "The scheme of the party leaders appears to be to unite the Progressives, Prohibitionists, advocates of equal suffrage, and all others who may be dissatisfied with the two old parties. The scheme is impractical, of course, but if it could be worked out the new third party would prove an important factor in every close election."

American Needs Mobilization of the Spirit to Compete With Purified Europe

By Dr. JOHN H. FINLEY, President of University of State of New York

ALL those who have watched with seeing eyes and understanding minds the sublime, though terrible, drama enacted in Europe have reported not that nations are being decimated or destroyed, but that new and greater nations are being born. Nation after nation rises to unexempled heights of self sacrifice, arduous toil, simple living and uncomplaining dying. THE SPIRITUAL AS WELL AS THE MATERIAL LIFE OF THE NATIONS AT WAR IS BEING TRANSMUTED INTO SOMETHING DIFFERENT AND MORE PRECIOUS.

The spirit which has walked through this hell in Europe is the guide to the superstate which our own country is even now so anxiously seeking, for it is indeed searching for the way of salvation, from its inefficiencies of government, from its multiform public and private wastes, from its class materialism, from its class hatreds, from its ignorances and its intemperances.

WE SHALL HAVE AS A PEOPLE TO COMPETE WHEN THIS WAR IS OVER WITH PEOPLE WHO HAVE BEEN PURIFIED AS BY FIRE.

And if we are to rise to the struggle of that exalted competition we must take lessons of their "mobilization" of spirit, which has attended the mobilization of armies. Let us "mobilize," for defense first of that through which we can alone express the ideals of the new world, the nation itself, but beyond that, beyond the mere preservation and perpetuation of its life, mobilize for the assurance of the nobility of that life which we are prepared to defend.

New York Evening Post:

Speakers at the convention of the Illinois shoe dealers uttered an interesting prophecy:

Unless the world develops a substitute for leather within two years America will be the next wooden shoe nation.

It is only 10 centuries ago—yesterday in the minds of those who view time broadly—that all the toilers of civilization wore wooden shoes. Many of Europe's most honest feet wear them now. If we come to wooden shoes there should be no shame about it. Perhaps the change, instead of bringing harm, would bring goodness and joy.

Make everybody wear wooden shoes and the porch climber would join the roc and the dodo or else the Young Men's Christian Association. The efficiency expert, able no longer to slip noiselessly about your business, would be more occupationless than Othello. The pussyfooter could annoy us no more with his sickening stealth. Men would come home earlier of nights, soberly clanking oak upon pine as they mounted the front stoop. Clog dancing would be restored to its proper place in the arts. All the world would click xylophonic tune. Mahongany shoes, made from old pianos, would take us out on Sunday. The ladies would have their number 3's enameled in pink.

But what would become of Hon. Bill Stone, of Missouri?

Utica Herald-Dispatch:

Among the freak laws of the State of Washington is one providing for second choice voting at elections. In King County there are 200 voting machines, and the Tacoma Ledger expresses well grounded fear that they will become unworkable because of the multiplicity of names they must display under the law. If, for instance, there are four candidates for any office, since a voter must give his first choice to one and his second to one of the remaining three, the machine must have 12 name cards, each with two names. Each candidate's name would be on the same card with each of the other three candidates, three times as first choice and three times as second. In the first Congressional district, which includes King County, there are nine candidates for the Republican nomination, consequently there will be 72 combinations of names and 72 name-plates.

As the result of this particular freak legislation the use of voting machines would seem to be impossible, but the State of Washington must have Reform, no matter what may be the consequences.

KILLING TIME.

It Went a Little Too Far and Then the Victim Called a Halt.

On the immense sheep ranches in Australia each of the boundary riders has a district to look after, in which he has to keep the wire fences in repair and see that the sheep come to no harm. It is a hard, lonely life, in which the rider rarely sees another human being. Many of the men have strange ways of keeping count of the days.

One rider, who had lived for thirty years in the back country, used two jam tins and seven pebbles. One tin was marked "This Week," and the other "Last Week." On Sunday morning he was accustomed to take a pebble out of "Last Week" and drop it into "This Week." That operation he repeated every morning until "This Week" had used up the seven. They were then returned to "Last Week," on each day, and the old fellow knew when another week had passed.

Another rider named Eagan tried several plans to keep count of the days, but always failed. At last he hit on a novel and attractive method. He made a big damper—the name the Australians give to a cake of flour and water with a seasoning of salt—on Sunday and marked it into seven parts. Each section was a day's allowance, and the slices that remained told him the number of days that must pass before Sunday came again.

For several weeks this method never failed him. Unfortunately, one Tuesday he fell in with a fellow rider who was very hungry. Eagan stinted himself in order that the ravenous one might be satisfied with that day's section of the damper. But it was no use. The host saw the knife cut the boundary line and the hungry rider carve into the almanac. He could stand it no longer.

"Stop, now, stop!" he yelled, as he clutched the remains of the damper and glared at his visitor. "There," he continued, "you've eaten Tuesday and you've eaten Wednesday, and now you want to slice the best of the mornin' off Thursday! Not if I can stop it, sonny! I won't be knowing the day of the week!"—Youth's Companion.

Confess if they have not henpeck'd you all!

Charles II., the Merrie Monarch, once offered a prize among his courtiers for a rime to porringer. The award was given to a certain marriage announcement:

The Duke of York a daughter had;
He gave the Prince of Orange her,
So now your majesty will see
I've found a rime for porringer.

But undoubtedly Robert Browning took the kettle, the biscuit and the [illegible] for a rime when he wrote, quite seriously:

You trample our beds of ranunculus,
And you "Tommy-make-room-for-your-uncle" us.

That, as the profane would say, "puts the tin hat on!"—Pearson's.

A certain congressman sent free seeds to a constituent in a franked envelope, on the corner of which were the usual words "Penalty for private use, $300." A few days later he received a letter which read:

"I don't know what to do about those garden seeds you sent me. I notice it is $300 fine for private use. I don't want to use them for the public. I want to plant them in my private garden. I can't afford to pay $300 for the privilege. Won't you see if you can't fix it so I can use them privately? I am a law abiding citizen and do not want to commit any crime."—Christian Register.

A CLOSELY GUARDED CLOCK.

It Is the Most Accurate Timekeeper Man Has Devised.

In the Case School of Applied Science in Cleveland there is a clock that holds the world's record for accurate timekeeping. Over a period of several months it showed a variation of only eight-thousandths of a second a day, which in a year's time would be less than three seconds.

Ship chronometers, which are the most accurate time measuring instruments in general use, cannot keep true time within less than three to five seconds a month. Marine observations are absolutely dependent on accurate timepieces, but ship's officers have to be satisfied if they can adjust their chronometers so that they will either gain or lose a certain amount each day. Then they add or subtract and get absolutely correct time. In plotting records of a ship's timepiece its desirability is judged by a line that ascends or descends with absolute regularity. If the line rises and falls the instrument is worthless.

The Case clock stands on a stone pier independent of the building that extends sixteen feet to a natural shale foundation. It is in a small room surrounded by two other rooms, all built with brick walls. Gas stoves heat the outer rooms, and electric contact thermometers regulate the temperature. The gas stove flame automatically rises or falls with the variation in the outside air temperature. Thus on warm days in August the flame in the gas stove is very low, while in below zero January it burns at its brightest. In the clock room itself the temperature is adjusted by an ordinary sixteen candle power incandescent lamp that is flashed on and off by another electric contact thermometer. The school strictly enforces the rule that there must never be more than two people in this inner room at one time.

The clock, which stands five feet high, has three separate dials that register the hours, minutes and seconds. It is inclosed in an airtight glass jar, inside of which are delicate instruments for measuring temperature, atmospheric pressure and moisture. A small amount of chloride of lime, which is an efficient desiccating material, is kept always in the jar to absorb the moisture.

By the aid of a set of dry batteries the clock automatically winds itself every seven minutes. The movement is adjusted slow or fast by pumping air in or out of the glass container. Observations are made from the outside through double glass windows through the separating walls and by means of a small electric lamp placed over the dials.

Not only can this wonderful piece of clock mechanism be adjusted to show less than a three second annual variation, but it is also possible to make electric connections with other similar clocks elsewhere. With this as a master clock the others can be made to keep the same accurate time.—Youth's Companion.

White Men See South American Race For First Time.

CLOTHING PUZZLES THEM.

Leader of Philadelphia University Museum Expedition Returns With Enormous Ethnological, Archaeological and Other Collections.

Philadelphia.—After an absence of three years Dr. William C. Farabee, leader of the University museum, this city, has returned from a South American expedition, having accomplished all and more than he expected.

Dr. Farabee brings with him enormous ethnological, archaeological and other collections for the museum, and on his journey took some hundreds of photographs, including many of the people and places never before visited by white men.

When the party arrived at Dadanawa they continued on foot south to the Cuduwine river, thence by canoe down this river and up the Essequibo to its source, passing on the way some villages of the Tarunias. Crossing into Brazilian territory again, they continued south almost to the equator, then east and north on foot and by bark canoe on numerous head streams of the Trombetas, and finally passed over the divide of the Courantyne and descended that river to its mouth. En route several tribes and remnants of tribes were visited and studied, some of whom were never before seen by white men and were unacquainted with matches, guns, clothing, etc. From the vocabularies it seems that dialects of both the Carib and the Arawak languages are spoken in this region. Wars have almost annihilated some of the tribes. The tribes were found to be courteous and gracious savages, who believe themselves men of peace and hunt heads of enemies only for honor.

This trip was interesting also because it located for the first time astronomically the southern boundary of Guiana.

USE "GOULASH GUNS" HERE.

Citizen Marines at Lansdowne (Pa.) Camp Being Fed by This Means.

Philadelphia.—The famous "goulash guns" which, second only to the giant howitzers have worked ceaseless wonders in the European war, are being used to feed citizen marines on hikes from their training camp at Lansdowne, Pa., which is now in operation.

The marine corps training seemingly carries a strong appeal to young men who cannot make up their minds whether to train for land or sea. All United States marines are trained for both shore and sea duty, and the citizen volunteers at Lansdowne will also be trained for the double service.

OPERATION ON SKULL REFORMS PRISONER

Convict's Change Causes Jersey Pardon Board to Grant Him Freedom. Once Rebellious, Now Gentle.

Trenton, N. J.—The New Jersey court of pardons announced recently that at its meeting a long list of applications from convicts for pardon and parole had been considered.

A noteworthy case for parole acted upon favorably was that of James Szikely, a Hungarian, sentenced to serve thirty years in state prison for killing a fellow countryman in Warren county. The murder was particularly brutal. Szikely manifested morose tendencies in prison and complained continually of pains in his head. Dr. Martin W. Redden, a surgeon of Trenton, and the visiting prison physician, decided to operate on the prisoner's skull. For a time after the operation the man hovered between life and death, but his condition improved and he was restored to his faculties. From a sullen, rebellious prisoner he became a willing, eager and kindly worker. He could remember nothing whatever about the crime for which he had been given a long sentence. The operation established a precedent in the medical world.

MISS MAY JONES SITS IN GOVERNOR'S CHAIR

Acts as North Carolina Executive While Governor Craig is Detained From Capital.

Raleigh, N. C.—While Governor Craig was isolated at Asheville on account of the floods that put out of commission train service between that part of the state and this, Miss May Jones, his private secretary, performed the duties of chief executive.

She was free to exercise all powers of the office except those constitutionally invested in the governor. Her only assistant was Miss Mamie C. Turner, the newly appointed executive secretary, who has assumed her duties, succeeding Joseph J. Mackay, Jr., who resigned.

This is perhaps the only governor's office in the United States where all its employees are women. During the day Miss Jones announced the appointment of a hundred delegates who are to represent North Carolina officially at four gatherings, including the deeper waterways convention and the national negro educational conference. She also announced that she had issued extradition papers for an alleged bigamist wanted in Georgia and held in this state.

HOUSE HAS MELON FEAST.

Many Washington Notables Turn Out For Adamson's Party.

Washington.—Forty Georgia watermelons were cut in the rooms of the house committee on interstate and foreign commerce recently, and Chairman Adamson contributed to an early adjournment of the lower body when he announced on the floor that all members were invited to attend the cutting.

Secretary McAdoo, Assistant Secretary Newton, First Assistant Postmaster General Roper, Speaker Clark and a hundred members of the house and members of the press gallery were on hand. As the last melon was cut Representative James R. Mann proposed three cheers and a tiger for Charley Adamson and the Georgia watermelon. Two score women, the wives of house members, joined in the cheering.

More Important to Him.

A certain contractor who was noted for his meanness undertook the widening of a railway. During the progress of the work news reached him of a serious landslip. Hastening to the spot he found that a huge mass of the embankment had fallen into a newly formed cutting, and all was confusion.

The cry went up, "Count the men; count the men!"

"Count the men be hanged!" cried the thrifty contractor. "Count the wheelbarrows!"—London Answers.

OUR VEGETABLES.

Suggestions About How to Store the Surplus.

CELERY VINEGAR RECIPE.

A Scientist Tells Us How to Dry Common Rootlets So That They Last a Year and Taste Like Fresh Ones. Economy the Keynote.

Vegetables are a fruitful source of wastage. Most housewives look after cold vegetables when they have been cooked, but the care of them before cooking is quite a different matter. Small scraps of vegetables are thrown away; sprays of sweet herbs wither and are spoiled; carrots and turnips shrivel and grow moldy in the vegetable basket. It is difficult to purchase the exact quantity required, but this is no reason why the surplus should be thrown away or be allowed to decay. You may save it and also store up your home grown vegetables for winter use.

All surplus carrots, turnips and parsnips should be washed, scraped and cut into thin slice or cubes. Sprinkle the slices over a large dish, taking care that they are spread thinly. When the oven is empty after dinner slip the dish into it, leave the oven door open and the vegetables will dry slowly. The heat must not be strong enough to color them at all. Stir the vegetables every hour, and as the quantity on the dish shrinks add a few more slices, but do not allow the fresh pieces to touch the half dried ones. So soon as the slices dry they must be removed from the dish, allowed to cool and then be packed away in airtight tins.

These dried vegetables, if carefully prepared and stored, will last for a year or more, and will come in usefully when fresh vegetables are scarce or difficult to procure. They always are ready for soups and stews or can be boiled in the usual way.

Before boiling they should be soaked for a few hours unless you want to use them in soups or stews which will be boiled for a long time, when there is no need to soak them beforehand. If a few extra bunches of carrots are bought when these vegetables are cheap and plentiful, a good supply can be made to last through the winter.

Celery tops, roots and the outside stalks are invariably thrown away, yet these make delicious flavorings for soups and stews and dry just as successfully as carrots. Celery vinegar is delicious for salads. Take celery roots and wash them very carefully, but do not peel off the skin. Cut them into pieces and pass through a mincer. Put the minced root into a large, wide mouthed bottle, pour over it a quart of hot vinegar and add six small chillies; add any celery roots there may be from time to time, and make the vinegar very hot between each addition of celery. Leave for six weeks, then strain the whole through a fine siev and bottle for future use.

Original Era of Good Feeling.

The phrase applied to the administration of James Monroe, "the era of good feeling," first appeared in a Boston newspaper, the Columbian Sentinel of July 10, 1817. From that time until the present hour the two administrations of Monroe—a period of eight years, 1817 to 1825—are referred to in the terms of the newspaper paragraph which so aptly expressed the public sentiment of the day.

RETURNS AFTER THIRTY YEARS

Sailor Had Been In Almost Every Port, and Parents Didn't Know Him.

Townsend, Del.—Mourned as dead for thirty years, David Guessferd returned to the home of his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Guessferd, who live on a farm near here.

When sixteen years old young Guessferd went away on a boat plying between Smyrna and Philadelphia as a sailor. He was anxious to see more of the country, so obtained a berth as a sailor on a vessel plying between New York and the East Indies, and that was the last heard of him.

He has been in practically every port in the world and on one occasion was wrecked in midocean and he and the captain of his vessel were the only survivors. He is said to have accumulated considerable money and will remain with his parents. They did not know him.

DRAINED ALL THE LAND.

Water Over Low Tract Disappeared When Ditch Is Dug.

Rockport, Mo.—The outlet ditch that drains Lake Nishnabotna at Langdon is the talk of the whole Missouri bottom. The effects have been almost miraculous.

It seems that when the ditch drained the Nishna, water standing all over the bottom, whether it had a connection with the ditch or not, disappeared, often in the night, leaving the ground fit for cultivation within a few days.

The Nishnabotna river has been standing full of water for about a year, and as the water level was almost as high as the great body of surrounding land, the water soaked through and saturated it all.

MOTORCAR "DEADLY WEAPON"

Judge Says It Is Used For Offensive and Defensive Operations.

Portland, Ore.—That a motorcar under certain conditions is a dangerous weapon was held by Judge Robert Morrow in the circuit court. The case was that of C. A. Warriner, accused of assault with a dangerous weapon in having with his motorcar ridden down a motorcycle on the Columbia highway which carried H. H. Beckman and his wife. Mrs. Beckman was badly injured.

Judge Morrow fortified his decision with citations from American precedents and observations on European battlefields, where, he said, the motorcar was employed as a weapon of offense and defense.

QUACKS, AS USUAL TAKE ADVANTAGE OF EPDIDEMIC

Warnings have been sent to health officials in all states by the Department of Agriculture at Washington against unscrupulous persons selling so called "cures" or remedies, for infantile paralysis. Special instructions have been issued to the food and drug inspectors to watch closely all shipments of medicines, the makers of which claim that it will cure or alleviate this disease, for which at the present time there is not any medicinal cure.

The officials also warn the public that any preparation being offered for sale as being effective for the treatment of infantile paralysis should be looked upon with extreme suspicion. Inspectors have been ordered to collect samples of all medicines for which such claims are made. Makers of such fraudulent medicines will be vigorously prosecuted whenever the evidence warrants such action. So called remedies for infantile paralysis offered for import into this country will be denied entry.

WESTERN LIQUOR WAR BOON TO NEWSPAPERS

Sioux Falls, S. D.—The campaign to drive liquor from the state of South Dakota by the adoption at the next general election of a prohibition amendment to the state consitution promises to be a great boon to newspapers. Two great funds are being raised by the saloon and anti-saloon forces to be used for advertising purposes. The South Dakota Anti-Saloon league expects to have between $100.000 to $125.000, most of which will be used in buying space in the various newspapers and periodicals throughout the state. The liquor men also are as usual liberally supplied with funds and already have begun their advertising campaign.

PEOPLE REAL CENSORS SAYS PROF. GIDDINGS

Boston—"Human nature is, as a whole, pretty sound, and when it is appealed to, without prejudice or pay, the solution of the problem for cleaner and better pictures has been reached," said Prof. Franklin Henry Giddings, head of the department of sociology and history of civilization, in time spared from his lectures at Columbia University to discuss such movements for better pictures, according to a communication from the Paramount Picture Corporation. Professor Giddings as a member of the American Academy of Political and Social Science, has made a study of the motion picture in relation to its sociological value as an amusement.

"Sex appeal upon the stage has always been attractive commercially to certain motion picture producers, short-sighted enough to believe in quick rather than continuous profits. It is a method of theme-choosing appealing particularly to the incompetent. Of course, that does not mean every creator of a story based upon the sex themes is incompetent. Such would be an absurdity. There are however, so many cheap imitators of the masters—and only masters can deal with such a subject—that the motion picture industry is, I understand, becoming glutted with pictures of an extremely sensational nature. The producers of these . . . ignorant of the art of the drama, attempt to secure big sensations by luridness of the subject matter, rather than by the vital values of the play. After all the play is the thing. Of course, such incompetents are not expected to see the handwriting on the wall. The American public does not want immoral pictures. What the American public does insist upon, however, is that unusual situations be handled artistically.

"We are all familiar with the artistic temperament and the artistic spirit. A director either stage or motion picture drama necessarily must deal in effects. He is constantly striving for something which will work upon the imagination. As a result of this, producers frequently do something in their dramas which as spectators they would not relish. The time is approaching when it will not pay to produce immoral pictures. Those who have been prosperous in this respect will find their prosperity at an end."

SUPPORT NEEDED FOR NAVAL BILL

Oswego County members of the National Security League today received letters from the headquarters of the organization asking them to write to members of Congress representing their district to support the Naval Appropriation Bill as amended by the Senate, and now in conference between the two houses.

This action was taken by the League, following reports from Washington, that Representative Claude Kitchin, Chairman Padgett of the House Naval Committee and other "Little Navy" members of the lower body were organizing their forces to insist on the Senate concurring in the bill, somewhat along the lines as it was passed by the House.

The appeal under the caption, "The Real Fight for a Real Navy is Just Beginning," in part is as follows:

"Write today to your congressman urging him to vote for the Senate navy bill. It is the only plan presented for real preparedness. The Army bill does nothing for the country's safety. It nominally authorizes an army of 176,000 men, but the appropriation bill only provides for an increase of 15,000. Let us help real preparedness in the navy while waiting for universal obligatory military training and service."

MRS. FULLER WILL BE BURIED AT CAMBRIDGE

Mrs. Mary C. Fuller, sixty-four, died at the home of her daughter, Mrs. Charles Olmstead, of this city on last evening, at 9:30 o'clock.

She was born in Cambridge, November 29th, 1851, and was married in Cambridge, October 22, 1892 to Lyman I. Fuller, who died in 1905. She left Cambridge on account of ill health in the year 1903 and took up her residence in Palmer, Mass, with her daughter, from whence she came to Fulton in the year 1907. Mrs. Fuller had been an invalid for twenty-five years, for the past year being confined to her home.

She is survived by one sister, Mrs. Arthur B. Averill, of Cambridge, Mass., and one daughter, Mrs. Charles Olmstead.

The funeral will be held tomorrow afternoon at five o'clock; interment will be made in Mt. Auburn Cemetery at Cambridge, Mass. The services will be conducted by the Rev. J. H. Olmstead, of Homer, N. Y.

DR. CONWELL AND MISS PARKER

They Were Chautauqua Features Yesterday, and Won Their Way Into Hearts of Big Audiences.

Withstanding the fact that Miss Effie Baker is now convalescing from a broken ankle, she pleased a large crowd at the Chautauqua tent yesterday afternoon. It was her misfortune a short time ago to fall and in doing so broke her ankle. This did not detain her for a moment, for she has not broken a single engagement, although she is yet handicapped by the requisition of a wheel chair.

Mr. William Durieux also was very entertaining, his work as cellist was of rare technique and delighted the audience.

Last night the lecture given was "Acres of Diamonds" by Dr. Russell H. Conwell one of the foremost American lecturers. It was very interesting and with knowledge of some of Dr. Conwell's past history his lecture is more appreciating. He is at present in his seventy-fifth year and has been lecturing steadily for fifty-five years. This lecture "Acres of Diamonds" has been given more than 5,400 times. At his appearance for the 5,000th time he was presented with a purse of 5,000. There were the governors of eleven states in that congregation. The total aggregate which Dr. Conwell has earned through this lecture will reach well past a million dollars. With this money, Dr. Conwell has educated over 1,600 young men and women.

Cimera's Band is the program for to-day. Mr. Cimera is a Bohemian of great musical ability being at one time a member of Sousa's Band also Ivenes Band, Pryor's Band and has led Kyre's Band the latter, a well known organization of the middle west. Twenty-seven pieces constitute Mr. Cimera's band, which is made up of very good material and will be seen at both afternoon and evening performance.

To-morrow afternoon, Mrs. Rorer, probably the best authority on domestic science of this continent will speak on "Home Advancement." Mrs. Rorer is the author of a cook book which bears her name and she was also the Dean of the Philadelphia School of Domestic Science. Mrs. Rorer for some time has been affiliated with the Ladies' Home Journal.

In the evening Mr. Alton Packard will entertain the audience with his cartoons. Mr. Packard lives up to his reputation of "Rare fun well done."

The Marigold Girls will also sing both afternoon and evening.

A young woman claiming to be a resident of Syracuse, was picked up on the West Side of the river late last night in a weary state of mind. Upon investigation the fact was disclosed that she had indulged in too many mixed beverages. She was escorted to the local institution and appeared for trial this morning. After a period of sound advice from City Judge Wilson, the young lady was sent back to her home, with the understanding that the next appearance would be serious.

EARLY ADVERTISING.

Before and After the Advent of the Printing Press.

Advertising has now become a custom so extensive in its application and of such vital importance that it is difficult to realize that it was ever possible to do any trading without it. Yet before the advent of the printing press and the newspaper there were many hundreds of years when there was no such a thing as advertising as it is known today.

In ancient times merchants in Rome and Athens employed criers to go about the streets shouting out the quality and prices of their goods. Written notices serving as advertisements to call attention to an auction sale or a meeting were displayed on walls only occasionally. In the old days of London shopkeepers' clerks stood in front of their stores and called out their wares to passersby, prefacing their announcements with "What do you lack? What do you lack?"

One of the first newspaper advertisements of which there is authentic record was printed in the Mercurius Politicus, London, in January, 1652. It was a publisher's announcement and read as follows:

"'Irenodia Gratulatoria, an Heroick Poem,' being a congratulatory panegyrick for my Lord General's late return, summing up his successes in an exquisite manner. To be sold by John Holden, in the New Exchange, London. Printed by Tho. Newcourt, 1652."

Here is another example of early London advertising:

"Two men beg to acquaint the public in general that they keep the cleanest barber shop in all London, where the people can have their hair cut for two pence, dressed for three pence and be shaved for one penny. One of these men can bleed and draw teeth very well. He bleeds both in the English and German method and is exceedingly careful."—New York Sun.

BLAMED THE DEMONS.

Story of the Physical Reformation of a City In Korea.

In Pyengyang, a city in Korea, surrounded by a river and resembling a boat in shape, it was believed that if any one should venture to dig a well the water would rush in, sinking the boat and drowning all the city's inhabitants.

Needless to say, no wells were dug. The streams washed the filth of the city down into the river. Then the watermen filled their buckets at the river and sold "drinking water" throughout the city.

Constantly recurring epidemics were the result. But the people did not blame the dirt. They blamed the devils.

It was the duty of every Korean doctor to know the 300 places where the human body could be pierced with a red hot needle without causing death. The needles were from three to twelve inches in length, and the doctor was supposed to know how deep they should be thrust. The purpose of the probing was to let out the devils which caused the disease.

When Christianity came to Korea it brought hygiene and medicine along with it. A hospital or dispensary was not known in Korea until founded by a Christian missionary.

The Japanese government is now splendidly following suit with the establishment of hospitals and medical schools.

Fine waterworks systems have been installed, and the sort of water that gushes from the hydrants in Pyengyang is stated to have reduced the death rate by 70 per cent.

The old boat city of Pyengyang is now underlaid with a network of sewers.—Willard Price in World Outlook.

Facilitating Payment of Bills.

If we were in a business where we sent out bills to customers the first of every month, we should make it a point always to inclose a self addressed envelope for the return remittance. This practice involves small expense to the creditor, and it makes it a little harder for the debtor to find an excuse for laying aside the bill for a few days. We notice in our own small affairs a tendency to pay first the bills whose payment requires the least trouble, and we suppose other people are correspondingly lazy. Paying bills is hard enough work at best, and ought to be made as easy as possible.—Ohio State Journal.

RAILROAD WAGES

Shall they be determined by Industrial Warfare or Federal Inquiry?

To the American Public:

Do you believe in arbitration or industrial warfare?

The train employes on all the railroads have voted whether they will give their leaders authority to tie up the commerce of the country to enforce their demands for a 100 million dollar wage increase.

The railroads are in the public service—your service. This army of employes is in the public service—your service.

You pay for rail transportation 3 billion dollars a year, and 44 cents out of every dollar from you goes to the employes.

On all the Eastern Railroads in 1915, seventy-five per cent of the train employes earned these wages (lowest, highest, and average of all) as shown by the payrolls—

	Passenger Range	Passenger Average	Freight Range	Freight Average	Yard Range	Yard Average
Engineers	$1641 3224	$1931	$1585 2992	$1783	$1303 2178	$1543
Conductors	1553 3004	1831	1552 2901	1642	1145 1991	1315
Firemen	951 1704	1128	933 1762	1109	752 1633	935
Brakemen	957 1707	1141	862 1521	973	834 1635	1085

The average yearly wage payments to all Eastern train employes (including those who worked only part of the year) as shown by the 1915 payrolls were—

	Passenger	Freight	Yard
Engineers	$1796	$1546	$1384
Conductors	1724	1404	1238
Firemen	1033	903	844
Brakemen	1018	858	990

A 100 million dollar wage increase for men in freight and yard service (less than one-fifth of all employes) is equal to a 5 per cent advance in all freight rates.

The managers of the railroads, as trustees for the public, have no right to place this burden on the cost of transportation to you without a clear mandate from a public tribunal speaking for you.

The railroads have proposed the settlement of this controversy either under the existing national arbitration law, or by reference to the Interstate Commerce Commission. This offer has been refused by the employes' representatives.

Shall a nation-wide strike or an investigation under the Government determine this issue?

BETTER TRAFFIC LAWS WANTED

Adoption of a standard traffic code for automobilists throughout all cities of the state is the object of a joint legislative committee of three assemblymen and two senators, which is holding hearings in some sections of the state to ascertain conditions and study traffic laws.

The committee has just ended a hearing at Alexandria Bay and will hold several sessions in Central New York.

The police chiefs of all the cities and the State Automobile Association favor the standardization of traffic laws and it is expected that every public body in the state will soon fall in line.

One of the aims of the committee is to fix a standard on the strength of automobile headlights and eliminate the "dazzlers."

After the committee finishes its hearings a bill will be drafted embodying its recommendations and submitted to the legislature.

MOOSERS MAY HAVE A TICKET

Up-state Democratic and erstwhile Progressive politicians were stirred today by reports from New York, to the effect that the Progressives are going to put a state ticket in the field; that they are going to run Bainbridge Colby for the United States Senate, with Democratic endorsement, and that in return the Democrats will nominate Justice Samuel Seabury for governor and will in return receive the Progressive indorsement.

This plan it is said to have been agreed upon at a meeting of the executive committee of the New York county Progressives a few days ago. Representatives were present from other parts of the state, it is said, and the matter of placing petitions for Justice Seabury in circulation and to put his name on the Progressive primary ballot.

Sentiment at the meeting was unanimous for Seabury, for govrnor, it is declared, but the proposal to name an entire Moose ticket surprised many and did not meet with the heartiest approval.

SENATOR WAGNER'S ACTION SURPRISES DEMOCRATS

Democrats all over the state were surprised at the announcement from Senator Rozert F. Wagner, of New York city, that he was not a gubernatorial candidate. His friends had started an active campaign for him and it has been said in some circles that he was certain of the nomination if he wanted to go out and make a fight for it.

Unless some other candidate with powerful backing enters the field, it is believed now that Justice Seabury will get the nomination. Senator Wagner, it had been said, was his strongest opponent and with the state legislator out of the running it now appears clear running for the jurist.

It is probable that some definite action will be taken by the Democratic leaders when they meet for their "unofficial" state convention at Saratoga. August 11. This date was picked yesterday by the Democratic state committee in session in New York.

GRANT AND MARK TWAIN.

When the Humorist Took the Stump For the General.

The year 1880 was a presidential one. Mark Twain was for General Garfield and made a number of remarkable speeches in his favor. General Grant came to Hartford during the campaign, and Mark Twain was chosen to make the address of welcome. Perhaps no such address of welcome was ever made before. He began:

"I am among those deputed to welcome you to the sincere and cordial hospitalities of Hartford, the city of the historic and revered Charter Oak, of which most of the town is built."

He seemed to be at a loss what to say next, and, leaning over, pretended to whisper to Grant. Then, as if he had been prompted by the great soldier, he straightened up and poured out a fervid eulogy on Grant's victories, adding in an aside as he finished, 'I nearly forgot that part of my speech,' to the roaring delight of his hearers, while Grant himself grimly smiled.

He then spoke of the general being now out of public employment, of how grateful to him his country was, and how it stood ready to reward him "in every conceivable—inexpensive way."

Grant had smiled more than once during the speech, and when this sentence came out at the end his composure broke up altogether, while the throng shouted approval. Clemens made another speech that night at the opera house—a speech long remembered in Hartford as one of the great efforts of his life.

A very warm friendship had grown up between Mark Twain and General Grant. A year earlier, on the famous soldier's return from his trip around the world, a great birthday banquet had been given him in Chicago at which Mark Twain's speech had been the event of the evening. The colonel who long before had chased the young pilot soldier through the Missouri bottoms had become his conquering hero, and Grant's admiration for America's foremost humorist was most hearty.—Albert Bigelow Paine in St. Nicholas.

A "BIT" OF MONEY.

The Use of the Term to Designate a Small Coin Is Very Old.

There is more than one theory as to the origin of the term "two bits" and its multiples of "four bits," etc., as applied to money.

But according to a writer in the New York Sun the use of the word "bit" in the sense of a small coin is very ancient. The "Colonial Records of Pennsylvania" aver that at a council held at Philadelphia "ye 24th of the 8th month, 1683, under the presidency of 'Wm. Penn, Prop. and Gov.'" and in three other parts of the report of said council, the word "bitt" occurs again.

> The Govr. telleth Ch. Pickering & Saml. Buckley of their abuse to ye Govermt in Qeoning of Spanish Bitts and Boston money to the Great Damage and abuse to ye Subjects thereof......
> They confess they have put out some of these new bitts....

But as a matter of fact for whole generations before that time a "bit" or "bitt" was as common a synonym for a small coin in the slang of thieves in England as were the variants "boung," "bung" and "pung" for a purse. In 1607 Thomas Decker said in his "Jests to Make Merie:"

> If they once knew where the bung and bit is—

And further back in 1592 Harman in his "Defence of Coneycatching" said:

> Some would venture all the byte in their bung at dice.

What the real origin of the slangy "bit" is does not appear to be known, but it seems plausible that it is nothing more than the common every day "bit" in the sense of something small.

One of the number, a mathematician, surprised his associates by informing them that their decision meant that one and one-third million years must elapse before they would again be seated in the original order. Two men can sit together only in two different ways, three in six ways, four in twenty-four, five in 120, six in 720, seven in 5,040, eight in 40,320, nine in 362,888, ten in 3,628,800, eleven in 39,916,800 and twelve in 479,100,600.—Buch fur Alle.

Cost of Discovering America.

The discovery of America cost a little more than $7,000, at least so say some documents that were found in the archives of Genoa. These documents give the value of Columbus' fleet as $3,000. The great admiral was paid a salary of $300 a year, the two captains who accompanied him received a salary of $200 each, and the members of the crew were paid at the rate of $2.50 a month each.—American Boy.

VOLNEY MAN GAVE UP EASILY

Watertown—Thomas O'Brien, big, good-natured, and evidently too liberal a farm hand, claiming to hail from Volney Center, Oswego County, but more recently of Gunn's Corners, sauntered into the police office with the sad tale that he had been relieved of his roll of $40. O'Brien displayed his hard calloused hands as evidence that he had worked hard for the $40, while haying on the farms of Charles Williams and Mart Galey near Gunns Corners. He says he came here today and while loitering around lower Court street, he fell in with a crowd.

Shortly after meeting O'Brien, some one caught sight of the roll he displayed, and invited him to buy some beer. With O'Brien as financial secretary, they immediately formed a club and went to the railroad tracks in lower Court street. The pail was immediately filled at a nearby saloon, and O'Brien was enjoying himself, until some one took his roll.

Right here O'Brien moved for an adjournment and he made a fast trip to the city hall. He left with Patrolman Tompkins and it was not long before one Frank Stewart, claiming to hail from Montpelier, Vt., was brought in as a suspect. He was locked up on the charge of being drunk. A search of Stewart's clothing only revealed a part of a one dollar bill, which was hidden in his trouser leg.

NEWS FROM A LOCAL BOY WHO IS AT THE FRONT

A letter was received yesterday from Frank Whitcomb, of the West River road, otherwise known as "Barney," or "Big Six." He states that he is located on the outskirts of the village of Pharr, only five miles from the Rio Grande, and that streets on which his company have been quartered have all been paved and every possible convenience has been installed for their comfort. Meals too, are plentiful and of the best available. Mr. Whitcomb (Barney) says that screen doors and board floors have been added to the tent equipment and much inconvenience has been caused by rattlesnakes, scorpions and other reptiles.

Barney stated that playing foot ball or fighting sharks along the coast never was to be compared with the excitement along the border. His letter stated that a Y. M. C. A. tent has been installed for the benefit of the men in khaki and that Company D is witnessing many thrilling experiences.

HE WHO WROTE IT

The Man Who Penned the Declaration of Independence.

WORK OF TIMOTHY MATLACK.

He Was a Clerk In the Continental Congress When That Immortal Document Was Adopted and Was Also the Finest Writer In the Country.

Who wrote the Declaration of Independence? Thomas Jefferson, of course; every one knows that. But who held the pen and formed the letters on the great piece of parchment that the members of the Continental congress signed? It is one of the largest official papers in existence—one skin of parchment nearly three feet long and more than two feet wide. The writing is nearly twice the normal size and is unusually handsome and clear.

The secretary who was ordered to promulgate the work was Charles Thomson, a man of high character, who had been the principal of a school at New Castle, Del., and an active patriot. The first congress chose him as secretary in 1774, and he held the office until the Continental congress passed out of existence on March 2, 1789. During all those fifteen years it was only on rare occasions that any other hand than his wrote in the journal.

One of the clerks in Thomson's office in 1775 and 1776 was Timothy Matlack, who died at Holmesburg, Pa., in 1829, when he was ninety-nine years of age.

To carry out the order of the congress that the Declaration be proclaimed, Thomson needed more than a score of copies, for he had to send it to every one of the states and to the army. So, to save time, he did not attempt to have any copies written off with the pen, but sent the original draft, which the congress had passed, to the official printer, John Dunlap. The following morning the printed copies were in Thomson's hands. They were printed on one side of the paper on large sheets eighteen inches long and fourteen and a half inches wide in the form known as broadsides.

It was from one of those copies that Philadelphia first heard the Declaration read, and it was one of them that became the official copy, for Thomson had not copied the Declaration even into the journal of the congress before he gave it to the printer; but when he wrote the journal for July 4 he left a blank space for the Declaration, and the next day, with two wafers of red wax, he fastened in the printed broadside.

I have said that sometimes an entry was made in the journal of the congress by another hand than Thomson's. The first of those occasions was on June 12, 1775, when Timothy Matlack recorded a resolution to set aside a day for fasting and prayer to avert the desolating calamities that seemed to be impending. Matlack had been appointed a clerk in Thomson's office on May 15, and five days later, on May 20, he wrote out the most important document that the congress had issued up to that time—the commission to George Washington to be commander in chief of the American army. The identification of the penmanship of the commission with that of the entry in the journal and of both with an autograph letter of Matlack's that is among the papers of the Continental congress is certain.

Probably there was not at that time a man in the country who was Matlack's equal as a penman. Fortunately, Matlack was still a clerk in Thomson's office when the Declaration of Independence was ordered to be engrossed for final signature, and the task of copying it was assigned to him. He copied from the printed broadside. That is clearly shown by the heading of the broadside, "In Congress, July 4, 1776," which is reproduced in the written Declaration in the same form of lettering.

A few years ago some of the officials in the library of congress, who knew that Matlack was the best penman employed by Thomson, made a comparison of General Washington's commission, which was known to have been written by him, with the Declaration.

The first peculiar letter in the commission is the capital "N" in New Hampshire, and we find its counterpart in "Nature's" in the second line of the body of the Declaration. The graceful flourish at the top of the "T" in the word "To" in the commission is repeated in the second of the sentences beginning "That" in the Declaration. In the word "offer" in the commission there is a marked peculiarity in the double "f." The first "f" is made like the old fashioned long "s." It appears in the word "effect" in the Declaration, then in "suffer" and "sufferable." That is the most noteworthy peculiarity in Matlack's writing. The capital "D" in the commission and in the last line of the Declaration, the capital "B" in the commission and in the word "British" in the Declaration, the whole word "Congress" in both documents—those and other details established beyond a doubt that the writer of the great Declaration was Timothy Matlack.

In 1824, when John Quincy Adams was secretary of state, a skilled engraver, William J. Stone, made a copperplate facsimile of the Declaration. That is the only one that has ever been made. It was distributed by order of congress and is familiar to us all. It is a perfect reproduction in every particular of the original document and is a fine specimen of the engraver's art.—Gaillard Hunt in Youth's Companion.

CHICAGO PAYS HIGH

Mayor Gets $18,000 a Year and Seventy Aldermen $3,000 Each.

NEW YORK IS NEXT IN LINE.

Gotham Allows Its Chief Executive $15,000, Philadelphia $12,000, Boston, St. Louis, Newark, N. J.; Cincinnati, Cleveland and Pittsburgh $10,000, Indianapolis and Seattle $7,500.

Washington.—Chicago has the highest priced mayor in the country. He gets $18,000 a year and serves four years. New York comes next, with a $15,000 mayor, whose term also lasts four years. Philadelphia, third in the list, gives its mayor $12,000 a year for four years. Boston, St. Louis, Newark, N. J.; Cincinnati, Cleveland and Pittsburgh pay their mayors $10,000 annually, the term being four years in Boston, Pittsburgh and St. Louis, and two years in Cincinnati, Cleveland and Newark.

Indianapolis and Seattle pay their mayors $7,500 a year; San Francisco, Baltimore and Minneapolis $6,000 each; East St. Louis, Louisville, New Bedford, Detroit, Kansas City, Buffalo, Mount Vernon, Rochester, Columbus, Scranton, Providence, San Antonio, Tex., and Richmond pay $5,000 each.

The commission form of government, which takes the place of mayors and aldermen, involves a smaller salary outlay. In Washington, D. C., the three commissioners get a total of $15,000; in Denver, $25,000; in San Diego, $12,000; in Topeka, $9,000; in New Orleans, $30,000; in Salem, Mass., $10,000; in St. Paul, $31,500; in Lincoln, Neb., $10,000; in Atlantic City, $15,000; in Bayonne, N. J., $10,000; in Hoboken, $10,000; in Jersey City, $25,000; in Trenton, $15,000, and in Harrisburg, $13,000.

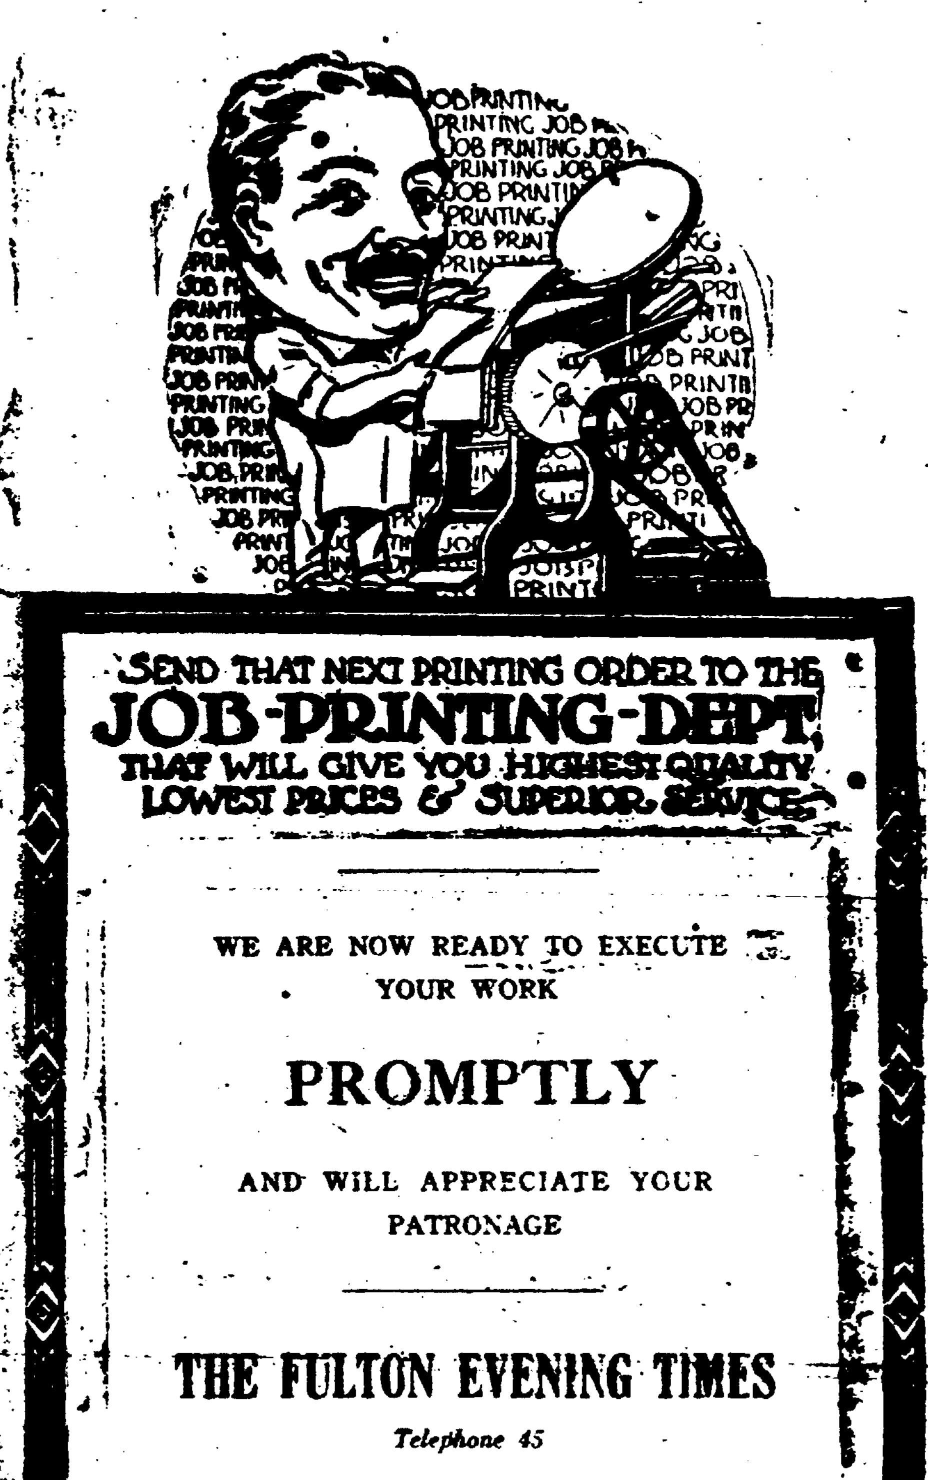
In some of the commission governed cities a mayor is elected as such, while in others he is chosen by the commission. Sometimes he gets an extra allowance as chairman of the commission, but this rarely exceeds $500, and is included in most of the above totals.

While most cities employ assessors to fix the valuation of property for the purposes of taxation, those of some states have no assessors, but report to the county the amount required to be raised for city purposes.

A Blunt Critic.

During a Shakespeare celebration a number of local amateurs appeared in the great dramatist's most famous tragedy. Next day the principal actor inquired of a critical friend what he thought of the performance.

"It was great! Simply great!" was the reply. "As you played Hamlet it was easy to see why Ophelia should go and drown herself."—Argonaut.



EMBLEM STANDS FOR HUMANITY

Trade Union Label Symbolizes Hopes of Those Who Toil.

HAS AN ECONOMIC MISSION

Designed With the Purpose of Raising the American Standard of Life and Morality—Aims to Destroy Advantages of the Few—Appeals to Reason, Not to Force.

By MATTHEW WOLL, President of the International Photo Engravers' Union.

> As the cross is the symbol of Christianity, the Red Cross the emblem of courage and of hope to the sick and wounded, so the trade union label is the emblem of humanity, the symbol of the hopes and aspirations of the worker.

A symbol is a sign or representation of any moral thing by the images or properties of natural things. Thus the lion is the symbol of courage; the lamb is a symbol of meekness or patience. Symbols are of various kinds as types, enigmas, parables, fables, allegories, emblems, hieroglyphics, etc.

That the workers' hopes, aims and aspirations should find symbolical expression should therefore occasion no surprise. The union label has come to be a well recognized part of the work of the trade union movement. The trade union label as used serves to indicate that the goods and receptacles of goods to which it is attached were made by union workmen and under working conditions established by the associated efforts of the organization having adopted the particular symbol. It is intended to distinguish such goods from all others of a similar kind.

The trade union label was originally designed by the cigarmakers of San Francisco to direct attention to the growing competition of Chinese labor with white labor and the ultimate converting of an American standard of life and of morality to a much lower condition of life and work. The message of the hope of the workers thus symbolized the impending dangers to society, so well represented in this emblematic form, immediately aroused and crystallized such a strong social resentment as to have practically destroyed the grave menace then confronting the workers and society.

The great moral, social and economic mission which the trade union label so well symbolized at that time is greater in its concept and more comprehensive today than at any time since its adoption.

Today the union label directs attention to the evils of underpaid and overworked adult labor, to the unfair competition of free labor with compulsory labor, to the exploitation of woman and child labor. It directs attention and concentrates public sentiment against the evils peculiar to certain crafts and evils common to all industries. It is emblematic of the scientific truth about human nature—that the more men know of each other and of their hopes and aspirations the more they love each other and the closer they knit themselves together in a common purpose and cause, and in which scheme of life the humane doctrines of mutual sacrifice, protection and uplift are predominating principles.

The trade union label symbolizes the struggle to put an end to the partnership between competition and charity—competition between paupers, and charity dropping one tear on another.

The great aim of the trade union label is to destroy the instrument of oppression, of undue advantage for a few. It heralds the message that men who are to live together in society must make mutual sacrifices. It represents the birth of a new brotherhood, born of the nearness of man to man, made possible by modern civilization. It holds that the chief end of man is to live the life of a free man, whole—that is, wholly in body, mind and soul. It seeks to attract the sympathy, encouragement and support of all right thinking people in the uplift of those who do the world's work.

The label is a significant and permanent declaration of the moral duty devolving on the purchaser to inquire into the social cost at which an article is produced as well as into the cost at which it is sold. It appeals to reason and not to force and is a medium by which the public may enforce its rightful power of arbitrament between employer and employee.

It is impossible to comprehensibly define the great possibilities of the union label. Nothing in the whole realm of human labor is more capable of effective and continuous unity. To the trade unionists it is a constant reminder of their common interest and a common duty. It is unquestionably the most practical agency yet devised to unify all the forces of labor, at present greatly divided into individual units of organization, predicated on craft and trade lines.

SENTRY A CANDIDATE FOR WALKING RECORD

Arizona Man Makes Forty Miles to Find Relief—Reported "Missing."

Douglas, Ariz.—Adam Dockery, a private in Company B, Arizona militia, recently reported as missing, returned to camp after walking nearly forty miles while on outpost duty.

The private, a recent recruit, it was said at militia headquarters, was placed on guard at the international line, with instructions to walk to the east until he met the sentry he was to relieve.

Dockery missed the sentry. He kept walking until finally he met a patrol on guard, twenty miles east of the camp.

"Dockery certainly obeyed instructions," an officer remarked, "but it is a good thing he met that patrol, or he probably would have walked to El Paso."

HOUSE CARRIED THIRTY MILES BY TORNADO

Heavy Construction Literally Torn to Shreds—Parts Distributed Over Three Indiana Counties.

Brownstone, Ind.—Bits of books and pieces of boards have been picked up in Jackson and Scott counties which were identified as parts belonging to the house of Mrs. Elizabeth Wilcox, a widow, living near Campbellsburg, Washington county, which was destroyed by a tornado and scattered along in the path of the storm for a distance of about thirty miles.

The house, a two story eight room building, stoutly constructed and in good shape, was literally torn to shreds in a few seconds. A barn across the road from the house was demolished, and of the corn crib, made of large round logs, no trace has been found. A large rug was taken off the floor of the house and carried about five miles. A heavy iron range was found about a quarter of a mile from the house, and an iron kettle weighing about seventy-five pounds was found a mile away from the place the next day.

Mrs. Wilcox felt a slight jar of the house just before going to bed on a cot near a large stone fireplace. Parts of the fireplace fell on her and pinioned her to the floor. The house was splintered and carried away by the storm.

The tornado had dipped and struck a knoll just across the road from the house and scraped the sod off a space about twenty-five feet square.

Alex Brown, who lives near, stepped out early in the morning and found his front porch gone. Looking over toward Mrs. Wilcox's place, he noticed the ruins and hurried over. He found Mrs. Wilcox conscious and soon removed the stones that held her down. A doctor was called, and it was found that one arm was broken, her chest crushed in and bruises and scratches covered her body.

Three five-dollar gold pieces were carried away. One of them was found later about half a mile from the house. Rabbits and fox squirrels were slaughtered by the storm when it struck the woods east of the place. Of the 150 chickens on the place not more than twenty-five could be found, and several of them were stripped of their feathers by the storm. A black oak tree about three feet in diameter was found near the house, and no one seems to know where it came from, as there are no black oaks in the woods near by. An apple orchard was blown about a quarter of a mile from the place, and there was not a fence or post left standing on the place.

STRANGE ANIMAL FOUND.

Freak Resembles Alligator Crossed With California Product.

A strange freak of nature which some believe to be a young alligator and others say cannot be classified under that head has been captured in Soap lake, near Gilroy, Cal., by Leland B. Holloway.

When handled or otherwise aroused the thing emits a sound which is declared to be a cross between a bark and a grunt. Holloway took the freak to the University of California, where he asked that an attempt be made to classify it. It is thought to be a hybrid originating in a cross between an alligator and some other animal. An old alligator is believed to have been discarded by some passing circus.

She Ran For President.

Only one woman was ever a presidential candidate. In the campaign of 1884 Mrs. Belva A. Lockwood was the candidate of the Equal Rights party, advocating woman suffrage. She obtained only about 2,500 votes out of a total of 10,000,000. Mrs. Lockwood in 1873 had been admitted to the bar of the supreme court of the District of Columbia and in 1879 was admitted to practice in the United States supreme court.

TELLS THE TIME BY HIS FAMILY'S FACES

He Is 1 o'Clock, His Wife Is 2, and Children Go According to Age.

St Joseph, Mo.—The flight of the hours are marked on the dial of C. W. Humberd's watch by the faces of his ten children and by his own face and the face of his wife. Tiny photographs are set in the dial in place of the Roman numerals. Every time Mr. Humberd—who is a grading contractor here—looks at the time he sees his whole family.

He is 1 o'clock and his wife is 2. The children are arranged in the order of their birth, begining at 3 o'clock with Carl, who is thirty-four, and continuing through Calvin, Albert, Bertha, Glen, George, Eva, Robert, Vernon and little 12 o'clock Edith, who is three and the youngest of the family. The watch was made especially for Mr. Humberd a few years ago and he is so used to it that he can tell the exact time at a glance. He arises at Albert o'clock in the morning, has luncheon at half-past Edith and is usually home by Bertha.

If he refers to the watch a score of times throughout the day he is reminded each time of his loved ones and there is little chance that he will ever forget his family in the rush of business. The idea of putting the family in the watch occurred to him as a sentimental novelty, unlike anything he had ever heard of. His work as a grading contractor carries him out of town frequently, but he reports he is not so lonely as he used to be, since he feels that he can take a glimpse at his youngsters any time he cares to without attracting outside attention.

FEAR OF LIGHTNING KILLS.

New Jersey Woman Dies of Fright During a Thunderstorm.

Newton, N. J.—During one of the most severe thunderstorms that had visited this neighborhood in several years, damaging buildings, crops and roads, Mrs. Mamie Louise McCracken of Woodside avenue, this place, became unconscious from fright and died shortly after. Mrs. McCracken was fifty years old and all her life had felt a nervous fear of thunder and lightning.

She was a daughter of the late John Dalrymple of Washington, N. J., and had been a resident of this township since her marriage, thirty-one years ago.

NOW IT'S "SWAT THE WEED."

Arkansas Begins Campaign to Protect Soils From Useless Growths.

Fayetteville, Ark.—"Swat 'em" applies to other things in Arkansas besides the fly. A campaign against weeds was announced recently by the extension division of the University of Arkansas, with the terse advice:

"Swat 'em and save future labor and soil fertility and soil moisture."

Weeds may cost a community or state millions of dollars, according to an extension division bulletin. Spread of weeds is said to be due to carelessness. After farmers let weeds ripen the seeds are scattered by travelers or birds or are sold with hay to infest other neighborhoods. The bulletin urges children be taught to "swat" weeds and never let one ripen to seed.

BOYS PUMPED WELL DRY.

Wanted to See a Water Wheel Work and Left Their Play.

Brazil, Ind.—Finding that surface water running into his well had made the water impure, a citizen of Brazil started to pump his well dry. After pumping half an hour in the hot sun he gave up the job.

Then he made a miniature water wheel, which he attached to the end of a trough. After he had attracted the attention of several boys who were playing on a vacant lot, he went to his work. When he returned in the evening the boys had pumped the well dry to see the wheel go round.

Reservation Comprises 5,000 Acres on Mount Desert Island.

Washington.—Creation of the first national park east of the Mississippi river, comprising 5,000 acres on Mount Desert island, Maine, was announced by the interior department. It will be known as Sieur de Monts National monument.

The tract was donated to the federal government. Its northern boundary is only a mile from Bar Harbor, and several popular summer resorts lie near it. There are ten mountain peaks and four lakes within the tract.

CHICKEN A LA MERINGO.—Cut up the chicken as for fricassee, slice a quarter of a pound of salt pork and fry in the frying pan until all the fat is tried out. Roll each piece of chicken in flour, fry on all sides until a nice brown and remove to the stew pan. Put an onion cut fine into the fat after the chicken has been browned, stir constantly until it is browned, then add four tablespoonfuls of flour; then add one quart of boiling water and boil five minutes. Season with salt and pepper and a coffee cupful of canned tomatoes; then strain over the chicken, cover and simmer fifteen minutes. Add a can of mushrooms and let simmer ten minutes longer. This can be served with mashed potatoes or a crust made and baked like a chicken pie.

Boiled Dinner Cooked In Fireless Cooker.—Take three or four pounds of corned beef, cover with cold water and let boil slowly for twenty minutes; then skin and add a small cabbage, a few carrots, potatoes and turnips and boil ten minutes. Place in fireless cooker for four hours. It is best to place a small heated radiator under the vessel.

Minced Veal In Crust Cases.—Pass the veal through the meat grinder and mix to a thick paste with tomato gravy. Prepare a rich baking powder biscuit dough, roll out on the pastry board into a very thin sheet and cut into neat rounds. Place a generous tablespoonful of the mince in the center of each, turn the crust over and, after moistening the edges of the paste, crimp them together with the tines of a silver fork. Brush the cases over with a little melted butter and bake in a hot oven until crisp and brown. Garnish with parsley.

Cush.—An antebellum dish made from the leftovers of boiled or baked ham. To one teacupful of ham, ground or finely chopped, add one beaten egg stirred into one cupful of sweet milk, one cupful of cold breadcrumbs (biscuits preferred), one small onion, minced, and pepper to taste. Mix and bake for about half an hour.

Easy & Practical Home Dress Making Lessons

Prepared Specially for This Newspaper By Pictorial Review

Just the Model for Home Wear.

A dress for home wear carried out in Delft-blue chambray trimmed with plaid gingham. The model is an excellent one for informal use.

Here is an admirable frock for home wear. It is fashioned from Delft-blue chambray, with collar and cuffs of plaid gingham. The plain side-closing waist has an open neck and at a slightly raised waistline the three-piece skirt is joined.

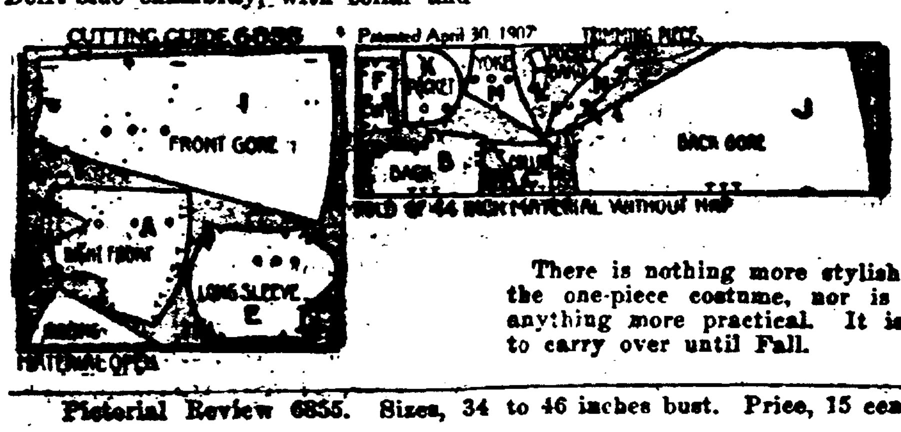
In medium size the dress requires 4¾ yards 44-inch material, with ½ yard of plaid gingham for the trimming.

To instruct the home dressmaker how to properly cut the dress is the object of today's home dressmaking lesson. The two open widths of the chambray must be laid on the cutting table, right sides facing, to cut sections of the skirt and waist. As the cutting guide shows, the front gore of the skirt is laid on a lengthwise thread of the material, the straight edge of the pattern running parallel with the selvage edge of the chambray. In the next row come the right front of the waist and the sleeve, both placed on a lengthwise thread, while the piecing is laid along the opposite selvage edge.

The remaining material may now be folded in half for the rest of the cutting. The back, collar and back gore of the skirt are placed along the lengthwise fold on the first row. Above these are laid, in the order named, on a lengthwise thread, the cuff, pocket, yoke, pocket band and trimming piece to be plaited and used at the back of the skirt.

For the left front of the waist, cut through the pattern of right front ⅜ inch forward of line of large "O" perforations. If desired, the upper front edge of right front may be cut off along indicating small "o" perforations. Cut of front edge of left front gore along double "oo" perforations.

Fashioned in taffeta this frock is also attractive, for there are many little accessories of dress which may be employed to give it a more elaborate air.



There is nothing more stylish than the one-piece costume, nor is there anything more practical. It is sure to carry over until Fall.

GOES LONG WAY TO WED.

Pretty Newfoundland Miss Traveled to Vancouver to Marry.

Vancouver, Wash.—Coming all the way from St. Johns, Newfoundland, to meet her sweetheart of school days Miss Isabel M. Ewing, a pretty twenty-two-year-old miss, was married to Herbert G. Bradley, a restaurant man of Portland, Ore., in the office of the county auditor here recently.

It was only a few hours after her arrival in Portland, whence she had come at Bradley's call, that they came to Vancouver together and were married. Though it was several hours after the time for the marriage license bureau to close, Mrs. May R. Hacok, the county auditor, obligingly went to the courthouse and issued a license.

Justice of the Peace W. S. T. Dart was called, and the ceremony was performed in the auditor's office. Only two friends from Portland and the local officials witnessed the ceremony.

Bradley left his home in Newfoundland several years ago and came west in search of fortune. In a dairy lunch business in Portland he built up an income sufficient to send for his sweetheart.

LAD, TEASED, USED GUN.

Boy, Who Was Mountaineer, Made Onion Weeders Scatter.

Kenton, O.—A real Kentucky mountaineer of fiction type—six feet one and a half inches tall and weighing 160 pounds, although only fourteen years old—awoke the quiet settlement of Alger on the Scioto marsh, the center of the greatest onion raising district in Ohio, when he started a cannonade that sent the natives to the trenches.

He was Charles E. Hale, who hails from Greensburg, Ky., and who came to Hardin county to weed onions.

The youth bought a gun and threatened to shoot the hats off any one who opened their heads to him. He says the other weeders were teasing him. The trouble came when officers tried to arrest him. The bullet hit Harvey Porter. Spectators scattered. The lad was sent to the Lancaster Industrial school.

HAS SHAVED 243,960.

Barber Says He Has Had That Many In His Chair.

Lorain, O.—Theodore Curtis, a Lorain barber, has just celebrated the twenty-fifth anniversary of the beginning of his career. Curtis, who has kept account of every man he has shaved, says he has removed the whiskers of 243,960 men.

"I have also cut enough hair to make eleven mattresses and to pad 43,562 crutches," said Curtis.

The barber has shaved some of the country's widely known men, including Presidents McKinley, Roosevelt and Taft, Senators Mark Hanna, Matt Quay, Albert Beveridge and Ben Tillman, "Doc" Cook, Buffalo Bill, Jesse Willard, Tod Sloan and Harry Thaw.

"I would like to add Charles Evans Hughes to my list of notables," observed Curtis.

Divides the Waters.

Situated exactly at the highest point of the divide of the Rocky mountains, on the Crow's Nest division of the Canadian Pacific railway, in British Columbia, is a hotel. When it rains in the mountains the water which falls on the eastern slope of the hotel roof trickles away to join a tiny rivulet, which in due time mingles its waters with the Atlantic. The water falling just beyond the ridgepole, on the other side of the roof, flows westerly and ultimately into the Pacific.

TODAY'S FASHION NOTE

A frock of white net trimmed with ruched ribbon is what every young girl likes. Lace insertion is introduced upon the skirt, sleeves and vest, from which a deep collar of taffeta turns back to be edged with lace and edging. Four yards 40-inch net, 6 yards insertion and 9 of edging are required for the dress.

RECIPROCITY WITH CANADA IN FISHING

Alexandria Bay—While the attendance at the annual meeting here today at the Thousand Island House ball room of the Anglers' Association of the St. Lawrence was rather light, many prominent Americans and Canadians, who had been scheduled for addresses sending letters expressing regret at their inability for various reasons to attend, there was a goodly number from both shores of the big river assembled around the board at the annual banquet of the association, held at the hostelry at 3 this afternoon.

President Skinner stated that two members of the association had visited Toronto and discussed the subject with the officials of the Ontario government, who expressed a desire to see the tax removed, and promised that they would use their influence to bring about the removal of the tax levied by the Dominion government, but that nothing had been done in the matter by the New York conservation commission toward abolishing the tax levied by this government. He held that a removal of the tax would call to the river more fishermen.

A resolution was adopted soliciting the conservation commission to entrust the tags required to be affixed to boxes of fish when shipped to the town clerks of the various towns, that anglers might not have to await the tedious process of sending to Albany for tags, while their catch of fish spoiled.

CARTHAGE PAPER MILL TO CHANGE OWNERS

Watertown—Negotiations are under way today at the office of Attorney W. B. VanAllen, of Carthage, for the purchase of the mill of the Champion Paper Co. by James B. Outterson from H. J. Caldwell, both of Carthage. It was said shortly after noon today that the deal was practically completed whereby Mr. Outterson secures the possession of the mill.

Negotiations have been under way for some time for the purchase of the mill, and today's meeting was to close all arrangements. The purchase will remove the paper mill holdings from the hands of Mr. Caldwell, who has been in the paper mill business for many years. He has been president, treasurer and general manager of the Champion mill for the last ten years.

ONYX CONFECTIONERY CHANGED HANDS TODAY

Negotiations were consumated today, whereby the Onyx Confectionery store was sold to Mr. and Mrs. Roy Reynolds. The store was established by Messrs. McIntyre and Taggart and later taken over by Attorney F. G. Spencer. Mr. Ross Eaton then purchased the establishment and conducted the business successfully for two years.

Mr. Eaton has now accepted a lucrative position with the Hammond Steel Company, of Auburn, where Mrs. Eaton will join him in the near future.

Mr. and Mrs. Reynolds need no introduction to Fulton as both are well known here and their success is the general wish of the community.

Prof. L. D. Wilcox has returned from Albany. Mr. Wilcox was on the State Regents Examining Board.

CITY'S HEALTH LAWS DECLARED OBSTACLE

Watertown—Watertown's health laws are antiquated and obsolete, according to a statement made by President Percy H. Willmott of the board of health at the regular meeting of the common council Tuesday night. The rules under which the board is now working were drawn in 1894. Instead of revising the entire set of regulations at once, however, the board proposes to from time to time request the council to adopt a new ordinance relating to some particular matter under its jurisdiction.

One of the first of these was a new ordinance adopted last night regarding privy vaults and cess pools, placing these propositions under regular inspection. In this ordinance the board aims to compel the use of inside closets in all streets where there are sewers and to assist sanitation in other streets through limiting the distance from a house or property line at which an outside closet or cess pool may be constructed.

CITY PROTESTS AGAINST PREPAREDNESS PARADE

San Francisco, Cal.—Arguments of those who opposed San Francisco's preparedness parade, which took place on July 22, were expressed largely through mass meetings, at which was voiced the sentiment that preparedness parades were organized throughout the country by sinister interests seeking to implant fear and militarism in the thoughts of the people. The speakers asserted that such spectacles could not represent a spontaneous expression of belief in greater defensive measures for the reason that the expression of the desire on the part of employers that their employees join in the parade would necessarily be construed as a virtual command for them to do so.

The parade was organized largely through the efforts of Thornwell Mullally, an official of the United Railways, the street car system of the city, who received the hearty co-operation of a large number of society women. The agitation for the demonstration was attended by considerable feeling between those who were behind the movement and those who were opposed to it. For the purpose of creating sentiment in its favor, all of the influential newspapers of the city, with one exception, lent their support to the project daily for several weeks. On the other hand, mass meetings, organized and participated in by leading men and women of the bay district, were held in San Francisco and Oakland, protesting against the undertaking, on the ground that the legitimate ends of national defense would be better served by other means and that the spectacle would tend to pervert rather than promote feelings of true patriotism.

A conspicuous feature of the program of protest was the fact that labor leaders almost unanimously came out against the movement, the result being that organized labor was almost wholly unrepresented in the parade.

"No, I was not taught that at business college," a stenographer replied in answer to the question if she had learned at school to make her typewriting come out evenly on both margins. "I think I had been in an office quite a while when some legal papers came through our office, the splendid appearance of which attracted my attention at once. Of course, the left hand margin is always exactly even because the typewriter is set at the same space, but I had never thought anything about the right hand margin until I saw this work. It took me quite a little while to learn to gauge the writing so that the right hand margin came out in good balance, but one can, with practice, acquire the habit of watching the line as one writes, and when a period comes past the middle of the line it is then easy to space more than three spaces, which is my usual spacing after a period. Of course, one has to be careful how she separates the words at the end of the line so as to have the right division of syllables. It is interesting, too, to study the balancing and setting up of the work on the page, and I find that one can make even a prosaic business page have an individuality and style of one's own, sometimes I do not estimate it quite correctly and have to rewrite the page, but I do not mind that when it is improved by the rewriting. I have always been grateful to whomsoever it was that sent through that excellently balanced and evenly margined legal paper, which first caused me to notice and copy that way of setting up my work."

EIGHT WAGNER OPERAS WILL BE SUNG IN CHICAGO

Chicago, Ill.—The Wagnerian program of the Chicago grand opera company proved so successful last season that it is to be repeated, with possible additions this year. At least eight Wagnerian operas will be given: "The Ring" in full, "Parsifal," "Tannhauser," "Lohengrin," and a slight chance of "Die Meistersinger." Among those whom General Director Campanini will present on the Sunday afternoons and evenings of the Wagner dramas will be Margarete Matzenauer, soprano; Francis Maclennan, tenor; Julia Claussen, contralto; Olive Fremstad, mezzo-soprano; Wilhelm Beck and Clarence Whitehill, baritones, and Florence Easton, soprano. Geraldine Farrar will probably sing in "Tannhauser." The conductor will be Egon Pollak, director of last year's Wagnerian performances.

Reprimand For Tennyson.

On one occasion when Tennyson was on a visit in Ireland with Aubrey de Vere a sullen mood overtook him, and he sought out his hostess and began to inveigh against the inanity of dancing, but the lady cut him short, saying: "How would the world get on if others went about growling at its amusements in a voice as deep as a lion's? I request that you will go upstairs, put on an evening coat and come down and ask my daughter Sophia to dance."

SYRACUSE MOVIES MUST CLOSE EVERY SUNDAY

The Syracuse Post-Standard says: Agitation against motion picture shows being given on Sundays came to an issue yesterday when Sheriff John P. Schlosser gave notice that all movies must close on Sundays.

This action was taken after a conference with Commissioner of Public Safety Walter W. Nicholson. It was announced that both offices will co-operate in the enforcement of the order.

Proprietors of picture theatres deny the right to prohibit Sunday exhibitions, and are prepared to fight the action of the authorities and to test the question.

STRIKE OF 2,000 MEN AT LAWRENCE

Lawrence, Mass.—About 2,000 construction workers, including skilled mechanics and laborers affiliated with the allied trades council, went on strike here Monday. Only one contractor conceded the demands of the workers, which are that hod carriers receive 35 cents an hour and other laborers 30 cents an hour. The refusal of the contractors to make the desired increases caused the general sympathetic strike. Construction work in Lawrence is now at a standstill. Several large contracts for buildings will be held up.

Germans and French Win and Lose in Fights Northeast of Verdun

(By United Press)

Paris—In a most violent battle northeast of Verdun, last night, the German troops suffered enormous losses in repeated counter attacks with mass formation, it was officially announced this afternoon. Fighting through the night and early today, with first one side and then the other advancing. At one stage the French occupied Thiamont road, lost several weeks ago, only to lose it again. Bloody fighting occurred at Fleury, the Germans entering the southern part of Fleury, but despite desperate counter attacks were unable to capture the place.

The Teuton attack was made along the whole of the Thiamont-Fleury front. Time and again the Germans threw themselves against the French line, only to fall back in confused masses under a murderous fire.

Berlin—German troops have recaptured the village of Fleury and trenches west and northwest of the town in violent fighting this morning, it was officially announced this afternoon.

Northwest of Thiamont on the Capithetre sector, and in the Vosges, the French attack was repulsed with heavy losses. On the Somme front an Anglo-French attack north of Oxillers, southwest of Guillemont, north of Monacu farm and near Barleaux.

Petrograd—Driving in toward Koval the Russians crossed to the left bank of the Stockhog river, in the region of Lubecho, capturing a series of heights which they fortified, it was officially announced by the war office today.

* * *

London—The left wing of the British army in the great Somme offensive gained some ground during the night as the result of minor operations west of the village of Pozieres General Haig reported to the war office this afternoon.

Donald H. Casler gets the second prize of four reserved seats.

Ralph Dolben, third prize, three reserved seats.

Mamie Kaplan, fourth prize, two reserved seats.

Jane Rogers fifth prize of two general admission tickets.

The following are the prize winners:

1—Howard L. Hunter, 410 South Fourth street.

2—Donald H. Casler, 310 Pratt St.

3—Ralph Dolbear, 203 Worth St.

4—Mamie Kaplan, 501 Euclid.

5—Jane Rogers, 507 Oneida St.

General admission tickets as follows:

Paul W. Hunter, 455 South Fourth Street.

Marguerite Kenyon, 411 Highland Street.

Howard Challis, 59 West Second Street.

Wesley Kenyon, 411 Highland Street.

Ivan Jones, 117 North Sixth Street.
Kermit Fink, 356 South Street.

Virginia E. Spencer, 302 Academy Street.

Homer Osborne, R. F. D. No. 2.

Ruth Phelps, 217 Cayuga street.

Harold Whitcomb, R. D. No. 7.

Melville Pollock, 217 Cayuga Street.

Charles Potter, 405 Utica Street.

Norman McMare, 1107 Utica Street.

Lester Casler, 310 Pratt Street.

James Carpenter, Fulton, N. Y.

Lyndon Hyde, 114 North Sixth Street.

Frank Gordon, Jr., South Second Street.

Nelson Jones, North Fifth Street.

There was a nice little list came by mail with 80 names written with indelible pencil, that would entitle the sender to a general admission ticket, but the name was omitted. If the little girl will come in the morning she will also get a ticket.

At six o'clock to-night the contest will close in the Wild Animal Contest and thirty-five boys and girls will be made happy by being presented with free admission to the Al. G. Barnes Circus, which shows here Saturday.

Hilda, one of the famous women lion tamers with Barnes' Wild Animal Circus

These children will get to see that most wonderful of all animal aggregations in which more than 1,000 wild and ferocious beasts have been trained by Mr. Barnes and his assistants to perform remarkable feats of riding, diving, juggling, dancing, marching, poising, trapeze work, fire-juggling and other acts.

We are all sorry we could not give more prizes. Some amazing new animals were brought to light and now one of the greatest pleasures is to come.

EVERY PRIZE WINNER MUST BE AT THE EVENING TIMES OFFICE AT 9:00 O'CLOCK SATURDAY MORNING, at which time AL. G. BARNES, the world's greatest animal scientist and trainer, and owner of the Big Barnes shows, will meet the children, present them with their prizes and shake hands with them.

Now, prize winners, be prompt so as not to keep Mr. Barnes waiting if you want to see him. He is a busy man, but he loves children and he wants to see the little folks who have written so much about his pets. And the Times is glad it was able to help some of the little ones see this marvelous collection or performing animals. The Barnes show is a truly great circus.

Thrilling wild animals acts are presented by Miss Pearl Hamilton, who appears with a large number of leopards, jaguars and pumas—a mixed group and one of the hardest to control.

A large herd of elephants, especially well trained, are put through many interesting exercises. Camels, seals and sea lions, zebras, kangaroos, hyenas, dogs, monkeys, sacred cattle, ponies and horses to the number of several hundred are a part of the Barnes animal acting troupe.

Performances are given at 2 and 8 p. m., and the new, glittering six-band parade at 10:30 a. m.

Doors open 1 and 7 p. m. Free High-dive thrill at grounds, 1 p. m.

The names of all prize winners will be announced in The Times to-morrow evening. Watch for them and if your name is in the list be at The Times office Saturday morning at nine o'clock and receive your ticket free.

Troops Must Come Out of Mexico, Carranza's Order to Commission

(By United Press)

Washington—General Carranza still insists that the first thing to be decided by the United States and Mexico is the withdrawal of American troops.

Mexican Ambassador Arrendino today delivered to Acting Secretary of State Polk, a note, which, while naming a commission and possible acceptance of a joint commission to investigate relations between the two Republics, laid stress upon the fact that the Mexican commissioners are to devote special attention to a discussion of points mentioned in the previous note of this department.

The points in question, according to the Ambassador, are, the withdrawal of American troops from Mexico; the right to establish border patrols and the fixing of responsibility for border raids. Washington officials agree that Carranza, in this manner, has an intention to urge these questions ahead of all others.

No doubt as yet been expressed, however, by State Department officials, that the Mexican conferees will show a willingness of taking up questions of finance and Mexican development. On the other hand, the note implies that the commissioners will follow whatever lead is made by Mexican leaders as they have been instructed to devote their energies to the military problem.

NEARLY 100 PERSONS SANK WITH LE TIMBRO

(By United Press)

London—Between eighty and one hundred persons are missing and may have perished in the sinking of the Italian mail steamer Le Timbro, by a submarine in the Medditeranean. Among those unaccounted for are many women and children.

Dispatches received here today said that only three loads of survivors had been landed, two at Syracuse and one at Malta.

Washington—It is not thought there were any Americans aboard the Le Timbro when she sank.

SCARE WORKED UP IN SYRACUSE

Syracuse—Four children are dead, upwards of a dozen more have been stricken and several others are under quarantine because of infantile paralysis. Practically all the cases have broken out in the past two days.

The epidemic has caused a panic among hundreds of parents of small children and scores of mothers with their infants are seeking refuge with relatives or friends in other sections of the state. Sunday schools in many cases have been closed, some churches have decided not to continue services, while drastic measures are being taken by the health authorities to prevent the spread of the disease.

Every incoming visiting family, no matter from what part of the state, is put through a severe medical test, especially the children and kept under the closest observation for several days. A number of cases of illness in infants have been called to the attention of the city officials and they are being watched as suspicious. The greater majority of these, it is known, are suffering from the plague.

District Sanitary Supervisor Sears, incharge of the battle against the epidemic in this city, has telegraphed Dr. Simon Flexner, head of the Rockefeller Institute for Medical Research, in New York, for information on the treatment of cases.

In the meantime, every suspect case is being placed under quarantine and given a course of preliminary treatment.

Some physicians here want to try the adrenalin treatment, but others oppose it as still being in the nature of an experiment.

Health officials today appealed to all parents to observe the regulation published and distributed by Dr. Sears, and urged mothers to report immediately any suspicious cases.

THE ELECTION LAW CHANGES

Commissioners of election who are preparing for the fall primaries, registration and election have called attention to two provisions of the election law of vital interest to every voter.

One pertains to the rights of voters to change their residence from one district to another, within the limits of an assembly district, and still retain the right to vote at the primaries.

This is a new section of the law and will give the ballot to a large number of men who have been deprived of it for the past year or so because of this statute. The new law enables them to sign a certificate at the offices of the commissioners of election setting forth their previous residence and the change, and naming the party in whose primary they wish to participate. These certificates must be presented thirty days before the primaries, which are to be held September 19.

The other law enables young men, who will be twenty-one years of age at the next election, to sign a certificate that will allow them to take part in the primaries. These certificates are also to be signed at the offices of the commissioners and presented within thirty days of the primary. The law has also been amended to make the hours of the primary from 7 a. m. to 9 p. m., instead of 3 p. m., to 9 p. m., as heretofore. The registration days will be: October 13, 14, 20 and 21, and in the rural districts October 14 and 21.

CATHOLIC PICNIC WILL ATTRACT MANY PERSONS

Plans have been made for one of the most successful Catholic picnics ever held here, to take place to-morrow afternoon at the Fair Grounds Races will be staged, a hot ball game between teams of local material will be presented and a dinner will follow. The Committees which were appointed some time ago say that an interesting day is sure to be had.

NON-RESIDENT ANGLERS MUST PAY TO FISH

Notification of the amendment of Section 188 of the New York State game laws to provide for the licensing of non-resident anglers in this State was received yesterday by the County Clerk's Office: Oswego.

The amendment requires all non-residents of the State or residents for less than thirty days to pay $2.50 for the privilege of angling in the fresh water of New York State or the [illegible] which the State boundary runs." In issuing these licenses the rules governing Section 185 will apply, Section 185 being the section pertaining to the issuance of hunting license to residents.

The County Clerk is instructed to supply the city and Town Clerks with the blanks for the issuance of the licenses. The City or Town Clerk will issue the license and deduct the fifty cents as a fee for the work.

Under the new ruling the County Clerk will not wait until the end of the year to settle his accounts with the Conservation Commission, but will deduct the three per cent. allowed as a fee at the end of each month at which time he will make his report to the commission. He will, then, turn the moneys over to the County Treasurer at the end of each month.

DEMPSTER CAMP OPENS AUG. 18, LASTS 10 DAYS

The Dempster meeting will open Friday evening, August 18, and continue ten days. The program will be one of continual evangelism with Evangelist Charles R. Drum of Syracuse as speaker each afternoon and evening. The forenoon meetings will be given to devotional quiet-hour talks by prominent pastors of the district. District Superintendent W. M. Caldwell will be in charge during the entire period and he will preach on Sunday morning August 20. It is expected that trail hitters from Syracuse or Fulton, will speak at the morning service, Sunday, August 27. Come for a "time of refreshing," both in body and spirit!

BE A HOMEBUILDER

A daily paper in a city the size of Fulton is as much a public utility as our electric light and power company, our water works, our gas company, etc. It is YOUR paper and upon you rests the burden of the message that it carries to the outside world. A city in Fulton's class, is judged by the investor or those seeking a new location or home, by its daily paper. If you should be overtaken by night in a forest where there were several cabins you would naturally head for the one where the light shone brightest and so it is with persons looking for a new manufacturing site or new location for business—they will be guided by the strongest light. No stronger light goes out from a city than its daily newspaper and any person who has the future welfare of Fulton at heart should stop—look—and listen before they do anything that is detrimental to the upbuilding of their own town.

Fulton is large enough and strong enough in her own resources to be independent of any outside leeches and the sooner the people who are directly interested in her growth and prosperity realize that fact, the sooner she will come into her own.

A little of Buffalo severity with gun-toters might help to abate the menace of the man with a revolver in Fulton. Two youths arrested in the Bison city yesterday were sent to jail for fifty days each in default of $50 fines imposed when they pleaded guilty to having revolvers in their possession without permits.

Any merchant of this city who is a "town-killer," by going to Syracuse to do his local advertising, cannot blame the good people of Fulton if they do likewise and go to Syracuse to do their trading.

DO MERCHANTS WANT HOME TRADE?

We heard a man remark yesterday that he would trade with no merchant who is unpatriotic enough to do his advertising for local business in out of town papers. If the business men of Fulton were all so inclined they would either have one of the best little daily papers in the country or else there would be a big per cent. of the trade of the city following in the wake of some local advertisers and going to Syracuse. And who would be to blame?

The Evening Times has installed a special United Press wire and is giving the latest up-to-the-minute news. That the public is quick to appreciate this service is shown by the rapid increase in our subscription list.

WATER THE BIRDS

Many bird houses have been made by our school children and they are erected in various places in the city for the comfort of our little friends, but do you ever think to water the birds? During the dry days of summer you can have a lot of fun by watering the birds. Place a shallow pan or bowl of some kind in the yard, and watch the little fellows drink and take a bath and enjoy themselves. A dull colored vessel is all the better; the birds do not like the glare of tin or nickle. They are suspicious of these polished utensils of civilized man.

But place some sort of vessel in your yard. Get better acquainted with your friends by serving them. Let them know you are for them, not against them, and they will accept you on trial. If you prove worthy of their friendship, they will become friendly—and repay you for your kindness in song and service.

The "dollar day" proposition that was attempted by out of town papers was a farce and a failure. Merchants who paid their good money to foster the scheme now realize it.

Any business man who heard Russell H. Conwell at the Chautauqua, Wednesday evening, should have gained a better conception as to his duties to his home town.

SELECTED EDITORIALS

Christian Science Monitor:

In some ways people of the belligerent countries are learning a more valuable lesson in economics as a result of the war than are those of the United States and other neutral countries. The lesson is learned at tremendous cost, but nevertheless it will be a valuable one throughout the ages to come. These people of the warring nations are learning to economize and are acquiring the habit of efficiency in a way that will be ever after of untold benefit. At the end of the Franco-Prussian war an indemnity was demanded of France that might be considered greater than any nation in similar circumstances could pay and maintain her economic existence. And yet France paid the debt, and in ten years had recouped herself to the full amount. It was accomplished by hard labor, thrift and strict attention to economy. That is one reason why the French are among the thriftiest people in the world today. The present war is enforcing the practice of economy upon not only the French but the English, the Germans, the Russians—in fact, every nation engaged in war, in a way that will the better enable them after the war is over to discharge the enormous debts now piling up. It is estimated that, so rapidly has the cost of war increased lately, the total daily expenditure of the belligerents is more than $108,000,000. When it is remembered that the civil war, toward its close, cost the federal government of the United States about $3,000,000 a day, the magnitude of the present hostilities may be realized. It means the piling up of a tremendous war debt. England's national debt before the war started, for example, was $3,443,000,000. It now amounts to about $11,500,000,000, and is rapidly increasing. But England has untold resources and will probably be better able after the war is over to pay her debts and readjust things to the new conditions than any of her allies.

For quite a period after the war started the people of the neutral countries were inclined to be very conservative and economical. Now that business has been running on high gear for some time they are becoming less fearful of financial disaster and are spending money freely for things that do not constitute the necessities of living. In fact, there is a tendency to go to the extreme of extravagance. This is not a good sign and should be corrected even at the crest of the prosperity wave.

One of the most remarkable earnings statements ever issued was that published this week by the United States Steel Corporation. It was for the three-months period ended June 30 and showed net earnings for the quarter of $81,126,048. Predictions of $60,000,000 were considered near the mark, although some more enthusiastic guessers had estimated $70,000,000. The earnings of $81,126,048 compare with the previous quarter's showing of $60,713,624. They also compare with $27,950,055 for the corresponding period in 1915 and with $20,457,596 for the corresponding quarter of 1914. In view of these record-breaking earnings it is not surprising that the corporation considered itself justified in declaring an extra dividend of 1 per cent. on the common stock. This report is indicative of the big profits all of the steel companies have been making recently. The steel industry is considered the backbone of business, and therefore the splendid showing just revealed is most gratifying.

The Watertown Times:

By the way, speaking of preparedness and patriotism, our citizens in this town are [illegible] deficient in making a demonstration for either. At the [illegible] on Public Square the band arises and plays "The Star Spangled Banner" as the closing piece and hardly anyone pays any attention to their obligation to rise while the national anthem is given. The packed crowds on the side walks and in the street are already standing, but the men ought to remove their hats and stand uncovered until the piece is finished. Those in automobiles took no pains to even rise. It is sometimes awkward to stand up in an automobile, but at least the men could uncover, according to army and navy regulations, which apply equally to all American citizens. The band concert comes again tomorrow, Thursday evening. When it plays "The Star Spangled Banner" as the concluding piece, stand up and take off your hat and show that you are an American citizen with respect for the national anthem. Further than that, Company C will be coming back from its war service. Don't let it march through a quiet throng of lookers-on as if it were nothing but a circus parade, but give the boys a hearty cheer of welcome and show that you appreciate their devotion. In other words, don't be a lot of "boobs."

Sanitary Control of Infantile Paralysis Patients Best Method of Public Protection

By Dr. SIMON FLEXNER, Director of Laboratories, Rockefeller Institute For Medical Research

PROTECTION to the public against infantile paralysis can be best secured through the discovery and isolation of those ill of the disease and the sanitary control of those persons who have associated with the sick and whose business calls them away from home. BOTH THESE CONDITIONS CAN BE SECURED WITHOUT TOO GREAT INTERFERENCE WITH THE COMFORTS AND THE RIGHTS OF INDIVIDUALS.

What has been said of the small incidence of cases of the disease among the hospital personnel and those with whom they come into contact indicates the extent to which personal care of the body by adults and responsible people can diminish the menace which those accidentally or unavoidably in contact with the ill are to the community. Care exercised not to scatter the secretions of the nose and throat by spitting, coughing and sneezing, the free use of clean handkerchiefs, cleanliness in habits affecting especially the hands and face, changes of clothes, etc., should all serve to diminish this danger.

IN THE END, THE EARLY DETECTION AND ISOLATION OF THE CASES OF INFANTILE PARALYSIS IN ALL OF ITS FORMS, WITH THE ATTENDANT CONTROL OF THE HOUSEHOLDS FROM WHICH THEY COME, WILL HAVE TO BE RELIED UPON AS THE CHIEF MEASURE OF STAYING THE PROGRESS OF THE EPIDEMIC.

The degree of susceptibility of children and other members of the community to infantile paralysis is relatively small and is definitely lower than to such communicable diseases as measles, scarlet fever and diphtheria. This fact in itself constitutes a measure of control, and, while it does not justify the abatement of any practicable means which may be employed to limit and suppress the epidemic, it should tend to prevent a state of overanxiety and panic from taking hold of the community.

The Arabic Language.

There is no language more poetical than the Arabian language, where snow is called "hair of the mountain" and the rainbow is "bride of the rain." Red mullet is "the sultan of fishes;" maidenhair fern is translated by "little cane of the well." Ordinary Arabic words show an extraordinary gift of description. The word "never" is expressed thus: "When the charcoal takes root and the salt buds." Uncontrolled ascendency of imagination marks the Arab and endows his nature with a fascination all its own. An outdoor life is his heritage, and the things of nature are a part of himself. Spring he calls "grass;" summer is "gleaning;" autumn is "fruit;" winter is "rainy."

Double Photography.

Those of you who have seen films in which a player taking two parts appears in those parts at one and the same time, in the same scene, will wonder how it is done. The player, of course, does not play both parts at once. He or she plays one part, and while doing so the camera operator by one of his many tricks keeps blank that portion of the film on which the player is photographed taking his other part. When that part in which he has played is finished the operator winds back the film to the beginning, and the unexposed blank portion is exposed for the first time, while the other part is covered. Then the player takes the other part.—Pearson's.

A RECORD VOYAGE

When the Savannah Crossed the Atlantic to England.

CAUSED A REAL SENSATION.

She Was the First Steamship to Dare the Hazardous Trip, and This Exhibition of Yankee Ingenuity Aroused the Wonder of All Europe.

The honor of first navigating the sea with a steamer belongs to an American, Colonel John Stevens of New York. Transatlantic steam navigation was long discussed before any one combining sufficient skill with courage and a spirit of adventure made the bold attempt.

The London Times in its issue of May 11, 1819, thus announced the expected event: "Great Experiment.—A new steam vessel of 300 tons has been built in New York for the express purpose of carrying passengers across the Atlantic. She is to come to Liverpool direct."

On the very day that this brief notice appeared the vessel referred to was visited by the president of the United States and suit and made a short trial trip previous to her departure on the hazardous voyage.

This steamer, named the Savannah, the first that crossed any of the oceans, was built at the city of New York by Francis Ficket for Daniel Dodd. She was launched on the 23d of August, 1818. She could carry only seventy-five tons of coal and twenty-five cords of wood. The Savannah sailed from the city of Savannah, Ga., on the 25th of May, 1819, bound for St. Petersburg, via Liverpool. She reached the latter port on the 20th of June, having used steam eighteen days out of the twenty-six, and thus demonstrated the feasibility of transatlantic steam navigation.

As the Savannah approached Cape Clear, on the southern coast of Ireland, and smoke was seen to issue from her, it was at first supposed that a sailing vessel was on fire, and one of the king's cutters was dispatched to her relief. But great was their wonder at their inability, with all sail in a fast vessel, to come up with a ship under bare poles. After several shots were fired from the cutter the engine was stopped and the surprise of her crew at the mistake they had made, as well as their curiosity to see the singular Yankee craft, can be easily imagined. They asked permission to go on board and were much gratified by the inspection of this "naval novelty." Upon approaching Liverpool hundreds of people came off in boats to see the Savannah. On approaching the city the shipping piers and roofs of houses were thronged with persons cheering the adventurous craft. Several naval officers, noblemen and merchants from London came down to visit the boat and were very curious to ascertain her speed, destination and other particulars.

During the sojourn of the Savannah at Liverpool the British public regarded the boat with suspicion, and the newspapers of the day suggested the idea that "this steam operation may be in some manner connected with the ambitious views of the United States." One journal, recalling the fact that Jerome Bonaparte had offered a large reward to any one who would succeed in rescuing his brother Napoleon from St. Helena, surmised that the Savannah had this undertaking in view.

The Savannah remained twenty-five days at Liverpool and sailed for St. Petersburg on July 23, "getting under way with steam" and "a large fleet of vessels in company." The boat touched en route at Copenhagen, where it excited great curiosity, and also at Stockholm, where she was visited by the royal family.

On the 5th of September the steamer left Stockholm. On the 9th she reached Kronstadt, having used steam the whole passage, and a few days later reached St Petersburg.

Here the vessel was visited by the Russian lord high admiral, Marcus de Travys, and other distinguished military and naval officers, who also tested her superior qualities by a trip to Kronstadt. The Savannah remained at St. Petersburg until Oct. 10 and then set sail on her homeward voyage "in company with about eight sail of shipping." She arrived at Savannah on Tuesday, Nov. 30, and shortly afterward was taken to the navy yard at Washington.

The subsequent history of the Savannah can be told in a few words. On account of the great fire in Savannah her owners were compelled to sell her, and she was purchased to run as a packet between that city and New York, whither she was bound when she was lost on the south side of Long Island.—Philadelphia Press.

LOWER CALIFORNIA.

Rugged and Barren, It Was Once a Land of Fable and Adventure.

Lower California, once a land of fable, romance and thrilling adventure, is one of the most sparsely settled regions of the Mexican republic. It has an area corresponding in size to that of the Atlantic coast peninsula of Florida, but nearly 700 miles more coast line owing to its extreme length of 760 miles. Florida has more than fourteen times as many people.

Varying in width from thirty to 150 miles, Lower California is a rugged, barren strip of land, with a mountainous backbone largely of volcanic origin. For nearly 200 years after its discovery by the Spaniards it was thought to be an island.

The southern portion of the peninsula has some rain, but the northern section is dry and arid, producing cereals, tobacco, grapes, cassava and sugar cane only after being thoroughly irrigated. The mineral resources are valuable and varied. Gold, silver, lead, copper, salt, gypsum, turquoises, opals and garnets are profitably mined. The silver mines of La Paz were worked by the Jesuits as early as 1700, three years after the famous padre, Salvatierra, established the first permanent Spanish settlement in the land.

The magnificent Magdalena bay, on whose protected waters, forty miles long and twelve miles wide, the Pacific fleets of the American navy have conducted their target practice in recent years, was discovered by Francisco de Ulloa in 1539 while on a voyage of exploration seeking the pearls and gold of the "Amazons."

Lower California has two capitals—La Ensenada, with a population of 2,000, sixty-five miles by sea from San Diego, Cal., and La Paz, with 5,500 people, many of whom earn a livelihood from the port's pearl fisheries, which are among the most important in the world.

In addition to its pearl oysters the waters of Lower California yield sponges, tortoises, sperm and gray back whales, while in the bayous and river mouths of the east coast many alligators are to be found.

GIFT OF THE GAB.

Why Stephenson Thought There Was No Power to Equal It.

When George Stephenson, the perfector of the locomotive, was visiting the seat of Sir Robert Peel at Drayton on one occasion, says the writer of "Famous British Engineers," there happened to be present Dr. Buckland, the scientist, and Sir William Follett, the famous advocate.

Stephenson discussed with Dr. Buckland one of his favorite theories as to the formation of coal and, though undoubtedly in the right, was ultimately vanquished by the arguments and oratory of the doctor, who was a better master of tongue fence than himself. Next morning while pondering over his defeat in the solitude of the garden he was accosted by Sir William Follett and confided to that gentleman the story of his failure.

Sir William, acquainted with the details of the matter in dispute, agreed to take up the case and soon afterward attacked Dr. Buckland on the subject. A long discussion ensued, in which the man of law completely silenced the man of science, who was at last compelled to own himself vanquished. Sir Robert Peel, highly amused at this example of "tit for tat," then turned to the inventor and inquired, with a laugh:

"And what do you say on this matter, Mr. Stephenson?"

"Why," he replied, "I will only say this—that of all the powers above and under the earth there seems to me no power equal to the gift of the gab."

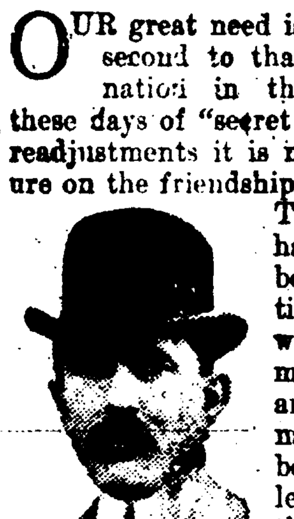
Our Navy Should Be as Powerful as That of Any Other Country In the World

By HERMAN A. METZ, Former Congressman From New York

OUR great need is a good navy, second to that of no other nation in the world. In these days of "secret alliances" and readjustments it is not safe to figure on the friendship of any nation.



HERMAN METZ,

The present war has proved this beyond all question, and it is well to bear in mind that if we are to have a navy it ought to be as large at least as that of the greatest naval power instead of as large as that of the second or third naval power.

Two smaller navies in conjunction under an alliance may be quite as large as the largest. The position of American commerce today and its absolute dependence on the will of Great Britain owing to her navy should teach us our absolute helplessness, so far as international trade and commerce are concerned, unless we are able to cope with and are as strong as any power that might seek to dictate to us.

ANYTHING LESS THAN THIS WOULD BE OF NO AVAIL AND NOT WORTH STARTING ON.

After the War Europe Will Look to America For Leadership In Peace

By Dr. J. A. MACDONALD, Editor of the Toronto Globe

PREPAREDNESS? Yes. If America is to play any worthy part in the gigantic conflict of ideas which will disturb the world long after the war of forces has spent itself IT IS HIGH TIME AMERICA MADE READY FOR THAT STRUGGLE.

But the readiness for which I plead on this occasion and in this presence is the preparedness of the American mind, the preparedness of the American conscience, the preparedness of the American will.

To America in the new day of the new world the desolated war nations look for leadership in those policies and programs that make for international peace.

FROM THE UNITED STATES MUST GO OUT THAT GOSPEL OF GOOD WILL AND THAT LAW OF INTERNATIONAL SERVICE IN WHICH IS THE HOPE OF EUROPE'S REDEMPTION AND THROUGH WHICH ALONE CAN COME PEACE TO THE WORLD.

TO TAKE OLD FIREPLACE TO NEW COURT BUILDING

Albany—When the Court of Appeals reconvenes in October it is expected it will be able to open the new court building which is being erected in the northern end of Capitol Park.

The court for many years occupied a suite of rooms on the third floor of the State capitol, just over the offices of the chief executive. There was a spacious hearing room on the east front, ornamented with rich carvings and panels while on the walls were portraits of former members of the Court and the foremost lawyers of the State. Back of the hearing room was the consultation room and private office of the chief justice. The clerk had an office on the fourth floor.

During the summer it is expected the old court room will be dismantled. Plans for the new court building provide for the assembling of the panels and portraits of the old quarters. The elaborate fireplace in the old court room also will be set up in the new structure.

Three years ago the Legislature made provision for the new home of the Court of Appeals and by legislative enactment appropriations were made for the remodeling of the old State house into a court of justice to be used exclusively by the Court of Appeals and the other officials whose work is connected with the affairs of the court. This necessitated the removal of the State Comptroller, State Engineer and the State superintendent of Banks. These officials are now located in the New York Telephone Company's building on State street opposite the capitol. The remodeling of the State house involves the construction of a new court room for which an addition in marble to match the old building has been constructed.

The new home of the Court of Appeals is situated between the Albany City Hall and the new Albany County building which includes rooms for the Appellate Division. The new quarters of the Court of Appeals will be distinctive and will be opened with appropriate ceremonies.

BUSINESS MEN LIKE NEW CHAMPLAIN CANAL

Albany—An inspection of the new Champlain barge canal through the canalized Hudson river between Troy and lock No. 5 above Schuylerville has just been made by a party of northern shippers.

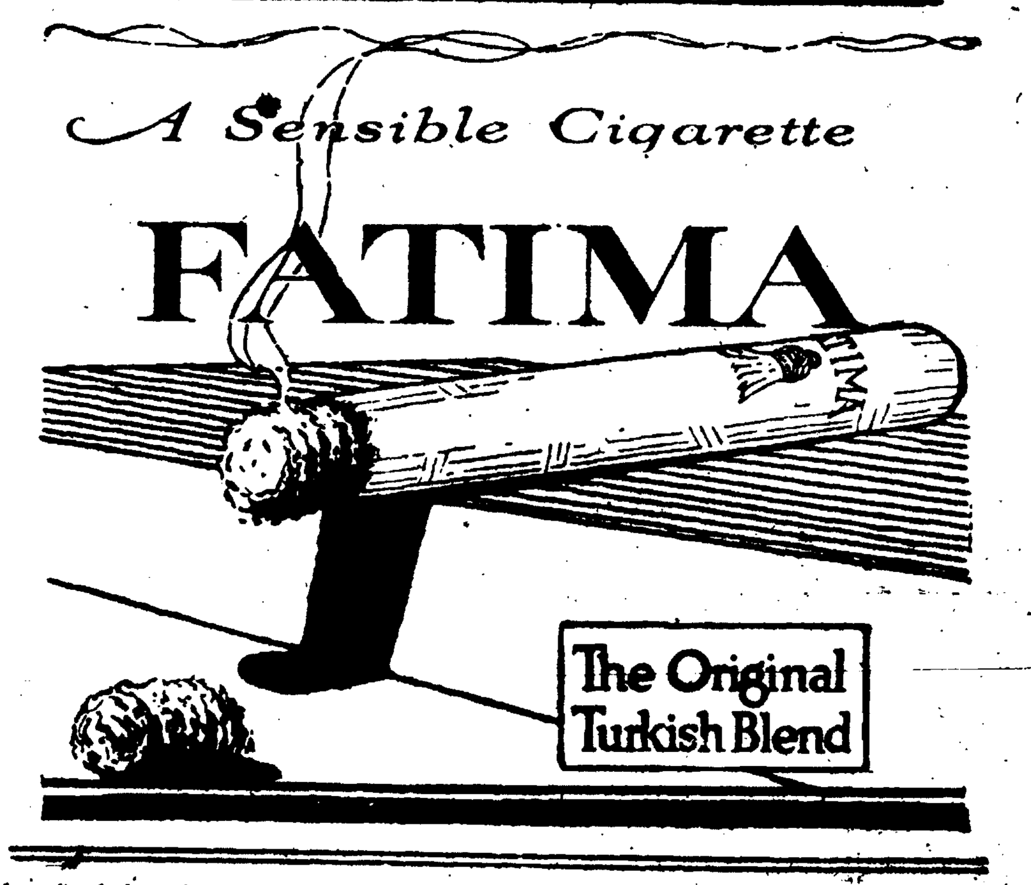
Those making the trip were Frank S. Witherbee and Walter C. Witherbee of the Witherbee-Sherman Iron Company of Port Henry and L. W. Francis and George C. Foote, of New York.

The object of the inspection was to ascertain conditions along the route which was opened for the first time this summer, so that arrangements may be made for shipment by canal. The Witherbee-Sherman company expects to ship ore from its mines near Port Henry to New York and southern ports and it is estimated that the company's total shipments will aggregate a million tons a year.

The inspecting party was impressed by the superiority of the new barge canal channel over the old Champlain canal both as to the larger dimensions of craft that may be used and the considerable shortening of the time of passage. To Superintendent W. W. Wotherspoon of the public works department they expressed themselves as being much pleased with the smooth working of the machinery of the new locks.

"Although rumors have reached us as to the existence of a strong current in the river," Frank Witherbee said, "we could see nothing but smooth water on our trip. Conditions of navigation were found to be excellent and while the channel above Schuylerville for a length of a few hundred feet is at present somewhat irregular owing to the progress of the work, it is easily navigable. We were much impressed by the magnitude and thoroughness of the canal improvement work."

Superintendent Wotherspoon is giving much study to the question of the best type of boats to be used on the new canal. He is collecting statistics which he will publish for the guidance of those who are to construct boats for use on the barge canal. The boats will be much longer and broader than those heretofore used on the canal.



STATE CAMP FOR BOYS TO OPEN AT PEEKSKILL

Albany—The New York State training camp for boys will be opened by the State military training commission on the State grounds at Peekskill about August 15th.

Provision for this camp was made in the Slater-Welsh law passed last winter. Dr. George J. Fisher of the commission has notified each member of the Legislature that he will be allowed to select one boy between 16 and 19 for the camp.

With each notification is a blank form for a medical certificate which each candidate is required to furnish. It is explained that where possible the medical examination should be conducted by the examining physician of the depot guard at the nearest State armory. Where an examination is not possible at the armory the certificate may be made out by any reputable physician.

The names of the boys to be designated by the legislators for camp duty are to be in the hands of the commission early in August. The camp will be under the direction of experienced military men. Each boy is to be eqiupped with an outfit which will cost about $15. It will include a coat, breeches, leggings, hat, extra breeches, a woolen shirt and russet leather shoes.

WHAT A BROTHER-IN-LAW THOUGHT OF ROOSEVELT

Albany—This is the season when the State capitol has its largest number of visitors, although it also is the least interesting time of the year so far as the State's business is concerned. The visitors are vacationists or bridal couples.

The visitors usually are met at the entrance of the capitol by veteran guides who head large parties on tours of the important offices and portions of the $26,000,000 structure. They are escorted through the panelled and carved corridors, given a view of the elaborate western staircase, taken through the senate and assembly chambers, the new legislative library, which is located in the section formerly devoted to the State library, and are entertained with remarkable stories, more fanciful than historic, which the guides tell.

The executive department on the second floor of the capitol always is attractive to the visitor. Those who visit the capitol at noon or four o'clock in the afternoon generally are able to see the Governor in his public office, unless he happens to be out of town. The executive chamber is a spacious room facing the east. Perhaps the most interesting features of the decoration are the oil portraits of the men who have served as Governors of the State.

Near the entrance is a life sized portrait of Theodore Roosevelt, who was Governor just before his election as vice-president. The portrait is characterized by characteristically energetic expression clearly indicating the activity of the former executive.

Recently a woman who had been inspecting the various objects of interest in the executive chamber pointed to the portrait of Governor Roosevelt.

"Just think of it," she said, turning to some strangers who were waiting to confer with Governor Whitman. "I have a brother-in-law who lives in St. Louis, and he thinks that this man is next to the Almighty."

An Inside Bath Makes You Look and Feel Fresh

Says a glass of hot water with phosphate before breakfast keeps illness away.

This excellent, common-sense health measure being adopted by millions.

Physicians the world over recommend the inside bath, claiming this is of vastly more importance than outside cleanliness, because the skin pores do not absorb impurities into the blood, causing ill health, while the pores in the ten yards of bowels do.

Men and women are urged to drink each morning, before breakfast a glass of hot water with a teaspoonful of limestone phosphate in it, as a harmless means of helping to wash from the stomach, liver, kidneys and bowels the previous day's indigestible material, poisons, sour bile and toxins; thus cleansing, sweetening and purifying the entire alimentary canal before putting more food into the stomach.

Just as soap and hot water cleanse and freshen the skin, so hot water and limestone phosphate act on the eliminative organs.

Those who wake up with bad breath, coated tongue, nasty taste or have a dull, aching head, sallow complexion, acid stomach; others who are subject to bilious attacks or constipation, should obtain a quarter pound of limestone phosphate at the drug store. This will cost very little but is sufficient to demonstrate the value of inside bathing. Those who continue it each morning are assured of pronounced results, both in regard to health and appearance.

CARTOONIST AT THE CHAUTAUQUA

Cimera's Band Delighted Audience Which Overflowed Big Tent---Children's Pageant Tomorrow, Last Day

Cimera's Band was the feature of the Chautauqua program yesterday. The organization consisted of twenty-seven American bandsmen of absolutely the best calibre. Its leader, Signor Cimera, a Bohemian, displayed the greatest control in conducting his colleagues and proved one of the greatest features of the week.

Miss Lillian Heyward was also very pleasing in her solos. Miss Heyward surely possesses a wonderful soprano voice and added variety to the entertainment.

In the two numbers "The Village Blacksmith" and "The Death of Custer" wonderful talent was displayed on the part of the band. Anvils were called into service and the scene depicted two swarthy smithy's at work at their anvils from which flew sparks at the stroke of their hammer. In the latter, the Battle of "Little Big Horn" was restored to memory by means of music.

Signor Cimera in his trombone solo was appreciated by the audience.

This afternoon Mrs. Sarah Tyson Rorer lectured on "Home Advancement." Mrs. Rorer is probably the best authority on this subject to-day, being the author of a widely recognized cook book which bears her name. Mrs. Rorer also has held the position of Dean of Domestic Science at Philadelphia for some years. Mrs. Rorer's lecture was very interesting and her advice on the subject of domestice advancement is very instructive.

Mr. Alton Packard will occupy the platform this evening. Mr. Packard is easily the leading cartoonist of the Lyceum platform. His slogan "Rare Fun Well Done" is true to his exhibition. Mr. Packard also accompanies his own piano monologue which adds to the mirth.

The Marigold quartet consisting of four young ladies of rare voice rendered selections this afternoon and proved very interesting. The young ladies have a splendid program and their appearance tonight will certainly be a drawing feature.

To-morrow, forty-five local children are to be seen in their pageant, "The History of the United States." This production has been under the guidance of Miss Mildred Luce of Iowa. Miss Luce has the faculty of gaining the attention of the young performers and through her charming manner she is able to interest them where others would fail. Her unexhaustible supply of stories gains the attention of the young folks and inspire them to their best efforts. The history of the United States will be depicted by uniform and make up from the early stages of the Indians through the Revolutionary War and into the Civil War. Past heroes of historical reputation will be represented and a very careful program has been arranged. Such scenes as the meeting of William Penn and the Indian Chiefs and the signing of the Declaration of Independence will be enacted. Great stress has been laid upon the young actors for this entertainment and will be one of the most pleasing features of the week.

PULASKI HARDWARE MAN A BANKRUPT

T. Alexander Campbell, hardware dealer of Pulaski, has filed a voluntary petition in bankruptcy at Utica, showing unsecured debts of $15,015 and assets of $13,761, divided in stock, $10,000; fixtures, $1,230; accounts $1,800, and other smaller items.

George W. Douglas, of Pulaski, holds notes for $8,832 given to purchase the stock and Charles K. Clark, of the same village is creditor for $2,995. There are several other creditors throughout Oswego county and several in Syracuse.

THE QUIRK TODAY

Kitty Gordon, in private life Lady H. H. Beresford, wife of the titled Englishman of that name, who has been one of the prominent and dominant figures of the English and American stage for years past, will be seen at the Quirk theatre today when the World Film production, "Her Maternal Right," will be the feature shown on the screen. In this picture Kitty Gordon wears three gowns that are the latest innovations of the modiste's art, but although her gowns are wonderful, her performance, from an artistic and dramatic standpoint, even excels her magnificent clothes.

GOOD MORNING JUDGE

The case charging assault by Mrs. William Fuller, against her husband, William Fuller, was brought to court this morning. Mr. Fuller pleaded guilty and was fined $5.00 with an overhanging sentence of sixty days in jail for the next offense.

A civil action in which the Wallace Amusement Company appeared against the American Express Company, was also on the docket this morning. The case was adjourned until the morning of August 15th, at 10:30.

EMPIRE'S MEN RESTRAINED

Signing of an agreement between the employes on the Oswego division, the Oswego city lines, and other branches of the Empire United lines, and the company officials has been delayed again because the road is in the hands of receivers and its financial affairs must be straightened out before any definite action is taken.

The men, members of the Amalgamated Association of Street and Electric Railway Association, are working now under an extension of the old agreement which has expired. Negotiations for the new agreement have been under way for some time and it was believed would be consummated this week at a meeting at Lakeland. When the meeting was finally held, T. C. Cherry, general manager of the line, announced that because of the receivership action would have to be postponed.

George Keenan, representing the Union, told Mr. Cherry that the fact that the road was in the hands of a receiver was not the fault of the employes, that they had nothing to do with it and that they were not responsible for the success or failure of the lines.

Mr. Keenan has not given up hope and believes that still an agreement will be made with the increased wages demanded by the man.

The Amalgamated men are asking for a rate of pay on the Empire Lines which will equal that which the New York State Railways are paying. This means an increase of about five cents per hour over what the men are now receiving.

As a result of a misunderstanding between the men and Mr. Cherry, the agreement to cover those employed on the Auburn and Syracuse road has not been signed. Mr. Keenan declared that this agreement will not be signed until some arrangement is made regarding the other lines of the road, and believes this will be in a day or so.

GRIMSHAW—HAVEN

Mr. Allen E. Grimshaw, of Adams, and Miss Jane L. Haven, of Syracuse, were married at the parsonage of the Methodist Episcopal Church here, yesterday, Rev. J. W. Barrett, officiating. The groom is a member of the firm of Grimshaw and Grow, which conducts a general store and garage at Adams. The bride is a Syracuse girl, but has been connected with the high school faculty of Adams for the past two years. After a brief honeymoon at Old Forge, they will be at home to their friends in Adams.

SPENCER—MACK

A very pretty wedding was solemnized at New Haven Monday afternoon, when Miss Lillian A. Mack, daughter of Mrs. Eva Mack, and Hazelton Spencer, son of Mr. and Mrs. Daniel Spencer, were united in marriage by the Rev. H. B. Hawkins, pastor of the Congregational Church. The church was very tastefully decorated with ferns and white blossoms by the young ladies, four of whom acted as ushers, preceding the ceremony.

CARS MAY ENTER CANADA FREE

New Ruling at Washington Peverses Decision That Made Dutiable Freight Cars of Foreign Build.

A ruling that directly affects railway traffic from Canada into the United States has just been handed down by the treasury department at Washington, to the effect that freight cars of foreign construction that are brought into the United States, in the regular course of business, may be used for carrying either local or through shipments on their return trip to the foreign country.

A previous decision of the treasury department had held that foreign-built cars brought into the United States and used in domestic commerce are dutiable. Then the question was raised whether or not such cars would be permitted to carry any domestic merchandise at all.

William P. Malburn, assistant secretary of the treasury, in his communication says that, following the long continued practice of the department, cars of foreign build brought into the United States from contigious foreign territories in international traffic, may be permitted to proceed to their destination in the United States and return loaded to the foreign country without being liable to payment of duty.

"Such cars," the assistant secretary declares, "may be used for carrying either local or through shipments in the ordinary course of business on the return trip, but should not be permitted to be used in purely domestic traffic not incident to the return trip to the foreign country."

The explanatory decisions from the treasury department results from a protest by a Canadian railway against the action some time ago of a United States Collector of Customs assessing duty on a railway car which he claimed had been imported into this country from Canada. The collector held, in fact, that the car was not a car in that he classified it as manufacture, composed in chief value of metal. He assessed duty on that basis. The protest was sustained by the board of general appraisers. The government appealed to the court of customs appeals and the decision of the board of appraisers was reversed.

In the final decision great cognizance was taken of the fact that the railway company operated the car in question between two points in the United States for a period of a month; also of the fact that the railway company made a formal entry of the car with the customs collector.

OSWEGO MAN ELIGIBLE TO STATE POSITION

Ralp J. Storm, of Oswego, was one of the several Central New York men who recently passed the civil service examination for junior assistant, division engineer. The position pays from $901 to $1,200 per year. About half a dozen others passed the test.

AN APPRECIATION

When the Susquehanna Conference of the Free Methodist Church held its session in the City of Fulton last September, they received a cordial welcome and many courtesies from city officials and citizens and the members of the conference were royally entertained.

This prestige is fully maintained in their treatment of the Syracuse district camp meeting which has just been held in the place upon the Fair Grounds. Not only did the Oswego County Agricultural Society let them the grounds at a generously low figure with the use of several buildings, but many courtesies were accorded them through the genial manager, C. H. Lockwood of Oswego.

Moreover, the Fulton City Lighting Company wired and lighted both grounds and tabernacle at considerable expense, but free of charge. Furthermore several of the citizens took many guests into their homes when accommodations on the grounds became overcrowded.

Such an attitude toward religious efforts for the salvation of men speaks well for the city and its citizens and is very much appreciated and gratefully acknowledged by the management of the camp meeting. Such a public spirit makes a city very attractive to the [illegible] pective citizens.

SYRACUSE MOVIE MEN DEFIANT

Professional Men and Newspapers Protest Against Enforcement of Antique Laws —Lively Times Expected.

Syracuse—Fifty-five motion picture theatre owners and managers, headed by Edgar Weil, of the Strand, president of the Motion Picture Exhibitors League, today defied Sheriff John P. Schoolosser to arrest them when they open their houses Sunday, after being ordered to remain closed by Commissioner of Public Safety Walter W. Nicholson.

Sheriff Schlosser declares that he will arrest every manager whose theatre he finds open. The theatre men say go ahead and in retaliation threaten to invoke upon the city blue laws, a century or so old, which prohibit candy or confectionery stores, newsstands and ice cream parlors from doing business on the Sabbath. They say they will also force both the city, private individuals and corporations to halt all kinds of work on Sunday.

The demand for the closing of the the theatres was voiced by the New York State Civic League, of which O. R. Miller is president. The Syracuse Evangelical Association, although opposed to Sunday shows, did not take the initiative in this case.

The theatre men declare that Sunday is their best day, and that in case they lose their fight and are forced to close they will raise the price. The five cent shows will go to ten, the ten to fifteen and the fifteen to twenty.

Both the Syracuse afternoon papers have rallied to the aid of the theatre men. Both papers print columns of interviews with Episcopal bishops, Catholic priests, doctors, lawyers, clergymen and men in all walks of life, voicing a protest against the closing of the shows. Following this up both publications print scathing editorials against the action of the officials.

The Herald says:

"The movement represents the temporary triumph of a petty species of fanaticism. It is the culmination of a persistent effort by a small minority of puritanic agitators to deprive thousands of the people of Syracuse, most of them hard toilers for six days in the week, of an innocent and inexpensive source of recreation on their day of rest. The crusade was organized, we believe, in the name and interests of religion, but there is apparently very little religion about it—certainly none of the religion that represents board humanity and the brotherhood of man."

The Journal says:

"It is now three months since the 'lid' was put upon the sale of liquor in Syracuse on Sunday, and yet, in the police court last Monday there were 17 charged with drunkenness. When a motion picture house is closed on Sunday, it is closed. There are no side doors. Yet consider the extra inducement for sidedoor violation if 75,000 motion picture patrons are forced to walk the streets for their sole attraction Sundays."

Bishop John Grime, of the Catholic Diocese, of Syracuse, declared he 'was entirely out of sympathy with the plan to prohibit Sunday baseball and as far as I can judge the step to close the picture houses on Sunday seems to be in the same direction."

The help of county and city officials is being sought by those opposed to the measure to prevent its being put into execution.

Commissioner Nicholson says he will stand by his guns and the theatre men are ready for the first attack.

WORSE THAN HE THOUGHT.

The Detective Got His Man, and Then Came the Disclosure.

The public today urgently demands shorter and shorter stories, says Stephen Leacock, the humorist, and the only thing to do is to meet this demand at the source and check it. Mr. Leacock accordingly has written a number of "Shorter Still" stories, which he contributes to the Century. Any one of them, he says, if left to soak overnight in a barrel of rainwater, will swell to the dimensions of a $1.50 novel. Here, for a sample, is "Our Irreducible Detective Story, Hanged by a Hair; or, A Murder Mystery Minimized:"

"The mystery had now reached its climax. First, the man had been undoubtedly murdered; secondly, it was absolutely certain that no conceivable person had done it. It was therefore time to call in the great detective.

"He gave one searching glance at the corpse. In a moment he whipped out a microscope.

"'Ha, ha!' he said as he picked a hair off the lapel of the dead man's coat. 'The mystery is now solved.'

"He held up the hair.

"'Listen,' he said. 'We have only to find the man who lost this hair, and the criminal is in our hands.'

"The inexorable chain of logic was complete.

"The detective set himself to the search.

"For four days and nights he moved, unobserved, through the streets of New York, scanning closely every face he passed, looking for a man who had lost a hair.

"On the fifth day he discovered a man disguised as a tourist, his head enveloped in a steamer cap that reached below his ears. The man was about to go on board the Gloritania.

"The detective followed him on board.

"'Arrest him!' he said, and then, drawing himself to his full height, he brandished aloft the hair.

"'This is his,' said the great detective. 'It proves his guilt.'

"'Remove his hat!' said the ship's captain sternly.

"They did so.

"The man was entirely bald.

"'Ha!' said the great detective without a moment of hesitation. 'He has committed not one murder, but about a million.'"

Too Much For Towne.

Charley Towne, the magazine editor and poet, was once asked to act as the judge of a prize story competition open to all aspirants.

He consented.

From the publishing house conducting the contest a huge burden of manuscripts was brought to him. Selecting a bulky envelope at random, he opened it and withdrew from it a great number of sheets of foolscap covered on both sides of the pages with fine writing done in purple ink and in a feminine hand.

Afterward, following his prompt resignation from the job of judge, Mr. Towne forgot the title of the story, but the opening sentence lingered in his memory. It was as follows:

"The day the ball was to be that night dawned auspiciously.—Saturday Evening Post.

An Open Giver.

Harold's father was in the habit of giving $1 a Sunday to the church. This was put in a numbered envelope in the collection plate and the amount credited to him on the church books. Mr. T. was away for the summer and on his return inclosed his arrears in the envelope and intrusted it to Harold to put on the plate. When the little boy came home from church he said proudly, "I put an awful lot of money on the plate this morning—more'n anybody else, I guess.

"You got the envelope there all right?" asked his father anxiously, for

PUT THE BILLS ON THE PLATE.

Harold had been almost afraid to carry so much money.

"Oh, yes," he said, "but I took the envelope off when I got there and just put the bills on the plate in my hand. Nobody'd have known how much I gave if I'd left it in the envelope."

A Mighty Big Can.

An Irish harvester found himself in a small Scottish town. At the gas works he saw a gasometer for the first time in his life and stopped a countryman who was passing to ask, "What's that big round thing there standing on end?"

The Scotchman scratched his head and replied, "A dinna ken."

"Get out with you," said the Irishman. "You never saw a dinner can as big as that in your life."

ALL ODDS FAVOR JUDGE SEABURY

Wagner's Indifference Ascribed to His Aspirations to Ascend to the Supreme Bench.

For Governor—Justice Samuel Seabury.

For Lieut. Gov.—Calvin J. Huson or Thomas B. Lockwood.

For Governor—Robert F. Wagner.

For Lieut. Gov.—Calvin J. Huson or Thomas B. Lockwood.

One of these two tickets will be endorsed by the "unofficial" Democratic state convention to be held at Saratoga one week from today. The odds at present are slightly in favor of Justice Seabury over Wagner, despite the fact that Tammany Hall Democrats are in line behind Wagner.

At the Saratoga conference the merits of all the candidates will be discussed extensively and a definite arrangement made as to which the organization leaders will back. Justice Seabury is an avowed candidate, has petitions out and claims to have the backing of leaders in half a dozen counties. Senator Wagner, has been quoted as saying that he was not seeking the nomination. His friends, however, insist that he is still in the race and are continuing their work for him.

The opposition to the candidacy of Justice Seabury appears to be of two sorts up to the present time, the real and the unreal. The real opposition some of the leaders frankly say was based on a religious issue. The unreal opposition comes from the hard and fast organization men who want to see the Judge impressed with the fact that the organization is necessary to his success, and who hold, at the same time, that if Mr. Seabury is to be the nominee it will do him no harm to have it appear that the organization, especially Tammany, was not over anxious to accept him.

Nearly all the leaders who were at the recent Democratic conference in New York city admitted that after the Saratoga conference it would probably appear that Mr. Seabury would be given the support of the organization in the primaries, which if carried out would mean that he would be nominated.

The backers of Mr. Seabury, speaking of the Wagner candidacy, declare that the State Senator is not at all anxious for the nomination and that he is seeking a Supreme Court Judgeship. State Chairman Harris is also of the opinion that an up-state man should be chosen as the Democratic standard-bearer.

Meantime both Democrats and Republicans alike are preparing for an old fashioned, slam bang, walloping, mud slinging campaign. They have both opened headquarters in Albany and have a corps of men at work collecting all sorts of data about the past lives of the candidates and these facts will be rushed to the front as ammunition for the campaign orators when the fireworks begin.

The Democrats are digging deep into the expense of the trip of state officials to the coast exposition and promise all sorts of sensations when they start firing their heavy artillery.

GAS PRICES DROP IN NORTHERN COUNTIES

Watertown—A gasoline war in the various lake and river resorts in this section has developed within the past week.

A week ago the dealers in all the surrounding villages were arousing the ire of local motorists by charging 26 and 27 cents a gallon for gasoline. Then came the Texico Company from Texas, with offices at Cape Vincent. The Texico Company, in order to compete with the Standard Oil Company and the Northern Oil and Fuel Company, dropped the retail price of their commodity to a price equal to that paid by the retailers themselves, 24 cents a gallon.

Watertown—A contract has just been closed through J. P. Morgan & Company with the New York Air Brake Co., for 600,000 fuses for high explosive shells for the British government. The previous order, amounting to 1,250,000 fuses, will be completed August 17. The amount of the new order is a little over $1,000,000.

RAIN IN CERTAIN PLACES HELPFUL

In some sections improved weather conditions are helping the farmers. In the central, western and northern parts of the state the weather has been unusually hot and dry for several weeks. This the farmers say, has been favorable for harvesting and a rapid growth of corn and ripening of grain. A second crop of alfalfa has been cut in some sections, the raspberry harvest is coming to a close and the wheat harvest is nearly finished. Pastures, however, are poor, because of the lack of rain, in many places.

Grapes, the farmers declare, are coming along well, while apples have fallen off considerably, but give promise of a fair to good production.

Potatoes, beans and oats have done fairly well, but the yield of oats is expected to be poor in some sections.

The oat crop in some sections has been attacked by rust, but a good yield is promised for central New York where this disease has not made its appearance to any great extent.

Barley, rye and buckwheat are reported good.

THIS WAS FIELD DAY AT PATHFINDER ISLAND

Field day is being held this afternoon at Pathfinder Island, a large crowd taking advantage of the fine weather to go down the river to enjoy the fragrant breezes.

A close and interesting game of baseball was played. Tennis tournaments have also been arraigned and many challenges will be played off. The tennis court has recently been repaired and already the courts have been engaged for matches.

Dinner will be served at 6:00 by the club steward, Olonzo Holmes. Dancing will be enjoyed later in the evening.

A BOY'S STRANGE ESCAPE.

Lies In Dugout While Bombs Are Thrown on Him.

London.—One of the most extraordinary experiences was gone through recently by an English boy in woodland fighting in the region of Bazentin-le-Grand and Longueval.

He now lies in a field hospital smiling because the world seems to him like paradise after an infernal dwelling place.

He went with the first rush of men into Mametz wood, but was left far behind in a dugout when they retired before the violent counterattack. Some German soldiers passed this hole where the boy lay crouched and flung a bomb down on the off chance that English soldiers might be there. It burst on the lower steps and wounded the lonely boy in the dark corner. He lay there a day listening to the crash of shells through the trees overhead—English fire—not daring to come out. Then in the night he heard the voice of his own countrymen, and he shouted loudly, but as the English soldiers passed they threw bombs into the dugout. The boy was wounded again.

He lay there another day. The gunfire began all over again and lasted until the Germans came back. Another German soldier saw the old hole, threw bombs down as the safe thing to do, and the boy received a third wound. He lay in the darkness one more day, not expecting to live, but still alive, still eager to live and to see the light again. If only the English would come again and rescue him! He prayed for them to come, and when they came, capturing the wood completely and finally, one of them, seeing the entrance of the dugout and thinking the Germans might be hiding there, threw a bomb down, and the boy was wounded a fourth time. This time his cries were heard, the monotonous repetition of this ill luck ended, and he was rescued.

FLOG "DIPS" OUT OF OWN.

Detroit Police Have Novel Way of Getting Rid of Pickpockets.

Detroit, Mich.—The police department has hit upon the plan of flogging "dips," or pickpockets, as the best means of ridding the city of them.

This came out when Attorney Thomas Mahon made a request of Commissioner Gillespie for an investigation of the police department to determine who has been applying the "lash." Investigation has developed that a "lash" has not been used, but instead the "dips" have been flogged with pieces of rubber hose of the garden variety.

Recently half a dozen "dips" were arrested. The men were taken to court and released on their promise to leave the city. That afternoon they were taken in a patrol wagon to the bank of the River Rouge.

Three detectives, each with a three foot strip of hose, took positions on the bank where the "dips" when they stepped out of the wagon would have to pass them. As the pickpockets jumped out the detectives began to swing the pieces of hose, landing on the backs and arms of the "dips." Some of them cried out in pain, others ran to escape the flogging and most of them had to wade or swim the river. As they left a warning was shouted to them to never return.

VATICAN HAS SHIP

For First Time Since 1870 Papal Flag Flies Over Steamer.

TO CONVEY REPRESENTATIVES

Painted With White and Yellow Stripes—Safety Said to Be Guaranteed—Reported Von Buelow Believed Best Way to Punish Italy Was to Restore Temporal Power to Pope.

Rome.—For the first time since 1870 the Papal flag is flying over a steamer owned by the Vatican, and strangely enough, it is sheltered in the Civita Vecchia harbor with the consent of the government at Rome. When United Italy under Victor Emmanuel II. established the house of Savoy at Rome in 1870, the pope was deprived of all power and position as a sovereign. He became a voluntary prisoner in the Vatican, while the king housed his court in the former papal palace of the Quirinal. As every king has been a devoted Catholic, the enmity between the king and pope has been a political expediency, a fiction in fact. Loyalty to the Catholic church on the part of influential members of the Italian cabinet, combined with the fear of German submarines, has brought to the pope the privilege of flying his own flag once more in Italian waters. The steamer has been bought by the Vatican to convey officials of the Catholic church whom the pope desires to send abroad as his representatives. The first voyage will be to South America, to convey the new papal nuncio, Mgr. Bassallo di Torregrossa, to Buenos Aires.

The steamer, to be known as the Nuncius, is painted with broad white and yellow stripes easily distinguished by submarines. Its safety is guaranteed, it is understood, by one of those secret agreements with Germany of which the papacy has been accused at various times by the quadruple entente. There would appear, however, to be no necessity for such a guarantee after the German government had been informed that such a vessel was on the high seas. Nothing would be gained by its destruction through a submarine. On the other hand, to grant it safety, even without this being requested by the [illegible] hearts of Emperor William's Catholic subjects and stimulate their loyalty to him.

Prince von Buelow, a diplomatic envoy at the Vatican in his younger years, long before he was German ambassador at Rome, has always been friendly to the papal government. It is reported in London and has been for eight or nine months that Buelow believes in the restoration of temporal power to the pope as the best method of punishing Italy for participating in the war against her former allies of the triple alliance. While making extended visits to Switzerland Buelow has had frequent consultations with Catholic cardinals and other dignitaries of the church.

The pope's refusal to align himself on the side of the quadruple entente and especially to make public any protest against the invasion of Catholic Belgium by the Germans is declared in England to be due to a promise made by the sovereigns of the central empires that his temporal authority is to be restored after the war. The plan is, according to these reports, to make the pope the political as well as the spiritual sovereign in Palestine. A small state would be established, including Jerusalem and the other holy places as well as the seaport of Jaffa. The territory is believed to be enormously rich in natural resources and to be able to support a cardinal viceroy, who would rule there in the name of the pope.

The British government a few months after the beginning of the war made the extraordinary move of sending a minister to the Vatican, Sir Henry Howard, who had had a long diplomatic experience. This was a recognition of the pope's status as a sovereign, which Britain, along with all other non-Catholic governments, withdrew from the pope in 1870. Russia at the same time reopened her legation at the Vatican, where there had been no envoy for some time on account of the refusal of Russia to grant Catholics the protection which the papacy demanded. France has had no representative at the Vatican for some time, and neutral Catholic countries like Spain had also broken off diplomatic relations with the pope before the war.

Never Was "Union John."

Of the objects whose name is derived from the diminutive of John the union jack cannot claim to be one. In the days of chivalry the knights and men-at-arms wore a surcoat, or "jacque," as it was called, bearing the emblem either of their nationality or of the lord to whose service they were sworn. Gradually the word was transferred to the banner which was carried before the army, and this use of the word still survives today in the name of the British national flag and also that of the small flagpole at the bow of a ship known as the "jackstaff."—London Chronicle.

Two Sets of Muscles.

These inner muscles require training, just like any other muscles, by intelligently directed exercise.

WOULD ABOLISH IDLENESS EVIL

Organized Labor In California Plans to Stop Unemployment.

ADVOCATES BASIC REFORMS

Proposes to Shift Burden of Taxation From Industry to Privilege and Monopoly—Reduction of Hours of Labor Would Eliminate Many Abuses of the Industrial System.

By PAUL SHARRENBERG, Secretary San Francisco Labor Council.

The organized workers of California regard unemployment within our state as a wholly unnecessary evil.

It may be contended that it is very difficult and even impossible to do away with unemployment in the thickly populated industrial centers. But somehow no one has been found who can show good reasons why unemployment has become an issue in our own rich and fertile state which by her comparison with other countries should comfortably support many, many times her present population.

To eradicate this unnecessary evil in California organized labor has for years advocated certain fundamental reforms.

First, in order of importance, is the proposal to shift the burden of taxation from labor and industry to privilege and monopoly—in other words, to make it unprofitable for the land speculator to "hold on" to thousands upon thousands of idle and unimproved acres.

Second, but perhaps equally as important as "freeing the land," is the reduction of the working hours.

Working hours have been reduced by organizations and by legislation. California has done well by enacting the eight hour law for her working women, but much remains to be done in reducing the daily hours of our male working population.

The organized workers in California demand a reduction of the hours of labor because it would give a due share of work and wages to the reserve army of labor and eliminate many of the worst abuses of the industrial system now filling our poorhouses and jails. The movement for the reduction of the hours of labor is contemporaneous with the introduction of labor saving machinery and has been the most faithful of all reformatory attempts of modern times, since it has clearly revealed the power of the working people to realize an improved industrial system and raises the hope that we may yet be able to stem the tide of economic, social and moral degradations, robbing those who work of a great part of their natural wages and keeping the whole of society within a few months of destitution.

Finally, organized labor believes that there should be a greater restriction of immigration. It is very well to talk about America as the haven of the oppressed. For all I know it may be quite true that America is "big enough" to provide homes for all the teeming millions of Europe, but the fact is that we seem to be unable to properly care for those now here. So it is submitted that greater restriction of immigration is one of the important and essential steps that must be taken for the solution of the unemployment problem of our country.

At present organized labor in California proposes to abolish all employment agencies operated for profit. Many years ago congress passed a law which made it illegal to collect a fee for furnishing employment to seamen. This drove the crimps out of the business. And in view of the fact that in this state upward of $500,000 is now paid annually into the coffers of the employment agents by men who can least afford it, because they are out of work, it seems evident that we badly need legislation which will drive these land crimps out of business.

California state employment bureaus as they are now operated and conducted have accomplished a great deal, but as long as private bureaus exist they will never receive the patronage of a large number of employers.

As a pleasing contrast to this I beg to call your attention to the fact that in the shipping business on the Pacific coast men have been hired for a great many years without the aid of any bureaus, public or private. The employment bureaus for the shipping industry of the Pacific coast are maintained by the seamen's organizations to the satisfaction of workers and employers. Neither side pays a fee for this service, and if this state of affairs is possible for 10,000 men in one of the principal industries of the Pacific coast then we may well apply the same system to the other industries in our state.

THE GROUP PLAN OF INSURANCE

Merits and Failings of New Scheme of Employers.

BAIT OFFERED TO WORKERS

Significance of the Fact That Propositions of This Kind Are Never Introduced Into Union Shops—What Wage Earners Want Is Sufficient Wages to Provide For Their Own Future.

One of the new schemes that certain employing interests are bringing out is to insure the lives of their employees. A newspaper clipping from a Milwaukee (Wis.) newspaper reads as follows: "Following close upon other large manufacturers of the city, the F. W. Mayer Boot and Shoe company announced recently that it had taken out a group policy of life insurance on nearly 400 of its employees. The policies will be absolutely free to employees of his company."

There are several things about this proposition of group insurance, so called, to which we would like to call the attention not only of our members and other trade unionists, but of fair minded employers as well, says the Shoe Workers' Journal.

First of all, we wish to draw attention to the fact, which may fairly be regarded as significant, that propositions of this sort are never introduced into union shops. Why? Because in the union shop the workmen have the machinery to obtain some sort of fair adjustment of the wage question and are not to be subsidized by a sop to be thrown to them when they are dead.

This group insurance plan says to the wage earners: "If you have been good boys and have worked for me at my prices and conditions for a year or more I will insure your life free of cost to you while you continue in my employ at the wages and conditions which I shall fix for you without any of your assistance or advice."

The moment a wage earner leaves that employment he ceases to be insured. While he has worked there he has worked at the employer's price, and yet the employer has nerve enough to tell him that he, the employer, is giving the wage earner life insurance free of charge.

Does the employer really pay for this insurance? Certainly not. His intention is to offer the insurance as a bait by which to lure the employee to work contentedly for him at a low wage scale, so that when the employer has paid the insurance premiums he has made a net profit on the labor.

Looked at from the shortsighted angle, this may appear to be good business to such employers. An employee may work, for instance, for $3 to $6 a week less money and in ten years may have received $1,500 to $3,000 less in the pay envelope, but can comfort himself with the cheerful reflection that when he is dead his family will cash in $500.

As a farsighted business proposition we submit that this group insurance plan is not a good industrial policy. We think it will appeal to the average fair minded business man that it is better policy to give the wage earner a fair standard of living. Wage earners will be better satisfied with a more satisfactory pay envelope here and now than with a life insurance policy which at best will only give their family a pittance after they are dead and which the employer can discontinue any time he sees fit.

Suppose, for instance, the F. Mayer Boot and Shoe company or any other concern carried on this group insurance for a period of five years and at the end of that time dropped it. If their employees have remained in their employ because of the insurance then there is five years of their life which they have spent qualifying for an insurance policy which has been taken away from them.

We are quite certain this group plan of insurance is not for the benefit of the wage earners. We doubt, even, if it is for the benefit of employers. It appears to be a good thing for the life insurance company, but is a dubious business for them to be engaged in. This is the first time within our knowledge when a life insurance company of any standing has attempted to intervene between capital and labor in a way calculated to assist the employers and induce the wage earners to forego their right of organization. Before any life insurance company shall deny that this group insurance plan is open to criticism let it show instances where employers running union establishments and paying the union scale of wages have done business with the life insurance companies upon the group insurance plan.

Interest in employees, as evidenced by this plan of group insurance, looks decidedly hypocritical. What wage earners want is something in the pay envelope, the right to a comfortable living and the means wherewith to pay for it. They also want the right and the means to provide for their own future. It would be well if employers would take the matter home to themselves and see how they would like it if their employees would undertake to provide and regulate the future conduct, conveniences and final destination of the employer.

Skirt To Wear With Blazer Waists.

A smart waist and the proper skirt to wear with it, blazer striped lawn and cotton gabardine being used, respectively. Buttons trim the skirt.

For wear with the blazer striped waists so fashionable just now, there must be the proper skirt—one that is simple in line and hangs well, for elaborate skirts with gay waists are not a happy combination.

Suitable to development in gabardine, serge, flannel or linen is the five-gored model shown here. It may be made with an inverted plait at center-back or with habit back. Two styles of pocket are provided and the width of the design at the lower edge is about 3 yards. Medium size requires 2¼ yards 44-inch material. For the waist, about 2½ yards 36-inch batiste or lawn will be needed.

That the home dressmaker may be properly guided in the cutting of the skirt, today's lesson is limited to that subject. By the aid of the cutting guide, it is possible to see just where the various parts of the pattern belong and how they should be placed to save material and insure a perfect fit. The front gore of the skirt is laid on a lengthwise fold of material, with the piecing to the right of it, on a lengthwise thread.

The side and the back gores are laid along the selvage edge of the goods, the straight line of the pattern resting directly on the selvage, and the line of large "O" perforations on a lengthwise thread. The belt is laid on a lengthwise fold, but the pocket and lap are on lengthwise threads.

If the skirt is to be made with the habit back, then the back edge will have to be cut off the back gore along line of small "o" perforations. The front end of the belt may be cut off at small "o" perforations, if desired.

When one sees how easy it is to make a skirt that looks so smart, it is not surprising that many women cling to their objections to ready-made models. The model that is developed by the home dressmaker avoids the pitfalls of materials that have not been sufficiently shrunken and careless finishing.

To Make Mushroom Ketchup.

"Mushroom ketchup may be made after the following recipe," says a writer in Farm and Fireside:

"One peck mushrooms, carefully picked over; one pint vinegar, two tablespoonfuls salt, one-half teaspoonful cayenne, two tablespoonfuls mustard, one tablespoonful cinnamon, one-half teaspoonful mace, one-half tablespoonful cloves.

"Cook the mushrooms with one cupful of water until quite tender and rub them through a colander. Add to this pulp the vinegar and spices and cook about half an hour longer. Bottle and seal.

"This sauce is delicious with fish, steak and cold meat."

The Supernatural In Nippon.

Interesting stories are told of a Buddhist image in a temple in the suburbs of Kyoto. According to a record contained inside the image, it was carved by a famous Buddhist priest, and it is believed that the worshipers of the image will surely receive divine favor. At one time when a fire broke out in the temple, unknown to the caretaker, the image awoke him by calling "Fire!" and thus saved the temple from destruction. Another story says that the image was once stolen by a thief, who, however, fell dead when he was running away. Still another report says that no dust ever accumulates on the head of the image.

HOW FAIRIES TEACH MUSIC.

Adventures of a Polite Boy and How He Was Rewarded For His Courtesy. Entertaining Items For Children. Two Waders.

"Well, children, what shall it be—a fairy story?" asked Uncle Ben, and little Ned and Polly Ann both answered, "Yes." So he told them

A HIGHLAND LEGEND.

In the days when fairies lived in the hillocks that rose all through the highlands there lived an old piper who had three sons.

Now, the profession of piping was a most honorable one, and the old piper was very anxious to have all his sons follow in his footsteps and become pipers like himself.

Two of them had no trouble at all in learning, but Conal, his youngest boy, was a great trial to him, for try as he might he couldn't master a single tune, no matter how easy it was.

Poor Conal was very unhappy.

One evening he was wandering around, thinking mournfully of his want of skill, when on nearing a green hillock around which he had often played when a little lad he saw that it was open.

Of course Conal knew it was a fairy hill, for every one in the land knew all about the fairies.

Conal also knew just what to do in a case like this, so, taking his knife, he stuck it in the doorway and boldly entered the fairy hall.

The little people were by no means pleased to see a mortal in their own home and crowded around him, angrily demanding:

"Why do you come here? What do you want in our house?"

Conal, who was seldom scared at anything, was not alarmed now and answered:

"I want you to help me, for well I know you can."

"And what help do you want?" they asked, for Conal was making a good impression on them, he was so polite.

"I want to learn to play the pipes. I am so stupid I cannot bring from them even one little air. Now, I know you are masters of all kinds of music, so do please help me!" said Conal.

"Well, that means no harm to us!" said the fairies, for they were gratified to see that Conal was only asking a favor.

"Well, well, Conal, you have always been a good boy. You have never scoffed at us, and we'll teach you to play."

So they brought forth a fine set of pipes, and they showed Conal how to use this finger and how to use the other and how to blow his breath and how to hold the pipes.

What a wonderful lesson that was! Soon, very soon, Conal was fingering and drawing forth entrancing melodies as well as the fairies themselves.

It was true ever after. Conal was the finest piper in the whole country, and his fame went abroad even to other lands.

ABOUT HANDBAGS.

Infinite Variety of Styles For All Individual Tastes.

Everywhere one goes the new handbags are most noticeable. Here is a new fashion which has definite variety. No two of them resemble each other. Any woman of taste can design her own handbag and have something personal and unique.

These bags are on the order of the famous pocket of Lucy Lockett—that is to say, they are of the reticule type and hang over the arm by ribbons or chains. They seldom have the gate or silver frame, but draw up through rings or in simple old fashioned style through a fold.

These bags are sometimes knitted bead affairs. A very stunning one often seen is so large one expects to find fancy work inside. It hangs over the arm by long platinum chains. The upper part is of suede leather, the lower part knitted in varicolored stripes. There are also saddlebag shapes which hang over the arm. These are made of dark moire silk, generally heavily embroidered and fringed with several colors of beads. Others are embroidered with steel or silver beads.

One extremely large silk bag has a heavy silver frame. The bag part is made of beautiful brocade, often intermingled with gold or silver threads and fulled into the silver frame. It is so large and the chains so long that when held over the arm it drops more than halfway down to the knees.

The only sort of arm bag which resembles those carried last season are small shapes, the frames all covered with striped or plain taffeta. These should match the dress worn. The bead frame bags often have little all over patterns of contrasting colored beads.

All bags, whether of the reticule or frame bag type, are fitted inside with the usual small mirror, pocket powder puff, etc. A very odd fancy of the moment seems to be to go gloveless. The gloves are buttoned or snapped together at the last fastening and thrown across one end of the bag, saddle bag style. It looks very odd to see these white gloves, more or less clean, dangling over the bag.

For a shopping bag the very flat, thin envelope type seems to be the most popular. The polished and seal leathers are the most seen, and this bag has generally a leather handle on one side which can be slid along until it is a mere hand strap through which to thrust the hand.

Hand or arm bags show signs of wear quickly, and nothing takes away from a costume more than a shabby bag. This new style may be easily fashioned by the girl at home, for the inside of the bag is lined and faced with flat pockets to hold the vanities, which may be taken from old cases and recovered

Extra Fine Piecrust.

One cupful of lard, two cupfuls of flour, one tablespoonful of lemon juice, three-quarters of a teaspoonful of salt, one egg and sufficient cold water to hold the mixture together. Sift the flour and salt into a basin. Flour the blade of a knife and chop the lard into the flour, being careful to keep the flour between the blade of the knife and the shortening. When the mixture looks like meal add gradually the egg, well beaten, and mixed with the lemon juice. Roll the pastry into a ball with the knife. It may be used at once, but it will be improved if allowed to stand in a cool place for one hour. This pastry should be rolled out once and handled as lightly as possible. Bake in a hot oven. Lemon juice makes gluten of flour more elastic, so that dough stretches rather than breaks as paste is rolled out.

Brief Military Messages.

Of famous military messages there are scores, beginning with the never to be forgotten "Veni, vidi, vici" of Caesar and that equally famous dispatch of Commodore Perry, "We have met the enemy and they are ours," but both were beaten for brevity by General Sir Robert Boyd, who while governor of Gibraltar, being in need of beef for his troops, wrote to the agent in England this laconic dispatch, "Browne, beef, Boyd." Browne sent the stores, with the reply, "Boyd, beef, Browne."

A King's Library.

Frederick the Great employed architects to build a library, but they fought with true professional etiquette over their designs. The monarch who had braved the might of Europe was not to be defeated by a parcel of nagging professional men. "Confound you," said the king, "don't waste any more time! This cupboard opposite me is of a very good design; copy that." They did as they were ordered.

A Suggestion For Outdoor Wear.

The charms of outdoor exercise are heightened by this costume consisting of a striped skirt and plain blouse. For the most novel detail of the blouse, note the shape of the pockets.

There is nothing smarter for outdoor wear than this blouse and skirt in a clever amalgamation of striped and plain materials. The blouse closes on the left shoulder and at the left under arm seam. It is made with open neck and round collar, the long one-piece sleeves being so designed that they can be shortened to elbow length, if preferred. The skirt is a two-piece affair with high waistline and may be made with or without pockets.

To reproduce this model in medium size requires 3 yards 44-inch material for the blouse and 3¾ yards 44 inches wide for the skirt.

The simplicity of the blouse makes it very easy for the home dressmaker to cut. The front is laid on a lengthwise fold of the goods and the collar is placed on the checked material in the same way as illustrated in the cutting guide, directly on the fold. The pocket is laid opposite the front, with the straight edge resting on the selvage. The collar and cuff sections come next, to the right, but on a lengthwise thread, then the stay. Last on the lower row is the back of the blouse, laid on a lengthwise fold of material.

This is one of the most fashionable models of the season and it finds expression in a great variety of materials—jersey cloth, pongee and Japanese silk, serge, flannel, etc. The waist is slashed each side of the center-front and through the incisions a straight sash of material or ribbon may be inserted. Leather belts are used quite extensively, the most desirable models being in bold effects.

Some of the sports skirts and coats have stripes formed of bands of worsted in Roman effects put on by hand. A Germantown wool is used, each stripe being a different color. This embroidery goes very quickly as the bands are not padded and the simple satin stitch fills in rapidly and smoothly. Of course the idea can be carried out in two or three as well as in many colors.

A Jaunty Sports Dress

A sports costume of jaunty design carried out in plain and checked awning cloth. Collar and belt match the skirt.

One must keep an eye on sports frocks, for they continue to occupy a place in the front rank of fashion. Very jaunty is this model with blouse in Norfolk style, box plaited below a shaped yoke. The skirt is a plain four-piece model. Plain awning cloth is used for the jacket and the same material in check design for the skirt, belt and collar.

In medium size the design requires 2½ yards 44-inch plain and 2⅞ yards striped material, same width. Very graceful lines will be gained for the costume, if the cutting guide is followed carefully. First take two open widths of material and place them on the cutting table, right sides facing. The sleeve and front gore of the skirt are laid on a lengthwise thread of the cloth, as near the selvage as possible. Of course, if the sleeve is made to match the jacket, it is cut of plain material, but arranged in the same way as shown on the cutting guide. Along the opposite selvage edge the back gore of the skirt and front of the jacket are laid, showing just how these sections are to be placed when being cut.

The long one-piece sleeves flaring at the wrists strike a new note in outing costumes. Although simple the skirt is admirably appropriate for sports use. It is gathered at the top and closes at the front.

Striped and charming polka dotted handkerchief linens are much liked for tailored and sport costumes, but white and flesh color models are still the favorites for general use.

Some of the smartest blouses intended for sport and morning wear are simply made but of fine material and each one has more than a mere suggestion of charm.

The KITCHEN CUPBOARD

THE PRESERVING KETTLE.

WATERMELON PRESERVES.—Peel and prepare the rind of one large melon. Cut pieces as thin as possible and soak overnight in salt water. In the morning wash off salt water and drain. To each quart of rind add one quart of sugar and a pint of water and one lemon sliced thin. Cook until rind becomes transparent.

Canned Blueberries.—Pick over and wash berries, then put in preserving kettle with a small quantity of water to prevent berries from burning. Cook until soft—not mushy—stirring frequently and put in jars. No sugar is required, but a sprinkling of salt is an agreeable addition.

Cherry Preserves.—Take one quart cherries (pitted), one fresh pineapple (cut into small cubes) and one quart sugar. Put one pint water on sugar and boil until it will spin a thread; then drop in the cherries and pineapple and boil twenty minutes.

Tomato Preserves.—Choose small yellow tomatoes if yellow preserves are desired or little red tomatoes if red preserves are desired. Peel and prick them with a large needle and boil slowly for half an hour in preserving sirup (using one pound of sugar to one pound of tomatoes), with juice of one lemon to every two pounds of tomatoes; then skim out the tomatoes and let them remain two or three hours in the sun to harden. Then put the white of an egg, well beaten, into the sirup, boil well, pour over tomatoes and then seal.

Damson Preserves.—Take an earthen vessel that will stand heat and place in it equal quantities of damsons and sugar in alternate layers until the jar is three-fourths full. Then cover and place in slow oven. Cook three hours.

Cherries Preserved With Currant Juice.—Select the sour variety, using two quarts of sugar to three quarts of currants. Heat in a preserving kettle, crushing the currants as they boil up. Then strain through cheesecloth. Add the cherries to the fruit juice, stir in the sugar over the fire, using equal weights of sugar and cherries; bring to a boil slowly and skim. Boil twenty minutes, put in jars and seal. This makes an acid preserve that is fine.

AUTOISTS LOOK FOR GYPSIES

Binghamton authorities have warned those of different cities to be on the lookout and on their guard against a new and novel gypsy band with 1916 ideas in gypsy life and 1916 model ideas of eking out a livelihood as they go along. This band recently passed through Bingo to the discomfort of a number of Bingoists, or whatever they are, and to the deep chagrin of a number of others who suffered monetary losses.

This band of modern Nomads is traveling de luxe in automobiles. They have five cars, all bearing Mississippi license plates. They left Binghamton to the relief of the authorities there and are believed to be headed this way. Recently they have been seen in the vicinity of Cortland, but only slowed up there long enough to get a few supplies and tell a fortune or two.

Aside from the automobiles the gypsies are not much different than the usual brand that are common during the Summer months. The women wear galy colored dresses, shawls and headgear, are of swarthy complexion and the large earrings are present among the males and females alike, but when it comes to getting along, they are said to be a smooth lot and will bear watching every minute.

Their operations in Binghamton have excited the Broome County sheriff who has been searching that part of the county for them for several days, but has failed to locate them.

This band of gypsies with automobiles are far removed from the ordinary band with horses who depend upon ther skill in selling and trading to make the greater part of their living. The Broome County sheriff declares that this band is composed of real thieves and they are smooth enough at the light fingered game to own automobiles and keep them running.

Although they travel in cars, the children are as dirty faced as those of any other band, the men as lazy and shiftless and the women as active in the way of getting into the good graces of persons whom they rob.

How a band of gypsies can make enough money to own automobiles and travel in them is perhaps best explained in an instance where the gypsy queen fleeced Clarence VanDyck out of a $20 bill and did it in a rather smooth manner while Van Dyck was carrying on an experiment to see how the queen of the Nomads carried out her game.

VanDyck according to the Broome County authorities, met the band out in the country. He was approached to have his fortune told and submitted to the temptation when the queen of the tribe offered to perform the occult work.

As the queen started to tell his fortune she instructed him to remove all of the money from his pockets. Van Dyck was pretty well fixed, carrying $80 with him, but he only took out a $20 bill. He says that she then covered his hand and her own with a handkerchief.

Then she began to chant some strange jargon and as she spoke VanDyck could feel the bill slipping through his fingers, the girl working cautiously. He grabbed her hand and she laughed a merry laugh as he pulled it away.

"Put it down deep in your pocket and your luck will be great for that money is blessed," she said.

VanDyck laughed inwardly as he drove away, thinking that he had been clever enough to outwit the queen of this band, but later he found that instead of a $20 bill he had a one dollar note. He reported the mater and the Broome County sheriff is sending out warnings to other cities to be on guard.

OSWEGO GLOVE WORKS START UP SEPT. 1

The Oswego Times says: Representatives of the Suede-Tex Glove Company were in town yesterday making the final arrangements for the starting of the new industry in this city on September 1. Accompanied by Contractor Peter Raby they spent nearly all day in the Wright & Boyle plant planning the alterations which will be made to the building before it is utilized as a glove factory. A number of partitions will have to be put in and the floors rebuilt. Mr. Raby expects to start work on the job next week.

TO SEEK PARDON FOR FORMER COUNTY MAN

Watertown—Attorney Jerome B. Cooper, who with Attorney N. B. Smith of Pulaski defended George Eddy of Theresa on the charge of murder in the first degree, Eddy pleading guilty to manslaughter in the first degree after the case started, has not lost hope of freeing his client and will make application to Governor Whitman sometime in the future for a pardon for Eddy. Mr. Cooper says that the governor has promised him that he will do anything for him that he can.

This information was forthcoming this morning when it was learned that D. J. Winnie, a keeper in Auburn prison where Eddy is confined, was in the city and that Mr. Cooper had seen him. Winnie is the guest of George W. Murray of the Henry Keep Home who was for some years a keeper in the prison. Mr. Winnie told Mr. Cooper that Eddy was in his office and that he (Winnie) has charge of the correspondence. He says that Eddy still has hopes of getting out and returning to his wife and children at Theresa, still having a great regard for his wife. Mrs. Eddy and the children are both at Theresa, although Eddy is under the impression that she and the oldest daughter are in Troy. The children occasionally write to their father, but it is at prolonged intervals that the wife writes him. It was six years ago that Eddy was sent to Auburn for indeterminate term with the period of 10 years as the minimum. Several attempts have been made by Mr. Cooper to get a pardon for Eddy who shot down one Reid in Pulaski after he had learned that his wife had been unfaithful and Reid was the responsible party. Eddy was at liberty for several days and was finally taken into custody in Theresa, having returned there by a circuitous route. The trial was started at Pulaski before Justice De Angelis who insisted on someone from that county being assigned to defend Eddy although Mr. Cooper had represented Eddy from the moment that he was taken into custody. The people's case was concluded when Eddy decided that rather than tell the story of what led up to the murder, he would take a chance on pleading guilty to manslaughter. His defense was to have been "the unwritten law."

Former Governor Dix had the matter of a pardon under consideration the last days of his administration, his brother-in-law, Curtis N. Douglas, a former resident of Theresa using his influence to assist Mr. Cooper. It is understood that the former governor said that if he could be assured that Eddy would return to the wife that he would grant the pardon but this assurance was not forthcoming.

Mr. Cooper had a petition for a pardon signed by every supervisor at the time in Jefferson, Lewis, Oswego and Onondago counties, with the exception of George H. Hooker, who declined to sign.

Mexican Government Wants to Discuss Situation

SPECIAL MASTER FOR HUNTER ARMS COMPANY

(Special to the Evening Times)

Norwich, N. Y. Aug. 5—At the conclusion of a hearing in Federal Court here today Judge Ray is expected to name a special master to investigate the allegation that $114,000 additional assets have been discovered belonging to the Hunter Arms company.

Basis for this allegation was found recently at a meeting in Syracuse of the trustees of the bankrupt concern Frank B. Hodges, H. B. Smith, of Syracuse, and Frederick A. Gage, of Fulton. A week ago evidence was unearthed that indicated that about $30,000 had been used to pay personal debts of the Hunter brothers and additional investigation disclosed that perhaps $114,000 more had gone in the same manner. The trustees appeared before Judge Ray today and asked that this be investigated.

It is claimed that the money went from the funds of the Hunter Arms Company in the form of checks to various banks and individuals. In the opinion of the trustees the persons and banks receiving this money knew at the time that the company was in financial straits and should not have accepted them. These banks are located in Oswego, Fulton, Syracuse, New York and Philadelphia. They were all named in the petition presented to the court by the trustees.

In case Judge Ray names the special master all the books of the bankrupt concern as well as those of the Hunter Brothers themselves will be investigated by the special master.

The trustees are going to urge that the greatest haste be made in the matter becaus it is feared that some of the claims will be outlawed unless prompt action is taken.

When the matter of the investigation of the use of the $30,000 was brought to Judge Ray's attention a week or so ago the trustees suggested that suits should be brought against all the individuals and banks who received the money in an effort to recover it. This suggestion brought a protest from several New York banks who contended that what there is left should not be used up in prosecuting lawsuits.

Street Railway Strike at New York holds up Traffic

(By United Press)

New York, Aug. 5—Incipient rioting and hundreds of acts of petty violence mark the opening of the latest development in the biggest street car fight in the history of America's greatest city. After a few of the rioters and the gathering of the strikers were disbursed by the police, however, New York waited to see how tight the tie up would be. That the strike would spread to Staten Island was expected hourly. When the men on the line there go out the strike will be carried to every surface line. Men of the Seventh avenue line joined the strikers this afternoon.

The company has not received the demands of the employees and an invitation to meet the workers at any time is regarded as unsatisfactory. The men are demanding the right to organize and to force other demands on the company.

Germans are Heavy Losers in Fight at Pozier Last Night

London, Aug. 5—Germans second line position on the front, of more than 2,000 yards north of Pozieres, were captured by the British in a resumption on Somme of Ossensing last night General Haig reported to the war office this afternoon several hundred prisoners were taken. The attack was delivered by the Australians on troops of the new army and was completely successful. Repeated German counter attacks against one division were repulsed, Germans losing heavily. The only other activity reported consisted of minor operations.

The Flag and the Man!

WILL MEET TO MAKE AGREEMENT

Because of the failure of officials of the Empire United Railways and the Amalgamated Association of Street and Electric Railway Employees to reach an agreement regarding working conditions on that railroad, arrangements have been made for another meeting next Monday when it is probable that the terms of the agreement will be decided upon and the document signed.

It is understood that the only question delaying the agreement is the matter of the length of hours of the various "runs." It is said the company has agreed to the increase in wages, which will place the Empire United men on the same wage basis as those of the Empire United. The company officials, however, want a change from the present hours of the "runs" while the men want the present order maintained. The men claim that the company itself instituted the present system and they do not see any good reason why it should be altered now.

The last meeting of the officials with Manager T. C. Cherry resulted in a deadlock. The session adjourned and no time was selected for another conference.

George Geenan, international vice president of the union will hold a conference with members of the union Monday morning at eleven o'clock and then at eight in the evening will meet with more representatives. A vote will be taken and it will be definitely decided what course to pursue in future meetings.

OSWEGO RIVER TO BE DEEPENED

Plans for the execavating of the Oswego river from the lower end of Lock No. 8 in the city of Oswego to deep water at an estimated expenditure of $25,280 have been approved by State Engineer Williams. State approval has also been obtained for the channel in the city of Rochester to cost about $1,675,000.

BURNED BY LIVE WIRE

Harry Hoaks was severely burned this morning at the Arrowhead Pulp and Paper Company. A bare wire of high voltage happened to be within the vicinity where Mr. Hoaks was working and not being conscious of this fact he came in contact with it.

Dr. Joy was summoned and removed the injured man to the hospital. Besides a few burns and a severe shock Mr. Hoaks was none the worse and a speedy recovery is expected.

Uncle Sam has decided to be a little easier on Oswego county delinquent income taxpayers as well as those throughout the country, and has granted more favorable terms for settlement than were at first announced.

At first Uncle Sam demanded that any compromise offer must be at least $20 in addition to the regular tax as well as a fifty percent penalty. Now Uncle Sam will be willing to take $5 extra from individuals and $10 from corporations. These sums, however are in addition to the regular tax and a penalty of fifty per cent. of the original tax.

This revenue district which comprises about twenty counties have many delinquents on its books. These people if they make the above compromise offers will not have it accepted at once as official notification of the new order of things has not yet been sent out. However the officials of this district will send on their offers to Washington and it will be decided there.

DEMPSTER GROVE.

New Haven, N. Y., August 5—The numerous cottages and tent sites of old Dempster are being rapidly occupied by pleasure and profit seekers, who are thus looking to combine the restful and recreative with the religious opening of the Camp Meeting. A dozen or more families are enjoying the beauty, the shade, the cool breezes, the delightful spring water and other natural conveniences of this historic spot.

For nearly forty years the Methodists and others from a wide region round about have assembled here yearly in the month of August for rich "times of refreshing" physical and spiritual. The meeting this year will open Friday evening, August 18, and will continue ten days, after the "old time" camp meeting plan.

Evangelist Charles R. Drum, of Syracuse, will speak each afternoon and evening. District Superintendent W. M. Caldwell, of Rome, will be in charge, and he will preach Sunday morning, August 20. It is expected that Billy Sunday or Peacock trail hitters will speak Sunday morning, August 27.

The forenoon services week days will be Quiet Hour, "Mount Tabor" gatherings addressed by prominent ministers of Ontario District.

Rev. H. D. Holmes, of Fulton will be the musical director and Mrs. Holmes will superintend the children's work.

SYRACUSE MOVIE SHOWS WILL OPEN TOMORROW

(Special to Evening Times)

Syracuse, N. Y., Aug. 5—Every Syracuse motion picture theatre that has been in the habit of running Sunday will open its doors at two o'clock to-morrow afternoon in open defiance of Sheriff John P. Schlosser, who acting at the demands of the New York State Civic League says he will arrest every manager or owner who opens his house.

Sheriff Schlosser today reiterated his determination to close up the Sunday houses in compliance with the demands and says every man arrested will be arraigned in the Court of Special Sessions Monday.

The Motion Picture Exhibitors League through president Edgar Weil, of the Strand, issued a statement today to the effect that the League will pay the court expenses of every theatre manager who is arrested for keeping open tomorrow regardless of whether he is a member of the league or not.

Speculation is rife whether any arrests will be made. It is an open secret that many of the county and city officials are in favor of Sunday shows. They have allowed themselves to be quoted to that effect in the newspapers. Some believe there will be no arrests, others think there will be a few while still others hold to the opinion that the "lid" will be clamped on tight.

The Exhibitors League has retained counsel and is acting in accordance with his advice. They will all open and expect as fast as they are arrested to be taken to the station, arraigned, and released on bail, after which they will re-open their houses.

Sheriff Schlosser is arranging his small army of deputies for the work and it is believed a concerted move on several houses will be made at the same time.

Public opinion here favors the theatre men. The two evening publications bitterly denounce the action of the Civic League in their editorial columns and again today followed up their attack with columns of interviews with representative men in all walks of life, bankers, lawyers, clergymen, doctors, and others denouncing the closing of the shows. Many of the city officials have broken into print against the new rule. Mayor Stone has jumped on the neutrality fence and refuses to budge.

The theatre men declare that Sunday is the best business day of the week and that with this revenue cut off a great majority of them would go in the hole. They declare that if they lose their fight and are compelled to close that their only avenue of escape will be in boosting the prices, the five cent one will go to ten, and a five cent advance made on all the others. Some of the theatres are just about breaking down even as it is they say and several of them have been forced to charge six cents now in order to keep their heads above water.

The district attorney's office is all ready to prosecute the cases. Assistant District Attorney John M. Mosher has been assigned to the Court of Special Sessions Monday. There will be two distinct charges made against each man arrested.

First—He will be charged with operating his theatre on Sunday.

Second—He will be charged with violating the labor laws by hiring operators, ticket sellers and takers and ushers on Sunday.

A new angle has been brought into the fight today when certain attorneys declared that the proprietors of theatres who were arrested and brought into court might have a case for damages against the authorities for the ill repute and bad name his house would suffer through his arrest.

One threat by the theatre men today set a lot of people thinking. The managers declare if they are forced to close they will file a demand with the sheriff's office that every kind of store in the city be closed, that every kind of work be stopped and that even ice cream parlors be closed up. This is in conformity with century old blue laws, from which they claim the Sunday theatre statute was taken.

Because of the varied decisions that have been rendered by the courts on the matter, the local men say that now they intend to settle once and for all in this state whether a motion picture theatre will be allowed to remain open on Sunday. They will go to the highest courts to get a decision.

Interest in the case is widespread as similar battles have been staged in Oswego, Fulton, Auburn, Geneva, Ithaca, Binghamton and a score of other cities in this section.

British Lost Headway Russians Were Repulsed

(By United Press)

Berlin, Aug. 5—Reports of Russian attempts to cause Spain trouble at Decina River near Dwefta was announced by the war office this afternoon north west of Zalosze. Repeated Russian attempts were repulsed. The war office announced today the British troops lost headway in an attempt to advance in the sector north of Oziller and in Foureaux.

THE FULTON EVENING TIMES

Published Daily, except Sunday, at the Grange Building, East First Street, Fulton, New York.

Entered as second-class matter at the Post Office at Fulton, New York, under Act of March 3, 1879.

DWIGHT J. ROBBINS, Owner and Publisher

SATURDAY, AUGUST 5, 1916

LET US REASON TOGETHER,

The evening papers of Syracuse realizing that a practical newspaper man now has charge of the Fulton Evening Times are evidently putting forth every effort at their command to kill YOUR local paper. They have employed extra help, and are sparing no expense, to accomplish their end and the question is: What are YOU going to do about it? If you are lending them your moral and financial aid you are assisting in tearing down instead of building up your home daily—a publication that stands for Fulton—not Syracuse, with Fulton as a tail to the kite. It is lamentable that more of our citizens and business men do not stop to consider, and realize the true condition. It is easy enough for them to criticize their local daily and make comparisons, but hard for them to understand that it is impossible to print a New York American or Post-Standard in a small city the size of Fulton.

We realize that there is room for improvement in the Evening Times and the same would be rapidly made if the paper was accorded the support it is deserving of, as now being conducted. We want your advertising Mr. Merchant, but we want it on a strictly business basis. There is no necessity for annoying you by continuous personal solicitation. You understand the condition thoroughly. If you want a good daily newspaper in this city it is up to you to assist in making it. Many western cities pay a large bonus for the establishing of a daily newspaper to advertise their town. We are asking no bonus nor soliciting alms—neither would we accept them—but when the merchant has a publication that is issued daily in the city where he is doing business we contend that he can get no better results for his investment than by patronizing it—not spasmotically, but regularly, every day. To those who are interested in having an organ to advertise Fulton to the outside world disseminate the daily news to our citizens, and furnish a medium for the merchant to advertise his goods—a combination that is essential to the growth of any city—we ask you not to pass this up lightly, but to give it due consideration and interest yourself in the matter. Talk it over with your neighbor. Get together. Make suggestions and they will develop into something tangible. You want the Fulton Evening Times. We want to make it for you. Do it now!

Telephone or bring in that advertisement for every day next week and watch results.

Duty is a power which rises with us in the morning and goes to rest with us at night. It is the shadow which cleaves to us, go where we will, and only leaves us when we leave the light of life.—Gladstone.

Is it not a duty you owe to yourself, your fellow man and your city to get behind your local daily?

Mr. Merchant: Why not call a meeting of the storekeepers and arrange for a systematic campaign of advertising with your local daily? You will receive beneficial results.

Improved Methods of Business Assure Continuation of Prosperity

By EDWARD N. HURLEY, Chairman Federal Trade Commission

THE manufacturers and business men of this country are awake and are preparing to improve their business conditions by co-operating and by adopting systems of cost accounting and more efficient methods of manufacturing. This is fundamental and most essential and will enable us to meet any condition that may develop. Our vision has broadened. We are doing things on a large scale.

WHERE WE FORMERLY THOUGHT AND WORKED IN A PROVINCIAL WAY WE ARE NOW WORKING AND THINKING NATIONALLY AND INTERNATIONALLY.

We have never been more prosperous. It is estimated that only 5 per cent of the goods manufactured in this country are war munitions.

With every man and woman desiring work employed, with most favorable prospects of an enormous crop, almost every factory running night and day, with the total value of building permits the largest in our history, with railroads and shipping at the highest mark, with every bank in the country carrying an exceptionally large surplus that they are desirous of loaning to business men, I feel that this country will not only continue to be prosperous, but at the end of the war we will be called upon to supply money and material FOR RECONSTRUCTION AND DEVELOPMENT THAT WILL EXTEND OUR PROSPERITY FOR MANY YEARS.

thousand votes. The Boss is right to be perturbed.—Brooklyn Standard Union.

The Court of Appeals while deciding the legislative apportionment of 1916 unconstitutional so far as it applies to the laying out of Senate districts in New York county unanimously upholds the division of the state into fifty-one Senate districts. When the bill was under consideration in the Legislature the Democrats contended that there should be but fifty senators.

Nevertheless, there are some sincere mourners at the grave of the Bull Moose. The Democrats would shed gallons of real tears if that would bring him back. He was their best friend.—Cuba Patriot.

HOTEL MANAGERS BOOST

National Touring Week Bug has bitten even the larger hotels throughout the country. These hotels, constantly catering to the touring motorist, readily enter the spirit of Touring Week. Notices are being sent out by some of the larger Tourist hotels throughout the country calling attention to National Touring Week and to the advantages of a sojourn at their respective hostelries.

Good hotels and good garage are as much a desired feature of touring as good roads. Long before the present good roads, which new exist in practically every state, the resort hotels catered to motor car owners and received his patronage. With some of these resort hotels today the motor trade represents from fifty to seventy-five per cent. of the guests. This is specially true of the seaboard, lake and mountain resorts, the recreation or playgrounds of Mr. American Tourist.

SELECTED EDITORIALS

The Advertiser-Journal, Auburn:

The New York World gravely proclaims that, although it was Mr. Hughes's "chief newspaper supporter" (sic!) in 1908, it cannot support him now because there is "no appeal to the independent voters in Mr. Hughes's speech of acceptance and in his campaign for president." It could 'no more support him than it could support William Barnes or Boies Penrose or Joseph G. Cannon." Or William H. Taft, or Theodore Roosevelt, or Senator Burton, or Albert J. Beveridge, or a thousand and one other Republicans, The World might have added.

A more unadulterated piece of sophistry could hardly be imagined. No more palpable journalistic imposture has occurred thus far in the present campaign, if in any other campaign. The World could not and would not support anybody, even from High Heaven itself, on the Republican ticket. The World is a Democratic newspaper, masquerading at times as "independent." It supported Mr. Hughes in his breach with the Republican organization—not because it loved Hughes more, but because it loved the Republican Party less. It believed the G. O. P. could be ruptured by the means. It has always jumped in when opportunity offered to inflict damage on its hereditary enemy. Now that Mr. Hughes is in agreement with the party at large, The World has no further use for him.

Moreover, The World's bitterly partisan support of Mr. Wilson has been notorious, and for at least two years brutally denunciatory of all who ventured to criticise the president. It has neither tolerated opposition nor admitted flaw. Its definition of the man it has elevated to the pedestal would make him incapable of human error, let alone wrong action. What The World means is that it could no more support anybody other than Mr. Wilson than it could condemn Mr. Wilson's policies. Consistently it does neither; inconsistently it maintains that its position is due to some newly-discovered frailties in Mr. Hughes and to his wicked alliance with "reactionary" forces.

The point is that the New York World, as a leading administration organ, is the prototype for various newspapers that pose as "independent," although they are inveterately Democratic and inevitably partisan. They would support a "yellow dog" sooner than they would support a Republican nominee for any office. For purposes of their own they further disruption in the opposing party, and pose as public benefactors; but they are always found right where they belong when their partisan interests are at stake. They were "for" Mr. Hughes when they thought his candidacy meant Republican defeat; they cannot find words to impeach him when they find him working hand in hand with the other leaders of his party.

Our belief is that nowadays most people do not favor partisan politics and extremist newspapers. But they must respect newspapers which have convictions and live up to them. They always know where to find such newspapers. The day of the old-fashioned party organ, which sees no virtue in anything outside its narrow sphere, poses of self-interest adopts the Pharisaical attitude of the New York poses of sel-interest adopts the Pharisaical attitude of the New York World should pass with it.

Hughes Points the Way

The speech of the Republican candidate for President was a keynote speech, indeed. Not one person in the great audience at the Carnegie Hall meeting was in doubt for one moment as to just what he meant by everything he said.

His address was comprehensive, logical, clear and all sufficient for the occasion. There can be no dispute as to this. Plainly Mr. Hughes is a man who "knows what he wants when he wants it," and it is the opinion of political authorities who heard him and who have since read his remarks that he knows, also, how to get it.

It was incumbent upon the Republican candidate to confine the scope of his remarks to the limitations of the occasion, but his crushing analysis of the shortcomings of the present administration of the government is merely an earnest of what the tone and the contents of his speeches will be when he gets on the stump.

At Carnegie Hall Mr. Hughes adverted to every general question that is apt to be a serious issue in the campaign and in language that will be absolutely clear to every man or woman able to read he stated his opinions, his convictions and his purposes. On the stump he will argue those points in detail. As an orator he is eloquent, his personality attractive and his marshalling of facts so cohesive that he holds his audience to the end. He makes it easy for them to follow him and his points are not lost.

There was nothing equivocal, nothing apologetic in the Republican candidate's speech of acceptance. He called a spade a spade, and the unanimous opinion of those who heard him was that he shot to the center and rang the bell. The Republican campaign is now open, and those who will speak and write and work for the success of the Republican ticket can wish for no more adequate campaign document, no more satisfactory statement of issues than are found in the candidate's salutatory.

Brief Sentences Featuring the Speech of Acceptance of Charles E. Hughes.

America First and America Efficient.

We are too great a country to require of our citizens who are engaged in peaceful vocations the sort of military service to which they are now called.

We cherish no illusions. We know that the recurrence of war is not to be prevented by pious wishes.

We denounce all plots and conspiracies in the interest of any foreign nation.

Adequate preparedness is not militarism.

During this critical period, the only danger of war has lain in the weak course of the Administration.

The Nation has no policy of aggression toward Mexico. We have no desire for any part of her territory.

We propose that in the competitive struggle that is about to come the American workingman shall not suffer.

This representative gathering is a happy augury. It means the strength of reunion. It means that the party of Lincoln is restored, alert, effective.

The dealings of the Administration with Mexico constitute a confused chapter of blunders. It is a record which cannot be examined without a profound sense of humiliation.

We must take Vera Cruz to get Huerta out of office and trust to other nations to get our own citizens out of peril. What a travesty of international policy!

Destroying the government of Huerta, we left Mexico to the ravages of revolution.

I stand for adequate Federal Workmen's compensation laws.

The Administration was to seize and punish Villa for his outrage on our soil. It has not punished any one; we went in only to retire.

I favor the vote for women.

THE COMPELLING PERORATION TO MR. HUGHES' ACCEPTANCE SPEECH.

We live in a fateful hour. In a true sense, the contest for the preservation of the Nation is never ended. We must still be imbued with the spirit of heroic sacrifice which gave us our country and brought us safely through the days of civil war. We renew our pledge to the ancient ideals of individual liberty, of opportunity denied to none because of race or creed, of unswerving loyalty. We have a vision of America prepared and secure; strong and just; equal to her tasks; an exemplar of the capacity and efficiency of a free people. I endorse the platform adopted by the Convention and accept its nomination.

People Should Be Allowed to Observe Sunday In Their Own Way

By Dr. ALBERT PARKER FITCH, President of Andover Theological Seminary

TAKE this matter of Sabbath observance. We do not want twentieth century Americans to keep it as Puritans surely. The day should be kept for what it represents. Behind Sunday is an immense sanction, not the sanction of books or codes, but the sanction of the needs of humanity. Men need one day in which to look for higher, cultivating things that they cannot find in the other six days.

Think of the working conditions and the limited opportunity for recreation during week days of factory hands and lesser employees.

They have the right, the very sanction of God, to get something of recreation and relaxation besides worshiping on Sunday.

IT IS WRONG TO SAY THAT ALL MUST KEEP SUNDAY IN THE SAME WAY. WHEN WE LET MEN KEEP THE SABBATH IN THEIR OWN WAY WE ARE DIVORCING OURSELVES FROM SHAM.

Higher Mathematics.

In answer to those who argue that study of the higher mathematics is waste of time for the average student, Dr. Robert E. Moritz, professor of mathematics at the University of Washington, asserts in School Science and Mathematics that only such study can develop the following powers of the mind:

1. The power of undivided attention and prolonged concentration.
2. The power of exact definition, of clear statement and of critical analysis.
3. The power of deductive reasoning, of drawing logical conclusions from given premises.

Electricity on Trains.

Those who wonder how the electricity used for lighting trains, operating fans in coaches and the like is generated should know that it comes from a turbine generator, which is usually geared to the axle of the car, the motion of the train operating it and supplying the current at no cost but that of "deterioration of machinery."—Chicago Journal.

Life Chances at Forty-five Good.

It may astonish you to know that if you are forty-five years old you have a better chance to live ten years longer than you had of living ten years when you were only twenty-five years old.

From a great life insurance company I have the mortality figures for 100 healthy men at twenty-five. In the first decade after that age five of the 100 die. In the second decade, or from thirty-five to forty-five years old eleven die, showing that to be a critical period in human existence.

Between forty-five and fifty-five four pass out, while in the subsequent decade sixteen fall. Of the little army of 100 there still remain thirty-seven at the age of seventy-five.—Exchange.

"That's what dad thought when 72 per cent of his coal supply disappeared during three nights of exposure. Then he asked my advice, as a student in chemistry, and I told him to buy a dog. He bought a dog, with large sized teeth, and now we don't lose 1 per cent of our coal a month. That's practical chemistry."

TICKET SLATED FOR NEXT WEEK

Sentiment among Democratic leaders both up-state and down-state has veered sharply during the past week from Justice Samuel Seabury toward Senator Robert F. Wagner as the man to head the state ticket this fall. According to the latest predictions Tammany's influence has been swung in the scale against Justice Seabury. This is the ticket which it is said the Tammanyites want:

For Governor—Robert F. Wagner.
For Lieutenant Governor—Calvin S. Huson.
For United States Senator—Samuel Untermeyer.
For State Controller—Michael J. Walsh, Westchester.
For State Engineer—E. E. Farley, Queens.
For State Treasurer—G. B. Fluhrer, of Orleans.
For Attorney General—James A. Parsons, of Steuben.

This slate it is said is the one that Charles F. Murphy wants. It is not final and therefore subject to revision. The first three however, are not apt to be changed. What these changes are to be will be decided at the unofficial state convention at Saratoga next week to recommend candidates to the Democratic voters.

It is declared that the two head places on the ticket are practically settled. Orders have been issued it is said to "go through" with the nominations of Mr. Wagner and Mr. Untermeyer.

According to reports the action of Justice Seabury in flirting with the Progressives is what has switched the organization men against him and they are determined now to put a straight organization ticket in the field.

This action, however, will not by any means eliminate the Justice from the fight. He has a wonderfully strong organization working for him all over the state and he will be in at the primaries with a fair chance of victory in case Tammany decides to back Wagner.

Senator Wagner is known to have protested against putting his name on the slate. He says he does not want the nomination. Then according to reports several other men were considered, but the up-state men could not agree on any one man. The leaders declared they must find some one who could give Seabury a good race and have a chance for victory and finally it was decided to draft Senator Wagner. Strong protest has been heard against filling the ticket with New York city men. As it stands four places are given to New York city or nearby.

Charles E. Tremain, of Ithaca was given some consideration for the gubernatorial candidacy, but finally his backers have been convinced he would not command the necessary strength in the primaries and he was shelved along with Seymour Van Santvoord and Edgar S. K. Merrell, of Herkimer.

LILY AND NEMO TO RACE TOMORROW

The annual cruise of the Fulton Yacht Club will be held Sunday afternoon. The fleet will make the trip to Three Rivers, where dinner will be served. Commodore Oliver will head the fleet with the Uncas, which has been remodeled for the season, and it is expected that fifteen boats will make the trip.

The boats will leave the lock at the lower bridge at 10:30 a. m., and the second division of the fleet will be led by the Lily, captained by John Painter. At 3:30 p. m. at Three Rivers a one mile race will be held between the Lily and the Nemo, owned by Bernard Crahan and "Rube" Carlin, to finish a series between the two boats. So far each boat has captured two races, and the contest Sunday is exciting the interest of all the boat owners on the river. The return trip will start at 7:30 from Three River Point, and the fleet probably will reach Fulton about 9 o'clock.

RUNAWAY ON ONEIDA STREET

Mrs. Clara Wood, of South Granby, received a deep laceration and a severe shake up yesterday afternoon when she was thrown from her carriage onto the pavement. Mrs. Wood had come to town for the purpose of transacting business and was driving down the Oneida street hill when the harness broke, letting the wagon down on the horse's feet.

The horse became frightened and dashed headlong down the street crashing into the touring car belonging to C. W. Streeter. The wagon was turned upside down in the collision but the horse continued to run, Mrs. Wood held tightly to the reins and was dragged a considerable distance through the street. She was removed to the Putnam drug store from where medical attention was summoned. Dr. Hall arrived and discovered a deep laceration on the forehead, several small cuts and bruises and a severe shake-up.

The lady was removed to her home where she is resting comfortably.

CHAMBER WILL GIVE DINNER

The Chamber of Commerce has arraigned for a dinner and a meeting at Pathfinder Island Monday evening. This is the beginning of the fall campaign of the organization. Commencing at 5 p. m., and running at fifteen-minute intervals until 6:15, automobiles will carry the members to the island.

The meeting was called by Willis P. Morin, president of the chamber, who is also acting as secretary of the organization. It is understood plans will be discussed for several large manufacturing plants wishing to locate in the city. One of these plants is practically assured, and carries with it an annual payroll of $200,000. The dinner will be served at 6:30 by Mrs. Alonzo Holmes.

Magnitude of Russia.

At present the Russian empire encompasses 42 degrees of latitude and no less than 173 degrees of longitude—that is to say, it doubles the extent of the United States in length and nearly triples it in breadth. The Empire State of New York could be easily set down in the 8,647,657 square miles of the Russian empire's area 165 times, while Russia, west of the Urals alone, is ten times the size of France and thirty-three times the size of England and Wales. European Russia takes up over one-half of Europe and Asiatic Russia over one-third of all Asia. So we find Russia occupying more than one-seventh of the total land surface of the globe.—Geographical Review.

"Blame It on the Tire"

He didn't pump it full enough, though all the air is free;
He left it soft and spongy like, and scooted on with glee;
He skidded and he gridded and whopped through dust and mire,
And when it burst
He cursed and cursed,
And blamed it on the tire.

He drove it on the street car tracks with confidence superb;
He scraped it on the lamp posts and he scraped it on the curb;
He slammed it and he jammed it any way he might desire,
And when it popped,
Right out he hopped,
And blamed it on the tire.

He cut it on some broken glass, but said that didn't hurt;
He kept right on through sand and mud and filled the cut with dirt,
It spotted there and rotted there and soon he howled in ire,
When up it blew
He blew up, too,
And blamed it on the tire.

He put on chains that ground and chewed and gouged into the tread;
He knew his wheels were out of line, "But what of that?" he said.
He whizzed along and sizzed along, he picked up nails and wire,
And when it banged
His fist he whanged,
And blamed it on the tire.

Who is this man? Go ask the boys who meet him every day.
Go ask the boys who have to hear the things he has to say.
He bores in and he roars in with words of angry fire.
Though he's to blame,
It's all the same—
He blames it on the tire.

—Wilbur D. Nesbit.

What You Should Take With You on That Tour

Before starting out on an extended trip be sure to go over your car thoroughly. Tighten every bolt and nut, put fresh oil in the oil cups and turn them up. A tightened nut, says an exchange, may save hours of trouble and worry on the road. But your preparation is not completed after the mechanical adjustment has been attended to. Tools and supplies should be taken to provide against emergencies. Include in the outfit the following:

One extra casing (keep covered), inner tubes for all casings, two extra tubes properly wrapped or bagged to protect from oil and prevent chafing, one box self-vulcanizing patches and one box permanent puncture plugs (for small punctures), one tire sleeve, one set of tire applying levers, one box powdered soapstone or mica to be used between casing and tube to prevent sticking, one can plastic to repair cuts in casing, six valves insides, six valve caps, three dust caps, air pump, collapsible water bucket, jack, complete tool kit, raincoat, one set of chains, two extra spark plugs, Manila rope or wire (forty feet), one extra water tank for drinking purposes and radiator (five gallons), one small medical kit, face cream for sunburn and stained goggles (yellow or orange).

NEGLECTED OPPORTUNITIES

The car owner who never takes his family or a party of congenial friends on a week-end tour is a good deal like the man who has a million dollars hidden in his back yard and thinks wealth is merely a responsibility.

Dont's For Motorists

Don't overcrowd your car.

Don't load up with supplies you will not need.

Don't start with a car taht is not in first-class running condition.

Don't try to do the impossible.

Don't race with locomotives.

Don't fail to take an extra tire or two along.

Don't disregard local regulations, even if they seem unreasonable.

Don't neglect to prepare for rain and cold.

Don't forget safety first, last and always.

GUIDE POST IS GOOD SAMARITAN TO AUTOMOBILISTS

Private Enterprise Marking Roads Enlisted by War Department.

The more civilized man becomes the more easily he gets lost. In the semi-barbaric days he trod untracked wilds and pathless seas, but always somehow he "got there."

In later times, having seemingly lost his sense of direction, he began to mark his trail so that he could find his way back. The gashed bark of a tree trunk has guided countless men and women to their destinations; but when the forests fell before the march of civilization, and as the speed of the traveler increased, better road markers became essential.

So there appeared various crude boards nailed on poles and set up at cross-roads, stones covered with numbers indicating distances, and similar landmarks such as may still be found in many country districts.

But until a short time ago there was no attempt to establish systematic marking of American roads. Every locality had its own style and in many instances the guide boards were so weather-beaten and defective as to be valueless. The automobile tourist who went beyond the boundary of his county found it necessary to stop at every cross-road and ask to be directed on his way. Usually the information he got was of little use, because any distance exceeding ten or fifteen miles was out of the farmer's reckoning.

Four years ago the B. F. Goodrich Company, realizing the necessity of an adequate system of road markers, stepped in where governing bodies had failed, and has since made safe for travel over 100,000 miles of roads in all parts of the United States.

Great Touring Stimulus

This work has been carried out systematically under the supervision of experts and in a style which has won the approval and co-operation of local bodies, automobile clubs and even state legislatures.

While only one road-marking crew operated during the first year, its work met with such thorough approval that larger plans were made for the second year's work, three crews being sent out—one working through the Middle West, another through the Pacific Coast States, and the third in the East.

The sign now being used is made of galvanized armor metal with aluminum letters sunk into the surface. It will not rust or deteriorate and is in all respects the most serviceable road marker that has ever been devised.

More than 100,000 of these signs mark the roads in twenty-five states, and cover three main trans-continental routes. They have been erected at a cost of over $5 each and have unquestionably done much to stimulate the good roads movement, develop American touring and add to the rapidly growing desire among motorists to "See America First."

Another great stimulus to touring has been the publication of Route Books, Route Cards, pamphlets, etc., over a million of which have been distributed throughout all sections of the country. These route cards cover practically all of the main or trunk lines of travel, with detailed descriptions showing every turn of the road, bridges, railroads, dangerous spots and mileage.

In all of these efforts there has been excellent co-operation by State, County and Municipal interests. The Office of Public Roads of the Department of Agriculture also is interested in this work, its engineers having erected many of the Goodrich Guide Post signs and furnished information with reference to roads now being improved under federal jurisdiction.

Never wash your car with hot water. Tepid water is best for this purpose. Hot water spoils the varnish and destroys luster.

In passing other vehicles going in the direction which you are traveling keep to the left except in the case of trolley cars.

SCENIC WONDERS OF NEW YORK ARE LURE TO TOURS

With Lakes and Mountains Our State Offers Wealth of Novelty.

LONG TRIPS FAVORED

All Sections Are Accessible and May Be Linked On One Circuit.

Our great and varied state of New York sounds a call of the road to motorists that promises a vacation [illegible] full measure to the liking of any [illegible] With lakes and mountains, [illegible] legends of the Indian tribes, and [illegible] woven with many a dark story of the Indian wars, it holds forth a [illegible] whatever direction the motor tourist may turn.

Our state is an expanse of beautiful valleys, knots of wooded hills, and clusters of fair lakes. Everywhere is the bizarre sculpture of nature, the strange rock formations on which the Redman based innumerable spiritual conceits. The Empire State is an empire of majestic scenery. It is [illegible] primitive. Yet the best of automobile roads thread through it from one end to the other.

America's Poetic Highlands

The Adirondacks and the Catskills are one and the same in American poetry with picturesque highlands. Our Lake George, Lake Champlain, Lake Cayuga, Lake Seneca, and Lake Oneida speak the first word in the lakes of our nation. The Hudson has proved its superlative beauty by refusing to grow commonplace. Niagara Falls has won the same cross of honor.

Let the motorist get going in his car with the most errant fancy at the wheel, and he will course through a panorama of ever changing beauty, charming pastoral landscape, rugged mountain country, and restful lake regions. Woodland glens and entrancing waterfalls are about him on every side.

Circuit of Northlands

A wonderful tour is a circuit of the northlands. One may link Albany, Lake George, Plattsburg, Ogdensburg, Watertown and Syracuse on a chain of picturesque stretches that will give the traveler the sum total of New York's varied beauty. But numerous detours may be interjected to suit the fancy of the tourist.

On this path the motorist visits Ft. Ticonderoga, Keene Valley, St. Hubert's, Lake Placid. He may wheel to the primeval forests of Au Sable lake. He may go to the foot of Mt. Marcy, the highest peak in the state. In fact he courses through the region of New York where Nature has worked in heroic size.

Yet the state holds a tour through the southern sections on a par with the north for graceful and often rugged scenic beauty. After a brief jaunt of the ever new Hudson, the motorist may ferry the river at Nyack. Striking north through Suffern, one travels the west side of the Hudson to Newburg and Kingston. From this former capital of the state, the route heads for Cooperstown over splendid roads through wooded hills and valleys into the country of J. Fennimore Cooper. Many of the mountains about rise some 3,000 feet. This region holds [illegible] Gorge, Lake Otsego, and Shandaken Notch.

Charming Lake Country

The trip on to Syracuse is through a charming lake country. From Syracuse one may go on to Geneva, and a trip farther to Niagara Falls, always worth another visit.

Coming back the circuit of the tour is continued from Geneva to Watkins Glen, one of the beauty spots of the state.

The return trip may strike through Ithaca for a look at the Cornell campus, or through Elmira.

The way now leads through both the Susquehanna and Delaware river valleys. One may dip down into Pennsylvania, or follow the Delaware [illegible] down to Port Jervis. In each case the Mecca should be the Delaware Water Gap.

The return to the Hudson is enjoyably motored through Port Jervis, Tuxedo and the beautiful Ramapo valley.

Another tour of less length and pretention, though not less in charm, is through the West Chester country. This is the region of Washington Irving. One courses Sleepy Hollow and the region transcribed from Old Dutch to Modern English.

He Missed This

Gliding down a long stretch of good road, with green fields and gentle hills stretching away on both sides, with a blue sky overhead, with a clean [illegible] breeze blowing, with a genial companion seated just near enough, and a good lunch waiting eleven miles ahead, one finds it difficult to agree with the pious pessimist who wrote, "This world is but a vale of woe."

"See your own state first!" is a good motto to put up beside "See America first."

The Modern Lover to His Lady

Tell me not, dear, that I'm wise,
Do not say that I am clever;
Speak not of my soulful eyes,
In them I've no pride whatever;
Do not praise me for the zeal
That has kept my ventures thriving—
Darling, tell me that you feel Confident when I am driving.
One of the best things in this [illegible]
lent world is a sensible driver.

GREAT R. R. STRIKE IS THREATENED

Transportation Tie-up Would Paralyze Business.

FARMERS TO FACE DANGER

Could Not Market Crops and Losses Would Run Into Hundreds of Millions—With Factories Unable to Operate Wage-earners Would Suffer

> From the viewpoint of the public it is an intolerable situation when any group of men, whether employes or employers, whether large or small, have the power to decide that a great section of country * * *, shall undergo great loss of life, unspeakable suffering and loss of property beyond the power of description, through the stoppage of a necessary public service. This, however, is the situation which confronts us as a nation.—From the Report of the Eastern Engineers' Arbitration Board (1912) signed by Charles R. Van Hise, Oscar Straus, Frederick N. Judson, Albert Shaw, Otto N. Eidlitz and Daniel Willard.

As a result of the demands for more wages which the train service employes of the railroads have been pressing upon the transportation lines, the country is face to face with the possibility of the greatest strike and the most serious industrial catastrophe in its history. The engineers, conductors, firemen and brakemen on practically all the railroad lines have voted to place their entire interests in charge of a few leaders within their organizations, and to give these leaders authority to call a strike if they wish to do so.

What such a strike would mean to the American people cannot be set forth in mere facts and figures. It can be dimly imagined by those who realize what an intimate and vital part transportation plays in every industrial activity of the country.

Cities Would Face Starvation.

There is scarcely a person in any part of the land who would not be immediately affected if the millions of busily turning wheels on our nearly three hundred thousand miles of railway were to stop for a single day. If the tie-up continued for a week, the blow to the industry of the country would be greater than that caused by any panic of recent history. To the big cities of the country, and particularly to the cities of the eastern seaboard, it would mean a cutting off of food supplies that would place the inhabitants virtually in a state of siege.

In the case of many food products these cities do not carry on hand a stock sufficient to feed their people for more than a week, and in the case of some, such as milk and fresh vegetables, supplies are replenished daily. The stoppage of transportation therefore, would mean suffering and want to these city dwellers, and if continued for long would threaten many of them with actual starvation.

Vast Loss to Farmers.

To the farmers of the country a general railroad strike would be a catastrophe, only less serious. Cut off from his market, the farmer could not move his produce, and the price of grain and other staples would be quickly cut in two, while the market value of more perishable articles would disappear entirely. The strike would make it extremely difficult to harvest crops in many sections. It would make the disposal of the crops impossible, and would inflict losses amounting to hundreds of millions of dollars upon the farmers of the country.

The great industrial plants of the country would soon be forced to close down following the declaration of a strike because they could not obtain supplies needed for their operation, nor could they ship their finished products to market. Their plants would soon be idle, and millions of men would be thrown out of work.

With the income of practically every class of citizens either seriously cut down or suspended entirely, merchants would transact little business, because there would be few purchasers. In short, the industrial activities of the whole country would be virtually palsied from the moment the railroads ceased to operate. The injury to the railway companies and to the striking employes would be enormous, but it would be infinitesimal compared with the staggering loss that would fall upon the general public.

HIGHEST WAGES, LOWEST RATES.

American railroads today pay the highest wages in the world, out of the lowest rates in the world, after having set down to capital account the lowest capitalization per mile of all great countries of the world. No other occupation and no other employer of labor in the country can match this record.—James J. Hill.

BURNED HIMSELF ON PYRE.

It Is Supposed That Sawyer Had Read About Abraham and Isaac.

Denver.—Abraham's attempted sacrifice of his son is believed to have caused Thomas Sawyer to burn himself to death near here. The body was discovered near Castle Rock. It was resting on a pile of stones and charred wood. Near by was found Sawyer's Bible.

Opening the charred Bible, Mrs. Sawyer found a passage heavily marked with a pencil describing Abraham's attempted sacrifice.

Relatives believe Sawyer built a pyre of wood and stones and offered himself as a sacrifice to the Lord.

CAT'S BABIES OF HIGH BIRTH.

Maltese and Four Kittens Discovered Far Up in Tree.

New York.—High in a maple tree a Maltese cat belonging to Michael Dooley, owner of a saloon on Union street, Flushing, purred over her four brand new kittens. She had carried to the spot material for what might be called a nest. Lying on guard over her young ones, she appeared to enjoy the refreshing breeze at that altitude.

The keeper of "Fort Dooley" had missed his pet and was surprised to find her comfortably ensconced among the branches.

FEDERAL INQUIRY IN WAGE DISPUTE

Railroad Managers Submit Plans to Avoid Great Strike.

ARBITRATION IS OFFERED.

Agree to Refer Demands of Men For More Pay to the Interstate Commerce Commission or to Accept Settlement Under Newlands Act.

New York.—The announcement that the strike vote which has been in progress among the train service employes of American railroads for the past several weeks has been completed, and that the final demands by the union leaders are soon to be presented to the railroad managers here, indicates that the public will soon know whether the controversy between the railroad workers and their employers is to be settled peaceably, or whether a nation-wide strike is to be inflicted upon the country.

Thus far the leaders of the four unions—the Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers, the Brotherhood of Locomotive Firemen and Enginemen, the Order of Railway Conductors and the Brotherhood of Railroad Trainmen—have refused to consider any proposal for an arbitration of the questions in dispute, or for settlement of the controversy by the Interstate Commerce Commission.

Would Cost $100,000,000.

The demands of the train service men for an increase in wages, which, it is estimated, would cost the railroads of the country $100,000,000 a year, were originally presented last March. At that time the representatives of the unions asked for a conference with a committee of railroad managers representing the various railroad lines of the country.

This conference began here in New York on June 1st, and continued for two weeks. The railroads were represented by a committee of nineteen managers, and the brotherhoods by the heads of their various national and local organizations—some eight hundred men in all.

Choice of Methods Offered.

The conference failed to reach a decision owing to the refusal of the union leaders to consider any modification of their demands, or any proposal for arbitration. At the conclusion of the meetings the railroad managers submitted a proposal to refer the whole question to the Interstate Commerce Commission, or to arbitration under the provision of the federal statute covering this matter.

The alternative suggestions which they advanced for adjusting the controversy were as follows:

"1. Preferably by submission to the Interstate Commerce Commission, the only tribunal which, by reason of its accumulated information bearing on railway conditions and its control of the revenues of the railways, is in a position to consider and protect the rights and equities of all the interests affected, and to provide additional revenue necessary to meet the added cost of operation in case your proposals are found by the Commission to be just and reasonable; or, in the event the Interstate Commerce Commission cannot under existing laws, act in the premises, that we jointly request Congress to take such action as may be necessary to enable the Commission to consider and promptly dispose of the questions involved; or

"2. By arbitration in accordance with the provisions of the Federal law, entitled, "An Act Providing for Mediation, Conciliation and Arbitration in Controversies between Certain Employers and their Employees," approved July 15, 1913, and commonly known as the Newlands Act."

Unions Refuse Offer.

The union leaders declined to consider the suggestion of the railroad managers, and announced that they would seek a vote of the members of the unions asking that they be given authority to declare a strike on all the railroad lines of the country. This strike vote has been in progress for the past six weeks, and, according to reports which have been received here from time to time, will result in giving the four union leaders the authority which they asked for to halt every railroad train from one end of the country to the other.

Meanwhile a resolution has been introduced into Congress at the request of the Chamber of Commerce of the United States directing the Interstate Commerce Commission to investigate the whole question of railway wages and their relation to railway earnings. The commercial interests, the newspapers, and public men of the nation have gone on record as demanding that the dispute be settled peaceably.

What the Public Pays.

Out of every dollar the public pays the railroads for transportaion the railroad employes receive 44 cents. The traveler who spends $100 a year for his tickets is paying $44 for railroad labor. The merchant whose freight bills amount to $1,000 contributes $440 to the railroad payroll. The merchant gets the money from his customers in the prices he charges for his wares. The public pays every dollar of the railroad bill.

WHAT ONE BIG MAN THINKS OF ANOTHER

President W. H. P. Faunce, of Brown University, is a pretty live wire who keeps abreast of the times, has keen powers of observation, and knows a good man when he sees him. Here is what he has to say about the Republican Candidate for the Presidency:

"I have known Justice Hughes intimately since we were students together at Brown and have seen him a thousand times at work and at play. No man of our generation has a finer combination of character and intellect. Absolutely fearless, unselfish, loyal to American ideals, he is worthy of a nation's trust.

"All his friends know that behind the dignity of bearing is a rich fund of humor and good fellowship. Whether he is climbing a mountain, reading novels, playing with his children, resisting a political lobby or delivering the opinion of the Supreme Court, he is ever the same rugged, democratic, fair-minded American. His varied experience has given him wide horizon and sympathy with every aspect of American life.

"He possesses two qualities rarely found together—the judicial temper and the capacity for swift and resolute action. Under his administration the fog which now besets many public questions would be cleared away.

"His penetrating mind goes to the heart of any subject he selects and strips off the irrelevant at once. Such a mind is peculiarly needed amid the intricate problems that now confront America.

"We need more than good intentions. We need clear vision, sound judgment, strong will, unhesitating decision. In short, we need Charles E. Hughes."

DUTY OF THE ADMINISTRATION TO STOP PLOTS AND CONSPIRACIES.

We denounce all plots and conspiracies in the interest of any foreign nation. Utterly intolerable is the use of our soil for alien intrigues. Every American must unreservedly condemn them, and support every effort for their suppression. But here, also, prompt, vigorous and adequate measures on the part of the Administration were needed. There should have been no hesitation; no notion that it was wise and politic to delay. Such an abuse of our territory demanded immediate and thorough-going action. As soon as the Administration had notice of plots and conspiracies, it was its duty to stop them. It was not lacking in resources. Its responsibility for their continuance cannot be escaped by the condemnation of others.—From Mr. Hughes' speech of acceptance.

FAVORS WOMAN SUFFRAGE.

Some time ago, a consideration of our economic conditions and tendencies, of the position of women in gainful occupations, of the nature and course of the demand, led me to the conclusion that the granting of suffrage to women is inevitable. Opposition may delay, but in my judgment cannot defeat this movement. If women are to have the vote, as I believe they are, it seems to me entirely clear that in the interest of the public life of this country, the contest should be ended promptly. I favor the vote for women. —From Mr. Hughes' speech of acceptance.

MAINTENANCE OF AMERICAN RIGHTS

Had this Government by the use of both informal and formal diplomatic opportunities left no doubt that when we said "strict accountability" we meant precisely what we said, and that we should unhesitatingly vindicate that position, I am confident that there would have been no destruction of American lives by the sinking of the Lusitania. There, we had ample notice; in fact, published notice. Furthermore, we knew the situation and we did not require specific notice. Instead of whittling away our formal statements by equivocal conversations, we needed the straight, direct and decisive representations which every diplomat and foreign office would understand. I believe that in this way we should have been spared the repeated assaults on American lives. Moreover, a firm American policy would have been strongly supported by our people and the opportunities for the development of bitter feeling would have been vastly reduced.—From Mr. Hughes' speech of acceptance.

BUSINESS MEN TRY TO AVERT STRIKE

Ask Congress to Direct U. S. Inquiry Into R. R. Wages.

FOR PEACEFUL SETTLEMENT

Members of United States Chamber of Commerce Vote Overwhelmingly In Favor of Letting Interstate Commerce Commission Adjust Controversy.

Washington.—In order to ascertain the position of the business men of the nation on the controversy between the railroads of the country and the unions of train service employes, which was precipitated by the demand of the latter for an increase in wages that would amount to $100,000,000 a year, the United States Chamber of Commerce recently submitted the matter to a vote of all its members. They were asked to express their opinion as to whether the dispute should be allowed to take its course with the possibility of a great strike that would tie up all the transportation lines throughout the country and paralyze all business, or whether they would favor the adoption to a joint resolution by the two branches of congress directing the Interstate Commerce Commission to investigate and pass upon the matter.

The vote received was a very large one and represented business organizations in every part of the country. The result was overwhelmingly in favor of placing the matter in the hands of the Interstate Commerce Commission, 98¾ votes being cast in favor of this course and only 2¾ against it. The result showed clearly that the business interests of the country are unalterably against permitting the transportation lines to be tied up by a national railroad strike that would paralyze the commerce of the country and inflict enormous losses on all classes of citizens.

Chairman Wheeler of the Committee in charge of the matter for the Chamber of Commerce appeared before the representatives of the railroads and their employes at their conference in New York in June. He announced the result of the Committee's inquiry among the business men of the country and urged both parties to the dispute to get together and adopt the course suggested. As a result the committee of managers representing the railroads submitted a proposal that the whole subject be placed before the Interstate Commerce Commission as requested by the representatives of the business interests. As an alternative they offered to submit the demands to arbitration under the Federal law. Both offers were refused by the union leaders, who announced that they would go back to their unions and get authority to declare a strike. This they have since been doing.

Meanwhile a resolution has been introduced in Congress directing the Interstate Commerce Commission to make an investigation of railroad wages. This resolution is now awaiting action. It is believed here that if nothing further is done by Congress or by the parties to the wage dispute to bring about a peaceful settlement the business interests of the country, through the United States Chamber of Commerce, or some other organization, will appeal to the Government to take some direct and decisive action to prevent the destruction of national prosperity by a strike on all the railroad lines.

DEMANDS OF R. R. TRAINMEN.

Wage Increase of $100,000,000 a Year Would Have to Be Borne by Public.

The train service employes of all railroad lines in the United States have united in a demand for a new basis of pay for all men engaged in operating trains, except those in passenger service. At the present time they are paid on the basis of ten hours of time or 100 miles of distance, whichever gives them the higher pay; and every man receives a full day's pay, no matter how short a time he works.

The trainmen now demand that, in all but passenger service, (1) the present ten hours pay shall be given for eight hours, or less, with a guarantee of a full day's pay, no matter how little service is performed; (2) overtime to begin after eight hours, instead of after ten hours, and to be paid for at one and one-half times the hourly rate.

These demands would increase the hourly rate of pay 25 per cent, and the overtime rate 87½ per cent.

They also insist that all special extra pay provisions in the 10-hour schedules shall be included in the proposed 8-hour schedule.

These special rules frequently give double pay for the same service, and enable the employes to earn two and three days' pay in a single day of ordinary working hours.

As the increase for all the lines is estimated to amount to $100,000,000 a year the railroads say that they cannot pay it unless they are allowed to increase freight and passenger rates.

The average wages of the men engaged in train service are already very much higher than those of other employees and they receive 28 per cent of the total payroll although constituting only 18 per cent of the whole number of railroad workers.

HIGH WAGES ON AMERICAN ROADS

Railroad Payroll Records Made Public by the Carriers.

NATIONAL INQUIRY URGED.

Managers Offer to Leave Question of $100,000,000 Wage Demands to an Impartial Federal Tribunal to Prevent Disaster of a Nation-wide Strike.

New York.—What is probably the most elaborate study of wages ever made in any industry has just been completed by the National Conference Committee of the railways.

For six months railway accountants throughout the country have been engaged in collecting the payroll records to show the actual wage payments to every individual employe among the 300,000 engineers, conductors, firemen and brakemen now voting on a national strike for a new wage scale.

That these employes are one of the highest paid groups of workers in any industry is disclosed by the summary made public today by the railroad managers.

The average yearly wage payments to all Eastern train employes (including those who worked only part of the year), as shown by the 1915 payrolls, were:

	Passenger.	Freight.	Yard.
Engineers	$1,796	$1,546	$1,384
Conductors	1,724	1,404	1,235
Firemen	1,033	903	844
Brakemen	1,018	858	[illegible]

Wages as High as $3,224.

Three-quarters of these men (including all those who put in a full year's service), earned these wages:

Engineers (road), $1,585 to $3,224; (yard), $1,303 to $2,178.

Conductors (road), $1,552 to $3,004; (yard), $1,145 to $1,991.

Firemen (road), $933 to $1,762; (yard), $752 to $1,633.

Brakemen (road), $862 to $1,707; (yard), $834 to $1,635.

For the whole country the average wages of three-quarters of the employes were:

	Passenger.	Freight.	Yard.
Engineers	$2,067	$1,892	$1,524
Conductors	1,850	1,719	1,310
Firemen	1,203	1,117	984
Brakemen	1,098	1,013	1,076

The railroads have considered every man whose name appears on the January and December payrolls as an employe for a year, no matter how little service he performed in the other ten months. It is pointed out by the managers that these averages are, in consequence, an understatement of the earning power of these employes.

An Appeal to the Public.

The National Conference Committee, in making these wage figures public, says:

"Do you believe in arbitration or industrial warfare?

"The train employes on all the railroads are voting whether they will give their leaders authority to tie up the commerce of the country to enforce their demands for a $100,000,000 wage increase.

"The railroads are in the public service—your service. This army of employees is in the public service—your service.

"You pay for rail transportation $3,000,000,000 a year, and 44 cents out of every dollar from you goes to the employes.

"A $100,000,000 wage increase for men in freight and yard service (less than one-fifth of all employes) is equal to a 5 per cent advance in all freight rates.

"The managers of the railroads, as trustees for the public, have no right to place this burden on the cost of transportation to you without a clear mandate from a public tribunal speaking for you.

"The railroads have proposed the settlement of this controversy either under the existing national arbitration law, or by reference to the Interstate Commerce Commission This offer has been refused by the employes' representatives.

"Shall a nation wide strike or an investigation under the government determine this issue?"

TRAINMEN'S HIGH WAGES.

When I note from the reports made to the Interstate Commerce Commission that these men receive average yearly wages 50 per cent higher than those of all other railway employes, and practically double those of the average American wage-worker, it occurs to me that they at least have less cause for complaint than most others. When I consider that the average locomotive engineer has an income of over $2,000 a year, and that most of the engineers who have been long in service make from $2,000 to $3,000 a year, and when I compare their hours, labor and responsibilities with those of the average small merchant, farmer or doctor, whose income is far less, it seems that in all fairness they are well paid.—John V. Farwell, Chicago Merchant.

Clams In Season.

CLAM COCKTAILS.—Mix together equal parts of Worcestershire sauce, vinegar, horseradish, lemon juice and tomato ketchup. Allow five teaspoonfuls of the mixture—one of each ingredient—and eight clams to each person.

The clams can be arranged on their own shells on shaved ice on deep plates, with the sauce in the center—in a little glass dish for the purpose or in a green or red pepper shell. Or the cocktail can be served in long stemmed glasses, the dressing poured over the clams. Or clams and dressing can be placed in tiny scooped out tomatoes.

Clam Broth.—This is another delectable thing to serve on warm days. It should, of course, be either piping hot or else chilled on the ice. But even piping hot it is so clear, so thin and so refreshing that it seems actually cooling.

To make it chop fine two dozen clams. Add to them a pint of cold water, a thin slice of onion and a dash of pepper. Let it just reach the boiling point, strain, bring again to the boiling point and add a tablespoonful of butter and a tablespoonful of chopped parsley.

Clam Soup.—Wash thirty clams thoroughly and put them in a steamer over boiling water until they open. Remove the clams from the shells, saving all the juice. Chop fine, strain the juice and put the clams back into [illegible] cream together a teaspoonful each of butter and flour and thin with a little warm milk. Add to the clams with a cupful of hot milk. Season to taste, adding a little chopped celery and serve with croutons.

Steamed Clams.—Scrub until clean two quarts of clams and place them in a steamer over boiling water. When they begin to open they are ready to serve. Be careful not to lose any of the juice in removing the clams from the steamer. Have ready some melted butter and place a small dish of it at each place, with a plate heaped with clams.

DUCKS DO HIS ANGLING.

With Line and Hook to Their Legs They Bring In Fish From Lake.

Leitchfield, Ky.—Henry Cecil of Cecilia in a lake near his home has devised a most successful and novel way to catch fish, according to Roy Bond.

Cecil has a number of ducks that frequent this lake. He ties a short fishing line to the duck's foot with the hook baited. The duck swims about the lake, fishing all over it. When a fish strikes he pulls the duck's leg, and Mr. Duck, not understanding what this means, turns and flees to the shore just as fast as he can.

Cecil takes off the fish, rebaits the hook and throws the duck back into the lake to renew the fishing. He has a number of ducks fishing for him at the same time and has caught 100 pounds of fish this way.

Oklahoma Girl Fires Places Where Father Spent Money.

Bartlesville, Okla.—The torch is the most effective weapon to be used in fighting joints, according to the notion of a nineteen-year-old Copan girl who admits she fired a Copan pool hall and rooming house where intoxicating liquors are said to have been sold and which has just been closed by an injunction.

The girl says her father was spending all his time and money there. Copan is on the booze trail leading out of Kansas into Oklahoma. The girl has warned all bootleggers that the town is to remain closed. She even threatens to form a squadron of women to be known as "High Jackies" to war against the liquor traffic.

Old Harvard Dormitory to Be Torn Down For Hotel.

Cambridge, Mass.—Harvard university has disposed of the College House, one of its oldest dormitories, and the purchasers will tear down the old building and erect a modern structure, which is to include a family hotel, the first one the city has had for several years.

In the deal it is said that Randolph Hall, a Gold Coast dormitory, was one of the parcels exchanged. The college authorities are planning to buy other private dormitories and thus control exclusively the housing of the student body.

A CHOICE OF WEAPONS

By F. A. MITCHEL

When General Jackson prepared to receive the British at the battle of New Orleans he depended upon the marksmanship of his army rather than its discipline. Nearly every man of the Americans was a good shot. At that time Kentucky was a newly settled region, and all Kentuckians were hunters, for their principal meat was game. The consequence was when the British marched up in soldierly alignment against these riflemen they were picked off in such numbers that they suffered a terrible defeat.

Zeke Brown was one of these Kentucky hunters who helped to win the battle of New Orleans. Not long after peace was declared between the United States and England Zeke was left a fortune by a relative in New York and concluded to go abroad to see something of the world. Americans were in those days more popular in France than in England, and he went to Paris.

Zeke liked Paris so well that he resolved to stay there indefinitely. But having too much of the American spirit to remain idle, he concluded to set up a small banking house to satisfy the requirements of his countrymen visiting the city.

Now, at that time there were newspapers in Paris that did not scruple to obtain an income in an illegitimate way—in other words, by blackmail. They would attack some one or his business and wait either for hush money or an advertisement. The Journal of the Nineteenth Century was a newly established paper and was straining every nerve to get a start. This journal published a warning against a certain American banking house, intimating that it was intended to get in deposits after which its founder would return to his native country.

Zeke was astonished. He consulted a lawyer with regard to suing the paper for libel and learned that it would be useless to try to get judgment against it, for there were no assets on which to levy. He went to the newspaper office, called for the editor and was proceeding to give him an opinion of his rascally proceeding when he was stopped and told that there was one man connected with the paper who heard all such complaints. The editor tapped a bell, and an attendant appeared, who was told to show the caller to the office of M. de Pombeau. On Zeke's entry a gentleman, dressed in the height of fashion, arose to receive him, bowing politely. Zeke told him that he represented a blackmail sheet and if the paper ever attacked his business again he would "break his jaw."

M. de Pombeau, unruffled, resumed the seat he had occupied and whatever he had been doing. When Zeke had finished he left the office.

The same afternoon Zeke received a caller who bore a demand for an apology for his attack on the Journal of the Nineteenth Century or that he would give M. de Pombeau satisfaction.

"Who's M. de Pombeau?" he asked.

"The gentleman you saw this morning. When there is any dissatisfaction with the paper he attends to the matter."

"You mean he's the fighting man?"

"Yes, monsieur."

"And in order to get satisfaction I must fight for it?"

"Yes, monsieur."

"We sometimes fight duels in America. I am not entirely ignorant of the code. As the challenged party I am entitled to the choice of weapons."

"Yes, monsieur."

"Very well. I will send you the terms on which I will meet your principal."

"It is immaterial to M. de Pombeau whether he fights you with the sword or the pistol."

"You mean he knows the tricks of both."

This elicited no reply, and the gentleman departed.

The next day he received by post the following list of ways that Zeke would meet M. de Pombeau, who was welcome to make his choice between them.

First.—The parties to fight "over a handkerchief," a form sometimes, but rarely, used in America wherein the disputants are separated by their seconds holding a handkerchief between them. It was certain death for both.

Second.—Bowie knives in a room perfectly darkened.

Third.—Rifles at 800 yards.

Fourth.—The parties to swim from opposite sides of the Seine toward each other, holding a pistol in the right hand above water and begin firing at will.

Fifth.—Crowbars within a chalked ring ten feet in diameter.

Sixth.—Each disputant to eat a sausage, one of the sausages to be poisoned. Two sausages were to be put in a covered dish, a ribbon to be attached to each and the disputants to draw them by the ribbons.

When monsieur received this list of methods of obtaining satisfaction from the American he was much disturbed. Indeed, he was shocked. He instructed his second to protest against any such barbarous methods of fighting and begged his antagonist to remember that France was not America. He would meet him in a civilized way, and only in a civilized way.

To this Zeke made no reply, believing that it was not only the end of the affair of the duel, but quite likely the end of the blackmail process. In this he was right. He heard nothing more from M. de Pombeau, and he was not again attacked in the Journal of the Nineteenth Century.

A Handsome Dance Frock.

The fashionable silhouette is portrayed in this dance frock of figured silk crepe trimmed with narrow satin ribbon and having an underblouse of silver gauze.

A novelty in summer dance frocks is the design pictured here. Soft silk crepe daintily figured is employed in its development. The blouse gathered in soft fulness on the shoulders crosses in surplice effect and is finished with a little frill of its own material. Bands of narrow satin ribbon outline the waist and frill on the skirt. Flesh colored chiffon or silver tissue may be used for the underblouse.

The bouffant skirt is a two-piece model, shirred at the top and caught up at each side to form a gathered flounce with a deep heading. It is mounted on a three-piece foundation lengthened by a straight gathered flounce. In medium size the frock requires 4½ yards 44-inch crepe, with 3 yards 36-inch material for the foundation. One and one-quarter yards of gauze will make the underblouse.

So graceful and dainty is the bodice that it is made the subject of today's home dressmaking lesson, the directions being limited to the cutting. Fold the material and place it on the cutting table, wrinkleless. The back is placed into position first, resting on a lengthwise thread. The front follows, placed on the lengthwise fold of material, while the sleeve is laid to the right of the front. The ruffle and piecing come last and the stay rests along the selvage edge, between the front and the sleeve.

Next, fold the lining in half, placing the front directly on the fold. The back is laid to the right of the front, on a lengthwise thread.

If desired the frill that lengthens the foundation of the skirt may be of lace. Three yards 30 inches wide are required for the purpose.

The finest of linen lawn in delicate colors is the material chosen for some of the most charming dance frocks, and where French hand-made frocks are shown one is sure to find many models of this type. The pinks, buffs and pale, creamy yellows are especially attractive.

The Lure of the Sports Coat.

One of the most attractive of the season's sport suits, without which no wardrobe is complete. Made of striped awning cloth and trimmed with white linen it is both dignified and chic.

It is simply impossible to escape the lure of the sports costume, and everyone will agree that it is one of the most important fashion items on this summer's horizon. One can get along with very few dressy frocks, but one must have smart sports clothes if one has the faintest ambition to be fashionably attired. The suit pictured today is made of striped awning cloth trimmed with white linen, and particular attention is given to the cutting of the waist for the benefit of the home dressmaker.

In medium size the costume requires 6 yards of striped 44-inch cloth and 2 yards of 36-inch linen, but if made separately the coat requires 3 yards of material, with 1¼ yard linen for trimming.

The waist closes on the left shoulder and at the left under-arm seam, leaving the front seamless. This is obtained by placing the front of the pattern on a lengthwise fold of the awning cloth and care must be taken to place the line of the pattern on the center stripe, so that a center stripe of the group will be directly in front of the waist. The collar is laid next to the front, if made of the same material; otherwise, it is placed similarly on plain linen, the sleeve comes next, laid on a lengthwise thread, then the cuff is placed to the right of the sleeve and the stay to the right of the cuff. Place the back of the waist on the lengthwise fold of cloth and the pocket in the upper left hand corner, the straight edge resting against the selvage.

The waist is made with an open neck and round collar and the long one-piece sleeves are perforated for elbow length. In either case they are finished with cuffs of the linen used to trim the lower edge of the coat and skirt and for the collar. At each side of the front the waist is slashed and through this incision a straight sash of self-material or ribbon may be inserted, or a leather belt may be used.

FOR IRONING DAY.

Hints That Help Make a Bugbear a Day of Ease.

With the onslaught of warm weather and the wearing of wash dresses ironing day becomes an important feature of the week. Even the girl who presses her own blouses and handkerchiefs has to consider it seriously, so it may not come amiss to give a few hints about keeping the iron in good condition.

Never put a hot iron on the back of the range unless you stand it on end or lay it on its side, for it will otherwise collect any tiny particle of grease or stove black that it comes in contact with. Rub your irons vigorously before you put them on to heat with a piece of ordinary pumice stone slightly dampened. This not only removes all particles of dirt and rust, but polishes them and makes them iron smoothly.

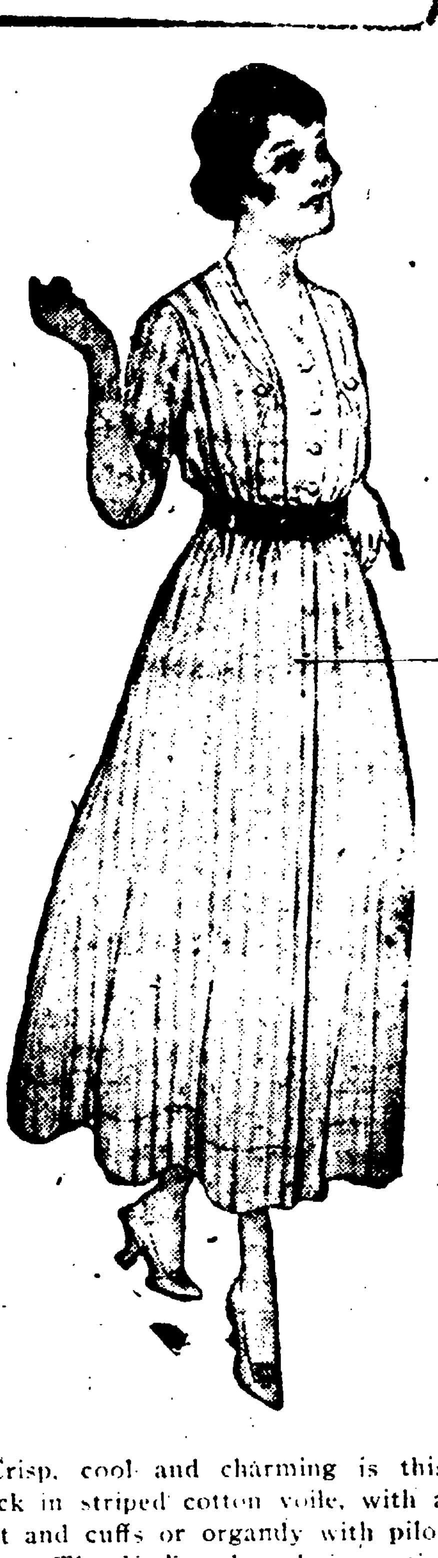
When you are ironing starched clothes be sure to put a handful of salt on to a piece of newspaper and rub your iron in this from time to time to remove the starch that adheres to the hot metal.

In pressing crepe de chine, georgette crepe or any thin silk use an iron that is fairly cool, as a very hot iron wrinkles the material and takes the color out. In pressing ribbons wipe them with a cool iron, using a piece of linen or a handkerchief to protect the ribbon. A dampened ribbon ironed with a hot iron will turn very stiff, but if a fairly cool one is used will remain supple and smooth.

If you want a white shirt waist fairly stiff, but not starched, iron it with a hot iron while it is very wet. Pongee also must be ironed while wet, as otherwise it will not be spotless. If you want the pongee very soft, however, let it dry and then iron it without sprinkling, using strength to press out the wrinkles. Never dampen pongee as the spots will show.

If you want to keep your plaited frills looking like new, baste the bottom or the edge into place before you wash them, the plaits can thus be readily ironed back into place, and then the basting may be removed.

TODAY'S FASHION NOTE



Crisp, cool and charming is this frock in striped cotton voile, with a vest and cuffs or organdy with pilot edge. The V-shaped neck is particularly graceful because of the absence of extreme lines. In medium size the frock requires 6 yards 40inch voile and 3-4 yard organdy.

TRUE INWARDNESS OF THE VERA CRUZ INCIDENT.

In the Spring of 1914, occurred the capture of Vera Cruz. Men from one of our ships had been arrested at Tampico and had been discharged with an apology. But our Admiral demanded a salute, which was refused. Thereupon the President went to Congress, asking authority to use the armed forces of the United States. Without waiting for the passage of the resolution, Vera Cruz was seized. It appeared that a shipload of ammunition for Huerta was about to enter that port. There was a natural opposition to this invasion and a battle occurred in which nineteen Americans and over a hundred Mexicans were killed. This, of course, was war. Our dead soldiers were praised for dying like heroes in a war of service. Later, we retired from Vera Cruz, giving up this noble warfare. We had not obtained the salute which was demanded. We had not obtained reparation for affronts. The ship with ammunition which could not land at Vera Cruz had soon landed at another port, and its cargo was delivered to Huerta without interference. Recently the naked truth was admitted by a Cabinet officer. We are now informed that "we did not go to Vera Cruz to force Huerta to salute the flag." We are told that we went there "to show Mexico that we were in earnest in our demand that Huerta must go." That is, we seized Vera Cruz to depose Huerta. The question of the salute was a mere pretext.—From Mr. Hughes' speech of acceptance.

IDEAL WEATHER FOR CIRCUS DAY

Al. G. Barnes Brings His Wild Animal Shows to Fulton and Great Crowds Turns Out to Bid Them Welcome.

Well, it's circus day at last and Fulton welcomes the arrival this morning of the Al. G. Barnes Wild Animal Circus, making its first visit to this section. The small boy and his dad were out early this morning to welcome the show on its arrival from Auburn. In fact some of the boys stayed out all night and they had a long wait. The circuses, as all circuses are, is handicapped by lack of help, and added to these troubles was one light engine to pull a 30 car show to this city. The result was that Saturday was pretty well along when the unloading operations were begun.

How Farmers See Show.

The streets were not thronged with farmers this morning waiting for the parade. There was a big turnout of city people and they, too had a long wait because of the delays experienced by the show. But the farmer is too busy in his fields to waste any time on circuses or daylight picnics. Instead he does his day's work, cranks up the Ford after supper and rolls his family into town for the night performance. The automobile has revolutionised the circus business to the extent that the rural dwellers are now among the best patrons of the evening tented exhibitions whereas they used to be in the majority at the afternoon shows.

Long before the main entrance of the big top opened this afternoon there were hundreds gathered about the usual side show attractions that accompany all circuses. After the tent flap was pulled aside, and the show hungry populace allowed to enter, there was one steady stream of humanity that flowed and surged into the seats, until long after the show was on in full blast.

The reserved seat section resembled the bleachers in a big ball park on a hot July day. But instead of the shouts of players and the call of the "Umps," it was the roar of the beasts of jungle, forest and field, the cries of the barker and the crack of trainers' whips that fell upon the ear.

The electric calliope, followed by the big band and the women's band, headed the grand entry. The mechanical instrument played in harmony with the bands, and it made a very pleasing volume of music.

After the ring master's whistle blared forth in resounding blast, there was something doing every minute. The acts came on, did their turn and passed from public gaze in a clocklike manner. It was act after act in the big cage and two rings until a person attempting to see it all became bewildered. As one show patron remarked: "It would take a man one week to see it all and he would have to attend two shows a day at that."

There are no acrobats or aerial artists to distract atention of the spectators from the animals. Nothing but animal acts are on the bill, and these mixed with a few fetching clown stunts, surely do appease the circus appetite. Lions, tigers, bears, leopards, horses, ponies, llamas, elephants, camels, zebras, seals, kangaroos, monkeys, dogs, goats, chickens, geese, pigs and even the ostrich do their stunts like well trained soldiers, and to describe it all would be a very difficult task. All of the acts showed most wonderful training and every act was a thriller.

The lion and the woman that mount to the top of the tent on a swing and hang before the audience in a glare of spot lights and a blaze of fireworks, was also a hit.

LAST DAY OF CHAUTAUQUA FINE PROGRAM RENDERED

CHAUTAUQUPA ....

Yesterday afternoon, Mrs. Sarah Tyson Rorer spoke on "Home Advancement" and proved a decided success. Mrs. Rorer has had unlimited experience along this line and spoke with the utmost sincerity. Mrs. Rorer is known as a writer, speaker and teacher. She is a contributor to The Ladies' Home Journal. Mrs. Rorer is also Dean of the Factulty of the Philadelphia School of Domestic Science.

In the evening Mr. Alton Packard was the entertainer. This speaks for itslf. Mr. Packard in his funny songs and jecticulations kept the audience in continuous uproar. His song "When you get what you want, you don't want it" was heartily appreciated. His songs are of his own composition. In connection with his songs Mr. Packard is said to be the leading cartoonist of the Lyceum platform. Mr. Packard is a versatile and an original entertainer and averages two laughs to the minute.

He took for his subject last night, "Vanity Fair" and applied it throughout the evening. Mr. Packard holds the interest of the audience by keeping up a constant flow of wit and humor while drawing his pictures.

For the musical prelude yesterday the "Marigold Girls" were very entertaining. Each one of the young ladies is a soloist and all four voices blended beautifully.

Following the children's pageant to-day the five artists will appear. These people have all gained a worthy reputation in Grand Concert. Mr. Reed Miller, tenor, was formerly with Walter Damrosch. He has also been connected with the New York Symphony orchestra, the Apollo Club, Chicago, and many others.

Marie Stoddard, soprano, has seen service with such socieites as, New York Symphony Orchestra, Mendelssohn Choir, Toronto; Boston Festival Orchestra, Minneapolis Choral Society and many others. Miss Stoddard's work was greatly appreciated this afternoon.

Nevada Van DerVeer, has also gained a musical reputation with such organizations as, New York Symphony Orchestra, Theodore Thomas Orchestra. She also appeared with Mark Hambourg and Jan Hambourag before the royalty in London.

Frederick Wheeler, baritone, has built for himself a world wide reputation with New York Oratorio Society, People's Choral Union, of New York; Victor Herbert's Orchestra, and has been featured by the Victor Talking Machine Company.

With this splendid quartet comes Miss Blanche Borbot, who for some time was affiliated with the Kaltenborn String quartet and is one of the leading accompanists of New York city.

This afternoon the children's pageant will be produced. The children have only received five hours instruction on this and have developed wonderful results through the instruction of Miss Mildred Luse their supervisor. Miss Luse is a young lady of wide experience in this line and has a personality that inspires the younger folk to obey. She is one who believes that kind words gain the confidence of the young material.

The pageant will consist of the History of the United States from the time of the Indians through the Revolutionary War on into the Civil War and will be concluded by the swearing of allegiance by all members. The play depicts the numerous prominent historical men of fame.

The program will be intermingled with musical numbers and enacted by local talent. Miss Marion Goodjon and Miss Medora Halstead have assisted Miss Luse in this event.

A man giving his name as William O'Brien, of Martville, turned turtle yesterday, while driving his car through the village of Hannibal. Mr. O'Brien was driving his machine at a moderate speed when his car skidded and threw him into a ditch. The car striking an incline in the roadside turned completely over.

A doctor was summoned and Mr. O'Brien was removed to the doctor's office where it was found that a badly lacerated arm and a few minor injuries had resulted. Mr. O'Brien is resting comfortably today.

Dancing was enjoyed in the evening, music being furnished by the Adkins duo.

WEATHER FORECAST

Moderate west winds and generally fair tonight and Sunday. Probably thunder showers this afternoon.

Our extract [illegible] for this week is from an essay written by Mortimer Burr Williams of Auburn Academic High School of Auburn, N. Y., for which he received third prize of $25 in gold—

"Economy signifies saving, while 'Thrift' signifies both saving and increasing. Good health and poverty is the best combination for a young man who wants to carve his way in the world. The fellow to be pitied is he of means, who knows no stimulus to the best endeavor. The young man who inherits poverty is to be congratulated. He has what most men, who rise in the world, had, to push them on, to make them mighty."

Germans Suffer Severe Losses

(By United Press)

London, August 7—Reports of several small German counter attacks against British positions east of Pozieres was announced by General Haig in an official despatch to the war office this afternoon. The Germans suffered severe losses. The British retaining newly won ground. Elsewhere on the Somme front there was no change in the situation last night. The Germans contenting themselves with the bombardment of the British lines.

The British troops executed a severe raid against the enemy trenches east of Menillstraast last night. The Germans attempted to raid the British south east of Grenei, but were driven back. The French force set two violent German attacks off the north east front of Verdun last night was reported today. The Germans were repulsed at Thiaumont, Caus and Thatiter before they were able to debouch from their position.

IS IT THE BRENEM? SUBMARINE OFF MAINE

(By United Press)

Boston, August 7—"An unidentified submarine apparently of large dimensions was sighted by coast guards near Machias, Maine, early to-day."

This zrief message unconfirmed, was followed by the word that the submarine was seen to rise to the surface for a few minutes and then submerge, traveling in a westerly direction. Further than this no word has been heard.

RAILROAD STRIKERS WILL ARBITRATE

(By United Press)

Washington, August 7—Further optimism was reflected in administration circles today over the threatening railroad strike situaton. When it was learned that switchmen involved probably would sign an agreement before night, accepting arbitration. This will relieve the situation temporarily and the indications are that a satisfactory agreement will eventually be made.

GERMANS ARE GAINING GROUND

LIVE MODELS AT STYLE SHOW

IN FALL BATHING SUITS AT CHICAGO EXHIBIT

(By United Press)

Chicago, August 7—Live models—the livest of whom wore bathing suits and were exhibited in a special fountain, characterized the Fall Style show of Chicago Garment Manufacturers' association which opened today and will continue all week.

Wholesaler's invitations to buyers to attend the show at Bismarck gardens dwelt particularly upon the group of feminine swimmers in up-to-the-minute bathing costumes. Why the bathing suit display for fall wear no one knew and none seemed to care. It was a great attraction.

Chicago store windows were in the beginning of a week's boycott on out-of-town goods and gave their entire window space over to the display of "Made-in-Chicago" products, taking this method of doing their share to boost the show.

A half hundred garment manufacturers of this city had entries in the display. Each manufacturer was allowed to enter four garments—provided they entered them on live models.

From 6.000 to 7.000 middle west buyers are attending the style show.

A feature of the show is a revolving stage which permits quick changes of scenery. Dinner will be served each evening, after which the show will be held.

PERFECT OIL MIXED CONCRETE FOR HIGHWAYS

(By United Press)

Washington, August 7—Concrete as a road building material is of "perhaps more universal adaption than any other material now in use," said Director Logan Walter Page, of the Office of Public roads of the United States Department of Agriculture, today.

Concrete, as sized up by the department, has the following advantages:

1—Durability under ordinary conditions.

2—A smooth, even surface, not too slippery.

3—Practically no dust.

4—Is easily cleaned and maintained at small cost until a patching or resurfacing becomes necessary.

5—A pleasing appearance.

6—Forms an excellent basis for other materials when resurfacing becomes necessary.

Its disadvantages are as follows:

1—Noisy under horse traffic.

2—Difficult to repair.

3—Cracks must be given prompt attention or deterioration will ensue.

Improved concrete for road building as well as for other purposes, that is proof against water absorption has been announced by the department in oil mixed concrete.

After extensive experiments with a view to producing a non-absorbent concrete mixture, the department found that the addition of ten per cent. of heavy, mineral oil to the Portland cement paste acted as an effective repellent to moisture. The susceptibility of concrete to water absorption had long been recognized as one of its inherent weaknesses as a road building material.

The addition of the oil does not lower the tensile strength, the department has found, and has the further advantage of making the mixture impervious to the destructive action of alkali salts.

AUTOS COLLIDE

Two Ford touring cars collided yesterday afternoon at Farley's Corners, on the Palermo road. The accident was at a bad curve in the road and both drivers being ignorant of the other's approach their machines collided. The result was, that both cars were badly demolished. The occupants of the cars were thrown in all directions, but fortunately there were no serious results.

CANDIDATE HUGHES SPEAKS IN DETROIT

(By United Press)

Detroit, Mich., August 7—Republican nominee Hughes' first appeal for votes on his campaign tour for presidency was a plea for Americanism, an expression of hope of a get together spirit of cooperation between capital and labor and an indorsement of movement for welfare of American workers. The nominee spoke the first of his campaign talks in a stifling, close room of Hotel Ponchartrain to a committee of representatives of welfare workers of every big factory in Detroit.

He denounced all plots and conspiracies in the interest of any foreign nation and stated that the granting of suffrage to women is inevitable.

Settlement of Strike Is Now In Sight

(By United Press)

New York, August 7—Conductors and motormen of the New York Railways Company today ratified an agreement reached yesterday by representatives of the employers and union officials looking toward a settlement of the car strike which tied up lines in Manhatten and other boroughs. This is regarded as forecasting a final settlement of the strike before night. A formal meeting at which representatives of all lines are to be represented is set for four o'clock this afternoon. Union men declare one of the terms under which ratifications were agreed on was, "Recognition of the union and the rights of the men to organize."

JEWISH HOLIDAY TOMORROW

Jewish people of Fulton will celebrate Tisha B'Ab, or the ninth day of the month of Ab tomorrow.

Ab is the fifth month of the Jewish year and the day is set aside by tradition for fasting and mourning to commemorate the destruction of Jerusalem and the temple by the Romans and Chaldeans.

There will be special services in all synagogues throughout the country featured by the singing of old solemn hymns which date back to the earliest days of Jerusalem. It is the anniversary of the fall of Bethar at the end of the Bar Kochba war and is a national rather than a religious holiday.

Five national misfortunes occurred on the ninth of Ab. The first misfortune when on that night the Israelites were doomed to stay in the wilderness forty years. The second and third misfortunes were the destruction of Jerusalem, the fourth the fall of Bethar and the fifth occurred when the plow was drawn over the Holy City and the temple a year later in order to turn the place into a Roman city.

The ninth of Ab like the Atonement, is a national fast day beginning in the evening of the day before and ending with sunset on the day following. No enjoyment whatever in the way of eating, drinking, bathing and annointing is permitted from evening to evening.

Mr. and Mrs. J. Rude and family and Mr. and Mrs. J. H. Steward returned home today from Sylvan Beach, where th y have been camping.

PETITIONS FOR AN AMENDMENT

DRYS SAY WETS SEEK TO CIRCUMVENT COLORADO PROHIBITION LAW

(By United Press)

Denver, August 7—An effort to circumvent state prohibition laws is being made by the United States Brewers' Association, according to charges brought today by the Colorado Anti-Saloon League officers.

Initiated peitions for a constitutional amendment allowing the manufacture and sale of beer in Colorado probably will be referred to the voters next November. The petitions, already filed with the secretary of state, contemplates an amendment to the present prohibition law to permit the sale of beer in original packages delivered from the manufacturer to the consumer.

The amendment would not mean the re-introduction of saloons, its advocates claim. The manufacture of the liquor would be under state supervision and would be taxed 10 cents a barrel.

z Anti-Saloon leaders declare that measures identical with this one have been initiated in Washington and Oregon. They declare that the amendment would open up all of a state to the sale of beer, including territory formerly dry under local option.

GOOD MORNING JUDGE

A man giving his name as Stuper, very narrowly escaped injuries while attending the Al. G. Barnes Circus Saturday. Stuper after witnessing the general performance decided to take in the midway. While traveling dow nthrough the various tents he found himself in the knife throwing exhibition. Mr. Stuper stated this down through the various tents he was assailed by a circus employe for some unknown reason. He claims that he was first struck by the man, who later threw a knife, which was used by the artist giving the exhibition. The missile struck Mr. Stuper, inflicting a slight gash. The police were notified and several clews were obtained. Mr. Stuper failed to appear for a warrant and the case will be dropped.

Two plain drunks were arraigned in city court this morning. Both received suspended sentences on good behavior. One of these, Edward Brennan, an umbrella mender, suffering with an ear ache, selected the front lawn of a prominent location on First street to repose. He was confronted by an officer and was removed to Chief Dyer's hotel. Mr. Brennan stated that whiskey had been perscribed as a counter-irritant for his suffering and he found that he had indulged too freely. Brennan stated that the apartments looked inviting. Medical attention was given him and he started out in search of more business this morning.

CATHOLIC PICNIC SATURDAY

Probably one of the most successful Catholic picnics in the history of the city was enjoyed Saturday afternoon. Various races were staged, which proved to be very exciting. The event was ushered in by a parade in the morning led by the Elks' Band.

At the Fair grounds an exciting game of ball was played between the Woodmen's team and the team representing the Knights of Columbus. Seven innings were played when the game was brought to a close owing to the lateness of the hour. Both Carroll and Guppy pitched good ball; the latter being given the best support. The features of the game were the three baggers made by Lewis and McNulty.

The lineup:

EXPERT SAYS SLOW FIGHTING

BRITISH EXPECTED TEMPORARY REVERSES IN BIG DRIVE

By John Buchan
England's Foremost Writer on Military Affairs

(Written for the United Press)

London, August 7—When the bombardment ceased on the morning of July 1st, and the Allied troops left their trenches in the Big Push on a twenty-five mile front, they did not expect an even and steady advance.

A rigid line of German fortifications stretches from Nieuport to the Alps. There are no gaps. The defense has its first position, consisting of several trench lines; an intermediate position; and a second and final position some way back, of the same type as the first. The labours of eighteen months have made each position a miracle of human ingenuity—a labyrinth of trenches and a subterranean city of dug-outs.

No such front can be broken at the first attempt. The path of wisdom is to attack on a broad front and take the thing by steady stages—to capture one position at a time, and to attack with infantry only when the guns have done their work.

In the area of attack, of which Albert the point of division, the Germans on the north were prepared and the high plateau over which their lines ran was a formidable obstacle to any advance. In the southern part the ground was easier, the enemy weaker and a real surprise was achieved.

The British objective in the north, one or two points, was not attained. one or two points, was not atained.

Villages were blotted out and miles of country reduced to the appearance of a ploughed field by the Allied bombardment, but the German guns, well hidden behind the ridges were intact and before the hour came for the British to cross their parapets they opened a counter bombardment on the British first line. That line was largely destroyed, but the British infantry, under a devastating artillery fire, advanced steadily across No Man's Land between the lines.

Then the German first trenches awoke. Their occupants had retreated to the deepest dug-outs, sometimes fifty feet below the ground. They now appeared and manned their front lines, firing with machine guns and automatic rifles. Both sides showed the most conspicuous gallantry.

The attack as a whole was broken up before it reached the German firing line. Whole battalions disappeared as fighting units. By the evening of the first day the enemy's position in the northern section was unshaken.

It was different in the south. There the Allies had the benefit of a real surprise. The German reply to their bombardment was feeble. In some places the initial bombardment seemed to have destroyed resistance, and the attack advanced with scarcely a casualty across trenches filled with German dead. In a few hours the immediate objective was completely attained. All the German first position was carried on a front of more than twelve miles. One French regiment had only two wounded, and the casualties of one whole corps were under 800. The German losses were very high. Crossing the captured ground on the following day one walked among piles of German dead.

The first stage of the battle was beyond doubt a great Allied success. The objective was completely attained on an ample front and the way prepared for the stroke against the final German position. Without the sacrifice in the north the success of the British right wing and the French would have been impossible.

We are only looking at the beginning of the greatest battle in history. It will be a slow and costly fight, for Germany knows it is her last stand. The Allies will pursue their plan soberly and methodically, with no attempt at blind rushes or wild ventures. The German man-power is shrinking low. They have been compelled to send divisions from Verdun to help Hindenburg against Russia. FOUR ....

and in providing reserves for the present battle they are driven to scrape up battalions from every part of their western front. Reserves obtained in this way, men already wearied with much fighting, must inevitably be a frail reed to lean upon. One battalion hurried up from the South was captured intact by the British an hour or two after it had detrained.

A French officer who was asked about the capture of guns, replied: "We do not want guns. Krupp can manufacture them faster than we can take them. But Krupp cannot manufacture men."

BOAT RACE AT THREE RIVERS

The Fulton Yacht Club headed by Commodore Oliver enjoyed a cruise yesterday to Three Rivers. A race was staged between the boats "Iona" owned by John Painter and the "Nemo" owned by Henry Carlin and Barnard Crahan. Mr. Painter when interviewed this morning stated that the race resulted in a tie.

A spread was enjoyed at Three Rivers, after which bathing and aquatic sports were staged. Those present were Henry Carlin, Barnard Crahan, James Gordon, Commodore Oliver, Thomas Gordon and John Painter.

PLENTY OF WORK AHEAD FOR ELECTION BOARDS

Election boards in municipalities where there have been increase in the assembly membership from the counties which embrace such municipalities have considerable work ahead of them now that Governor Whitman has definitely decided he will not call a special session of the legislature to deal with the re-apportionment of the Senate and Assembly districts.

When the legislature has passed the bill providing for a re-apportionment of the Senate and Assembly districts and the governor had approved the proposition in New York and other cities the lines of election districts were changed in order to conform with the readjustment to conform with the changed assembly and senatorial districts.

Under the decision of the Court of Appeals which recently decided that the re-apportionment act as adopted by the legislature of 1916 was invalid the apportionment of members of both the assembly and senate will continue to exist as it was prior to the enactment of the law which changed it, which act having been adopted and proved in the early months of the year.

When a county lost or gained a senator or an assemblyman, it was nemessary to so alter the boundaries counties and election districts so as to have them conform with the provisions of the new law. This was done. As a consequence, the work must now be all undone; in other words the senatorial and assembly districts as they existed prior to the enactment of the 1916 law which changed them, will again become the boundary lines as though the recent legislation had not dealt with the situation at all.

Under the election law the number of voters in the election districts in cities is different as regards districts where voting machines are used and where the ballot box is still in vogue.

Where voting machines are used the maximum number of voters to a district is set at 450 and the law states that in such districts the number shall be as near 450 as possible.

The maximum number of voters in an election district where the ballot boxes are used is set by law at 400 and the minimum 300. Only where there have been changes as regards the representatives in the legislature will the districts be altered.

PROMINENT PHYSICIAN DIES

Dr. Henry Clay Baum, one of the leading physicians in Syracuse, died at 4:30 o'clock yesterday morning at the Syracuse Hospital for Women and children.

He had been in ill health more than a month, suffering with a complication of diseases. Early last month Dr. Henry A. MacGruer, with whom he had been associated for the past fifteen years, took him to the Moys hospital at Rochester, Minn. Dr. William Mayo was a close friend of Dr. Baum.

His condition failed to improve, however, and he was brought back to Syracuse. During the past two weeks the physician failed rapidly and on Friday it was decided to have him removed to the hospital. Members of his family were at his bedside when he passed away.

Sounded Queer.

"I like to clean up my work in a hurry," said the visitor.

"I find it advisable to string it out a little so that I will always have something on my desk in case a bore comes in," said his friend, taking up some papers.

Then the other man looked at him queerly and went out.—Kansas City Journal.

Behold the Tomato!

TOMATO SALADS.—Tomato and Celery Salad.—Cook one-half can of tomatoes, three cloves, one-half a bay leaf, one teaspoonful of salt and a little red pepper for fifteen minutes. Add one-quarter of a box of gelatin softened in one-half cupful of cold water. Stir until dissolved and strain into a border mold. When firm turn out on a bed of lettuce leaves and fill the center with finely cut celery, apple and broken English walnuts moistened with boiled dressing.

Tomato Jelly and Nut Salad.—Soak one-half box of gelatin in one-half cupful of cold water for fifteen minutes. Take one can of tomatoes, season highly, boil and strain, adding enough hot water, if necessary, to make three cupfuls. In this, while boiling, dissolve the gelatin. Turn out into two small molds to give a cuplike form. When cold place on lettuce leaves filled with sliced celery and broken pecans or walnut meats and serve with delicious salad dressing.

Piccalilli.—Slice a peck of green tomatoes in an earthern or agate jar. Sprinkle over them one teacupful of salt and let stand over night, then pour most of the brine off and add three pints of cider vinegar, three cupfuls sugar, tablespoonful each of ground cloves and cinnamon, one cupful mustard, one of grated horseradish, teaspoonful red pepper and four large onions. Cook in a porcelain or agate kettle till soft, keeping it well stirred. Put in jars or in one large stone pot and put in cellar.

Tomato and Cheese Salad.—Cut tomatoes into thick slices after peeling. Between each two put a thin layer of American cheese, spreading it with mayonnaise before adding upper slice. Arrange on lettuce and add a teaspoonful of mayonnaise on top of each just before serving.

Tomato Salad With Cream.—Slice tomatoes in rather thick slices into salad bowl; sprinkle with salt, pepper and a little sugar if desired. Chill and before serving put over them whipped cream and sprinkle with chopped olives.

Tomato and Peanut Salad.—Pour boiling water over large, smooth tomatoes, take off the skins and chill. When perfectly cold scoop out the centers and fill with chopped peanuts mixed with mayonnaise or boiled dressing. Serve on lettuce leaves.

THE TINKLING GLASS.

EGG FRUITADE.—This recipe is for an individual portion. To an egg add a tablespoonful of cold water and beat thoroughly with an egg beater. Then add in the order mentioned two tablespoonfuls of pineapple sirup, the juice of half an orange, a teaspoonful of lemon juice and a glassful of iced vichy. Turn into a tall crystal glass and blend with the aid of a shaker. Dust the top lightly with powdered nutmeg and serve with straws.

Iced Ginger Cup.—Place in a large bowl the juice of three lemons, half a cupful of sugar, half a cupful of raspberry sirup and two thinly sliced oranges. Allow the fruit puree to stand in the icebox for two or three hours. When ready to serve mix well and add a scant quart of chilled water, a pint of finely cracked ice and two pint bottles of ginger ale, the latter poured from a height. Turn into a high crystal tankard and serve immediately.

Malted Milk With Currant Sirup.—Mix a tablespoonful of malted milk with three tablespoonfuls of boiling water to a smooth paste, then add two tablespoonfuls of currant sirup (raspberry is also good), two tablespoonfuls of cracked ice and a scant cupful of cold water. Stir well and strain through a fine strainer into a chilled glass containing a small lump of ice. This amount makes one glassful.

Mint Frappe.—Slice into a mixing bowl half of a peeled cucumber (this gives a most delicious flavor when combined with the mint) and add in the order mentioned half a dozen sprigs of fresh mint, three sliced lemons and a cupful of strawberry sirup. Set on the ice for a couple of hours to chill and ripen, and just previous to serving mash with a potato masher and add half a cupful of plain sugar sirup. Strain and dilute to the desired strength with chilled seltzer water. Pour into glasses that have been half filled with cracked ice, add a few creme de menthe cherries and ornament each glass with a tiny bouquet of fresh mint.

TALENT AND CHARACTER.

The difference between talent and character is adroitness to keep the old and trodden and courage to make a new road to fresh and better goals. Character makes power which fortifies all the company, by making them see that much is possible and excellent that was not thought of.—Emerson.

Never Was "Union John."

Of the objects whose name is derived from the diminutive of John the union jack cannot claim to be one. In the days of chivalry the knights and men-at-arms wore a surcoat, or "jacque," as it was called, bearing the emblem either of their nationality or of the lord to whose service they were sworn. Gradually the word was transferred to the banner which was carried before the army, and this use of the word still survives today in the name of the British national flag and also that of the small flagpole at the bow of a ship known as the "jackstaff."—London Chronicle.

Two Sets of Muscles.

You have two sets of muscles—the outer ones, which you can feel, and the inner ones, which are your lungs, heart, stomach and other internal organs. The outer ones are conveniences for performing actions. The inner ones are your life—the "fate" which makes you happy or depressed, powerful or weak, useful or the contrary. These inner muscles require training, just like any other muscles, by intelligently directed exercise.

HIS PRAYER NOT ANSWERED

PRETTY SCHOOL TEACHER CAUSES TROUBLE IN FARMER'S HOUSEHOLD

Syracuse, August 7—Horace C. Hawn, of Perch Lake, N. Y., believes in prayer. When a pretty school teacher came into Horace's wedded life and he saw in her his soul mate, he asked God what he should do. He went out to the barn and prayed and prayed and prayed. A few days later while he was working in the fields God answered him, promising that his wife would die and that he could have the school teacher to love, cherish and protect. But Mrs. Hawn did not die and now she is suing for a separation. She told all about Horace and the school teacher before Justice William Ross in Supreme Court.

Her married life was happy, Mrs. Hawn said, until Horace got into politics and was elected trustee of the country school district. As such trustee he was empowered to hire the school mistress. He picked her out and brought her to his home to live. Mrs. Hawn objected, but was over ruled.

For $2.50 per week he undertook to board the school teacher, but at the end of the first week cut it down to $.00. Mrs. Hawn objected, but was over ruled.

Then Horace developed the habit of driving Magdalene, the teacher, to school in the morning and driving her back at night. Often they would not get back until late at night. Mrs. Hawn objected, but was over ruled.

Horace was a devout Christian and went to church every Sunday. The school teacher always accompanied them and on the drive to and from the church she sat on his lap while Mrs. Hawn gazed at the scenery from the other side of the buggy. What is more they used to hold hands under the lap robe, so Mrs. Hawn charges. Mrs. Hawn objected and said she wanted to sit on his lap, but was over ruled.

Then Mrs. Hawn says she was taken sick and went to a Watertown hospital. Her husband, she charges thought his promise was being fulfilled and that she was going to die. But she recovered, came home and found the teacher's room decorated with recent photographs of her husband. Again Mrs. Hawn entered objections and again she was overruled.

Along came an envelope social at a neighboring farmhouse. Hawn, leaving his wife at home, atended, prayed for some sign, and behold, he and the teacher drew similar envelopes.

Then he prayed that God would divert some of the love he had for the school teacher to his wife, but God refused, his wife says he told her and volunteered the information that God had chosen him as the agent to make known to her her doom, and that she was going to die.

Then Hawn started a Bible class at his home and suggested to his wife that the teacher beinvited. This was the last straw so she left her husband, went back to mother and started her suit.

Horace in his answer denies all the charges and claims that his wife was a poor and improvident housekeeper.

PRECAUTIONS AGAINST INFANTILE PARALYSIS ARE BEING TAKEN

The home of Eliza Guilfoyle was raised from quarantine this morning by local health officials. Dr. Hall stated this morning that all precaution had been taken to check the spread of this disease and that thus far no symptoms had been found designating the appearance or nature of Infantile Paralysis.

Dr. Hall stated that a family by the name of Decker, and residing on Schuyler street, had been placed under guarantine, owing to the late arrival of a six year old daughter, from the vicinity of New York city.

When asked if there was any possibility of the spread of the disease through this source, Dr. Hall replied that the quarantining was only a measure of precaution taken to stop the spread of the plague. He said that the city today is in as good condition as any other surrounding city and there is absolutely no cause for alarm.

The home of John Crahan was also quarantined owing to this same reason.

Dr. Hall stated that it is his desire to inform the ice cream manufacturers that cream containers must be thoroughly cleaned. This is of great importance and he states that this law must be recognized.

FOR SPORTS.

The Model Most Suitable For Motoring and Mountain Wear.

Built on simple lines that nevertheless give a distinction all its own, this smart topcoat is fashioned of Palm Beach cloth in natural tones. The double collar, tailored cuffs, and sachet pockets pendent from a straight belt are interesting motifs, being made of striped brown tussore silk.

ALSO PREPARED.

POCKETS A FEATURE.

No Museum or Godey's Book Reveals More Piquancy Than the New Ones.

Separate sport skirts are now quite as likely to be of silk jersey, khaki kool or la jerz, as of linen, even if the knitted silk, wool jersey or the velvet coat is worn. They are very lovely in white, and the advantage of being washable and needing no stiffening makes them invaluable at the shore. While there are some skirts laid in long, narrow pressed plaits, most of the sport skirts are cut flaring and in few gores. Their novel feature lies in the pockets, on which much personal ingenuity is displayed. Pockets, whether slashed or patch, are cut in odd shapes. The crescent tops are one of the favorite outlines. The upper edge will often have a tiny plaiting of a contrasting material. The belt, which is of the same material generally, may have this same plaiting along the edge and buttons with as many as three buttons. Sometimes pockets are found in the belt. They are little slashes, which are often faced, as are the up to date buttonholes, and are only large enough to hold a watch or key.

Sand Toys.

There are some children who will always be satisfied to spend a morning on the beach with only the little tin backet and shovel or a few old shells. But there are others, and they are the majority, who want more play toys for the beach or sand pile than merely these. For them there comes a set of wooden blocks, with a hollowed circle on one side, into which is molded a letter of the alphabet. With these molds a child can put out on the dampened sand any combination of letters which he likes. These surely rank among the useful toys and are worth purchasing for the educational value which they possess.

Another toy which will teach a principle of physics is the sand wheel, a wooden paddle wheel caught between two wooden boxes. Through the top one either sand or water may be slowly poured to turn the wheel beneath.

A small wooden auto on wooden wheels will cart the sand for a fort.

New Petties.

Petticoats of net with flounces finished with flowered ribbon are very full and cool looking.

NEW LAWS

THAT WILL GO INTO EFFECT SEPTEMBER 1st

After September 1st ministers must know the ages of persons who appear before him and want to get married according to a new law which goes into effect September 1. About a score of other new measures go into effect at the same date. They cover a wide variety of subjects, many of them relating to marriage and annulment:

Some of the principal ones are:

Prohibiting the confining of animals during transportation for more than twenty-eight consecutive hours without unloading for rest, water, exercise, etc.

Prohibiting the selling, carrying or use of fire arm silencers.

Amending the public health law relative to the practice of dentistry. Among other things the new law requires that candidates for certificates as dentists shall have had certain specified experience or instruction in dentistry and must be at least twenty-five years of age.

Providing that no person shall become engaged in the business of plumbing unless he has secured from the examining board of plumbers a metal plate or sign makers with the words "master plumber."

Amending the penal law by making it a misdemeanor to throw or place broken glass, tacks or other substances, which might injure an animal or puncture an automobile tire, upon any cycle path, street, road, highway or any public place. A fine of not less than five nor more than fifty dollars is prescribed for violations.

Making it a misdemeanor for any person, firm or corporation engaged in operating a railroad to employ in or about the engine, train, or trains, any engineer, assistant engineer or other employe who is unable to read the time tables of such railroad and to speak and understand the English language.

Amending the public service commission law by empowering the public service commission to investigate of its own motion any act done or omitted to be done by any telephone corporation or telegraph corporation.

Making the penalty for depositing slugs or mutilated coins in slot machines, imprisonment for not more than six month or by a fine of not more than $250 or both.

Making it a misdemeanor for a person having a husband or wife living, to take out a marriage license to marry another.

Adding several clauses to the existing laws upon which marriages may be annulled as follows: That one or both of the parties had not attained the age of legal consent or the age under which the consent of parents or guardians was required by the laws of the state where the marriage was contracted; that a former husband or wife of one of the parties was living and that the marriage with the former husband or wife was then in force; that one of the parties was an idiot or lunatic; that the consent of one of the parties was obtained by force, duress or fraud; that one of the parties was physically incapable of entering into the married state.

Naming a minister of the gospel guilty of a misdemeanor who solemnizes a marriage when either of the parties is known to him to be under the age of legal consent, or to be an idiot or insane person. Magistrates also come under the provisions of the new law.

There are in addition a number of other laws which amend the code of civil procedure.

LEOPARD TURNS ON TRAINER

EMPLOYE OF BARNES CIRCUS HAS NARROW ESCAPE

Miss Pearl Hamilton, an employe of the Al. G. Barnes wild animal circus suffered severe injuries Saturday as a result of getting too intimate with her pet leopards. Miss Hamilton, who was the trainer of the beasts had difficulty in making the animals mind and started to inflict punishment when the pet leopard "Babe" turned on her. Miss Hamilton receives many deep lacerations and bruises from the claws of the animal and Dr. Fessenden was called to dress the wounds.

The result would have been fatal had not two swarthy circus attendants interfered. Miss Hamilton resumed her duty with the circus today after spending the night in Fulton.

RAILWAY MAIL PAY.

Congress Directs Interstate Commerce Commission to Investigate Subject.

Washington. The annual Post Office appropriation bill recently passed by Congress contains a clause directing the Interstate Commerce Commission to take up for investigation, report and the fixing of rates the system of payment to the railroads for carrying mail. The Commission is authorized to test the relative merits of payment by weight and by space.

The railroads have long contended that they were underpaid for this service and that they were losing millions of dollars a year under the system of payment now in effect. It was felt that the Interstate Commerce Commission, on account of the information at its command regarding all phases of railroad operation, is in the best position to determine the merits of the case.

GOVERNMENT SHOULD REGULATE WAGES.

If a set of conditions have arisen which oblige the government to regulate rates, then it is equally obliged, on the basis of economic analysis, to regulate wages accordingly. Having taken one step, it must take the other. The logic of events is forcing this dilemma on the government. It is the public which sooner or later must pay for the increased expenses of transportation.—Professor J. Laurence Laughlin, University of Chicago.

Whales Once Lived on Land.

Scientists tell us that whales did not always live in the sea, but in prehistoric days dwelt upon the land. They are not true fishes, and their skeletons still give evidence of the days when they possessed four legs. Furthermore, while fishes breathe water from which the air is separated by means of their gills whales breathe air and separate the life giving oxygen from the other gases by internal lungs like land animals. In contrast to fishes also they are warm, red blooded animals. The largest whales are found in the antarctic and arctic seas.

Our First Canal.

America's first canal was dug at South Hadley, Mass., when Washington was president. It was completed in 1796. That little waterway gave De Witt Clinton his idea for the canal across New York state—the greatest single impetus ever contributed to the upbuilding of a large city.

It was the Erie canal that gave New York the needed speed to pass Philadelphia as the metropolis of this continent.—Philadelphia Ledger.

Slight Misapprehension.

"Is your husband an altruist?"

"I don't think so," replied young Mrs. Torkins, "and I almost hope nobody asks him to join. Charley has so many uniforms now that I can hardly take care of them."—Washington Star.

Platinum In Colombia.

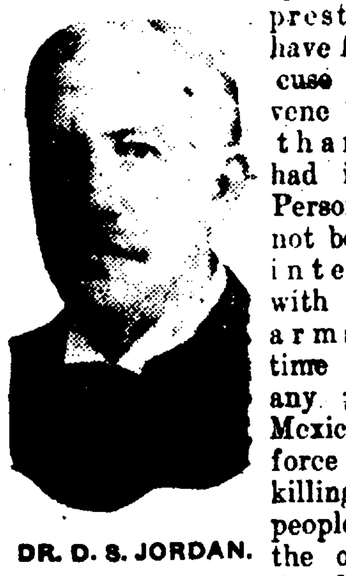
Platinum thrown away by early Spanish explorers, ignorant of its value, often is found in excavating foundations for new buildings in Colombia sometimes in sufficient quantities to pay the cost of a building.

It's the things we shouldn't do at all that we never put off till tomorrow if we can do them today.

Military Intervention In Mexico Would Paralyze Nation's Best Elements

By Dr. DAVID STARR JORDAN, Chancellor Emeritus of Leland Stanford University

TO intervene in Mexican affairs at the present time, using our own mistakes as a basis for intervention, would be a blunder and a crime which among other nations would tend to destroy all our moral prestige. We have far less excuse to intervene in Mexico than Austria had in Servia. Personally I do not believe that intervention with force of arms at any time would do any good in Mexico. Military force consists in killing enough people so that the others will be terrorized or paralyzed.



DR. D. S. JORDAN.

MILITARY INTERVENTION WOULD TERRORIZE AND PARALYZE THE BEST ELEMENTS, THOSE UPON WHOM THE REGENERATION OF A BACKWARD AND SUFFERING COUNTRY DEPENDS.

We have a treaty with Mexico providing that all such differences as we now are encountering shall be referred to arbitration. To make a scrap heap of this treaty and proceed to the CONQUEST OF MEXICO FOR THE PURPOSE OF RESTORING THE OLD REGIME WOULD BE INTOLERABLE TO THE AMERICAN PEOPLE.

Historic Hampton Roads.

In no territory of like extent in the United States is more historical interest gathered than in that which borders Hampton Roads. Here was planted the first English colony in America; here was held the first gathering of the people's representatives to make their own laws; here were erected the first fortifications in the English speaking new world: here were fought the land battle that terminated America's war of independence and the naval battle that revolutionized the warfare of the sea.

The first fortifications where Fort Monroe now stands were built 305 years ago, in 1611. Since that time, with short lapses, there has been some sort of a fortification always guarding the entrance to Chesapeake bay.—National Geographic Magazine.

Fish Lived In Box Nine Months.

Beloit, Kan.—Last October Ray Corn caught eleven catfish in the river near here and placed them in a "live" box for safe keeping over night. The next day the fish, box and all, were gone. The water is low, and Corn accidentally found the box stuck in the mud. In raising the box two of the fish escaped, but the rest were as lively as when he placed them there. Enough food floated through the cracks to keep them alive.

The Scrap Book

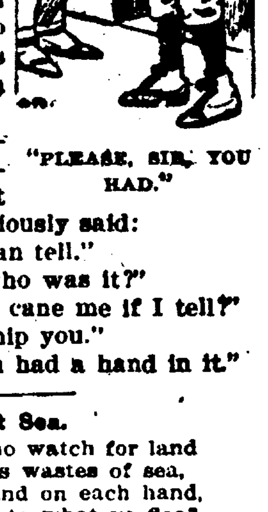
Had a Hand In It.

At a certain big school a few small boys played a joke on their class teacher by painting the hand rail of the staircase with tar. Then they hid until they saw the teacher come along and grab the rail and say and do things.

The next morning the teacher asked the boys if they knew anything about it.

After a while, there being no response, he took a coin from his pocket, saying:

"I will give this piece of silver to the boy who tells me who had a hand in it."



"PLEASE, SIR, YOU HAD."

No one answered, and then a little fellow, caught by the bribe, cautiously said:

"Please, sir, I can tell."

"Well, Willie, who was it?"

"And you won't cane me if I tell?"

"No, I won't whip you."

"Please, sir, you had a hand in it."

At Sea.

Worn voyagers, who watch for land
Across the endless wastes of sea,
Who gaze before and on each hand,
Why look ye not to what ye flee?

The stars by which the sailors steer
Not always rise before the prow:
Though forward, naught but clouds appear,
Behind, they may be breaking now.

What though we may not turn again
To shores of childhood that we leave
Are those old signs we followed vain?
Can guide so oft found true deceive?

Oh, sail we to the south or north,
Oh, sail we to the east or west!
The port from which we first put forth
Is our heart's home, is our life's best.
—Francis William Bourdillon.

Quick Calculation.

The superintendent of the Cincinnati zoo was making arrangements to feed the twenty-seven foot python and needed men to hold the reptile during the repast. His advertisement was answered by a serious looking darky.

"What we want," said the zoo man, "is a strong, husky chap to help hold the big snake while we feed him."

The darky's jaw dropped, his eyes stuck out like golf balls, and he gasped:

"Yo'—yo'—want a man to do what?"

"We want a man to help hold the big snake. What's the matter? Don't be frightened; there'll be ten of us"—

"Hol' on!" gasped the darky, making for the door. "Hol' on! Dey may be nine o' yo', but dey won't be ten o' us."—Life.

Quite Refreshing.

Sir Charles Wyndham, the actor, was once asked to exploit a certain reciter and gave an "at home" for the purpose, at which Gladstone was present. It was a terribly hot afternoon, and the reciter announced that he would give "Elaine," by Lord Tennyson.

After the recital Sir Charles went to Gladstone and said, "I'm afraid you've had a trying time with all this heat?"

"Not at all," was the reply. "I have had a charming afternoon. I thank you for asking me, and now as I am quite refreshed I can run back to the house."

Sir Charles was elated, for the rather "heavy" "Elaine" had been a success after all. He rushed to the stage, where he found his guests waiting for him and for tea.

"What have we done to you," they cried, "to give us 'Elaine' on a day like this? Surely there was something lighter to choose?"

"Lighter?" echoed Sir Charles. "That's the trouble with you society people—you're all so frivolous. I gave you a classic treat. Why, Gladstone has just told me he had a delightful afternoon."

"Of course he had," was the rejoinder, "for he was asleep all the time."

Illustrated His System.

It was a habit of the wise Frenchman Arago to look during his lectures at the young man who appeared the dullest of the students, and when he perceived that this one understood he knew all the others did.

Once in a drawing room he had just explained this habit of his to some friends when a young man entered and saluted him familiarly.

"But to whom have I the honor of speaking?" asked the scientist.

"Why, Professor Arago, you do not know me? I always attend your lectures, and you never take your eyes off me the whole time."

His Choice Too.

Lem Cotton, sole proprietor of a whitewashing emporium in a southern town, shone in the noonday sun as though he had given his skin a coat of stove polish. As he toiled away at the task of lighting up the judge's stable the judge himself came along. "How do, cunnel, how do?" said Lem. "How 'at wah goin' today?"

"Nothing new today," replied his honor.

"Which side you all on, cunnel?" asked the whitewasher.

The judge scenting the opportunity for some amusement, answered: "Have you ever heard of the great neutral people, Lem? Well, I'm neutral."

Lem never batted an eye as he answered: "'Es; 'em neutrals great fight ahs. Ah hope 'ey win."

"AMERICA FIRST AND AMERICA EFFICIENT."

We come to state in a plain and direct manner our faith, our purpose and our pledge. This representative gathering is a happy augury. It means the strength of reunion. It means that the party of Lincoln is restored, alert, effective. It means the unity of a common perception of paramount national needs. It means that we are neither deceived nor benumbed by abnormal conditions. We know that we are in a critical period, perhaps more critical than any period since the Civil War. We need a dominant sense of national unity; the exercise of our best constructive powers; the vigor and resourcefulness of a quickened America. We desire that the Republican Party as a great liberty party shall be the agency of national achievement, the organ of the effective expression of dominant Americanism. What do I mean by that? I mean America conscious of power, awake to obligation, erect in self-respect, prepared for every emergency, devoted to the ideals of peace, instinct with the spirit of human brotherhood, safeguarding both individual opportunity and the public interest, maintaining a well-ordered constitutional system adapted to local self-government without the sacrifice of essential national authority, appreciating the necessity of stability, expert knowledge and thorough organization as the indispensable conditions of security and progress; a country loved by its citizens with a patriotic fervor permitting no division in their allegiance and no rivals in their affection—I mean America first and America efficient. It is in this spirit that I respond to your summons.—From Mr. Hughes' speech of acceptance.

ADEQUATE FEDERAL WORKMEN'S COMPENSATION LAWS.

I stand for adequate Federal Workmen's Compensation laws, dealing not only with the employes of Government, but with those employes who are engaged in interstate commerce, and are subject to the hazard of injury, so that those activities which are within the sphere of the constitutional authority of Congress may be dealt with under a suitable law.—From Mr. Hughes' speech of acceptance.

THE NATION IS SHOCKINGLY UNPREPARED.

It is apparent that we are shockingly unprepared. There is no room for controversy on this point since the object lesson on the Mexican border. All our available regular troops (less, I believe, than 40,000) are there or in Mexico, and as these have been deemed insufficient the entire National Guard has been ordered out; that is, we are summoning practically all our movable military forces in order to prevent bandit incursions. In view of the warnings of the past three years, it is inexcusable that we should find ourselves in this plight. For our faithful guardsmen, who with a fine patriotism responded to this call and are bearing this burden, I have nothing but praise. But I think it little short of absurd that we should be compelled to call men from their shops, their factories, their offices and their professions for such a purpose. This, however, is not all. The units of the National Guard were at peace strength, which was only about one-half the required strength. It was necessary to bring in recruits, for the most part raw and untrained. Only a small percentage of the regiments recruited up to war strength will have had even a year's training in the National Guard, which at the maximum means one hundred hours of military drill, and, on the average, means much less. Men fresh from their peaceful employments and physically unprepared have been hurried to the border for actual service. They were without proper equipment; without necessary supplies; suitable conditions of transportation were not provided. Men with dependent families were sent; and conditions which should have been well known were discovered after the event. And yet the exigency, comparatively speaking, was not a very grave one. It involved nothing that could not readily have been foreseen during the past three years of disturbance, and required only a modest talent for organization. That this Administration while pursuing its course in Mexico should have permitted such conditions to exist is almost incredible.—From Mr. Hughes' speech of acceptance.

A Eugenic Marriage Proposal

By F. A. MITCHEL

Henry Opdyke had graduated at the head of his class at Brown, and Margaret Shelton had occupied the same position at the commencement exercises at Smith. Both took prizes for scientific essays.

"I'm almost sorry," she said, "that I went to college."

"Why so?"

"Well, before entering I had some pride in myself as a human being. I regarded our species 'a little lower than the angels.' Now I know that I am merely a fortification of atoms, built to resist an enemy of microbes."

"You mean various microbic enemies."

"Yes."

"But you don't wish to be conquered by any of these armies, I suppose."

"No, I don't."

"If we are to consider ourselves fortifications we may take a certain interest in ourselves as such. We are links in an endless chain of human beings. Our ancestors ages ago began to fight microbes that we might exist in our present shape; a shape superior to their's. Should one not be interested, indeed should it not be our duty to take measures that our descendants should be superior to us? Certainly not inferior?"

"You mean in a eugenic sense?"

"In part. A criminal should resist a predisposition to crime."

"How can he, since he is nothing more than what his molecules have made him?"

"Granted. Is it not then his duty as a molecular fortification to strengthen the weak spots in his descendants?"

"I presume so. But how can he do this without reducing himself to the level of stock farm principles?"

"He may still be a climber to greater heights. Are not morals and intellect hereditary?"

She admitted this, and he went on:

"Marriage based upon love alone is not conducive to an advancing condition of a race. Take a hundred such cases and compare them with as many based on a monetary provision for a family, good health on both sides and normal intellect on the part of the father"—

"And mother."

"Comparing the descendants of the first with the second hundred marriages one gets very different results. Those of the first are much inferior to those of the second."

"But the romance, or, rather, the absence of it?"

"Romance is an unimportant, evanescent condition. Take our alma mater. Can one get a better education in Dartmouth or Wellesley than at Brown or Smith because the former have high sounding names?"

"Nevertheless I have wished that Miss Smith, who founded my alma mater, had been Miss Cholmondeley."

"It would not have helped the matter. The students would have called the college Chumley. And if Nicholas Brown had been Taliaferro the boys would have shouted for Tolifer."

"And yet would not your illustration have been as effective in the words, 'A rose by any other name would smell as sweet?'"

"True. And what I am about to say to you has been said more beautifully by many a lover than I shall say it. But one should remember that the lover may have been scrofulous and the lady of his love had a weak heart."

"Couldn't you name a defect, leaving out the heart entirely?"

"I could, but you and I act our parts in an age when the world has awakened to the fact that science is a better presiding deity on engagements than cupid. Marriages have been made for various reasons beside love. I am thankful that I live in a period wherein science is preparing the way for a race of beings far superior to any the world has known."

"And I suppose a lover's proposal to a maiden will no longer be foreshadowed by gifts of lovely flowers?"

"Instead, he will ask for a list of diseases hereditary in her family, and upon receiving it will furnish a list of those in his own blood."

"Is there to be no expression of affection?"

"Not until the catalogue of diseases has been examined by the physicians of both families, and it has been decided that in this and all other respects a marriage would not be to deteriorate but to elevate the race. When all is settled transports will be in order."

"I see. If the transports came first, in case the physicians' report was adverse, the lovers would need to be untransported."

"Exactly."

There was silence between them for a time, when he added:

"May I be honored by permission to call upon your family physician for an exchange of our pedigrees?"

"This is very sudden. May I not have time to consider?"

"Certainly, but there is nothing binding in these preliminaries."

"I see. Your request is granted."

A week later he called upon her. She fell into his arms with a sob. He drew her to him with a sigh of relief.

"Thank heaven!" she whispered. "It was feared that a case of insanity had been discovered in my greatuncle. It turned out that he was only a kleptomaniac."

"I, too, have had a narrow escape. It was supposed that one of my greatgrandfathers was a pirate. It turned out that he commanded a privateer."

A Novel Introduction

By WILLARD BLAKEMAN

I had been at the Chocahassett Inn, a summer resort, a couple of days when a young lady arrived whose appearance struck me favorably and forcibly. I was standing on the porch when she came up the steps, and, though she did not notice me, I had a very good opportunity to observe her. "If she is so attractive in appearance," I remarked to myself, "begrimed with engine dust, what must she be in evening dress?"

The next morning I went down to breakfast, forgetting to lock the door of my room. On returning to get a cigar, what was my surprise to see the young lady whose appearance I had admired coming out of the apartment. I doffed my hat and stood looking at her inquiringly. She had taken the key, which I had left inside, from the lock and was putting it on the outside. Having locked the door, she turned and faced me. Noticing by my expression that something was wrong, she looked at me inquiringly.

"I fancy you have made a mistake," I said.

"How so?"

"You have evidently mistaken my room for yours."

"Not at all; this is my room."

I beckoned to a chambermaid who was passing and asked her to call for the clerk of the house. He came up and, after telling him of the situation, I asked him what was the number of my room. He said he would have to go back to the office to find out, whereupon I said:

"You needn't do that. Go into the room with the lady and learn whose baggage is there."

He opened the door and entered the room, the lady following him, I following the lady. I had put my trunk in a closet, removing what I especially needed to the bureau drawers. The consequence was that the room appeared to be empty. The girl looked about her, and I saw by her expression that she was puzzled. The clerk opened the closet and displayed my trunk with men's garments hanging above it. The girl looked astonished. He then opened a bureau drawer, and there lay a number of laundered shirts. The girl was astonished.

"I returned to my room after breakfast," she said, "remembering that I had left my portmonnaie in this little place on the bureau. I took it without looking about me."

"That's exactly where I left my money," I said, and, lifting the lid of the place referred to, I displayed—emptiness.

"Great heavens!" exclaimed the girl. "Can I have taken your property?" She produced a roll of bills and with trembling hands counted them. "Oh, my good gracious! I didn't have but $7; there are thirty here."

Had I acquiesced in her statement, as I should have done, the episode would have been ended, and my acquaintance with the lady would have remained undeveloped. But I especially desired that the acquaintance should continue. I did not attempt to soothe her feelings. I did not say that I believed her story or that I disbelieved it.

"I wish you both to come to my room," she said, evidently much troubled, "that I may show you there is $7 in the same place relatively as this."

"Please excuse me," I said coldly. "It would not be the part of a gentleman to ask for proof in such a matter from a lady."

She cast a half troubled, half indignant glance at me; then, turning on her heel, she said to the clerk imperatively, "Come with me."

He seemed much surprised that I did not at once warmly exonerate the lady and followed her as she had commanded.

I knew very well that the episode had not ended, and I was not mistaken. Later in the day the landlord came to me and said that the lady who had mistaken my room for hers desired to see me, that she might convince me of her innocence of any wrong intention and that she had taken my money by mistake. She was waiting for me in the parlor. I went there at once and approached her with serious mien.

I permitted her to labor through a defense that no lawyer would give a fig for, I wearing an expression of doubt, and when she could go no further from sheer worry I broke into a smile.

"Do you suppose," I said, "that I would suspect that what you did this morning was intentional?"

"Then why have you acted as if you have?" she exclaimed, both relieved and irritated.

There was a pause. I couldn't give the true reason, yet I must get out of the hole somehow.

"I have a reason," I said—"a very important one. But I cannot at present give it to you. Should you care to know it, say, six months hence I will tell it. Possibly the time may be shorter. It may be a few weeks, a few days. We shall see."

I did not doubt that she would keep in touch with me till she got that reason. I was formally introduced to her, and she came for me every day while we were together at the inn to extract it from me. While I was putting her off I was talking and acting very sweet to her, and before we left the place had made such headway that I confessed the true cause.

She pretended to be very angry with me for my action in the matter, but this did not prevent her accepting future attentions, and in the end she accepted me as well.

WHEN AMANDA SAID "YES"

By M. QUAD

Copyright, 1916, by the McClure Newspaper Syndicate.

To give you a straight tip at the very beginning of this story, Amanda Jones was thirty-four years old. That put her in the class of old maids by quite a number of years, perhaps. But why was she an old maid? That's what you are going to be told.

Jed Strong was an old bachelor. He was thirty-six years old, and a man can't live single that long without being called an old bachelor. And why was he called an old bachelor? Because three times in six or seven years he had asked Amanda Jones for her heart and hand and three times had she refused him.

Jed was a good young man. He had no vices. He was hardworking and respected. Amanda had made a great mistake every time she refused him, and she had refused him because of a silly notion she had got into her head. In fact, it was a notion put there by a fortune teller. This female fraud had come along one day when Amanda was about twenty-five years old, and before she had had her first offer and told her that a maiden must not accept the first offer made her. If she did, she would not live a year with her husband. As to the second offer, she must be coy and shy. As to the third, fourth and fifth, and so on, she must command that she be given time to think them over and write to her people for their advice in the matter. Strong came back. In spite of himself, his love for Amanda Jones had continued to live. He met with plenty of nice girls and lonely widows, but he came back heart free. He came back to try his luck once more, but he wasn't going to hurry things.

The passing years had been painfully slow with Amanda Jones. No one else had come to make a matrimonial offer. She had wished a hundred times over that she had accepted Jed's and that the old fortune teller had broken a leg before she reached the house, but repenting would do no good. She had come to be an old, old maid, and there was scarcely hope for her in the future.

One afternoon Amanda went for a long walk. She had heard that Jed Strong was back in the village, but she did not walk out in hopes to meet him. He had probably got married in the west. At least he had got over caring for her. She walked up the river for a mile or so and then took a seat on the bank. Before leaving her house the idea of taking a bath in the river had come to her. She might and she might not, but she took along with her a bathing suit that she might be prepared if she felt like it.

At the same hour the same afternoon Jed Strong took a walk up the river. He did not expect to meet Amanda Jones, but he would find a shady spot and sit down and meditate and throw clubs in the water and wish that every club would hit the old gypsy woman fair on the head. He might make a fourth offer to Amanda, but he doubted it. He would sit and think it over. He found the shady spot and sat down.

Amanda had preceded him by about twenty minutes. She had decided to take a bath. She looked up and down the highway and across to the cornfields on the other side of the stream, but no one was in sight. In entering the water she got tangled up in some brushwood that was lying in wait on the bottom, and she fell down, and the suit was badly ripped. She waded out farther, however, and was in the water up to her chin when a most awful thing took place. Jed Strong came walking along the bank, and, by the great horn spoon, if he didn't sit down almost above her and begin to meditate!

There was only one thing the bather could do, and that was to keep quiet until he departed. He might remain there half an hour or until sundown, but she must wait, and wait she did. Perhaps twenty minutes had passed away when Jed caught sight of her head and face and instantly recognized her and understood the situation. He was not more than a minute forming a scheme, and, springing to his feet, he picked up a good sized stone and exclaimed loud enough for Amanda to hear:

"By George; but that must be an alligator! I will knock his blooming head off at the first blow."

He drew back his arm for a throw, but a voice arrested it. It was the well known voice of Amanda Jones, and it wailed out:

"Oh, Jed Strong, don't kill me!"

"It's you, is it?" he asked.

"Yes, it's me, but I can't come out. You must go right away!"

"I must, must I?" replied Jed as he hunted around for more stones.

"What are you going to do?" asked Amanda in a frightened tone.

For answer Jed threw a stone, which, striking a couple of yards before her, spattered the water in her face. She ducked, and when she came up she saw Jed ready to throw another stone.

"Go away," she cried.

"I'll not go until—until"—

And Jed Strong lingered right there and made his fourth offer of marriage and did not stir a step until it was accepted, and he saw years of happiness ahead of him. It may have struck Amanda at the time as a mean thing to do, but weeks afterward, when the minister had done his duty, she put her arms around the bridegroom's neck and whispered:

"Oh, Jed, why didn't you throw stones at me long ago? We shall be just the happiest couple in the world!"

Ex-"White House Baby" Has Joined the Ranks.

STUDIED BRAILLE SYSTEM.

Twenty-two-year-old Daughter of Mrs. Thomas J. Preston, Jr., and the Late President Cleveland, Has Gone to France to Teach the Blind.

Once famous all over the world as "the White House baby," Miss Esther Cleveland has prepared to devote herself to the teaching of blind soldiers in France. From her home in Princeton, N. J., she traveled every day to Overbrook, a suburb of Philadelphia, to study the system in use at the Pennsylvania Institute For the Instruction of the Blind. Miss Cleveland's companion in the daily study was Miss Maria Osborne, daughter of the president of the American Museum of Natural History. When Miss Cleveland felt efficient in the work of teaching the blind how to take care of themselves in a world of darkness and how to engage in handicrafts by which they can support themselves she sailed for France, where she is now engaged with the American Ambulance corps. Miss Cleveland is twenty-two years old.

SEWING ROOM "WRINKLES."

A Dressmaker Gives Some Cues About Her Craft For Amateurs.

If your colored silk thread gives out when you lack only two or three inches of finishing tie the thread as soon as it leaves the spool to an ordinary spool of cotton thread; then it is possible to sew a distance of exactly ten inches more. The knot goes through all the openings except the needle's eye, and by being attached to the spool the thread is held taut.

Do not cut your sewing machine belt when it gets too loose. Instead put a few drops of pure castor oil on the band, run the machine a few minutes, and the belt will be tightened.

If you will cover your sewing table with white oilcloth stretched tightly and fastened with thumb tacks you will find no difficulty in keeping it free from dust, and the plain white surface is a help when cutting garments from dark materials.

When doing fine sewing or embroidering or anything that requires close attention the strain on the eyes will be much lessened if a dress or apron is worn of a color contrasting with the work in hand. If it is white wear a black apron; if black wear a white one, especially when sewing at night. When a needleworker arrives at the age when the threading of a needle is a strain on her eyes and patience let her adopt the crewel needle for all kinds of sewing.

For short lengths or piecework, where you don't care to bother with putting the ruffler on the sewing machine, simply lengthen the stitch a little and loosen the upper tension. Then stitch just as you would if the ruffler were on, and the bobbin thread will be found to make a perfect goffering thread on which the fabric may be drawn up to any desired fullness.

When cutting garments from patterns that you expect to use again mark plainly on each pattern the exact amount of material that is required. Frequently by careful cutting and a little piecing an amount of material less than the directions call for can be utilized, and a glance will tell just the amount you need when you wish to purchase material again.

Becoming to the Debutante.

A summer frock whose sole aim is to be becoming, carried out in figured silk muslin and crepe Georgette.

This charming little frock has just one mission in life and that is to be becoming. It is made of figured silk muslin combined with crepe Georgette, the latter being used for the underbody and skirt foundation. The overblouse and draped tunic are of the muslin. In medium size the dress requires 3½ yards 44-inch crepe Georgette and 4 yards 36-inch muslin.

The underbody is made first and this is started by facing the neck edges to form a yoke. Close the seams as notched and turn a hem in the right back at notches. Plait lower edge of underbody placing "T" on corresponding small "o" perforations. Sew collar to neck edge as notched. Adjust 2 inch belting to position underneath lower edge of underbody for a stay.

Close sleeve seam as notched Gather along small "o" perforations; draw gathers to the required size and stitch straight bands of material or ribbon 1 inch wide over gathers. Gather sleeve between double "TT" perforations. Sew in armhole of underbody as notched, small "o" perforation at shoulder seam.

Next join the foundation gores of the skirt and close center back seams of foundation gathered skirt and overskirt, from large "O" perforations to lower edges; gather edges of gathered and overskirt between double "TT" perforations. Turn hem in gathered skirt on small "o" perforations. Arrange gathered skirt on foundation, center-fronts and center-backs even; stitch upper edges together, small "o" perforation at side seam. Plait over-skirt at extensions placing single "T" on corresponding small "o" perforations; gather between the plaits. Arrange over-skirt on gathered skirt, center-fronts and center-backs even; stitch upper edges together, small "o" perforation at side seam of foundation. Stitch the remaining gathers along small "o" perforation in foundation to form a puff; regulate the fulness in gathered skirt underneath the puff. Now, fold the ruffle on slot perforations and gather. Stitch to the gathered edge of puff bringing front and back edges of ruffle to large "O" perforations. Tack the lower front and back ends of ruffle at the small "o" perforations in over-skirt and tack to the puff about 2 inches above the gathered edge. Adjust skirt to position stitch over upper row of gathers in waist, center-frons and center-backs even.

To make the overblouse, gather lower edge in back and adjust stay. Stitch gathers to position along lower edge of stay, and stitch the side edges to position Gather along shoulder on small "o" perforations, and make a row of gathers each side of small "o" perforations ⅜ inch apart; stitch a piece of tape 2 inches long under gathers. Turn under the edge of extension in front on slot perforations, gather ⅜ inch from folded edge. Lap front over the back and stitch gathers in front along the back edge, over the stay; stitch lower edges together. Bring the 2 single large "O" perforations together and tack, forming an armhole. Adjust over the surplice waist, center-fronts even. Bring the single large "O" perforation to corresponding perforation at shoulder in underbody back, and bring single small "o" perforations to corresponding small "o" perforations in underbody front and back and tack.

This dress is also pretty in two shades of one color.

Middy Blouse With Deep Yoke.

A middy blouse of white linen worn with a blue skirt and trimmed with a deep yoke of original outline. The open neck is finished with a deep braid-stitched collar.

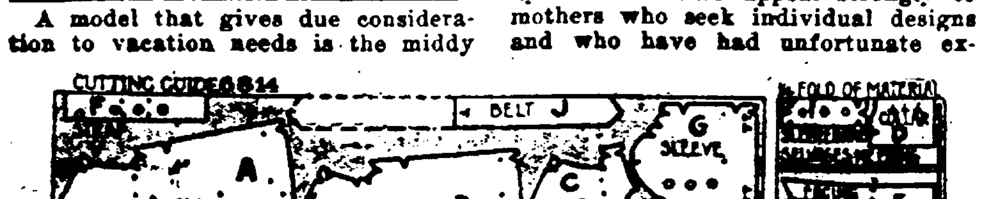
A model that gives due consideration to vacation needs is the middy blouse. It is shown here in attractive design, made with a deep yoke and open neck with square collar. The sleeves are elbow length, but they may be made full length and gathered into a band at the wrist. White linen, pique, galatea or gingham in stripes or figures would be appropriate for the blouse, which requires 2⅞ yards 36-inch material to make in medium size.

The material is folded in half and in quarter widths to cut the design. The sleeveband, in case it is used, collar and collar facing are so narrow that they easily may be obtained from the fabric folded to better advantage than in half.

The front and back of the blouse, however, and the yoke, are laid on a lengthwise fold of the material, leaving the strap and the belt to be placed along the selvage edge at the opposite side, and the sleeve on a lengthwise thread. The yoke may be omitted, but it adds greatly to the smartness of the middy and later in the season will supply an element of comfort, while not being uncomfortable now.

The skirt shown is part of an outfit that includes a blouse and a Norfolk jacket. It is a straight, boxplaited model with suspender straps and the middy that is slipped on over the head goes with it exceedingly well. The entire costume may be made of the same material, or the skirt may be of blue and the blouse of white, with the collar and cuffs repeating the color of the skirt.

Because it is made on straight lines, without being severe, this middy blouse should appeal strongly to mothers who seek individual designs and who have had unfortunate experiences with frocks made with bias seams.



Pictorial Review Middy Blouse No. 6814. Sizes, 4 to 16 years. Price, 10 cents.
Skirt No. 6679. Sizes, 8 to 15 years. Price, 15 cents. (Pattern includes three-piece suit.)

DEVILED CLAMS.—Steam some little neck clams which have been previously well washed keep out the best shells; chop the clams and cut in dice an equal amount of lobster, adding a little chopped parsley, pepper, salt, a teaspoonful of Worcestershire sauce, with enough cream sauce to make a smooth paste of the whole. Fill the shells with this mixture, sprinkling a little grated cheese on top, then put them in a hot oven for a minute or two until they are of a nice brown color and arrange them on a napkin with some parsley or watercress.

Just Scallops.—Make some large shells of puff paste and have nice firm scallops; clean them and put in milk for a few minutes. Roll them in flour and fry in butter; when they are cooked fill the shells with them. Put a drop of white wine in the pan, adding a good sized piece of fresh butter, chopped parsley, a drop of English sauce and a little lemon juice; do not let it boil, and pour over the scallops. Serve at once very hot.

Molded Halibut With Brown Almond Sauce.—A pound raw halibut, a pint soft breadcrumbs, a cupful of milk or cream, three egg whites, salt, celery salt. Mince the halibut fine and cook the crumbs and seasonings with the cream till it makes a smooth paste Add to the fish, fold in the egg whites beaten stiff, pour into a buttered bread tin, set in hot water and bake three-quarters of an hour in a moderate oven.

Clam Cocktails.—While the proportions of the ingredients used for the dressing to a clam cocktail vary according to individual preference, a good working standby allows to each plate five or seven clams, a teaspoonful of horseradish, a teaspoonful of tarragon vinegar, a tablespoonful of tomato ketchup, a teaspoonful of table sauce a teaspoonful of lemon juice, four drops of tabasco sauce and a pinch of salt. Mix all the seasonings thoroughly, add the bivalves, fill into glasses or grapefruit halves filled with ice, then set in the icebox to become thoroughly chilled and blended before serving. Chili sauce, grapefruit juice or some of the clam liquid may be used in the sauce if desired. Cress may be served as a garnish.

MANY IN FULTON TRY SIMPLE MIXTURE

Many Fulton people are surprised at the QUICK action of simple buckthorn bark, glycerine, etc., as mixed in Adler-i-ka. This simple remedy acts on BOTH upper and lower bowel, removing such surprising foul matter that ONE SPOONFUL relieves almost ANY CASE constipation, sour stomach or gas. A few doses often relieve or prevent appendicitis. A short treatment helps chronic stomach trouble. The INSTANT, easy action of Adler-i-ka is astonishing. W. H. Gayer & Son, druggists. adv.

SMASHES CROSS COUNTRY RUN

To Try Out Automobile Possibilities In Time of War.

San Francisco, August 7—That the record breaking, transcontinental run just finished here under the guidance of E. B. Stevens, the millionaire sportsman of Rome, N. Y., was a test more vital to the United States of America than a mere demonstration of cross country motoring was disclosed today when Mr. Stevens produced a telegram of congratulation from the trustees of the American Defense Society.

The high speed dash across the nation was nothing less than a serious try-out of what the automobile can be counted upon to do in time of war. The run had behind it the important motive of preparedness with a view to ascertaining how fast men and supplies can be shot across the continent to the defense of the Pacific coast.

The Stevens run beat the best previous record by 41 hours and 22 minutes.

"'There is one correction which I wish to make in regard to the length of time it took us to make the trip," said Mr. Stevens. 'It was three hours longer than the reported record. We made the trip in 5 days, 18 hours and 22 minutes, instead of in 15 hours. In other words, in computing the actual running time between here and New York 3 hours should have been added to make up the difference between New York and San Francisco time. co tnme.

"'As we started by New York time, the finish should have also been computed by New York time,—while it is true that we reached here exactly at 5 o'clock in the afternon, by New York time it was three hours later.

"'We therefore beat the best previous record by 41 hours and 22 minutes instead of 44 hours and 22 minutes as published.'"

HERE'S TO THE PORK CHOP

LONG MAY IT WAVE— MASTER BUTCHERS MEET

(By United Press)

Omaha, Neb., August 7—That the days of the beefsteak shall be long in the land and the festive porkchops wave forever was the plea today of the United Master Butchers Association of America, which began its annual convention here this afternoon.

Contending that dessicated beans or petrified corn-husks never can take the place of meat, the organization members planned today to continue a quiet, thoroughgoing fight against vegitarianism.

The convention will close August 11th. Special trains from all sections of the country brought hundreds of delegates here today.

Officers of the Association are: Arthur S. Pickering, Cleveland, O., president; Charles S. Grismer, Brooklyn, first vice-president; James Gallagher, St. Louis, second vice-president; Robert Weiss, San Francisco, Cal., third vice-president; Fred Herold, Chicago, fourth vice-president; John A. Kotal, Chicago, secretary; O. Edward Jahrsdeffer, Brooklyn, treasurer; Emil Priebe, Milwaukee, financial secretary; John Lichtschiedt, St. Paul, master at arms; Axel Meyers, Omaha, inside guard; A. Shapiro, San Francisco, outside guard; Albert Dunn, St. Louis, J. Stockringer, Milwaukee, and John Bowen, Minneapolis, trustees.

AND SENILE CATS & DOGS

(By United Press)

Cleveland, O., August 7—Crippled and senile cats and dogs will soon have a home here. The Cleveland Animal Protective Association, having just raised $5,000, is spending it for a home for domestic animal waifs. There will be a hospital, an ambulance to chase after cat and dog victims, and an electric chair to end the miseries of the incurable. The hospital will be kept open night and day.

Guatemala, Mexico's Southern Neighbor, Suffers From Raids.

BIG LOSS BY DEPREDATIONS.

Northern Border of Country Attacked at Intervals, and Valuable Stores of Chicle Are Taken and Readily Sold to Nearby Dealers, Who Ship to United States.

Guatemala City.—The people of the republic of Guatemala, Mexico's neighbor to the south, are about as nearly out of patience with the Carranza government as are those of the United States. The depredations along the northern border of this country, which began as soon as Carranza found himself accepted by the American government as a real ruler, have continued at intervals ever since.

The damage suffered by the citizens living on the frontier has not been so great as that inflicted on Americans along the Texas, Arizona and New

PRESIDENT ESTRADA CABRERA.

Mexico border, because the dividing line is much shorter and the country is less thickly settled.

The tactics against Americans, however, seem to be the same as those employed in the north—the quick raid upon some isolated and unprotected hamlet, the shooting of a few inoffensive and unarmed people, the looting and the hurried get away.

Although the Carranza government has steadily disclaimed all responsibility for these incursions and has placed the responsibility upon the omnipresent bandits, enough evidence has been collected by government agents to show that many of the attacks were participated in by men known to be Carranza partisans maintaining a loose sort of military organization.

Among the few Americans in the northern part of Guatemala these attacks by Mexicans are spoken of as "chewing gum raids." In almost every case, particularly along the frontier of the department of Peten, the object of the maurauders is to steal the laboriously obtained and valuable stores of chicle from which chewing gum is made and for which the forests of Peten are famous.

The chicle finds a ready market among dealers near by and is shipped out of the country as a Mexican product, usually to the United States.

A trip through the interior of the country is sufficient to convince the traveler that the republic was never in a more peaceful condition. The only revolutionary efforts that have been discovered have been those of Mexicans, most of whom are known to be in Carranza's pay. These gentlemen have been promptly deported.

United States silver dollars in the district between Guatemala City and Puerto Barrios, the Atlantic port, are much more in evidence than they are along Broadway. No one seems to be able to explain the influx of coins, but they are welcomed, and the tattered money of the republic is a bad second in popularity.

Only second in importance to the business boom among all classes is the effective solution of the high cost of living problem.

Bread forms the most important part of the people's food, and bread has been steadily rising in price on account of the control of the grist mills by a few large syndicates. President Estrada Cabrera called a halt on this by nationalizing all the water powers of the country, setting up mills and leasing them under suitable regulations.

These mills cut the price of bread, and the syndicate, unable to compete with them by using steam power, found their grip on the pantry of the republic broken.

NOTICE TO CONTRACTORS.

State of New York, Office of the State Commission of Highways, Albany, N. Y.—Pursuant to the provisions of Chapter 30, Laws of 1909, as amended by Chapter 646, Laws of 1911, and Chapter 80, Laws of 1913, sealed proposals will be received by the undersigned at their office, No. 55 Lancaster street, Albany, N. Y., at one o'clock p. m., on Monday the 14th day of August, 1916, for the improvement of the following highways:

OSWEGO COUNTY

Road No. 1427, Name of Road, Fulton-Volney, Part 1; Approx. Length, 0.57.

Also on Wednesday the 16th day of August, 1916:

Road No. 1428; Name of Road, Sandy Creek-Smartville; Approx. Length, 6.36.

Also on Friday the 18th day of August, 1916:

Maps, plans, specifications and estimates may be seen and proposal forms obtained at the office of the Commission in Albany, N. Y., and also at the office of Division Engineer, William M. Acheson, 433 So. Salina street, Syracuse, N. Y.

The especial attention of bidders is called to "General Information For Bidders," in the itemized proposal, specifications and contract agreement.

Proposals for each road or contract must be presented in a separate sealed envelope, endorsed on the outside with the name and number of the road or contract for which the proposal is made. Each proposal must be accompanied by cash or a certified check payable to the order of the State Commission of Highways for an amount equal to at least five per cent. of the amount of the proposal which such cash or check accompanies.

This cash or check will be held by the Commission until the contract and bond are duly executed.

The successful bidder will be required to give a performance bond for fifty per cent of the contract, and a maintenance bond covering the wearing surface of all roads, except water-bound macadam and cement concrete pavements for twenty per cent. of the contract price of the items which comprise the wearing surface, such bonds to be executed by a surety company to be approved by the Commission; or a bond secured by the deposit of collateral securities to be approved by the Commission.

The right is reserved to reject any or all bids.

LONG HOURS A RARITY.

Only Once In Five Years Does Average Trainman Exceed Legal Limit.

That long hours in train service have been reduced to a minimum is shown by a report issued by the Interstate Commerce Commission. Only one employe in five on the average last year was compelled to remain on duty more than sixteen hours during any one day in the whole year. Stated in another way, the chance of an engineman or trainman remaining on duty beyond this prescribed limit was reduced to once in five years.

The total number of cases of excess service from all causes reported to the commission was only 61,247 during the year ending June 30, 1915, as compared with 137,439 in 1914 and 270,827 in 1913, and with rare exceptions these represented cases recognized as due to unavoidable causes.

Statistics on this subject are collected by the Interstate Commerce Commission under the national hours-of-service law. Every time a train is so delayed by a blizzard, washout or other cause that any part of the train crew is on duty longer than sixteen hours the railroad company must report the occurrence to the commission, giving the names of the individual employes concerned and a full statement of the cause for the excess service.

For several years the railroads and the Interstate Commerce Commission have been co-operating in efforts to prevent the keeping of employes on duty for long periods. The reduction of nearly 80 per cent. in such cases which has been brought about in three years shows that the working of men for long stretches of continuous service has practically disappeared except in rare cases of unavoidable delay.

PROMISE TO REDUCE THE COST OF LIVING NOT KEPT.

Our opponents promised to reduce the cost of lving. This they have failed to do; but they did reduce the opportunities of making a living. Let us not forget the conditions that existed in this country under the new tariff prior to the outbreak of the war. Production had decreased, business was languishing, new enterprises were not undertaken, instead of expansion there was curtailment, and our streets were filled with the unemployed. What ground is there for expecting better conditions when the unhealthy stimulus of the war has spent its force and our industries and working-men are exposed to the competition of an energized Europe?

It is plain that we must have protective upbuilding policies. —From Mr. Hughes' speech of acceptance.

WANTS AN EFFECTIVE SYSTEM OF RURAL CREDITS.

We propose to promote by every practicable means our agricultural interests, and we include in this program an effective system of rural credits. We favor the wise conservation of our natural resources. We desire not only that they shall be safeguarded, but that they shall be adequately developed and used to the utmost public advantage.—From Mr. Hughes' speech of acceptance.

Submarine Breman Reported Sunk

(By United Press)

Berne, Switzerland, August 8—The Berlin Taggeblatt announced that the German submarine Bremen which was to have arrived at an American port has been sunk through an accident to her machinery, according to a dispatch received here this afternoon.

NEW YORK STRIKE ENDED

(By United Press)

New York, August 8—The New York city street car strike has ended. All existing strikes were declared settled this afternoon when Chairman Straus of the public service company announced that the employers' agreement had been accepted by all the company and the men have returned to work. The regular traffic will now be resumed.

OSWEGO COUNTY ANNUAL FAIR

INDICATIONS ARE THAT IT WILL BE MORE ATTRACTIVE THAN EVER BEFORE.

Plans have been made for one of the best fairs in the history of the county, Secretary Kingsbury announced to-day that many new features would be added to the program. A balloon ascension and paraschute drop will be held everyday by one of the best artists now in the business.

A large poultry exhibit is also contemplated and a new feature which has never before been used will be introduced. An experienced man will act as guide throughout the poultry building to instruct and point out the various breeds. Placards will also be called into play, designating the breed of the birds.

Mr. Kingsbury assured the representative this morning that a splendid exhibit is scheduled.

The main building is to be used for the sole purpose of the automobile show and already many reservations for space within this structure have been made. All of the popular cars of today will be demonstrated there as well as motorcycles. This also is a new idea and the local association is the first to introduce this event at a county fair.

Various concessions have already been designated with the one exception of the dining hall, for which application has not yet been made. This is a splendid opening and it is the desire of the committee to have the vacancy filled. Absolutely no charge will be made for this concession.

The arrangements for the cattle display are rapidly being made and recently many applications for territory have been made by some of the best cattle owners of the east.

The midway will be larger than ever this year which is proven by the register at Secretary Kingsbury's office. New shows with good, clean, wholesome attractions are booked.

The floral display also looks very promising.

Probably the most inviting is the race track program in which some of the fastest horses are scheduled to compete. Liberal prizes will be given.

The following is the program:

Wednesday, August 16th—2:20 class, trot and pace, purse $250; 2:29 class, trot, purse $200.

Thursday, August 17th—2:17 class, trot and pace, purse $250; 2:28 class, pace, purse, $200.

Friday, August 18th—2:25 class, trot and pace, purse $250; free for all, trot and pace, purse $260.

Among the displays that will be here are the University of Cornell's entamology display, which promises to be very interesting. The spelling bee will take place Friday morning in the grand stand.

CHAMBER OF COMMERCE DINNER LAST NIGHT

MOST SUCCESSFUL MEETING IN HISTORY OF ORGANIZATION.

Seventy-five members of the Chamber of Commerce listened to the announcement that a new industry with a payroll of $100.00 per year, is about to come to this city—at the meeting yesterday afternoon on Pathfinder Island. And along with the announcement came other assurances which not only brought a sigh of relief from each perspiring business man, but bid fair to clear the skies of considerable misunderstanding and so-called "under water" work, which has been said to be prevalent in the Chamber since its organization.

These assurances came from a committee of local paper manufacturers who declared that they were in favor of the project, and would co-operate in advancing Fulton's interest from the merchants' viewpoint in every way.

The business session opened immediately after a 6:30 dinner had been served. The perspiring diners then adjourned to the Island lawn where the session was called to order by Willis Morin president of the Chamber.

It was here that every angle of the Chamber's affairs was aired to the satisfaction of several who later declared that they were inclined to be optimistic. Pussy footing and petty politics were laid on the table and it also appeared that private interest had suffered a temporary knock out, while a two hour discussion of the new project was on.

The announcement that the new industry may locate here was made by Mr. Morin and he declared that the industrial committee should be lauded for their efforts.

Messrs. E. R. Redhead, H. L. Paddock and Theodore Webb, representing a committee of paper manufacturers then followed in discussions of the project, and each declared that local manufacturers were heartily for anything which would advance the interests of the city, its retailers and its people.

Ex-Mayor Fox voiced a criticism of the Chamber for the apparent secrecy which he said appeared to prevail in various deliberations.

This was answered by President Morin, who declared that public announcement often tended to embarrass progress in each effort, and had so proven heretofore.

From the report submitted by the industrial committee, the new industry will require from 75,000 to 100,000 square feet of floor space; to cost primarily $100,000, and according to the payroll, which would be $100,000 a year, 500 people could find employment at the average wage of $10 per week. A site has already been selected, and this awaits the decision of the officers of the corporation which now has two other plants in orperation.

Members of the industrial committee declared that they had refused negotiations with several other concerns after due investigation had been made and the results submitted to the directors of the Chamber. The new project, that submitted yesterday, represents what they consider the best of the lot.

One of the important requirements of the new industry is a bonus of $25,000 to be raised by the Chamber. This was asked for as a guarantee of faith upon the part of the local organization, and represents a partial cost of the factory site together with other primary expense. $10,000 was raised during the evening from one source, with more promised when the final negotiations are to be completed on August 15th, with the head officers of the corporation. A surety bond will be given the local contributors to insure their interests.

The local business men were transported to the island by automobiles, and at nine o'clock the session was over, after hearty congratulations were tendered to the industrial committee for their apparently successful efforts.

The membership of this committee includes Messrs. L. E. Hope, David Katz, D. M. Sullivan, O. S. Bogardus, J. M. Caffrey, F. W. Richardson and others.

Last night's meeting and the results forthcoming as indicated, was one of the most successful in the history of the young organization, and if negotiations are successfully closed with the new enterprise on August 15th this city will experience a boom which will not be second to the palmy barge canal days. The new industry is that of the manufacture of a product common to American markets.

ALUMNI TO HOLD MEETING TONIGHT

PLANS FOR OUTING TO BE ARRANGED

The High School Alumni Association will hold a meeting tonight at the public library to complete plans fot the outing scheduled for August 29th, to take place at Pathfinder Island. All the members of the various committees are requested to be present. The book containing the by-laws and minutes of the meetings has been lost by the association, thus making the advancement slow. A general get together meeting will be held tonight.

On August 29th a general field day is planned. Ball games will be given, tennis matches and boat races will be held. A dinner will be served at 6:30 o'clock, after which a dance will be given.

All are requested to be present tonight.

THE BOARD OF PUBLIC WORKS

TRANASACTED ROUTINE BUSINESS AT CITY HALL LAST NIGHT.

At the meeting of the Board of Public Works last night, a petition was received asking that action be taken regarding the letting of the contract for the storm water sewer on the east side of the river.

The City Clerk was authorized to advertise for bids on this contract and in case the work could be done for not more than $20,000, the amount would be raised by the Common Council. The bids will be opened at the meeting of August 28th.

This will be of great importance to the Academy street residents as they have been much annoyed by flooded cellars heretofore.

Permission was granted George B. Palmer to install a gasoline supply tank between the sidewalk and curb in front of his garage on West First street.

A resolution was also passed requesting that the Fulton Light and Power Company remove their coffer dam which is causing much damage by the backing up of the water in Waterhouse Creek.

Robert Blake, of West Fifth street, appeared before the Board in behalf of his fellow neighbors and requested permission to lay a sidewalk at the curb between Beech and Pine streets. The Board instructed him to appear at the next meeting with a petition from the property owners.

Alderman Baker appeared before the Board and presented a petition signed by resident of the third ward and requesting that improvements be made on the following streets:

On Sixth street between Broadway and Pratt; on Fifth between Broadway Pratt, and on Third between Broadway and State, and on State between Fourth and Sixth streets.

The city clerk was authorized to advertise for a public hearing in regard to this resolution.

FLOATER FOUND

AT OSWEGO EARLY THIS MORNING.

Oswego, August 8, (Special)—The body of a man was found floating near Rathbun dock at about five o'clock this morning. He was apparently about forty years of age, five feet ten inches tall, brown hair, and weighed between 170 and 180 pounds. The wearing apparel which conveyed no means of identification consisted of a suit of light underwear and overalls.

Owing to the badly decomposed condition of the body it is thought that it has been in the water for at least two weeks.

A WASTE FOR EVERY FIGURE

ALSO A FIGURE—($), FOR EVERY WAIST.

(By United Press)

Chicago, August 8—"A waist for every figure."

That's the order tacked up in the factory of every waist manufacturer in Chicago, they admitted today. The makers showed the result of the order at this week's Fall Style show of the Chicago Garment Manufacturers' Association, at Bismarck gardens. And of course there's a figure ($) for every waist, too; and quite high they are in some cases.

The "two-in-one" collar stands out most prominently in the making of waists "for every figure." The new collar is one that turns up or down, sometimes called the high and low collar.

"It's turned down for the young woman and up for the woman who—isn't young," waist manufacturers explained to their buyers today.

Sleeves for fall waists are made full with a plain, military, attached cuff.

Georgette crepe and crepe de chene are the prevailing materials. White, flesh, navy blue, black, tan, brown, and a few greys will be the colors worn.

INTELLIGENT ADVERTISING

The Astute merchant realizes the danger that the public may be bewildered by the variety of his stock. Aimless customers rarely buy them much. They don't want to purchase anything of importance without consideration in advance.

A woman may come down town and visit the stores without much definite idea of what she proposes to get. She has a certain need in her mind, but no conception of where it can best be filled. Her half formed purpose is upset by the multitude of offerings. She may want a certain type of dress goods, but she fritters her time away at novelties that presented themselves to her eye as she visits the store, and she may buy none of them.

The kind of customer that pays is the one whose mind was made up before leaving home, as the result of intelligent reading of a newspaper advertisement. She forms the impression that a certain need can be met at a certain store within certain range of prices.

The advertisement indicates alertness in seeking good bargains on the part of the merchant, seasonableness and attention to style. She enters the store with the preconception that it will supply her needs.

That kind of customer is waited on with the minimum of friction and the minimum expenditure of time by clerks. The chances that she will leave the store without making a purchase are minimized.

At least she is committed to make a thorough examination of stock, and when that is done it is the usual thing to complete the purchase.

The stores that advertise constantly deal with a great body of people who visit the place with preconceptions favorable to buying. It is the best kind of people to do business with.

LUCK OR FORESIGHT

A mighty lovable old professor used to have a hobby about teaching young upstarts that there was no reward without effort. He frowned upon use of the word "luck" in any meaning. His teaching was that fortune followed work that was well done and properly guided. Luck had no place in the plan of life and deserved no position in any dictionary, according to his way of it.

Some years ago, just after there had been a boom of Oklahoma oil stocks, there came a time when leases went begging. The western product did not yield refined products of value equivalent to the output of other fields. To get returns matters had to be handled on a large scale and even then return was not assured. Some Ohio men of experience looked into the Oklahoma propositions. Two companies secured holdings of greater or less extent. Within the past year a change in the oil market took place. Oklahoma leaseholds became more valuable. Men who had invested just to be good fellows when their friends asked them to "take a little flyer," suddenly found themselves in a position to make a barrel of money. One company in organization had taken in the office stenographer for a block of stock that cost her $250. Last week she drew $62,000 as her share of the profit in the sale of the company's interest. Another company sold a half interest for a thousand times what the investment cost. These business deals are not examples of the unusual in their line. Yet men of just as much experience as these, and men with as much judgment and foresight, have often fared differently.

Is luck what? What is luck?

GIVE THE BEANS A CHANCE

Lyman Crane, St. Lawrence County, N. Y., believes that growers should give beans as good a chance as corn and points to his own results as indicative of the profits in growing the crop by the best methods.

Last year he harvested 16 bushels of beans from two rows in which two quarts of beans were planted. With beans bringing $4 per bushel, the prospects for the season are bright.

WORK AND WORKMAN

The labor market is somewhat of a mystery. We have been told repeatedly that this country never witnessed such a demand for labor as is now on. Manufacturers, builders, leaders in every branch of industry, have been so hard-pressed for workmen, it is said, that they have taken every applicant without question, glad to get half a man rather than none. The puzzling question is: If they are putting to work all comers, asking no troublesome questions concerning fitness or skill, why is it that there are so many idle at the present time? Are they such obvious misfits that not even a half frantic employer would take them or are they too particular about what sort of work they are willing to do? We think it is established that the country contains a certain number of persons who are seldom able to find employment, no matter what may be conditions in the labor market. Most of us know some of these unfortunates. They are ever looking for work but seldom finding it. When found it only remains with them a very brief period. This is not the place to say ugly things about the man who is idle when others are working and whose idleness comes from seeming inability to find work and keep it. His unlucky experience should command attention of the philanthropist whose aim in life is to cure defective humanity. There ought to be a place for every man and woman in the world's great workshop. We believe every human being is industrious if he has found his proper place of toil. Much of the so called laziness in the world springs from a vicious environment. Most of us have had jobs that we weretempted to linger over or to shirk because we did not like them. Put us at some congenial employment and we cheerfully toil on from day to day, never watching the clock, and eager to go forward the completion of a congenial task. Indolence is the result of ill-health where it does not spring from a thorough disrelish of the particular job on hand. Find a man work that he likes and he'll work all right.

ATTENTION TO PASSPORTS

Those old, happy-go-lucky days when the American traveler abroad could go where he pleased and as he pleased, are over. Wartime necessity has put an end to that casual order of things. If it ever returns again, it will be when the world is so profoundly at peace that no indiscreet or malicious globe-trotter can do anything which might seriously compromise this country with other countries.

Nowadays one must have a passport to get to Europe. But it appears that on the neutral ground of South America, some Americans have been lax in complying with passport precautions, and, in consequence, are beset with difficulties.

The Foreign Trade Bureau of the Philadelphia Commercial Museum calls attention to the fact that American commercial travelers who are attempting to obtain steamship passage from ports on the west coast of South America to the Panama Canal Zone without proper passports are experiencing delays.

Steamship companies operating ships plying between ports in the United States and South American ports and the Janama Canal Zone will only take, so the report runs, passengers provided with passports of their governments.

It is understood that passport are obligatory for persons entering Venezuela, Haiti and San Domingo, and that they may be required in other countries of South and Central America.

A SAILOR'S VERSION

The Wall Street Journal tells of an accident the other day between a jitney bus and a street car, out in Los Angeles. A sailor from an ocean steamer was aboard the street car, and was a very important witness at the investigation which followed. When questioned about the affair, he told of the occurrence in his own language of the sea, as follows:

"I was standing on the starboard for'castle of the car when the gasoline cutter hove in sight off our port bow. We were making about fifteen knots, and the cutter was coming about the same along another channel. It was clear weather and not much ground swell. Our chief engineer blew his siren and reversed his propeller, but he couldn't heave to it in time to keep from ramming her. There wasn't even time to get out the life preservers, or sound the emer- Her captain stuck to his post. The jitney went down like a submar-

Cessation of War Not Likely to Bring Enforced Idleness to American Labor

By CHARLES E. CARPENTER, Manufacturer, Philadelphia

THAT the industries of the nations of the warring countries have been disorganized and it is going to take a very large amount of time to reorganize is undoubtedly true.

THIS IS GOING TO RELIEVE THE INDUSTRIES OF THE UNITED STATES FROM COMPETITION OF FOREIGN COUNTRIES FOR A CONSIDERABLE PERIOD AFTER THE WAR.

It is going to be in a measure an artificial tariff, and I cannot see how that is going to enforce great idleness in America.

There is only one thing that can make for hard times, and that is to take from the working class their purchasing power, and while that may come in spots and will come in spots in the readjustment, while there may be temporary general conditions of dull times due to clumsiness of the readjustment machinery, I HAVE YET TO SEE A SOUND ARGUMENT PRESENTED WHICH WOULD LEAD ME TO BELIEVE THAT THERE IS ANY LONG PERIOD OF ENFORCED IDLENESS OF LABOR AHEAD.

There are too many who confuse the tumbling of the stock market and the lowering of the price of raw materials as indicative of commercial depression, when, as a matter of fact, commerce thrives better when there is the least amount of capital deflected from productive enterprises to stock gambling and when raw materials are at a point which will enable the consumer to purchase the greatest quantity of finished product for the dollar.

BURNED HIMSELF ON PYRE.

It Is Supposed That Sawyer Had Read About Abraham and Isaac.

Denver.—Abraham's attempted sacrifice of his son is believed to have caused Thomas Sawyer to burn himself to death near here. The body was discovered near Castle Rock. It was resting on a pile of stones and charred wood. Near by was found Sawyer's Bible.

Opening the charred Bible, Mrs. Sawyer found a passage heavily marked with a pencil describing Abraham's attempted sacrifice.

Relatives believe Sawyer built a pyre of wood and stones and offered himself as a sacrifice to the Lord.

CAT'S BABIES OF HIGH BIRTH.

Maltese and Four Kittens Discovered Far Up In Tree.

New York.—High in a maple tree a Maltese cat belonging to Michael Dooley, owner of a saloon on Union street, Flushing, purred over her four brand new kittens. She had carried to the spot material for what might be called a nest. Lying on guard over her young ones, she appeared to enjoy the refreshing breeze at that altitude.

The keeper of "Fort Dooley" had missed his pet and was surprised to find her comfortably ensconced among the branches.

GOLF CLUB FOR MEN ONLY.

Women Players at Greensburg, Pa., Sneer at the Venture.

Greensburg, Pa.—Steps are being taken toward the organization of a new golf club in Greensburg. The Greensburg Country club has an excellent course, but many of the men players are dissatisfied because so many women members have become devotees of the game. It is planned to make the new club strictly for men.

"The women talk too much," said one male expert. "It is impossible to make a good shot with all their chatter going on."

A woman golfing enthusiast when told of what was on foot retorted indignantly: "Let the old things organize a new club if they want to. They're jealous of some of the scores we have been making; that's the whole trouble."

SKUNK SACKS UNDER HOUSE.

Mean Wisconsin Person's New Form of Deviltry.

Eagle, Wis.—Despite the offer of a reward of $100, State Senator A. C. Clark, a wealthy Chicago man, who has a summer home on Eagle Springs lake, has been unable to discover the identity of the person who put skunk sacks under the floor of his home.

In the last issue of the Eagle Quill Senator Clark inserted the following notice offering a reward and telling of his troubles:

"Will personally add $50 to the $50 reward already offered by the Eagle Springs Lake Protective association. I do so because Mrs. Clark found it was impossible to live in the house."

"PRESIDENCY" BOOK

NOW READY

Contains Facts, Figures, Dates and Data About All Past And Present Elections

SETTLES ELECTION ARGUMENTS INSTANTLY

If you want to know how the political "machine" works; if you want to know the "strength" of each state; if you want to know how your state and other states have voted during the past twenty-five or thirty years—in other words, if you want to know a hundred and one different things about politics that the "other fellow" doesn't know, you have only to secure a copy of "The Presidency of the United States" and all of this desirable information will be yours.

This little book has been compiled by experts at great expense, and the information it contains is absolutely reliable and strictly non-partisan. It is not only intensely interesting but has a distinct educational value that makes it desirable for school children as well as for grown-ups.

"The Presidency of the United States" will be used by thousands of people this year as a quick and ready reference for information on all past and present elections, and as "final authority" for settling all election arguments and disputes.

The ability to answer correctly the questions this book contains indicates a more intimate knowledge of past history and current events than is possessed by the average citizen. Many a surprise is in store for anyone who thinks to do so without "brushing up."

We were fortunate in securing a supply of these books for immediate delivery. If you want one you can secure a copy at this office for "only ten cents."

"Be sure you are right—then go ahead," was the favorite saying of old David Crockett. Those who believe in this motto will find in "The Presidency of the United States" an abundant supply of historical facts and non-partisan information upon which to base their statements and arguments during the 1916 presidential campaign.

Secure your copy at this office right away before the supply is exhausted. tf

Securing a Prisoner.

A sheriff, annoyed by the crowd which follows when a prisoner is taken along a public thoroughfare handcuffed to a policeman, devised a simple way of handcuffing a prisoner so that he can be taken through a crowd without every one being aware that he is really in shackles. Instead of locking the prisoner to the officer, the prisoner is handcuffed to a heavily laden suitcase, which he is required to carry. The suitcase is filled with bricks and weighs from twenty to fifty pounds, making escape very difficult.—Detroit Free Press.

Double Photography.

Those of you who have seen films in which a player taking two parts appears in those parts at one and the same time, in the same scene, will wonder how it is done. The player, of course, does not play both parts at once. He or she plays one part, and while doing so the camera operator by one of his many tricks keeps blank that portion of the film on which the player is photographed taking his other part. When that part in which he has played is finished the operator winds back the film to the beginning, and the unexposed blank portion is exposed for the first time, while the other part is covered. Then the player takes the other part.—Pearson's.

Historic Hampton Roads.

In no territory of like extent in the United States is more historical interest gathered than in that which borders Hampton Roads. Here was planted the first English colony in America; here was held the first gathering of the people's representatives to make their own laws; here were erected the first fortifications in the English speaking new world; here were fought the land battle that terminated America's war of independence and the naval battle that revolutionized the warfare of the sea.

The first fortifications where Fort Monroe now stands were built 305 years ago, in 1611. Since that time, with short lapses, there has been some sort of a fortification always guarding the entrance to Chesapeake bay.—National Geographic Magazine.

Germans Are Making Attack on Austrians

(By United Press)

London, August 8—British troops pushed lines forward to outskirts of the village of Guillemont in a resumption of Somme regions last night, General Haig reported to the War Office this afternoon. Fighting was prevalent at the outskirts of the town near the railways.

The advance was made east of Prones Woods in conjunction with the French operations north of Harddort on the British right wing. The Germans last night heavily bombarded positions won by the Austrians north and north east of Pozieres, but did not resume the counter attacks which resulted so disastrously yesterday.

Mexico Will Figure as a Campaign Issue

(By United Press)

Washington, August 8—President Wilson will accept Mexico as a campaign issue if Republican Candidate Hughes and his followers continue to indicate that they desire the fight for presidency waged on this question. This was the declaration of those close to the president today, as preparations were begun for the fight which will determine whether the Democrats are to remain in power.

Austrian and Italian Sea Forces Fight

(By United Press)

Berlin, August 8—The Austrian and Italian naval forces engaged in a fight in the Adriatic Sea on August 2, while the Austrians were returning from a raid. It was announced in an official statement from Austrian admiralty received here today. The Italians were hit and turning south they disappeared. The Austrian Admiralty admitted that the Austrian vessel, Magnet, was damaged by an enemy submarine on the same day.

MEXICO WANTS TO BE FAIR

(By United Press)

Washington, August 8—The first direct notice that Mexico is willing to include other subjects than military matters, treating with the United States was given to acting Secretary of State Polk, today by Mexican Ambassador Arredondo. He told Polk the governor desires merely that the statute be put ahead of other matters because of more immediate pressing nature of army questions.

Epidemic Continues in New York

New York, August 8—Five cases of infantile paralysis in exclusive suburban communities near New York, were reported today. New York hospitals have appealed to people who have had infantile paralysis and who are free from any blood complaint to sacrifice blood to save victims of the disease.

Italians Making Heavy Attack

(By United Press)

London, August 8—That the heavy attack launched by the Italians on the Isonzo front mark the beginning of a new and powerful offensive is the opinion of several Rome correspondents whose dispatches were received here today. Italian artillery has been felling Austrian works around Monfalcoe for several days. Italian infantry attacks Saturday and Sunday were followed by more prowess than have any action on Isonzo front in many weeks.

WEATHER FORECAST

Moderate west to north west winds and thunder showers this afternoon and probably to-night. Wednesday, fair.

Picnic Postponed.

The annual picnic of the Missionary Union of the Congregational Church which was to have been held tomorrow has been postponed to a later date.

MILITARY TRAINING CAMP INDEFINITELY POSTPONED

Because of the prevalence of infantile paralysis throughout the state plans for the military training camp for boys at Peekskill have been postponed.

Under the plans practically perfected the camp which was to have been held in the very near future, was to have been for boys from all over the state, two from each Assembly district. New York citly and Brooklyn represent a large number of assembly districts and are in the heart of the districts affected by the malady. It was for this reason that it was postponed.

Higher Education Needed to Cope With Forces Let Loose by War

By Professor EDWARD KREHBIEL, Leland Stanford University

THE great war has stimulated interest in current problems. Recent history has come in for an emphasis that it has long deserved and lacked, and the history now demanded by the student is not the traditional sort. The war has increased interest in democracy, for it is believed to be intimately involved in the outcome of the present struggle. DEMOCRATIZATION MEANS THE SOLUTION OF A GREAT MANY DOMESTIC, SOCIAL AND POLITICAL QUESTIONS WHICH DEMAND POPULAR UNDERSTANDING.

The solution of these is complicated by the prevalent demand for efficiency, which, as experience shows, is hard to couple with the large personal liberties common to traditional democracy.

THESE ARE THE QUESTIONS THAT WILL HAVE TO BE MET IF WE WISH TO DEAL SATISFACTORILY WITH THE FORCES SET IN MOTION BY THE WAR, AND IN SOLVING THEM SCHOOLS WILL BE CALLED UPON TO PERFORM A VERY VITAL TASK.

THE GIRLS AT HOME SADLY MISSED BY OUR BOYS NOW ON THE BORDER

No One There to Cheer the Troops With a Word or a Smile—El Paso Women Pay No Attention to Men In Khaki

Little Stories About Daily Life of Those Who Are Protecting Country Under Rays of August Sun In Texas.

IF the girls "back home" could know how much the soldier boys now on the border yearn for woman's society they would or should feel both sorry and glad—sorry that they cannot be there to cheer their young men friends with a smile and a word and glad that their sex is receiving the compliment it is from the boys in khaki.

If any one wishes to know the greatest deprivation of camp life far from home, tell him it is just this—the loss of women's society.

To every man in the 25,000 or more citizen soldiers now concentrated near El Paso women have had a part in his home life. If he is not married, he has perhaps a girl in whom he is interested, and if not that he has had at least the benefit of meeting women in his everyday life of store, workshop, office.

His evening stroll usually has been brightened at least by a "how-de-do" from some girl of his acquaintance.

Heroes Can't Understand It.

How much this meant to him Johnny Doughboy did not understand until he reached the border. On the way down, at towns through the middle west, he was feted by motherly women and cheered by girls who gave him their addresses and gazed at his uniform and accouterments as at the trappings of a knight.

Being a hero, he made acquaintance among the fair sex without trying. They came to him and, casting aside maidenly reserve, asked his name and gave their own.

Here in the lonesomeness of camp, amid heat and dust and an eternal sunshine that blazes at him all the time from morning to night, the soldier boy finds himself deprived of even a single word with a woman.

No women visitors come to his camp. It is a working camp. Visitors are not welcomed. The only woman seen in it for days on end is a prim old lady who teaches Spanish, accompanied by her daughter, a pretty girl of seventeen, who walks with her eyes on the ground.

It is good to look at this fresh and modest girl, but it only serves to accentuate the heart hunger of the boys who gaze at her. "Oh," say they, "if a fellow could only speak to her! Just to hear her say it was a fine day would be a relief."

This may seem odd to folks at home who have never experienced the great loss of being excommunicated from the society of the gentler sex, but the feeling is exactly the feeling of ninety-nine in every hundred men who see an occasional woman in camp.

Lonesome as a Desert Island.

But, say the girls at home, don't the soldiers get a chance to go to town and meet people socially?

They go to town. But in the case of the enlisted men their diversion there consists of wandering about the streets for an hour or two in the evening, buying a few postcards and some simple refreshment and "beating it"—soldiers' term for hastening—back to camp before 9:30, empty handed, empty hearted and as lonesome as a man on a desert island.

This lonesomeness is increasing from what the soldier sees in town. The streets through which he lounges lonesomely are filled, between 7 and 9, with promenaders, El Paso people, who, lightly dressed and clean, look as if they were cool.

They look contented, and in their content they gaze right through Johnny Doughboy from up north without seeing him or betraying any consciousness of his presence in the same street with them.

This particularly is true of the feminine portion of the crowd in the street. The soldier in his dusty khaki is no hero to them. As he passes through their vacant gaze he feels that the warm greetings he received on his way across the country must be part of a fantastic dream.

A Study In Brown and White.

The soldier from the north discovered early in his stay here that womankind in El Paso is of two kinds, presenting a study in brown and white. Possibly in no other American city may you see such contrasts in large numbers of women.

Half the women one sees on the street are Mexican, in all shades of brown, from deep, old bronze through sepia to nearly white. Some of the darkest are of Indian type, and only braids on either shoulder and a blanket would be needed to transform them, visually, to children of the wild.

Others have a cast of features suggesting the Asiatic clear cut, with the regularity of the Aryan race, racial relics, one would say, of some forgotten people out of the dim past who migrated to this part of the world before recorded history began.

Here and there you see a face almost purely Spanish, pale, large eyed, delicate, with black hair on a low brow and full red lips.

All these women wear black with a black cloth or mantilla on the head. Their skirts are long as the fashion goes today and they walk the streets with the quietness of nuns.

Lawson's Decoy Dog.

Occasionally an enlisted man of social training has the hardihood to carry off a girl at the roof garden for a quiet chat under the trellis and the stars and a glass of lemonade. El Paso women are abstainers.

One such adventurous youth is Douglas Lawson of Boston, son of Thomas W. Lawson, who won his way into the restricted circle of the roof garden by a gentle stratagem.

He was encountered one evening recently in his uniform of a sergeant in the First artillery carrying a tiny Chihuahua dog in the bend of his mighty arm. He is something more than six feet and a giant in muscular development, and the dog might weigh a pound.

"Why the dog?" said the correspondent.

"Sh-h!" said "Dug." "This is the greatest decoy in the world. He is my Siberian bloodhound."

We watched the dancers trotting about the floor. At the end of the dance the decoy began to function. The prettiest girl in the hall dropped her partner's arm and came straight at "Dug."

"Oh, what a love of a dog!" said she "May I hold it?"

Sergeant Lawson was willing, and the party adjourned to the pergola. Introductions followed.

Other girls came up and petted the dog. Before his leave was up Sergeant Lawson had greatly enlarged his social circle.

"There are more ways than one of beating this game," he remarked as he tucked his "Siberian bloodhound" into the front of his tunic and started back for camp.

Married Men Should Leave.

Married men among the Illinois troops in Brownsville should, unless they be officers, take advantage of the dependency clause provided by congress if they feel the welfare of their families is jeopardized by their sojourn on the border.

This was the positive declaration of Brigadier General James Parker, the commander of the Brownsville district, when the subject of coercion on the part of some Chicago employers was brought to his attention.

"This situation was bound to arise," said the general. "When the employers consented to take care of families of their employees who would suffer keenly by deprivation of salary the impression was general that the army was going into Mexico soon. This has not happened. Now this problem arises. The married man's place is back at home unless he feels his family is not going to suffer in any way by his absence."

"But, general," protested some one, "these boys feel that an odium will exist if they leave. What will the folks back home say?"

The gray haired veteran scowled.

"Odium?" he repeated harshly. "From whom would the odium come? There are thousands and thousands of single men, scot free, walking the streets of our big cities, enjoying themselves. Why aren't they down here? This is where they belong, not the married men. Let anybody in Chicago criticise a married man for going home and I'll give him reasons for his going. When I mustered in New York regiments in the Spanish-American war I refused married men because I wanted soldiers who did not have family troubles worrying them. And study in after years convinced me that I did right."

Miss Cudahy Sends Provisions.

Miss Mary T. Cudahy, daughter of the late Michael Cudahy, the Chicago packer, has the comfort and happiness of the boys of the Seventh infantry close to her heart. As proof she mailed a key which was received by Colonel Daniel Moriarty. It was not the key to her heart, however, but her letter explains.

"I am inclosing a key," she wrote, "for a trunk which I am forwarding by express. It contains some of the things which I saw by the newspapers you have asked for from the Red Cross. These things will add a little to the comfort of the men.

"P. S.—The trunk is an old one which I do not need any more."

A Satisfied Soldier.

Following is a copy of a letter received from a New York soldier in Texas, giving rather a vivid but truthful picture of the conditions prevailing in Camp McAllen:

We are extremely comfortable now, and I don't know when we have been so cheerful since our arrival here. Personally I have never felt so wonderfully happy in my life. I adore it all. The work is extremely hard and the heat terrific, but as they give you a siesta from 12 until 4:30 every day it saves the men a lot and gives you time to do a lot of personal things. Yesterday and the day before I worked constantly without stopping from mess to mess. The food now is delicious and nice cold water on tap constantly. We also have built an exchange, where you can get all soft drinks, ice cream shoe laces, etc., and they take one's clothes

HOMEMADE MARSHMALLOWS

How to Make These Delicious Sweetmeats In Your Kitchen.

If you wish pure, delicious marshmallows soak two tablespoonfuls of granulated gelatin in ten tablespoonfuls of cold water until soft. Pour ten tablespoonfuls of boiling water over two cupfuls of sugar and boil until it makes a sirup which will form a thread when dropped from a spoon. Remove the sirup from the fire and stir into it the softened gelatin. Let stand until cool, then add salt and flavoring and beat until it becomes stiff enough to hold its own shape. Pour the candy into granite pans dusted with powdered sugar and let stand in a cool place until set. Cut in cubes and roll in powdered sugar.

Chocolate marshmallows are made either by coating the plain marshmallows with melted, unsweetened chocolate or by adding melted chocolate to the marshmallow mixture before cooking. Chopped nuts or candied fruits may be stirred into the mixture after it has been removed from the fire. Instead of vanilla flavoring fruit juice may be used in place of part of the water. Marshmallows are dainty and attractive if rolled in grated cocoanut before being coated with sugar.

Get six photographs of yourself, three inches by three inches, on thin paper.

Get your birth certificate at your city hall, if they register births.

Get some one who can personally identify you at the office of your local United States district court.

Go to the above office with the above person and fill out their forms of application for a passport and pay various fees amounting to about $5.

Upon receipt of a letter from the state department, Washington, advising that the above application has been accepted go to their branch office, 2 Rector street, New York city (office hours week days 10 to 3, Saturdays 9:30 to 12 o'clock) and get your passport in person.

Go to the nearest office of a foreign consul and have them "vise" your passport.

Do all the above things, allowing a margin of forty-eight hours before sailing in order to provide for emergencies and errors of the government clerks.

How to Have Plenty of Hot Water Without a Fire.

It is disagreeable to keep a fire during the warm summer months merely for hot water. Have the tinner make a jacket out of galvanized iron, give it a lining of asbestos and place it around the hot water tank. The iron is of such width that two pieces will cover the entire tank and extend far enough above to hold a layer of ashes. The water will stay hot twenty-four hours.

FORMER JUSTICE GUNTER WANTS TO BE COLORADO'S NEXT GOVERNOR

(By United Press)

Denver, Col. August 8—The Democratic state assembly met here today to nominate presidential electors and a state ticket. Julius C. Gunter, former justice of the Colorado supreme court, was practically unopposed for the nomination for governor. Six adherents of Woodrow Wilson will be named as presidential electors.

By obtaining a ten per cent. vote in to-day's assembly candidates are "designated" for places on the ballot of the state primary, September 12, when the real fight is staged. The various candidates named by the different parties will be finally voted on in the general election of November seventh.

Delegates for today's assembly were elected July 29 in the county assemblies. Mass primaries July 22 elected the delegates to the county conventions.

Candidates for congress are to be nominated in the congressional assembly which will meet immediately following adjournment of the state convention.

MR. McCULLY RETURNS HOME

R. L. McCully, president of the Van Wagenen Corporation returned today from New York city, where he has been in the interest of the firm.

Mr. McCully says that the shortage of material for making so many lines of goods extends in a great measure to automobile accessories and it has been almost impossible to obtain some of the goods wanted. Mr. McCully keeps in close touch with automobile and accessory dealers in New York, and was successful in obtaining the supplies wanted for the corporation's trade.

BREAKING THE COLT.

Care Should Be Exercised Not to Overwork the Young Animal.

Breaking the colt is an important work on the farm. The value on the farm and market depends largely on whether he is well broken, says the Orange Judd Farmer. Many farmers insult the colt at the beginning. Get the attention of the colt first and then make him understand. It is best to approach the colt from the side or rear and work forward rather than place the hands right on his face to start with. When one has gained the acquaintance and confidence he can teach the colt through reward and correction. If the colt does anything wrong he should be corrected immediately. He should also be rewarded for acts that please. It is a sad mistake to punish the youngster for an act caused by misfitting harness or breaks made through fright.

In breaking the colt to harness double place him with an animal that is trusty and true. A good horse to break colts with is one that inspires confidence and not an irritable animal. Don't tire the colt out the first time he is hitched. Do not overload him at any time during his training. If he shies, stop and let him look things over. In no case whip him by any object he is afraid of. It is a good practice to begin on the colts while they are young on the farm. Some successful horsemen begin when the colt is two years and drive him a few times. At least when the colt is three he can do light work on the farm. In this way by the time he is ready for market one has a well broken horse, which will command a higher price.

While the Shire horse is not so popular in the United States as some of the other draft breeds, nevertheless he is a splendid animal. In England the Shire is well liked and extensively bred. The main objection to the Shire here is the long hair on the fetlocks. In size the Shire is very large. The animal shown is a Shire stallion.

Do not make the mistake of overworking the colt once he has been broken.

RAISING BABY BEEF.

Calves Should Be Started on a Grain Mixture Before Weaning.

A creep should be provided in the pasture so that calves may have access to grain without being disturbed by cows, as it is very important to start beef calves on grain before they are weaned. They may be kept in a separate lot, into which the cows are turned twice a day, if this method is preferred. In this case there will, of course, be no need for creeps or anything else to keep cows from the grain, which may be fed at such times that the cows will not disturb the calves.

The calves may be started on a mixture of two parts of shelled corn to one part of oats by weight. The oats may be gradually reduced until none is being fed at the end of eight weeks, but while this is being done a little old process linseed oil meal or cottonseed meal should be added and the quantity gradually increased until it makes up about a seventh of the weight of the ration. On full feed calves should eat about two pounds of grain for every hundred pounds live weight in addition to good roughage. Well bred calves handled in this way should be in prime condition at the end of about ten or twelve mouths.—H. O. Allison, Missouri College of Agriculture.

Handling Alfalfa For Horses.

To make the best horse hay alfalfa should be allowed to stand until well in bloom, according to the Nebraska College of Agriculture. In curing horse hay it is well to keep in mind that the dust which is present in so much alfalfa is largely a result of the presence of foreign moisture, such as rain or dew, at making time rather than the presence of a little moisture within the plant. If alfalfa hay is stored in the barn for horses it is well, while mowing it away, to sprinkle it generously with a mixture of equal parts of salt and air slaked lime.

Feed Young Pigs Liberally.

It pays to feed the young pig as much as possible, both through the mother and later directly from the trough. Never again will he make such rapid and cheap gains, and it pays to keep him growing as rapidly as possible while young. To this end the sow should be given all the good milk producing feed she will eat. When the pigs are about a month old they will begin to need something in addition to the mother's milk, even though she is well fed.

PAPER FAMINE NOW IN PROSPECT

Newspapers Will Be Forced to Economize in the Fall.

MILLS RUN AT CAPACITY.

Unable to Care For Increased Demand, and Surplus Nears Minimum—S. ply Now on Hand Wouldn't Last Ten Days if the Factories Were to Shut Down.

Unless there is a concerted curtailment of waste of news print paper newspapers of the United States will be on the bread line, figuratively speaking. They will be compelled to take their material on allotment, receiving no more than manufacturers can give them from vanishing supplies. That a famine in news print paper will result within a few months unless economies are affected is the prediction of paper manufacturers.

Only a husbanding of resources by the papers themselves can stave off the crisis, it was admitted throughout the trade.

At the present time in the United States and Canada fifty mills are working three shifts of men eight hours daily and six days a week. Their output for June—the last compilation—was 140,151 tons, representing 95.4 per cent of their maximum production, the highest efficiency ever attained in the industry. This output represents an increase of 27,000 tons a month over the mark for June, 1915, but even this tremendous increase has been insufficient to feed the demand. Full production has had to be augumented by 5,000 tons more a month, which was drawn from a rapidly depleting reserve stock.

Surplus Gradually Shrinks.

Surplus stock has been swallowed up at this rate for several months now. At the end of June only 65,194 tons remained in storehouses that at the same time last year held 92,967 tons. Were production to cease today there is not enough news print paper stored to keep newspapers alive for ten days. It has been necessary for the publishers' mutual good and the benefit of the news reading public to curb the tendency toward increasing the size of papers at this time of year.

The figures cited here for June will take a considerable advance in October, usually the banner month in the newspaper year. As a rule, circulation increases in the fall, and advertising keeps pace with it. As a result more pages have to be added to the daily paper, and the Sunday takes on unusual bulk. Without the measures taken by the publishers this fall's increase would wipe out the total production and the reserve stock.

It may be asked by the public, "Why did not the paper manufacturers anticipate this tremendous increase in demand?" They did, so far as it was humanly possible to anticipate a prosperity. Since June, 1915, there has been added to the mills of this country and Canada 15 per cent more facilities for turning wood into paper. When the orders were given it seemed, according to the manufacturers, an extremely risky venture to install additional machinery on conditions temporarily roseate.

Working at Capacity.

The mills are at the peak of their capacity. They can turn out no more, although they have the materials and the men. In June of 1915 the maximum of efficiency derived from the machinery was 78.9; this year it reached the mark of 95.4.

With machinery making this record, men operating the day around and every other aid given to production, still the outlook for the fall fails to brighten. New mills cannot be put up in weeks or even months; generally it takes a year and a half to get a mill working. New machines have been ordered. In a few weeks several that turn out fifty tons a day will be in operation. But these added to the machines now producing cannot save the situation at the present rate of consumption. Machinery cannot be ordered in wholesale lots at present.

As manufacturers view the situation the existing stringency will exist for several months. Here is part of a letter sent out by one of the biggest producers in the country to all his news print customers:

"We are at a loss to know to what extent we should advise you to curtail consumption, except to suggest that the more you curtail the surer you will be of a supply during the late months of the year. It is to your interests to co-operate with one another in every possible manner in order to bring about the required results.

"We give you due notice of that which you may expect so that you may place your houses in order and be prepared for the inevitable. It certainly grieves us to have to admit that we are forced to assume such a position."

Treasure Trove In Flanders.

When some Canadians were recently digging a new line of trenches behind their line in France a jar was found in which were 200 silver crowns. The coins, which were in a fine state of preservation, bore dates between 1745 and 1747, a period in which heavy fighting was taking place over the same ground in Flanders. Each member of the working party was given one of the coins, worth £8 each.

An Inside Bath Makes You Look and Feel Fresh

Says a glass of hot water with phosphate before breakfast keeps illness away.

This excellent, common-sense health measure being adopted by millions.

Physicians the world over recommend the inside bath, claiming this is of vastly more importance than outside cleanliness, because the skin pores do not absorb impurities into the blood, causing ill health, while the pores in the ten yards of bowels do.

Men and women are urged to drink each morning, before breakfast a glass of hot water with a teaspoonful of limestone phosphate in it, as a harmless means of helping to wash from the stomach, liver, kidneys and bowels the previous day's indigestible material, poisons, sour bile and toxins; thus cleansing, sweetening and purifying the entire alimentary canal before putting more food into the stomach.

Just as soap and hot water cleanse and freshen the skin, so hot water and limestone phosphate act on the eliminative organs.

Those who wake up with bad breath, coated tongue, nasty taste or have a dull, aching head, sallow complexion, acid stomach; others who are subject to bilious attacks or constipation, should obtain a quarter pound of limestone phosphate at the drug store. This will cost very little but is sufficient to demonstrate the value of inside bathing. Those who continue it each morning are assured of pronounced results, both in regard to health and appearance.

THE QUIRK TODAY

"Battle of Hearts," starring the talented actor William Farnum, is the first filmed story of sea life presented by William Fox, the maker of vital feature films. In this picture, just released, Mr. Farnum acts the part of a noble sailor character, brave and capable of great self-sacrifice. He is in love with a sea captain's daughter, a part taken by Elda Furry, his new leading woman, but through the plots of the villain of the story the girl does not realize the capacity of his love until the end of the play.

The scenes of the little fishing village are most accurately portrayed.

The village was built for the purpose by Director Oscar C. Apfel, and the fishermen and fisherwomen are shown true to type. The picture play has a happy ending, the wronged fisherman finally winning his first love and the villain being properly exiled from their lives.

The Scrap Book

Only His Due.

In the "Help Wanted" column of one of the morning newspapers a certain item attracted the attention of Mr. Donoyan. You were asked to reply in your own handwriting. Donovan sat down and wrote a letter stating his qualifications and giving a list of references. In a few days he received an answer instructing him to report at the office the following morning. Sunday night Donovan and a party of friends went out for the evening. It was a very long evening. And the next day Donovan did not go anywhere. A whole week went by. It was Monday morning again when Donovan presented himself at the office of first address.

The man in charge looked up inquiringly.

"Good morning," said Donovan briskly. "I work here."

"You do, eh?" said the other. "Since when?"

Donovan produced the letter.

"To be sure, but you should have been here last Monday."

"I know sir; but, you see, I have been sick all the week."

"Sorry, but we couldn't wait. We have employed another man."

Donovan was silent for a few minutes, then he brightened.

"Anyway," he asked, "how about my last week's salary?"—New York Post.

Good and Clever.

If all the good people were clever
And all the clever people were good,
The world would be nicer than ever
We thought that it possibly could.

But, somehow, 'tis seldom or never
The two hit it off as they should;
The good are so harsh to the clever,
The clever so rude to the good!

So, friends, let it be our endeavor
To make each by each understood,
For few can be good like the clever
Or clever so well as the good.
—Elizabeth Wordsworth.

Brought the Check.

The scapegrace son of an affluent tradesman came to the end of his resources recently and sent home a piteous appeal for funds, adding that if help were not forthcoming he and his wife would be driven to the workhouse.

The reply was crushing. It came in the shape of a laconic telegram:

"As you have made your bed, so you must lie on it."

But the quick witted scapegrace was equal to the occasion. Without a moment's delay he wired back:

"Haven't got a bed. Constable took it yesterday."

A substantial check followed in due course.

Lucinda's Dreadful Dream.

"I've had some dreadful dreams in my lifetime," said Lucinda, "but never any half so dreadful as one I had last night. I shall be miserable till I know whether it's coming true."

Of course everybody wanted to know what the dreadful dream was, and Lucinda continued:

"Why, I dreamed my coat was ruined!"

Chorus of commiserating groans at this.

It seems that Lucinda has lately bought a new suit, and the coat didn't fit her exactly, and so she took it back to have it fitted, and it isn't to come home till next Wednesday, and last night she dreamed that it had come home and that it was worse than it was before—that they had made a mess of it and the coat was ruined.

Now, isn't that a dreadful dream, truly? Why, if Lucinda had dreamed that she had fallen from the top of a tall mountain or been dropped from a flying machine or something like that, then she would have waked up the minute she began to fall and so have known right away that everything was all right, but as it is she's got to wait till next Wednesday to know if that dreadful dream is coming true.—New York Sun.

A Matter of Licenses.

Vincent Astor, when asked for his best motor story, told the following:

"A patrolman was sent on a skirmishing expedition along a well known avenue with instructions to see that all motor drivers had licenses.

"Stopping a racy looking roadster, the patrolman asked, 'Have ye a license?'

"'Dog or marriage?' queried the motorist.

"'Well, sir,' said the patrolman, a vacant look appearing in his eyes, 'I don't know fer shure—I'll have to go back to th' station an' find out.'"

Well, It Was a Bath.

Lord Milner tells an amusing story of a bath he once had.

It was at Johannesburg. The weather was appallingly hot. The city gasped. Lord Milner arrived at a certain hotel and ordered a bath. The order made the hotel people gasp afresh, but they carried it out.

After his bath a deputation of perspiring citizens waited upon Lord Milner. They explained their grievances. Water was so scarce the poor people were forbidden to use it for washing, they said. What could Lord Milner do in the matter? they asked.

"But, gentlemen," he replied in astonishment, "I had no idea there was any scarcity of water in Johannesburg. Why, I had a bath full to splash in when I came here."

The deputation eyed one another. Then said the spokesman:

"My lord, I think if you care to inquire you will find that your bath was filled with imported English soda water at 2 shillings a bottle."

The spokesman was right too.

SERENE OLD AGE.

The Flight of Years Didn't Disturb This Ancient One.

During a Saturday stroll in the country a pedestrian came upon an ancient rustic engaged in breaking stones. Drawing him into conversation, the pedestrian eventually asked the old fellow how old he was.

"Oh, I dunno," was the reply, "but I know I be a fearful age."

"But you must have some general idea how old you are?"

"No, I dunno, but I know I be a fearful age," was the only estimate that could be drawn from him.

"All right. We'll try to get at it in another way," said the pedestrian, bringing out his pencil and notebook. "Now, how old were you when you left school?"

"I be nine, sur, when I finished schulin'."

"And what did you do then?"

"Well, I was boy fur Farmer Giles fur fivteen year."

"And after that?"

"After that I worked fur Squire Noakes fur seven and thirty year."

"And what next?"

"Well, I was wagoner fur Chuker, the carrier, fur four and forty year."

And so on, and so forth, until the final fact was elicited that he had been engaged on breaking stones for a quarter of a century. Then the inquirer observed, with withering sarcasm:

"So you do not know how old you are? Well, I'll tell you. You're 378 years old on your own showing!"

"I dessay," murmured the ancient yokel, with undisturbed serenity. "I know I be a fearful age."—London Tit-Bits.

Branded Themselves.

What a jury may do at times is a very uncertain problem. Case and Comment says that in one of our cities a jury recently met to inquire into a case of suicide. After sitting through the evidence the twelve men retired and after deliberating returned with the following verdict:

"The jury are all of one mind—temporarily insane!"

A Tree He Remembered.

"I KNOW IT WAS A FACT."

much to build a bridge. Well, they just hollowed out that tree and had a dandy bridge."

Exclamations of surprise and incredulity from his wide eyed audience.

"Sure, I know it was a fact, because I've often driven across it," he asserted. "And one day I was driving a load of hay over when I met a man coming from the other side also with a load of hay. Neither of us could go back or forward."

"What did you do?" asked a particularly trusting soul.

"Oh, I just backed my wagon in a hollow branch and let him pass."—London Answers.

Hood's Quick Wit.

Nobody has ever beaten Thomas Hood's record for quickness of retort. Hood and other cronies had spent the evening with Campbell, who wrote "Hohenlinden" and "Ye Mariners of England." The laureate of the navy lighted his departing guests on to the landing of his lodgings and stood leaning over the banisters till they should have arrived safely.

Suddenly Hood's foot slipped, and he went to the bottom and landed on the mat.

"Who's that?" cried Campbell, in alarm.

"I, sir, rolling rapidly," was the instant reply, and that remains and is likely to remain a record for quick quotation twisting to meet the occasion.

Knew Boston.

Owing to the war a wealthy Boston man, deprived of his summer trip to Europe last year, went to the Panama-Pacific in its stead. Stopping off at Salt Lake City, he strolled about the city and made the acquaintance of a little Mormon girl.

"I'm from Boston," he said to her. "I suppose you know where Boston is?"

"Oh, yes, I do," answered the little girl eagerly. "Our Sunday school has a missionary there."—Chicago News.

New York Enlarges Studies For Municipal Employees.

AIM IS TO IMPROVE THEM.

Success of Experiment Results In Organization of a Great Continuation School at City College For Those Who Wish to Advance Themselves.

New York.—An advisory board was recently organized here to take part in the direction of courses at the College of the City of New York, of which Dr. Sidney E. Mezes is president, to train young men for the municipal service.

The following men were appointed by Mayor Mitchel to serve on the newly created advisory board: Alfred D. Flinn, deputy chief engineer of the board of water supply; Michael Friedsam, well known in the mercantile world; Public Service Commissioner Henry W. Hodge, Curt G. Pfeiffer, Civil Service Commissioner Henry Moskowitz, President Charles Straus of the board of water supply, Commissioner of Accounts Leonard W. Wallstein and Gano Dunn.

In the last four years the City college has granted special student privileges to persons in the city employ, with the view to improving the efficiency of the municipal service and aiding individuals to advance. Last year the experiment was made, in cooperation with New York university, of conducting special courses for those in the city service in the municipal building.

The success of the experiment last year influenced the mayor to appoint the advisory committee and lay plans to organize a great continuation school which will aim to improve all those in the service who wish to avail themselves of the opportunity and to stimulate men to study for advancement in the city employ.

SORRY $54,923.15 WORTH.

Last Year's Conscience Fund Breaks All Records.

Washington.—Contributions to the treasury's conscience fund for the fiscal year ending June 30 amounted to $54,923.15, making a total of $498,763.54 returned by persons made uneasy by frauds against the government.

Figures compiled at the treasury department show the returns were much larger during the past year than ever before, chiefly because of two contributions, one for $30,000 and one for $10,000.

It was in 1811 when the first $5 came with a letter saying the writer had taken that amount from the government. It is an unwritten law of the department that no effort shall be made to learn the identity of these contributors, and even where the writer has confessed to theft the money has been accepted and no effort made to prosecute. From 1811 until 1827 there were no receipts. Since then, except for 1848, not a year has passed without amounts coming in.

SOLDIER FUGITIVE PARDONED.

Kentuckian Says He's Now a Corporal In United States Army.

Frankfort, Ky.—A fugitive for twenty years, Milton Franklin, under sentence of life imprisonment, was pardoned recently by Governor Stanley a few hours after he had appeared at the Frankfort reformatory and surrendered to Warden Wells.

Franklin was convicted of murder in the Floyd county court twenty years ago. He escaped from the Johnson county jail, where he was held pending an appeal. According to the story he told reformatory officials, he enlisted in the United States army soon after his escape and is now a corporal stationed at Columbus, O., on recruiting duty.

Wed When Two Steamers Met.

Dawson, Yukon.—Miss Cassie Henderson, daughter of Robert Henderson, discoverer of the Yukon, was married on the steamer Casca when twelve miles above Dawson. The bridegroom was Irvine Crowther, employed with the Yukon Gold company on one of its dredges on Bonanza. Mr. Crowther and the Rev. Mr. Ross went up the river in the launch Reindeer, and the wedding took place immediately after the boats met.

An Unromantic Lover

By M. QUAD

Copyright, 1916, by the McClure Newspaper Syndicate.

Henry Strong was a farmer's hired man, strong and rugged, and willing to work from sun to sun without a complaint. If any one had asked the farmer about his hired man he would have replied that nothing ailed Henry. So it would have been with every one who knew him, man and woman, except Nettie White, the daughter of another farmer a mile away. Her complaint would have been that he hadn't a speck of romance in his nature.

After courting Nettie White for six months the time came when he admitted to himself that she would make a good wife for him. Nettie White was not entirely satisfied with his courtship, but she got to like Henry Strong for his candor and honesty.

Henry's education had been gained at a little country schoolhouse. Once in awhile he would pick up the weekly paper and read for half an hour, but he had never read a book of any kind. On the contrary, Nettie was quite well educated and had read every book she could lay her hands on. She had read of chevaliers, knights and heroes galore, and she had wished many a time that Henry would come riding with steed and lance and bear her off. Alas for Henry! His "steed" was the old white mare which was plowing out the corn, and his lance was a well worn hoe which he used in the potato field.

On summer nights, when they sat on the front steps and the full moon rose up in all its radiance and the whip-poorwill sang from the grove back of the barn, Nettie looked for Henry to say something—something about the romance of the evening. But what Henry said was:

"I wonder if it is true that the moon is mostly composed of buttermilk!"

At length Henry proposed marriage. Perhaps he was as romantic about it as he could be, but there was no emotion in his voice and no weakness in his knees as he leaned his chair back on its hind legs against the house and carelessly said:

"Oh, Nettie, I almost forgot what I was going to say to you this evening. I guess we had better be married some day. What do you think about it?"

It is useless to tell what she thought about it, but after that evening they considered themselves engaged.

One day Henry's fiancee got a brilliant thought. Henry might not be romantic, but he might be heroic, which is mostly but not quite the same thing. If she could make a hero of him she would at least be half satisfied. She thought the thought over for several days and was then ready to put a plan into execution.

Not far from Nettie's house was the house of a farmer's daughter, who frequently exchanged visits with her. By cutting across an old pasture a quarter of a mile's walk could be saved. In that old pasture Henry's employer kept a bull.

Henry Strong was plowing out potatoes one forenoon about 11 o'clock, and he was neither feeling romantic nor heroic when a scream startled him. It was a scream of a woman in peril—deadly peril. He looked up to see Nettie White in the old pasture with the bull. She had her arms outstretched toward him imploringly, and as he mounted the fence she cried out:

"Oh, Henry, that bull will gore me to death! If you love me"—

"Can't you see," replied Henry as he settled himself on the top rail, "that the bull is lying down and chawin' his cud under that tree yonder? If he wasn't he wouldn't hurt a fly. One of the gals at the house was ridin' on his back this very mornin'. What you doin' in that field anyhow?"

Miss Nettie was so chagrined and indignant that she turned and walked across the field with her head held very high and her lips compressed. If there had been forty more bulls she wouldn't have even looked back over her shoulder.

There was a second attempt to arouse the heroism of the lover. He had asked if she did not want to go fishing in the river, half a mile away. She would be happy to go. It would be helping her to carry out her second scheme. After they had reached the river and fished side by side for half an hour she arose and wandered away for a few yards and began a fresh attack on the finny tribe in water about two feet deep.

Suddenly, as Henry was thinking of pumpkins and squashes, there was a scream and a splash, and he calmly and slowly looked up. The girl was in the water. She held out her hands to him in an appealing way. He knew the depth of the water at that point and said, "I don't see how you managed to fall in, but catch hold of that bush there and pull yourself out."

And when the bedraggled and dejected girl reached home she vowed a solemn vow to herself that never, never in this wide world would she be the wife of Henry Strong. But after awhile common sense got the upper hand again and three months later they were married, and it wasn't two weeks more before she was saying to her mother:

"Henry has no romance about him nor is he anything of a hero, but he chopped two cords of wood yesterday, and that is more than any other man in Medana county can do. I can't get him to read and he don't care for whip-poorwills, but you ought to see how beautiful he peels the potatoes and [illegible] for breakfast."

ORGANIZATION IN RURAL LIFE

More Thoroughly Appreciated Than Ever Before.

A SOCIAL IMPROVEMENT.

The United States Department of Agriculture Seeks to Promote the Welfare of the Farmer by Advocating Concerted Effort Along Many Lines.

The value of organization in rural life is now more thoroughly appreciated than ever before, and the United States department of agriculture is devoting much attention to assisting co-operative farmers' associations of various kinds. In an article on this subject published in the new year book of the department some of the purposes which may be served by organized activity among farmers are stated to be the introduction of new crops, the maintenance of standard strains of seed, the control of plant and animal diseases, the development of established industries, such as dairying and cattle raising, road improvement, the marketing of farm produce, the improvement of credit facilities, the securing of better facilities for insurance and communication and the improvement of rural social life.

CONSOLIDATED SCHOOLS MAY TAKE THE PLACE OF THE ONE ROOM, ONE TEACHER VARIETY.

Two general types of organizations are now being utilized in the agricultural extension work. County organizations, often called farm bureaus, are being formed to take the initiative in securing local support for the county agents. Many of these organizations include business and professional men as well as farmers. It is clearly apparent, however, that the farming people themselves should control and in the end determine the character and work of these organizations.

Another type of local organization is the small community club. Where a considerable number of these clubs exist in a county they are often federated to form a county organization of some kind. In the southern states about 500 communities were organized during the year ended June 30, 1915. These community organizations are engaged in the promotion of some special work, such as the co-operative breeding of live stock, purchasing and selling things required or produced on the farm and studying and demonstrating better farm practices. In the northern and western states the county agents were instrumental in forming 875 local organizations during the same year. These included farmers' clubs for general purposes and associations for the improvement of crop production, the breeding of live stock, cow testing, purchasing and marketing.

The value of organization in the development of established industries is best illustrated by the department's work with dairymen. One of the essentials for profitable dairying is the keeping of accurate records of the milk and butter fat production of individual cows. The department of agriculture therefore furnishes information to farmers who wish to form what are commonly known as cow testing associations to determine which cows are yielding a satisfactory profit. In co-operation with certain states the federal department maintains a number of dairy extension specialists, who not only aid in the establishment of these associations, but give assistance to farmers who are not obtaining adequate returns from their animals. There are now over 200 of these associations in the United States, with a total membership of more than 5,500 farmers, owning not less than 100,000 cows.

Co-operative bull associations have also been found of great value in the improvement of dairy herds. The dairy division of the bureau of animal industry is prepared to give farmers information on how to organize and conduct the business of such co-operative associations. This division also assists farmers in the organization of co-operative creameries by furnishing them with advice in regard to buildings, equipment, operation and management. Blue print plans for suitable buildings with estimates of the cost and a list of the necessary machinery, etc., are furnished when circumstances make it appear that a co-operative creamery would be successful.

Effective in Tussor Silk.

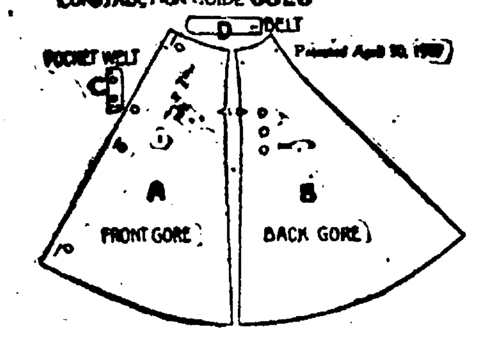
A tailored costume that is comfortable as well as becoming is this model in tussor silk trimmed with polka dotted crepe de chine or ribbon. The jacket is a modified Norfolk effect.

Although this model may be classed as a pretentious tailor made, it is really the embodiment of service. It is fashioned from tussor silk in natural color, with relief of polka dotted crepe de chine, ¾ yard 40 inches wide being needed for the belt and collar.

Six yards of 40-inch tussor silk make the costume, but if the jacket is made separately, 3 yards will be sufficient. Wide ribbon may be used for the sash and collar in place of crepe de chine, for which 2 yards 6 inches wide are required.

The jacket is a Norfolk model with open neck, turn-down collar and a shoulder yoke that is square at the back, but pointed on either side of the front. Pointed cuffs finish the long one-piece sleeves while square pockets trim the fronts of the jacket.

Form the box plaits as the first step toward making the jacket and be careful to keep the edges straight. Stitch the plait at the center-front from upper to lower edges, and remaining plaits from upper edges to single small "o" perforations: (along lines of slot perforations); open plaits keeping seams in center and press. Take up dart under box-plait in front, as perforated. Turn under front edge of right front 1⅛ inch for a hem.



Center-front indicated by large "O" perforations in right front. Turn under front edge of left front 1⅛ inch for a hem. Close under-arm seam as notched.

Close the shoulder seam of the yoke and turn under lower edges, lap on front and back and stitch. Sew the collar to the neck next, then stitch on the pockets.

Now for the sleeve, first close the seam, easing in fulness. Close seam of wrist, cuff and sew to sleeve. Sew sleeve in armhole as notched.

Silk poplin is less expensive than tussor and makes quite as serviceable a suit. It is offered in all the popular sports colorings and many shades of them.

Delightful In Its Girlish Charm.

A frock of figured organdy for the young girl who goes to parties. It is trimmed with taffeta and net.

The fashionable bouffant skirt is ideal for the young girl's dance frocks and this model is in one piece, draped at each side and tacked to a short three-piece foundation. Figured organdy trimmed with bands of taffeta makes the design. The jumper with puff sleeves is open in front to show a gathered vest of white net and extends below the waistline in a peplum. In medium size the costume requires 5¾ yards 40-inch organdy, ½ yard net for the vest and 1 yard taffeta for trimming bands.

Begin to make the underbody by plaiting, placing "T" on corresponding small "o" perforations. Then close the seams as notched and turn hem in right back at notches. Join collar as notched and adjust 2-inch belting under lower edge of underbody for a stay. The front may now be gathered, the small "o" perforations indicating the upper front edge. After the gathering is done, adjust front to underbody and stitch lower edges together. Adjust a straight band of taffeta over gathers at top.

The puff sleeves are quickly made. As soon as the edges are gathered, sew band to lower edge and close seam as notched. Below this band stitch a narrow ruffle of net or lace.

The skirt and foundation come next. Plait upper edge of foundation back gore placing "T" on corresponding small "o" perforations. Join gores as notched; close back seams from large "O" perforation to lower edge; finish edges above for plackets. Gather upper edge of skirt between double "TT" perforations and ½ inch below. Gather along crossline of small "o" perforations and ⅜ inch above. Arrange on foundation, centers even; stitch upper edges together bringing small "o" perforation to side seam. Tack the remaining gathers on foundation, lower row along crossline of small "o" perforations; adjust skirt, stitching upper edge along crossline of small "o" perforations in underbody, center-fronts and center-backs even.

The jumper is made last. Gather the shoulder edge of front between double "TT" perforations and close seams. Plait the back, placing "T" on corresponding small "o" perforation. Gather along small "o" perforations and 1½ inches above. Adjust belt over gathers. Tack a straight band of taffeta to left front between small "o" perforations and to right front above belt, as pictured. Arrange jumper on underbody and tack at shoulder seam.

The underbody may have a high or round neck, instead of the square effect shown, if preferred.

RUSSIAN.—Slice thin cold roasted venison and spread over it a paste of the yolks of hard boiled eggs rubbed smooth with butter; season with pepper, salt and minced celery and serve on round pieces of white bread.

Irish.—Cream one-half cupful of butter and add to it one teaspoonful of ground mustard seed, a shake of white pepper and a little chopped parsley. Chop together hard boiled eggs and cold roast pork or boiled ham. Mix well into the butter dressing and lay between thin slices of bread.

Yankee.—Mince sturgeon, hard boiled eggs, watercress, parsley or lettuce together; add a little French mustard, spread this mixture on thin, nutmeg dusted slices of buttered bread.

Scotch.—Blend three tablespoonfuls of fresh butter, one tablespoonful of mixed mustard, salt, pepper and the yolk of an egg. Stir this into minced roast lamb. Lay between pieces of rye bread and butter.

Parisian.—Mince the meat of terrapin, turtle or frog legs, which has been previously boiled in slightly salted water; then make a mayonnaise dressing and mix the meat into it. Spread between lettuce leaves and lay on slices of French bread. This is a delicious sandwich.

Bohemian.—Chop very fine any kind of wild fowl, bird or game meat that has been boiled or roasted; put it into a saucepan with sufficient gravy to soften it; add a piece of butter, pepper, ground celery and the milder spices. While heating mix these ingredients to a smooth paste. When cold spread on slices of rather stale bread. A few drops of lemon juice may be squeezed on the sandwich before pressing the pieces together.

Scandinavian.—When it is impossible to get fresh cod or herring the preserved kind may be procured and boiled until all the salt is removed and it is perfectly tender. Remove the skin and bones and pound in a mortar with the yolks of hard boiled eggs. Add pepper, minced lettuce and butter or cream enough to give a rich flavor. Spread on buttered biscuits.

Pillory Would Be Satisfactory Punishment For Wife Beaters

By Judge CHARLES W. APPLETON, New York City Court

As the law stands at present there is practically no satisfactory punishment that may be inflicted on the wife beater. He frequently gets off scot free, or, if he is punished, his wife and family suffer more than he does. That is why I think a pillory is a long step in the right direction. Imprisonment, even when exacted, is too good for a man who will cruelly and maliciously ill use a good wife. HE DESERVES TO BE SET UP WHERE EVERYBODY CAN SEE HIM AND LABELED FOR WHAT HE IS.

People would accept the idea of a pillory who would object to the whipping post on the ground of cruelty.

THE CONSTITUTION PROVIDES AGAINST CRUEL AND UNUSUAL PUNISHMENT; BUT, THOUGH THE PILLORY IS A BIT UNUSUAL TODAY, WE MUST REMEMBER THAT OUR FATHERS EMPLOYED IT.

TODAY'S FASHION NOTE

Tailored suits now should be selected with a view to service late in the Fall. Therefore dark brown faille is recommended for this design which has a full skirt and a jacket that is shirred into the figure at the waistline. Overlooking the round yoke is a deep collar of self-material. Medium size requires 5 1-2 yards 40-inch silk.

SYRACUSE POSTMASTER GETS IN BAD WITH AN UNDESIRABLE PACKAGE.

Syracuse, August 8—When anyone mails a hunk of limburger cheese to a friend via parcel post it must be delivered no matter how many are overcome by the fumes.

This is the order Postmaster Mike Spillano of East Syracuse, has received from the Post Office Department after his rural delivery men had balked at delivering a consignment of this delicacy that had been smelling around the office for several days.

The package of cheese came to the East Syracuse office along with a lot of other bundles. It was consigned to a family named Hassenoffer on the route of carrier Pat. Aylward. But Pat balked. His patrons were particular people. He had many parcels of regular foodstuffs to deliver along his route and he could not afford to lose their good will. He left the package on a shelf in the "pusto office."

It has been awful hot in East Syracuse for the past few days and the cheese began to cook. Ordinary limburger is bad, but Mr. Spillano says boiled limburger is worse. People began to stay away from the Post Office. They sent messenger boys for stamps and to gather their mail and they crossed on the opposite side of the street when they passed. Spillano began to be looked upon as a persona non grata around the village so finally he removed the stuff from the shelf and stored it down cellar.

But the smell remained. People when they licked their stamps made wry mouths and looked at Mr. Spillano as if they thought of getting a new postmaster. They began to dislike the brand of stamps the postmaster carried in stock.

So finally Mr. Spillano decided to end the trouble. He placed the limburger in the rear of his automobile and waiting until the breeze was in a favorable direction so he could not smell it while driving, motored down Pat's route and delivered the cheese.

But his troubles have just begun. When he returned there was a letter from the Fourth Assistant Postmaster General wanting to know what was the reason for the delay in the delivery of a package of limburger cheese which had arrived at his office several days previous and about which complaint had been received at the Washington office.

But the cheese is gone and the only smell in East Syracuse now is the good old New York Central smoke. There is no competition.

FIFTY FEET OF SNOW RIGHT IN U. S. IN JULY

Visitors Find It About a Crater Within Eighteen Miles of Santa Fe.

Santa Fe, N. M.—Snow fifty feet deep within eighteen miles of Santa Fe in July is a fact which is likely to cause a good many people to revise their ideas of the "Great American desert," of which so much is heard in the east.

Visitors at Santa Fe lake and to the top of the lake and Penitente peaks have found snow cornices around the crest of the crater overlooking the lake basin which sloped off gently from the top, the outer edge of the snow breaking off abruptly in walls which ranged from twenty to fifty feet in height.

There is no doubt from the measurements of these snow precipices that the snowfall in midwinter must have been fifteen to twenty feet in places and that the peaks were clothed in a solid mass of snow from bottom to summit. There are still masses of snow scattered all round the lake which are still four or five feet thick.

But for the warm rains that come later snow probably would lie in the basin from year's end to year's end. Despite the hot July sun, the air is so cool at the peak level, more than 12,000 feet above the sea, that the snow cornices are melting very slowly.

MODEL HOME FOR WOMEN WHO HAVE LOST WEALTH

Brothers of the Late Miss Jenkins to Carry Out Her Wishes For Project.

Baltimore.—In memory of Miss Eliza Jenkins, a rich philanthropic woman who died recently, the old Jenkins mansion will be made a home for elderly women of refinement and culture who are thrown on the world for support. This project had long been a pet idea of Miss Jenkins, and to Cardinal Gibbons and other friends she often spoke of it, saying how pitiful it would be to her should her fortune be swept away and she be forced to go to an institution, with its discipline and restraint.

Following the family rule, Miss Jenkins left no will, but her brothers, Joseph W. and George C., have made the arrangements they know she desired. The home will be carried along on lines unlike those of any other home in the United States. The house is to be remodeled and provision made for thirty occupants. They will be free to come and go as they please, will have their own rooms and servants and even a certain allowance of money to purchase the little things so dear to the hearts of women used to wealth.

Recently another Jenkins house was turned over to the St. Vincent de Paul society. This house is also to be remodeled and will become an institution for special schooling for children.

BAD BOY'S PRANKS.

California Lad Said He Was Emulating Huckleberry Finn.

San Rafael, Cal.—In an attempt, he said, to emulate Huckleberry Finn, Peter Scheutten, the seventeen-year-old son of Mrs. Peter Scheutten of Santa Venetia, became so troublesome that he was sentenced to serve sixty days in the county jail. He painted the family cow so as to resemble a zebra, threw rubber down the chimney, placed salt in the sugar bowl and fed the horse sawdust instead of bran.

On recommendation of Justice of the Peace W. F. Magee, who sentenced him, Peter was admitted to parole recently. Within an hour after he was liberated Peter had smeared mustard on his mother's pillow, sold her $50 deerhound for 25 cents and then bought candy with the quarter; picked a live chicken and removed a bolt from the family buggy so that it collapsed when his mother started for a drive.

LED ONLY HIMSELF IN CHARGE

French Officer Whose Men Failed to Follow Spared by Foe.

Berlin.—A correspondent of the Lokal Anzeiger at the front in the Argonne is quoted in an Overseas News agency statement regarding an incident that occurred in the fighting in that region.

"A French officer," says the report, "commanded to attack German chasseurs, cried 'En avant!' and jumped from his trench. He had advanced several steps when he saw that no one was following him. The Germans refrained from firing. Then the French officer, after waiting alone for a short time, saluted the German trench with his sword and returned to his own trench."

BAD TEETH MADE HER STEAL.

Maid Says She Took Money to Have Dental Work Done.

St. Louis.—Bad teeth and a desire for a new dress were the reasons given to the police by Anna Fischer, seventeen years old, a maid at the Deaconess hospital, for the theft of $80 from Miss Ella Loew, a nurse, following the girl's arrest.

"I spent $62 getting my teeth fixed," the girl told the detectives, "and the rest I spent on a dress. That's all. The money was lying on a dresser when I cleaned the room, and it was too great a temptation, because I had suffered for some time with my teeth."

MOVEMENT TO SET CLOCKS AHEAD

How would you like to get up an hour earlier next summer than you have been accustomed to this summer?

The Rochester Chamber of Commerce has taken the initiative in this state in the movement to set the clocks an hour ahead next year to save daylight. It has sent out letters to Chambers of Commerce all over the country with requests that business men be questioned as to their attitude on the plan. The scheme calls for the advancement of all the clocks in the nation one hour during the torrid season.

It is thought that the use of additional daylight for work and recreation would add to the health, wealth and happiness of the nation. It is not considered advisable to adopt the plan in a purely local way as it would cause much confusion and inconvenience, but if the change is national and uniformly arranged all the disturbance of conditions could be avoided.

The change of the day schedule is not new to the world as many countries have adopted it including England, France, Germany, Italy, Norway, Sweden and Denmark. In our own country Cleveland and Detroit for the past year or so have had their clocks ahead of standard time and the change has apparently worked satisfactorily.

SMOKE DUE TO FOREST FIRES

CENTRAL NEW YORK IS ENVELOPED IN A CLOUD OF SMOKE.

The veil of thin blue smoke, pungent with the odor of burning wood that enveloped large sections of Central New York for the past several days is due to forest fires raging in the Province of Ontario, Canada.

Similar conditions have existed in this section before when fires were in progress in the Adirondacks and the Montezuma marshes. Instances have been known where the fire in the marshes would send smoke all over Central New York and could be seen for miles. Automobilists who have been on auto tours report the smoke more dense and pungent along the St. Lawrence. The sun was nearly obscured in the north country. Steamers crossing Lake Ontario from Toronto were obliged to use fog horns as the pilots could not see ahead twice the length of the boat.

UNITED STATES BRINGS RELIEF

STARS AND STRIPES AND AMERICAN NURSES FOUND IN HEART OF BIBLE LAND.

By William Philip Simms
(United Press Staff Correspondent)

Petrograd, July 9 (by mail)—The Stars and Stripes today flap in breezes wafted across fields famous in the United States as the land of the Holy Bible. The flag flies free over the door of an American hospital where pretty American girls and able American doctors care for Russian sick and wounded.

The hospital is at Khoy, forty-five miles south of Julfa, on the frontier between Russia and Persia. To the northwest of Khoy the icy dome of Mount Ararat stands lined against the skyline, 17,000 feet high, or nearly 2,000 feet higher than Mount Blanc. Here Noah's Arc is supposed to have rested after the flood.

To the southwest of Khoy lie the slopes where Arabian and Isaac tended their flocks. There too is the scene of the most famous of all famous crimes, the murder of Abel by his brother Cain.

There is no railroad from Julfa to Khoy and the dirt road is very bad. It takes four horses to pull a carriage. At first the way lies in a desert with barren mountains on both sides but gradually, as one approaches Khoy, the terrain smooths itself out and richer soil, aided by irrigation, gives vegetation a chance; and here one still sees droves of sheep grazing just as they did in the days when Abraham begat Isaac.

In a valley of orchards and gardens lies Khoy, surrounded by its mud walls. Low mud houses along narrow, crooked streets surrounding galy decorated and colorful bazaars which form the center of the place, compose the city, while just outside is the conspicuous building of the Russian Consul. Opposite this is the American Hospital with its Yankee flag flying, a building long, broad and squat.

The hospital staff, including Dr. Hazlett, Dr. Dickey, Dr. McClintic and several American nurses, originally was at Kiey, but when the Russian retirement from Galicia began all hospitals were evacuated to points further east. At first the Americans tended wounded at a temporary hospital near the Wiev railway station, but upon being assigned to the Army of the Caucasus they moved to Tiflis. From Tiflis they went to Khoy to be nearer the Russian front then operating in the region of Erzeroum.

At first there were many contagious cases. And the beds were crowded with sick refugees from Armenia, Syria and other districts. There were many children too, to be looked after, many of them in the most pitiful condition. One Syrian girl mentioned by the American Commercial Attache Baker, who visited the hospital, had been found by the wayside in a dying condition, her legs below the knees frozen, vermin filling her hair, and covering her body. She was scarcely more than a skeleton in rags and starving. She was the last of a family, the victims of Turkish massacres, and she had escaped only by seeking refuge in the mountains. Both legs were amputated above the knees and her life was saved.

Conditions rapidly got better in Khoy and vicinity, the contagious diseases being practically stamped out, so Doctors Dickey and McClintic, and Nurse Miss Le were transferred to a field at Kazvin and later to Hammedan, Central Persia. Dr. Hazlett remained in charge at Khoy.

Russian and American ladies are now nursing the sick and wounded side by side at Khoy. Russian and American surgeons in charge. Over the roof the starry banner of Uncle Sam and the white, blue and red tricolor of the Little White Father, are rippling side by side. And, to show his appreciation of their work, the Grand Duke Nicholas has given the order for imperial decorations for each American doctor and nurse.

Picnic Tommorrow.

The auto which will convey the picnickers of the Mary Patterson Court of Amaranths to Baker's Grove at Minnetto to-morrow will leave the residence of Mrs. H. S. Stadelmyer, 415 Oneida street at 2:30 sharp. Be sure to go and don't be late.

THIRTY CARS ENTERED FOR AUTO RACE UP PIKE'S PEAK THURSDAY

(By United Press)

Colorado Springs, Col., August 8—About thirty famous auto speed kings here have entered cars for the race to the top of Pike's Peak day after tomorrow. Drivers from the east will compete against drivers from the west.

Ralph Mulford will try to establish a new world's hill climbing record he has informed M. W. Colwell, manager of the meet.

Hughie Hughes, a veteran pilot of racing cars, has been nominated to drive a Duesenberg. Hughes has not been seen in contests recently but his victories of the past are many.

Neil (Whirlwind) Whalen will drive a Milac car.

Two Buick cars will be driven by McCoy and Dawson. It is probable that Barney Oldfield will drive his Delage racer.

For the last few days hundreds of men have been getting the 18 mile highway with its winding curves and steep grades into shape for practice. A. W. Marksheffel, of Colorado Springs, piloted one of three Cadillac cars entered up the 13 mile circuit in 23 minutes.

Mulford, Hughes, Whalen, Paterson, Rippingill, Brooks and Stentz also made several fast ascents to get acquainted with the turns and grades.

The start will be made five miles from the bottom of the highway and the finish will be made at an elevation of 14,109 feet above sea level.

Visitors are coming in to Pikes Peak from all parts of Colorado, Nebraska, Oklahoma, and other surrounding states.

Prizes of cash and plate valued at more than $7,800 are offered. The automobile events, for both amateur and professional drivers, will be run on Friday and Saturday, August 11-12. The motorcycle events are to precede the others on Thursday, August 10.

The Zeppelins Are Again Making Raids

(By United Press)

London, August 9—The Zeppelin raided the east coast of England early this morning and another Zeppelin raided in south east of Scotland without penetrating far from the coast. The War Office officially announced today. Three women and one child were killed and fourteen persons were injured. The Zeppelin dropped a number of bombs on certain localities. They were encountered by coast guards and driven away from their objectives without doing any damage of military importance, the statement said.

LATER REPORTS OF ZEPPELIN RAID

London, August 9—The commander of the home forces reported this afternoon that one man, two women and three children were killed in a northeastern town. Five men, six women and six boys were injured.

Czar's Troops Are Driving Back Austro-Germans

By F. S. Keen
United Press Staff Correspondent)

London, August 9—A military triple offensive with several million men and thousands of guns engaged is rapidly squeezing in armies of the central empires on every front. Fighting stubbornly and in many instances with considerable bravery. The Austro-German forces are giving ground in every theatre of war save the Balkans, where recent skirmishes may herald the beginning of another great allied push. In the east the Czar's troops have thrown back the Austro-Germans on a front of thirty miles, extending from Madivorna to Nienios.

Madworna, railway town of 10,000 has been captured. The Russians are centered within a few hours' march of the village of Stanishlau, whose capture will materially increase the danger in which Bom Bothmer's now finds itself.

MINIMUM PRICE OF BREAD TO BE TEN CENTS A LOAF

(By United Press)

Salt Lake City, August 9—The National Master Baker's Association in a resolution adopted today stated it was their sacred duty to the public to fix a uniform and minimum price on bread at ten cents per loaf.

MANY KILLED ON BORDER

(By United Press)

El Paso, Texas, August 9—General Aquilar, commanding the escort of the Carranza troops, a number of soldiers and passengers are reported killed in an attack by Zilliesisas against the passenger train at Noriar station on the Jurango line yesterday. About one half of the force were killed.

AN IMMENSE DOCK FRONTAGE

NEW YORK DIRECT WATER FRONT LONGER THAN FROM NEW YORK TO CHICAGO.

(By United Press)

New York, August 9—The shoreline and pier lengths within greater New York harbor, including Jersey shore, are longer by seventy-one miles than the distance to Chicago via Pennsylvania railroad, says the Chamber of Commerce report available today.

Official figures give Greater New York a direct waterfront of 578.4 miles. On the New Jersey mainland the waterfront, extending from Sandy Hook to the Hudson River shore opposite New York City's northern limit, affords 192.93 miles more, making a total direct frontage of 771.33. This is more than the lineal distance from New York to Charleston, S. C., or of New York to Cincinnati.

Measured around piers and along the heads of the slips, the length of the developed waterfront brings out some astonishing facts of capacity for handling martime and inland trade at this Port. The five boroughs have a total frontage of 60.2 miles. This with the New Jersey improvement of 133.45 miles makes 393.65 miles, or a lineal foot length of 2,078,456 feet. This latter total, with the total length of waterfront on the same shores, of 4,072,600 lineal feet, shows that barely half of the length available for trade is as yet within the developed frontage of Greater New York.

Measuring waterfront both around piers and along shoreline Greater New York has a total length of 739.3 miles, or 3,903,504 lineal feet. Adding the Jersey stretch of rivershores opposite the City's length on the Hudson give 240 miles more, making a grand total by this mode of measurement of 979.3 miles, or 5,169,504 lineal feet. That is 71.3 miles longer than the entire distance from New York to Chicago by way of the Pennsylvania Railroad.

PAPAL SHIP SAILS THE SEAS

FOR FIRST TIME SINCE POPES LOST ROME

(By United Press)

Rome, August 9—For the first time since 1870, when the popes lost Rome, a papal ship today sails the high seas. Because of its initial mission it is called the Nuncius. It was first chartered to carry Mgr. Vassallo di Torregrossa, from Spain to Argentine. He is the new Apostolic Internuncio to the South American republic.

The Vatican has officially notified the different governments of the existence of the Nuncius. The neutrality of the Holy See is respected. It sails under a guarantee of immunity from all the belligerent powers. The papal colors of yellow and white fly from its mast head.

Vatican circles call the papal ship a war time necessity for the "safe conduct of the business of the Holy Father." Whether it will be used after the coming of peace is a question, they say. Many others, however, attach the utmost significance to this unique move on the part of Benedict. They declare the Nuncius has come to stay. In it they see the possible inauguration of a new papal policy.

AMERICA LEADS IN ALL THINGS

NEW YORK SUPERSEDES LONDON AS WORLD'S GREATEST PORT.

(By United Press)

Washington, August 9—New York city has usurped London's proud position as the foremost port in the world—the only door of commerce through which $2,000,000,000 trade is flowing annually. Figures from the New York and London commerce journals available today confirm this assertion.

During the fiscal year ending June 30, 1915, imports and exports to the total of $2,169,000,000 passed through the great American metropolis, while London during the corresponding 1914 calendar year registered a foreign trade of $1,485,607,410.

New York's exports reached, during the period, $1,193,581,000 as against London's $262,655,300.

Britain's first port, however, maintains the import supremacy with a total of $1,222,952,110. New York's imports were $975,837,421.

Italians Are Fast Gaining New Ground

(By United Press)

London, August 9—The most striking victory of the Italians since the war begun has partly opened the way in their advances. The Austrians offered resistance at Gorietz, but the apparent ease with which the Italians took the fortifications convinces military men that the Austrians have been forced to strip the lines to the danger point to meet the Russians. On the western front the Allies have won another slice of the German line and advanced on the front four miles north of the Somme.

German counter attacks caused the French to yield ground only slightly in this region last night. Only on the Verdun front where the Germans re-occupy Thiaumont were they engaged in heavy fighting last night on the Teutonic line. The position has changed hands three times since the Verdun campaign begun.

Even in the far away Caucasus Allied troops are again marching victoriously. The Russian and Turkish war offices report the beginning of a new Russian offensive in which the Turks admit they have been forced to yield ground.

Commission Appointed to Confer With Carranza

(By United Press)

Washington, August 9—President Wilson has selected Associate Justice Lewis B. Brandies to head the American commission which will confer with that appointed by General Carranza to settle the Mexican border question, it was authoritively stated today. Secretary of the Interior Lane has been asked to serve also and has accepted. The name of the third man awaits the acceptance of the President's request to have him serve.

AN EXPENSIVE PARTY GOWN

HERE'S WHY HER CLOTHES COST SO MUCH

(By United Press)

Chicago, August 9—Here's why her clothes cost so much.

This fall she asks for long full skirts on her party gowns and dresses and insists that $21 a yard material be used.

It takes four yards and "up" to make a skirt of this kind, or $84 worth for "just the dress goods" which doesn't make the waist nor put on the trimmings.

That's why some women's dresses cost around $150.

This deduction was brought out today when Chicago dress manufacturers made their display at the Fall Style show of Chicago-made garments at Bismarck gardens.

Dress manufacturers vied with each other to display the most costly material in their dresses. Buyers agreed that all had succeeded.

The war has made costly materials more costly, say manufacturers, because these kinds come from imported goods demands a good price, middle west buyers discovered today.

Navy blue is the prevailing color in dresses for fall, although black, purples, and wine colors also are favorites.

The waist is cut yoke effect with a collar at the back.

THE PRIMARY ELECTION

Prior to the adoption of the primary, the politicians built their machines, and selected their delegates, and named their candidates at the convention. The rank and file of the people had precious little to do with the process of naming candidates.

The political bosses grew so bold and arrogant the people themselves decided to take a hand in the matter, and devise a method of preventing boss rule in the parties. This was true of both of the political parties, for in the matter of bossism one party was as bad as the other. So the primary election came along—or was dragged forward by the people—to overcome the rule of the bosses. And it will overcome it, if the people themselves will go to the polls and vote.

But the people have not always followed up their advantages. They fight nobly to gain a point and then, having gained it, lie down on the job, as the saying has it. So now that they have obtained the primary election law, and have the right and the power to name their own candidates, regardless of any political boss, only about one third of the voters take sufficient interest in the primary to go to the polls and vote. That has been about the average vote in the primaries—and it is a reflection upon the voters of this country.

There ought to be a full vote cast. Whether your best friend has any opposition or not, you should go to the polls and vote. You should not take it for granted that it makes no difference about casting a vote, believing that it will be all right to wait till November.

LONG TERMS OF EMPLOYMENT

Announcement has been made within a few days by Swift & Company at Chicago, that a fund of $2,000,000 has been accumulated to start a system of pensions for employes. In order to secure the benefits of the same, a person must, however, have been employed continuously for 25 years by this firm.

Before the days of great corporations and enormous factories, 25-year terms of employment were not uncommon. Old employes felt concern for the success of the firm they worked for.

Employers recognized the value of judgment and experience. Even if an elderly man had lost something of his early energy, they considered this offset by familiarity with their methods, and loyalty to their interests.

Most employers of labor would say today that the man who has worked for them ten years is the exception. Some firms wishing to promote stability, enroll those who have worked only ten years as the "old guard." A force of long time employes must tend toward conciliation of grievances and avoidance of strikes. Employers would find their views modified by the sentiment of these older men. And employes with a tendency to magnify slight grievances would find the man grasps eagerly at any slight advance in pay. All that gliters is feeling of the "old guard" a powerful balance wheel.

These are days of restlessness and ambition, when the working-not gold, and high wages often mean irregularity of employment. From the employer's viewpoint, the example set by Swift & Co., is worth study. Groups of men in a factory or store who have stood by the firm through prosperity and depression, render a service not compensated by the pay envelope.

MILITIAMEN CAN VOTE

Some days ago The Times suggested that the law providing for the continuance of the voting franchise to militiamen out of the State in active service, might be susceptible of a construction wider than that which would limit such right to vote to a time of actual war.

This opinion of The Times is confirmed by the recent ruling of State Attorney-General Woodbury, who holds that National Guardsmen on duty at the Mexican frontier are entitled to vote at the coming election, notwithstanding there is no actual state of war.

This interpretation of the law is sound but the fact that the issue whether these members of the National Guard could vote has been raised indicates that the law would be improved by an amendment making the Constitution on this point so clear that no ruling would be necessary.

"My Good Man, Don't You Ever Forget Anything?"

CARTER in New York Sun

HITS MOTHER HARDEST

"Abe Martin," the Hoosier philosopher says, in the laconic way that has made him famous:

"Th' new daylight movement, like ever'thing else, hits mother th' hardest."

Exactly—like everything else! Mother gets it right and left, front and rear! The reforms are not for her. The more daylight movement gives Johnny more time for the baseball game, and father more time for arguing politics, and daughter more time to get ready to go to the dance. But it only gets mother out of bed an hour earlier, and doesn't enable her to get to bed a moment sooner. It hits her hardest!

Nobody sits up nights figuring upon some scheme to save mother. Her work is about the same as Eve's except the "improvement" in clothes has made it necessary that she spend more time sewing on buttons. Means have been invented for getting the rest of the family away from home, but nothing has been invented to enable mother to get away even for a day. Father is overworked and needs a vacation; son must go to the mountains; daughter feels the need of a week or two at the springs. But mother stays at home, or goes along only to find more work at the summer resort than she had at home.

If mother asks father what she ought to have for dinner, father flies into a rage. Anything, he says; why worry about what we are to have for dinner when we have just had breakfast. That's the way father ducks all responsibility. But if mother doesn't have the kind of dinner father wants, there is a good deal of grumbling around the edges. It would drive the average man crazy to devise two or three meals a day, even if he had a national bank to pay the bills. But he doesn't give mother credit for devising meals two or three times a day, every day in the week, and she has to figure upon every cent she spends. Yes, it hits mother hardest, whether it is a more daylight movment or some other kind of improvement.

—Lack of confidence is reported from Wall street, but nothing is said about any lack of confidence men.

—The people who are away on summer vacations now have plenty of leisure in which to meditate on how uncomfortable the weather is.

—It is believed that after the Capitol at Washington and all the departments are blown up our government will arise in its wrath and issue a note of protest.

—There is a growing feeling among the guardsmen at the border that they could learn to hit a painted target just as well in the back lots of their own home towns.

—The Indiana state board of health says that, "dirty towns are where dirty people live." It might have added that filthy streets exist only in cities which fail to keep them clean.

Pointed Paragraphs From Speech of Acceptance of Charles E. Hughes

It is apparent that we are shockingly unprepared.

When we contemplate industrial and commercial conditions, we see that we are living in a fool's paradise.

Not only have we a host of resources short of war by which to enforce our just demands, but we shall never promote our peace by being stronger in words than in deeds.

We are neither deceived nor benumbed by abnormal conditions. We know that we are in a critical period, perhaps more critical than any period since the Civil War.

The Administration utterly failed to perform its obvious duty to secure protection for the lives and property of our citizens. It is most unworthy to slur those who have investments in Mexico in order to escape a condemnation for the non-performance of this duty.

It is only through international co-operation giving a reasonable assurance of peace that we may hope for the limitation of armaments.

We have determined to cut out, root and branch, monopolistic practices, but we can do this without hobbling enterprise or narrowing the scope of legitimate achievement.

We demand a simple business-like budget.

I believe it is only through a responsible budget, proposed by the executive, that we shall avoid financial waste.

We have had brave words in a series of notes, but despite our protests the lives of Americans have been destroyed.

Phrases which will NOT occur in the Woodrow Wilson speech of acceptance:

Psychological prosperity.
Molasses to catch flies.
Strict accountability.
Too proud to fight.
Salute the Flag.
Get Villa.
Butt in.

WILSON FLEXIBILITY.

We do not see why there should have been any stir in the senate over the discovery that President Wilson has completely reversed himself in the matter of the proposed child labor law. Senator Borah was able to show that Mr. Wilson described this legislation in his "Constitutional Government" as unconstitutional, an "obviously absurd extravagance," carrying the congresssional power to regulate commerce beyond the "utmost boundaries of reasonable and honest inference," and making it possible, if sustained, for congress to legislate over "every particular of the industrial organization and action of the country." That, we must confess, has also been the Evening Post's view. But the Evening Post and Senator Borah are old fogies, dating back to the time when it was the custom to have fixed beliefs and principles and stick to them. The senator has evidently not read Mr. Wilson's letter in explaining his change of front on the tariff commission—that it is only a narrow man, whose mind is stupidly closed to new ideas, who does not alter his opinions. By this test, Mr. Wilson is obviously one of the broadest minded men this country has ever produced, for he has changed his mind, to date, on the initiative, referendum, recall, woman suffrage, the tariff commission, tariff for revenue only, a permanent diplomatic service beyond politics, the merit system in the civil service, the proper place of Tammany Hall in the scheme of the universe, child labor legislation, preparedness, Bryan, a continental army—but why continue? It is a long enough list to prove that Mr. Wilson's political views are not fossilized by any fear of inconsistency.—New York Evening Post.

THE AMERICAN WORKING MAN SHALL NOT SUFFER

The Republican Party stands for the principle of protection We must apply that principle fairly, without abuses, in as scientific a manner as possible; and Congress should be aided by the investigations of an expert body. We stand for the safe-guarding of our economic independence, for the development of American industry, for the maintenance of American standards of living. We propose that in the competitive struggle that is about to come the American working-man shall not suffer.—From Mr. Hughes' speech of acceptance.

SUFFRAGISTS GIVE COMMUTERS CANDY

Women Distribute Sweets and Poems to Men to Take Home to Wives.

New York.—What with being held up at stations for health certificates and one thing after another, it must have given the man commuting between New York city and Connecticut, Long Island, Westchester or New Jersey a pleasant jolt recently to find his latest holdup nothing worse than a box of suffrage candy and a special message for his wife.

The box of candy was for the man, although it's dollars to doughnuts its contents went home to the kiddies who would be standing at the station with little brown bare knees to meet him in Cos Cob, or Mahwah, or Suffern, or New Canaan, or Far Hills, or Katonah, or Summit, N. J. In the box were twelve candies and a suffrage poem:

Within this box are suffrage sweets.
Their number twelve, we pray you note,
A stick for every western state
Where women have the right to vote.

Wyoming first set woman free.
Then Colorado, Idaho
And Utah followed; then there came
These states all in a suffrage row:

Arizona, Illinois,
Kansas, faroff Washington,
Montana, California,
Nevada then and Oregon.

If these confections now you like,
Pray help more suffrage states to win,
So that 'twill take a larger box
To get our suffrage candies in.

All over the city at the railroad terminals and ferry slips from which the afternoon commuter makes his dash for freedom women in white with suffrage colors of blue and yellow stood with arms full of candy boxes tied with yellow ribbons, handing them out to Mr. Commuter as he rushed past on his way to the train.

MISSOURI COUPLE MARRIED SEVENTY-TWO YEARS

Have Nearly 100 Living Descendants, Among Them Several of Fourth Generation.

Clinton, Mo.—Mr. and Mrs. G. W. Nutt of Clinton were married seventy-two years ago in Ohio, the state of their nativity. She is ninety-one and he almost ninety-two years old. After their marriage they spent some time in Illinois.

They have 135 descendants, nearly 100 living, including several great great-granchildren. They are the parents of twelve children.

Nutt has always had poor health, but his wife, despite the fact that a few months ago she slipped on the ice when carrying coal and broke her hip, moves about with the assistance of one crutch.

Since she has not been able to walk so well her fingers have been busy piecing numbers of quilts and quilting them with the dainty stitches only possible to the women of the old school of needlework.

These she has on sale. She only uses her glasses to sew and read with. Since Mr. Nutt retired from his business—stock raising—he has kept busy with odd jobs and until this season had a garden that was the pride of Clinton. Not enjoying an idle moment he also begged his neighbors to let him help with theirs.

When they were married Nutt made but $13 a month.

Parents Keep Daughter Locked Up For Three Months.

Green Castle, Pa.—Neighbors of a family named Keller, who moved to this city from the country near the mountains some months ago, had observed that a daughter, aged twenty-one, had been missing since Easter. Inquiries met with evasive answers.

The rumors spread, the stories became magnified, and recently a constable was called and sent to the house. He demanded that the daughter, if locked in an upstairs room, as the stories had it, must be released at once. After demurring a bit the parents unlocked a door, and the young woman was set free.

She had been penned in the one room since the day after Good Friday. Her parents said they locked her up because she was being bewitched by a hex doctor.

COLORS EFFECT HUMAN MIND

(By United Press)

Cleveland, August 9—If your little girl tells a fib or hops the ice wagon, buy her a pale blue pinafore. If your small boy disobeys and has to be taken out to the woodshed by his fond papa regularly—have his bedroom papered a sky blue. If you want to do some hard mental concentration hang a yellow curtain across the window. This is the advice of Rev. J. F. Grumbine, of the Psycho-Science church here.

"Clear red makes folks affectionate and dark red makes them emotional," Dr. Grumbine stated. "White makes folk feel spiritual and pure. Every color has its affect on the human mind.

"Blue is the color that will help the child go the right road."

MACADAM ROADS TOO EXPENSIVE

FOR CITY STREETS OR RURAL BYWAYS, UNCLE SAM SAYS

(By United Press)

Washington, August 9—"The Macadam road," said the United States Office of Public roads today, "is particularly adapted to main highways connecting centers of population, but is not satisfactory for city streets and is too expensive for rural roads other than main highways or pikes." The department has been investigating.

From 12 to 15 feet is recommended as a suitable width, provided the road is flanked on each side with firm shoulders from 3 to 5 feet wide, to prevent sloughing of the sides by wheels.

The Macadam method of road construction was first introduced about the beginning of the nineteenth century in England by a Scotchman named John Loudon MacAdam.

The chief features of this construction, which has since become one of the foremost methods of road-building in every country of the world, are: a raised, thoroughly drained, and crowned earth foundation; a sub-surface of broken-stone fragments, not larger than 2 1-2 inches in diameter and of uniform size, a surface binding of stone dust and screenings.

During the last forty years this method has been modified and the stone fragments are graduated in size with the coarser stones at the bottom.

Recently various bituminous preparations have been added to the surface of binders. Heavy, petroleum oils, asphalts, bituminous cements and tar mixtures are now used largely for this purpose. The addition of some such binding material renders the road impervious to the damaging action of water and forms a hard, smooth, resilient surface.

Although it formerly was thought necessary to surface the road with a layer of macadam from eight to twelve inches in depth, Uncle Sam's road experts declared the surface should be as thin as is consistant with durability—not over six inches deep in any case and often only three. This saving of surfacing material greatly lowers the cost of the road, without detracting from its wearing qualities is the least, they contend.

The road-bed should be of porous material, well drained, and should be free from clay or loam.

Grades exceeding 6 feet to every 100 feet of road are considered excessive for heavy traffic. Curves with less than 200 feet radius should be avoided. Build around the slope of a hill—not over it. Build as straight as possible, always considering grading first. A special recommendation is made by the Office of Public Roads that the surface crossing of railroad tracks be eliminated through culverts or overhead bridges.

Trap rock is considered by the Government experts as the best for road-building purposes, although some granites and the harder limestones give good results. The United States of Public Roads tests samples of rock submitted to it without charge, and furnishes advice as to the fitness of any sample for road-building.

The cost is entirely dependent on local conditions and the availability of materials. However, an estimate of the cost of the macadam surface, foundation and drainage costs eliminated, places the average expenditure, where imported trap rock is used, at approximately $3,000 to $5,000 per mile for a 15 feet road with an average depth of 5 inches. Where a good local stone is immediately available the cost of the surface may be as low as $1,500 to $3,000 per mile.

In Massachusetts, the actual cost of imported trap rock, in place and rolled, was $1.70 a ton, covering 3.13 square yards of surface at five inches in depth. Local stone was secured in this instance at $1.22 a ton.

Construction of macadam roads as of any other kind, in the opinion of the U. S. Road bureau should always be under the direction of an experienced road engineer, if best results are to be obtained.

DONAHUE'S CASE HELD OVER

John T. Donahue, an employe of the firm of Charlebois and Deline, of this city, asks compensation for injury to his foot. He says he was injured in a fall of twenty feet from a scaffold to a cement floor. It is likely that he will be awarded compensation, but before the amount is fixed it will be necessary to have X-ray photographs made of the injured member. For this reason the case was not heard by Mr. Richards yesterday, but was held over until August 15th.

BOX LUNCHEONS.

All Housewives Should Make Attractive Sandwiches.

BREAD TO BE EVENLY CUT.

All "Eats" Taken Al Fresco Should Include Plain Food, Relishes, Fruits, Salad Greens and Dessert, Care Being Taken as to Waxed Paper Wrappers.

In sandwich making the bread should be cut evenly, and the thickness of the slice should depend on the vigor and the appetite of the consumer. Thinly sliced bread appeals to the person who is not a vigorous worker and who therefore has not the need for large quantities of food. Whether thick or thin slices of bread are to be used is not so important to the palatability of the sandwich as are the manner and quantities in which the butter and filling are used. Butter should be softened by creaming it with a spoon or a knife and should be spread evenly over the entire surface of the slice of bread. This method is easier and quicker than spreading the bread with lumps of unsoftened butter, which disfigures the sandwich. Both slices of bread should be buttered, since butter keeps the bread moist and prevents the filling from soaking into the bread and thus making the sandwich wet and unappetising. A ragged, crumbly, soaked sandwich is not a tempting luncheon. A sandwich should be wrapped in waxed paper in order to prevent it from drying.

Foods that are likely to dry out, to become disfigured by pressure, to absorb other flavors or to distribute their own flavor—such as cake, cookies, pieces of meat, slices of onion, certain fruits, cheese, stuffed eggs or eggs without their shells—should be separated from other foods by wrapping them in wax paper or, if that is not available, in plain, clean paper.

Preserves, sauces and the like should be put in small, clean, sealed containers. Although many persons know how to prepare package meats, a large number of others do not. After food selection and food preparation the third consideration that demands attention is careful packing. Surely the means and method of the proper packing of a luncheon should receive thought. The box luncheon must be an example of convenience, neatness and attractiveness. Without these qualifications the most nutritious food may lose much, if not all, of its value, for unattractive food has no appeal to appetite and digestion.

The materials essential to good packing include wax paper, paper napkins, box, basket or dinner pail.

Fiber boxes seem inexpensive, but, since they easily dampen or become soiled and cannot be washed, they have to be replaced. When not in use fiber boxes should be well aired.

Tin boxes can be easily cleaned, and they prevent the drying out of their contents. Lunch baskets are light and well aired.

Only wrapped food should be laid against the basket. Even if this precaution is followed the basket will need to be scrubbed frequently with soapy water and thoroughly dried.

Midnight Spreads.

For years it has been dinned into our ears that we should not eat before going to sleep, and we have foregone many a pleasant bite for fear of sacrificing our good health. And now along comes a noted physician and tells us that many morning headaches were merely the result of hunger. This does not mean that we can immediately proceed to gorge ourselves with all sorts of sweets and not have to pay the penalty the next morning. Sweets should be eschewed during the midnight repast, and one should substitute some wholesome sandwiches. Cheese sandwiches are wholesome and nourishing and can be eaten with impunity, even during the wee small hours.

MEN HAD HORNS THEN.

Archaeologists Find Skulls of Prehistoric Giants Near Athens, Pa.

Athens, Pa.—The archaeologists who are traversing the Susquehanna river valley, visiting sites of Indian villages and digging up aborigines and other relics are said to have made a most astounding discovery on the Murray farm, near here, in finding the bones of sixty-eight prehistoric men.

The average height of these men when their skeletons were assembled was seven feet, while many were much taller. Additional evidence of their gigantic size is found in the massive stone battleaxes in their graves. The average age of these men is said to have been from thirty to forty.

Another amazing point of this discovery is the allegation that "perfectly formed skulls were found from which horns grew straight out from the head."

KITTENS DISPLACE LAP DOGS.

Paris Actresses Carry Tabbies to Bois de Boulogne.

London.—The Parisienne is forsaking her lap dog of former days and taking to the kitten as a pet, according to the Paris correspondent of the Pall Mall Gazette.

The correspondent does not attempt to say whether the change is due to hard times, to the doubled dog tax or merely to an inexplicable whim of the moment. He says:

"Actresses whose popularity is sufficient to shield them from the reproach of seeking a new form of personal advertisement have lately taken to frequenting the Bois de Boulogne at the fashionable parade hour with the dearest of little tabbies snuggling roguishly in their arms or gamboling riotously round and about them."

GOOD MORNING JUDGE

An Italian by the name of James Garland, age fifteen years, was placed under arrest at Minnetto last night. Garland was wanted by New Jersey authorities for escaping from an industrial school in that vicinity known as Randall's Island. He was placed under arrest by Constable Kennedy, who with a party of deputies brought the young man to Fulton by motor cycle.

It was with unusual difficulty that the trip was made, owing to the mad intent of the prisoner, who several times attempted to ditch the machine and several imes tried to make a get away.

He was placed in charge of Chief Dyer, who will vouch for the safe return of the young man to the New Jersey officials,

WAITING FOR PAY DUE THEM

A SCARCITY OF FUNDS FOR GUARDSMEN WHO WENT TO THE BORDER.

National Guardsmen ordered home from Camp Whitmen and belonging to regiments not selected for Mexican duty are wondering how much longer they will be obliged to wait for pay day. The paymaster settled with them for the last few days in June when they were at Camp Whitman, but they now have wages coming from July 1 to August 3.

August 3 was the date of the return of the First Infantry, Companies A and B going to Utica, C to Watertown, D to Ogdensburg, E and L to Newburgh, F to Walton, G to Oneonta, H to Binghamton, I to Middletown, K to Malone and M to Mohawk. As nearly as can be calculated the state is owing each of the twelve companies comprising the First Infantry between $9,000 and $10,000, or a total of $120,000, for the regiment. As much more is coming to the Tenth Infantry and about the same amount to pay off the Forty-Seventh.

Each private receives $42.50 for a period of 34 days. Non-commissioned officers will average about $2.50 per day. The privates are allowed $1.25 per day; corporals $1.40 and other officers increased wages according to their rank. Extra money is allowed to marksmen, sharpshooters and expert shots, and another extra allowance is made to men serving reenlistments.

Lack of funds it is stated, is preventing some of the National Guardsmen from returning home to other towns than where their company's armory is located. Some of the men who went to Camp Whitman as recruits wearing civilian garb, either sold or gave away the clothing they wore when they donned the soldier's garb, with the result they are destitute of apparel by the order to return home and strip off the uniforms. The regiments ordered home had been recruited to war strength and company commanders are now expecting an order to shorten the roll calls by discriminate discharges.

MEETING OF THE ALUMNI ASSOCIATION

A meeting was held last night by the High School Alumni Association at the Public Library. Plans were completed for the outing which has been scheduled to take place at Pathfinder Island, August 29th. Miss Isabella Diamond was appointed chairman of the ticket selling committee with the following colleagues: Mrs. Clayton Hill, Miss Eva O'Brien, Miss Muriel Breeds, Miss Marion Haskins, Mr. Joseph Mangeot.

The reason for the advance sale of tickets is to insure the committee of the attendance at supper. The tickets are fifty cents and already many have been sold.

In the form of a suggestion, it was agreed upon last night, that people having spent two years in High School will be considered eligible for membership in the association.

A meeting has been arranged for the 22nd at the Public Library, when the report of the ticket selling committee will be received and definite plans will be completed.

THE QUIRK TODAY

A wonderful story is told in a wonderful manner in "The Cowardly Way," the coming release on the Equitable program at the Quirk Theatre, today. Florence Reed, the star, and Marc Edmon Jones, the author, have combined their remarkable talents in a production which is without an equal as a screen drama, and added to this, the Equitable's studio has revealed new developments of the photographic art which will be delightful as well as a thrilling surprise. A new light is thrown on Hamlet's famous soliloquy by the development of the play, which touches a new psychological point, aside from its dramatic and artistic appeal.

For wire cuts use Hanford's Balsam.—Adv.

LAMB HAS SIX LEGS.

Healthful and Freakish, It Is the Delight of the Children.

Ogden, Utah.—A six-weeks-old lamb with six legs is the unique pet recently brought to this city by Frank Smyth, secretary of the Intermountain Land and Live Stock company, from the company's headquarters in Boxelder county.

Although freak lambs are not uncommon, sheepmen contend that few of them live more than a few weeks. The freak animal owned by Mr. Smyth is said to be as frisky as any normal lamb at the age of six weeks and promises to develop into a healthy sheep.

The extra pair of legs are attached to the ribs just behind the shoulder blades. The limbs are somewhat crooked, the toes pointing in a variety of directions, but the extra legs do not interfere with normal use of the regular fore limbs. Mr. Smyth allows his pet to graze on the lawn in front of his house, where it has become the playmate of nearly all the children in the neighborhood.

MUST HONOR NATIONAL AIR.

Baltimore May Fine Those Who Do Not Stand When It Is Played.

Baltimore. — Policemen distributed copies of a municipal ordinance providing that "musicians, performers or other persons shall stand while playing, singing or rendering 'The Star Spangled Banner.'" Any person violating the provisions of the ordinance "shall be guilty of a misdemeanor and upon conviction shall be fined not more than $100."

Copies of the ordiance were distributed at all theaters, moving picture halls, restaurants and cafes and to the offices of all musical unions or branches in Baltimore.

In the circular it is pointed out that the "indiscriminate rendition of 'The Star Spangled Banner' or parts thereof in connection with other compositions tends to lower the esteem and reverence in which the national anthem should be held by the people of the nation."

PAYS FOR HIS MUSTACHE.

Saloon Keeper Gives Mitchell $10 For Half the Adornment.

Carterville, Mo.—For the loss of the right side of his mustache, which he had cultivated for nearly fifteen years and which, it is said, was long enough to be wrapped around his ear, William Mitchell has been compensated by Sherman Smith, in whose saloon the adornment was cut off recently.

Mitchell had been in the saloon only a few minutes when a loiterer clipped off half the mustache. Mitchell threatened the arrest of the saloon keeper, but Smith's counsel consulted Mitchell and learned the monetary value at which he held the lost half of his mustache, which was $10. This amount was paid to him, and he withdrew the charge. The loss of one-half of the mustache has not weighed sufficiently with Mitchell to prompt him to accept the loss of the other half, and he still is wearing what has been left to him.

DYNAMITE FOR MOSQUITOES.

West Haddonfield, N. J., Tries Blasting and Meets With Success.

West Haddonfield, N. J.—This borough has found dynamite an effective weapon to use in combating mosquitoes. A paragraph in the borough year book, just out, says:

"The residents of West Haddonfield were for years pestered and tormented by mosquitoes which, it was learned upon investigation, were propagated in stagnant pools between the railroad and Haddon avenue. It was found practically impossible to drain these to the street gutters; hence another method had to be employed, and it was decided to sink the water into the ground. Under the supervision of L. Z. Lawrence a heavy charge of dynamite was sunk and discharged about twenty feet under the surface. This caused the pools to disappear in short order, and no water has accumulated at this point up to the end of the year."

REAL SNAKE BITE CURE.

Onion, Turpentine and Whisky, Says Pennsylvanian.

Connellsville, Pa.—A combination of onion juice, turpentine and whisky proved efficacious when Robert Sanner, forty-five, was bitten by a copperhead on the farm of Jay Caldwell, in Saltlick township. Sanner was working in a field when he was attacked by the snake, which measured eighteen inches in length.

Without an instant's hesitation Sanner leaped over a nearby fence and tore up an onion sprout. Biting it, he rubbed the juice on the wound. He then called for turpentine, which was applied, and to top it off he drank copious drafts of moonshine whisky.

TROUT JUMPS INTO BOAT.

Fisherman's Story From a California Lake.

Fullerton, Cal.—R. S. Gregory, former mayor of Fullerton, who has returned from a fishing trip to Big Bear lake, is recounting a tale of how a four and a half pound trout leaped from the waters of the lake into the boat from which he was fishing.

Gregory hooked the trout and payed out line for sixty feet. As suddenly as the fish had struck the line slackened.

"I've lost him!" Gregory lamented. An instant later there was a splash by the boat, the fish flashed through the air, cleared the side of the boat and landed in the bottom at the fisherman's feet.

PANES OF POSTAGE STAMPS.

And the Plate Numbers, Letters or Symbols They Carry.

All our postage stamps are printed in large sheets of 400 stamps each. These are then cut into four "panes" of 100 stamps each and sent to the various postoffices in that shape.

If you were to go to any United States postoffice and buy a complete "sheet," or, more correctly speaking, a complete "pane," of 100 stamps you would find that it had on two sides an outer margin, and on each of these margins would be a number. This is the number of the plate from which that pane was printed. Under this number the authorities keep a record of the plate, the date of its making, on what days it was in use, the quantities of stamps printed from it and all such data.

These plate numbers are usually expressed in figures or letters or combinations of both, but sometimes other symbols are used, such as the "star" plates of recent date. Many stamp lovers form what are called "plate number collections"—that is, a collection in which every stamp still has attached to it the outer margin bearing the plate number. The object is, of course, to get every plate number that was ever issued.

It is interesting and curious, too, because the stamps are arranged with the plate numbers in sequence, making them look very different from an ordinary collection. For instance, plate No. 253 is a five cent postage stamp, while the next three, 254, 255 and 256, are postage due stamps. Plate 257 is a special delivery, and 258 a newspaper stamp. So a collection of these in sequence is very varied and interesting.

And, again, many of the plates were in use at a time when the color of the stamp was changed, and the same plate number may be found upon both colors, as the one cent blue and the one cent green, or the ten cent green and the ten cent brown, the fifteen cent blue and the fifteen cent olive. Such a collection shows a wide range of shades that is of great interest to a collector.—St. Nicholas.

LEGEND OF THE PHOENIX.

Method of the Fabled Bird's Life and Death and Rebirth.

The ancient tradition concerning the phoenix has introduced into nearly every language the habit of applying that name to whatever is singular or uncommon among its kind. According to ancient writers, the phoenix was a bird of great beauty, about the size of an eagle. A shining and most beautiful crest adorned its head, its plumage contained nearly every tint of the rainbow, and its eyes sparkled like diamonds.

Only one of these birds could live at a time, but its existence covered a period of 500 or 600 years. When its life drew to a close the bird built for itself a funeral pile of wood and aromatic spices, with its wings fanned the pile into a flame and therein consumed itself. From its ashes a worm was produced, out of which another phoenix was formed, having all the vigor of youth.

The first care of the new phoenix was to solemnize its parent's obsequies. For that purpose it made a ball of myrrh, frankincense and other fragrant things. At Heliopolis, a city in lower Egypt, there was a magnificent temple dedicated to the sun. To this temple the phoenix would carry the fragrant ball and burn it on the altar of the sun as a sacrifice. The priests then examined the register and found that exactly 500 years or exactly 600 years had elapsed since that same ceremony had taken place.

When Trouble Comes.

"Ef I seen trouble comin'," said Brother Williams, "I'd hit de grit fer de tall timber."

"Well," said the dubious brother, "s'pose a hongry tiger wuz waitin' fer you dar?"

"In dat case I'd skin up a tree."

"But s'pose a harricane blowed you an' de tree down?"

"My fr'en'," replied Brother Williams, "Providence allus looks after de righteous. Ef dat come ter pass de tree would fall on de tiger an' mash de life outen him, an' 'bout time you come 'long I'd be gwine home wid his hide!" —Atlanta Constitution.

Sure Cure For Colic.

Mrs. Harriet Black, Manlius Center, N. Y., writes: "Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy is a sure cure for colic and summer complaint. It has been used by myself and others in my family for at least ten years, and it always does just what is claimed for it. It gives relief from pain almost instantly." For sale by all dealers.

THOSE SKEETS!

Why We Must Take Care of Castoff Tin Cans.

In connection with one health department campaign for the elimination of the mosquito it has been suggested that every housewife should punch a hole in the bottom of a tin can after the contents have been removed and before throwing it into the rubbish heap. The family tack hammer or ice pick may be used satisfactorily to punch the hole. In the opinion of one expert this practice would prevent lots of mosquito breeding which is now going on in empty tin cans, which collect stagnant water.

It is stated on authority that a tin can half filled with stagnant water will easily breed over 200 mosquitoes. Old bottles and broken crockery are also a prolific source of mosquito breeding.

In many towns and cities the small boys have been put at the task of punching holes in all discarded tin cans in back yards and vacant lots and smashing all old bottles and broken crockery found on the rubbish heap.

BRITTLE FINGER NAILS.

How to Care For Your Finger Nails So They Will Not Break Off.

The best remedy for brittle nails is oil, and plenty of it. Soak the finger tips for five or ten minutes every night in warmed sweet almond oil.

When the surface of the nail shows ridges and there is a general appearance of coarseness apply grease about the edges whenever possible. Cleanse the nails with grease instead of using soap or nailbrush. It will produce a satinlike appearance and the tinge of pink that is so desirable.

Many women use cold cream about their nails, but vaseline is better. After soaking the finger tips in the almond oil take an orange stick and fill the cuticle with vaseline. The superfluous grease may be removed with a piece of chamois or absorbent cotton.

How to Remove Rust From Various Necessary Articles.

Rusted ironware or sinks may be cleaned by smearing thickly with unsalted lard, then covering with powdered quicklime and being left for several hours. It is best to do this at night, and in the morning wash off with hot water and washing soda. Use a cloth tied to a stick or sink broom for the purpose, thus avoiding danger of getting any on the hands.

If a pen rusts in its holder soak it in oil. It will soon loosen enough to be removed without difficulty.

RUSE OF A BAD MAN.

Trick by Which He Turned the Tables on Sheriff Bill Nye.

To nearly every one the name of Bill Nye brings the picture of a genial, fun loving man whose jokes were once famous all over the country, but to those who lived in Wyoming some thirty years ago Sheriff Bill Nye of Laramie county means something else too.

Sheriff Nye was absolutely fearless. He was resolute, decisive, quick to act and tireless in pursuing offenders. He failed to get his man on only one occasion, and that failure was due to the tenderness of heart that was always a part of his character.

Nye started out once after a typical bad man who had shot or stabbed some one and quickly learned that he had fled to the mountains. Summoning a deputy, the sheriff sprang on his horse, and the two started off. After riding nearly 200 miles into the wilderness they learned that their man was hiding in an abandoned miner's cabin, whither he had brought his young wife.

Soon after darkness fell Nye quietly rode up to the cabin and dismounted before the door. He sent his deputy round to guard the rear of the little shack. Then Nye threw open the door and dashed inside, with his revolver cocked and ready for instant action. The criminal was asleep on the bed, and his wife, who sat close by, was stroking his forehead. Nye covered them both with his gun and told them to throw up their hands.

"I've got you," he said grimly. "Now you get up quietly and come along. The lady can stay here if she chooses."

The bad man admitted that the game was up and began to roll his blanket into a bundle. "Never mind that," said Nye. "We've got plenty of blankets in the place you're going to." The desperado then asked if he couldn't say goodby to his wife.

"I reckon it's the last time I'll ever see her," he continued. "You've got the goods on me this time, sheriff, and I reckon I'll swing for it."

He appeared so cast down that Nye's warm heart prompted him to grant the request. "All right," he said. "I'll give you two minutes."

The criminal rose from the bed. The next instant those tightly rolled blankets came whirling through the air and struck Nye in the face so heavily that he reeled back against the wall. Before he could recover his balance and throw off the blankets the criminal had dashed out of the cabin, leaped on Nye's pony and was galloping down a mountain trail in the darkness.

Of course Nye's deputy came rushing round from the rear of the cabin and started in pursuit, but the bad man was never heard from afterward.—Youth's Companion.

The First Cradle.

The earliest mention in literature of cradles is in the Biblical account of Moses' little ark of bulrushes. But there are in the British museum some clay tablets found some years ago on the site of ancient Nineveh which, according to archaeologists, make it quite clear that somewhere about 4,000 years before the Christian era there was another infant hero exposed in a little ark of bulrushes. Thus the cradle that was found by Pharaoh's daughter 1400 B. C. was comparatively modern.

It is certain that cradles were first used as a means of protecting babies from the attacks of wild animals by suspending them from the boughs of trees.—London Globe.

SUNDAY A FARMER

Ma, Too, Dresses the Part on Their Hood River (Ore.) Ranch.

TAKE KEEN INTEREST IN WORK

Evangelist, Resting After a Strenuous Year, Says the Pine Odor Laden Air Renews His Strength—In Fields Nearly All the Time.

Hood River, Ore.—Billy Sunday, whose evangelistic sermons have been heard by at least a million people in the course of a year, never wears the conventional frock of the minister, but just now may be seen at almost any hour between dawn and twilight, dressed in brogans, overalls, khaki jacket and slouch hat, engaged in the labor of a rancher at the Hood river valley country home of the Sundays in the Odell district. It is "Farmer" Sunday now, if you please, and Mr. Sunday always dresses the part.

Billy Sunday and "Ma," his faithful coworker, with two of their children, Billy junior and Paul, recently arrived for a vacation sojourn on the ranch. Billy Sunday, whose first fame came from his aggressive baseball playing as a member of the Chicago White Sox team in the late eighties, for the time being has apparently forgotten baseball and evangelism. The caller at the Odell place on a summer day will find Mr. and Mrs. Sunday out in the open air weeding flowers, picking berries, helping with the hay, opening rills of irrigation ditches, watching the antics of pigs or ponies or engaged in some sort of open air game.

When the writer, accompanying the Rev. W. B. Young, pastor of the Asbury Methodist church of this city, and his wife, visited the Sunday home Mrs. Sunday was picking red raspberries and currants, which were being made into delicious sun cooked preserves and jellies.

"Our jellies," Mrs. Sunday said, "are just as good as the choicest confections."

Sunday was soon located, and he told his visitors while he kept hoeing that the pine odor laden air renews his strength.

DAIRY and CREAMERY

WATER ON THE FARM.

Important That Dairymen Provide a Pure and Abundant Supply.

Nothing is of greater importance on a stock farm than an abundant supply of pure water. Few farms have clear running water or live springs. It is necessary to provide storage tanks and pump water from wells, says the Kansas Farmer.

On dairy farms water is of even greater importance than on general live stock farms. Milk cows drink more water than do other animals because a great deal of water is required for milk production.

Cows form fixed habits as to the time of drinking water and are restless and uneasy unless they can get

In the most important dairy countries the Holstein breed has met its rivals and has been declared by the majority of dairymen after an impartial trial to be the most profitable breed, writes a correspondent of the Breeder's Gazette. The Holstein probably produces more milk and butter than all other dairy breeds combined, and it has been due to the Holstein cow probably more than all other causes combined that milk production in the various countries has been so greatly increased in the last few decades. The bull pictured is a pure bred Holstein.

all the fresh water they want at the time they have habitually been getting it. For this reason there must be great regularity in supplying the water. By far the most satisfactory plan is to have tanks that can be kept filled at all times.

A stock farm cannot be considered fully equipped until it has a complete water system with a storage tank high enough to force water wherever it is needed. Probably no other improvement saves as much labor as does a water system. On farms where the tank can be given sufficient elevation on a hillside it can be built in the ground of cement, and the water will be kept cooler than when stored in tanks elevated above the ground. Where an ample storage tank is built the drinking tanks in the various yards can be small. This insures the water being fresher than when it would be stored in large open tanks.

In addition to having plenty of water for the stock to drink, a dairy farm needs water in the room where the milk is handled and the diary utensils are washed. There is a lot of drudgery in caring for milk and washing the pails and cans where water has to be carried. In fact, on a diary farm one of the first things to plan for is a water system that will put running water wherever needed. Until this is done caring for milk is bound to be drudgery.

The source of the water supply must be thoroughly dependable, and there should be no question as to its freedom from contamination. There is no quicker way to spread disease than through a contaminated water supply.

DAIRY WISDOM.

The best indication of the breeding value of a bull is furnished in the milk records of his dam.

It never pays to use poor salt in butter. Some may say that salt is salt, but it is true that there are some grades much better than others.

The stomach of a little calf is very sensitive and easily ruined. Nothing will do this quicker than keeping the calf confined in a wet, dirty stall or pen.

Fine cornmeal for the skim-milk calf is a good substitute for the more expensive oilmeal.

To double the amount of milk per acre and cut the cost of milk production in two—build a silo.

EFFECT OF WATER ON FAT CONTENT OF MILK

The watery character of the ration fed has no effect upon the fat content of the milk, says the Orange Judd Farmer. There is even less variation in the other milk constituents. This indicates that rations of varying water content have no effect upon the composition of milk. This was the conclusion of prolonged tests over an eighty day period with eight cows conducted for the government by W. F. Turner, R. H. Shaw, R. P. Norton and P. A. Wright.

The cows were given four different kinds of rations: (1) A full versus a limited allowance of drinking water; (2) turnips versus dry roughage; (3) wet versus dry beet pulp; (4) green versus dry crimson clover. The dry ration contained only from 60 to 75 per cent as much water as the wet ration. Of green clover the cows ate from forty to fifty pounds per head and of the clover hay 16.222 pounds per head daily.

Certain individual cows at times produced milk having an abnormal fat content. This effect was apparently independent of the ration, as it occurred not only with the high water content ration, but with the dry as well. The weight of evidence secured through other tests also indicates that usually

There have been many instances in the past which show the great value of the Guernsey bull in the battle for the improvement of the scrub cow. Aside from the fact of the return of a profit, the natural color and fine flavor so characteristic of the Guernsey product are also prominent in cows resulting from this line of breeding. The cow shown is a Guernsey.

the percentage of water in the milk is not increased, nor the percentage of fat in the milk reduced, where the ration contains an unusually large amount of water.

Nevertheless, the general opinion of dairymen is expressed by McConnell: "It is a matter of common knowledge that the lush grass of spring, an excess of mangolds or too many brewers' grains will promote a great flow of milk, but that that milk will be poor, and farmers who do not do anything to modify such feeding will find their milk coming dangerously near the 'standard.'"

AN OUTLINE OF THE NEW FARM LOAN ACT.

The act provides for the creation of twelve federal land banks and permits the establishment of any number of joint stock land banks for the purpose of making loans at a reasonable rate of interest for long periods of time on farm lands.

A federal farm loan board has complete control over these banks.

A—Federal Land Banks.

Twelve federal land banks are provided, one in each of twelve districts into which the country will be divided. These banks are empowered to lend on first mortgages on farm lands in amounts of $100 to $10,000 for approved purposes. The loans are to be made through farm loan associations and agents. No loan may be made for more than 50 per cent of the value of the land mortgaged and 20 per cent of the value of the permanent insured improvements upon it.

National farm loan associations—local organizations composed exclusively of borrowers—are authorized. These associations must be stockholders in the land banks in proportion to the amount their members wish to borrow. Eventually all stock in the federal land banks will be owned exclusively by these associations.

A reasonable interest rate is established. The act prohibits the federal land banks from charging more than 6 per cent on any mortgage or requiring fees not approved by the farm loan board.

The borrowers will share in the net profits of the bank because they are stockholders. It is contemplated that ultimately the borrowers will be the only stockholders.

Long term loans are provided by authorizing mortgages for periods of from five up to forty years.

Small annual or semiannual payments on the principal are made a required feature of all mortgages.

B—Joint Stock Land Banks.

Joint stock land banks are authorized. They are corporations for carrying on the business of lending on farm mortgage security and issuing farm loan bonds. They are to be under the supervision of the farm loan board, but the government will not invest in them. Subject to geographical limitations and subject to the 50 per cent and 20 per cent limitation, these banks can lend to an individual any amount they wish and for any purpose. They cannot charge an interest rate exceeding 6 per cent, and such rate must not exceed by more than 1 per cent the interest they have paid on their last issue of bonds. Their mortgages, however, must provide for amortization payments. These banks are prohibited from charging under any pretext fees or commissions other than those authorized by the act.

DUCKS DO HIS ANGLING.

With Line and Hook to Their Legs They Bring In Fish From Lake.

Leitchfield, Ky.—Henry Cecil of Cecilia in a lake near his home has devised a most successful and novel way to catch fish, according to Roy Bond.

Cecil has a number of ducks that frequent this lake. He ties a short fishing line to the duck's foot with the hook baited. The duck swims about the lake, fishing all over it. When a fish strikes he pulls the duck's leg, and Mr. Duck, not understanding what this means, turns and flees to the shore just as fast as he can.

Cecil takes off the fish, rebaits the hook and throws the duck back into the lake to renew the fishing. He has a number of ducks fishing for him at the same time and has caught 100 pounds of fish this way.

Oklahoma Girl Fires Places Where Father Spent Money.

Bartlesville, Okla.—The torch is the most effective weapon to be used in fighting joints, according to the notion of a nineteen-year-old Copan girl who admits she fired a Copan pool hall and rooming house where intoxicating liquors are said to have been sold and which has just been closed by an injunction.

The girl says her father was spending all his time and money there. Copan is on the booze trail leading out of Kansas into Oklahoma. The girl has warned all bootleggers that the town is to remain closed. She even threatens to form a squadron of women to be known as "High Jackies" to war against the liquor traffic.

COLLEGE HOUSE GOES.

Old Harvard Dormitory to Be Torn Down For Hotel.

Cambridge, Mass.—Harvard university has disposed of the College House, one of its oldest dormitories, and the purchasers will tear down the old building and erect a modern structure, which is to include a family hotel, the first one the city has had for several years.

In the deal it is said that Randolph Hall, a Gold Coast dormitory, was one of the parcels exchanged. The college authorities are planning to buy other private dormitories and thus control exclusively the housing of the student body.

Roosevelt Applauds Hughes' Speech

Theodore Roosevelt sat in a box at Carnegie Hall when Mr. Hughes delivered his speech of acceptance and vigorously applauded every telling point.

The Colonel repeatedly arose and bowed in response to the cheers for him and the shouts of "Teddy!" "Teddy!" "Hurrah for Teddy!", and when the meeting adjourned he made the following statement:

"It is an admirable speech and I wish to call attention to the following points:

"I am particularly pleased with the exposure of the folly, and worse than folly, of Mr. Wilson's Mexican policy and of the way in which this policy has brought humiliation to the United States and disaster to Mexico itself.

"Moreover, I am very glad of the straightforward manner in which Mr. Hughes has shown the ridicule with which Mr. Wilson has covered this nation by the manner in which he allowed foreign powers to gain the impression that although he used the strongest words in diplomacy they were not to be taken seriously.

Not Words Which Count.

"As Mr. Hughes said, it is not words but the strength and resolution behind the words which count. As Mr. Hughes pointed out, there is no doubt that if Mr. Wilson's conduct and action had been such as to make the foreign nations believe that he meant precisely what he said in his 'strict accountability' there would have been no destruction of American lives by the sinking of the Lusitania.

"When Mr. Hughes uses strong words his record shows that they are always backed by strong deeds, and therefore in the enormous majority of cases the use of strong words renders it unnecessary ever to have recourse to strong deeds.

"Again, Mr. Hughes speaks in characteristically straightforward fashion of the outrages committed on munitions plants, and all men, whether citizens of foreign nations or nominal citizens of our own land, who had in any shape or way abetted or condoned those actions can understand that Mr. Hughes, if President, will protect these domestic American interests and punish offenders against them with the fearlessness and thoroughness that he showed in dealing with the powers of evil at Albany.

Brought Nation to Ignominy.

"Just before coming in to listen to Mr. Hughes' just characterization of Mr. Wilson's failure to protect the lives and property of Americans in Mexico and on the high seas, I happened to pick up John Fiske's "Critical Period of American History," and was struck by the following two sentences:

"'A government touches the lowest point of ignominy when it confesses its inability to protect the lives and the property of its citizens. A government which has come to this has failed in discharging the primary function of government and forthwith ceases to have any reason for existing.'

"Mr. Hughes has pointed out in his speech with self-restraint, but with emphasis, that it is precisely this primary function which Mr. Wilson's Administration has failed to discharge and that it is precisely this point of ignominy to which he has reduced the nation over which he is President."

A POLICY OF FIRMNESS AND CONSISTENCY NEEDED.

The Nation has no policy of aggression toward Mexico. We have no desire for any part of her territory. We wish her to have peace, stability, and prosperity. We shall have to adopt a new policy, a policy of firmness and consistency through which alone we can promote an enduring friendship. We demand from Mexico the protection of the lives and the property of our citizens and the security of our border from depredations. Much will be gained if Mexico is convinced that we contemplate no meddlesome interference with what does not concern us, but that we propose to insist in a firm and candid manner upon the performance of international obligations. To a stable government, appropriately discharging its international duties, we should give ungrudging support. A short period of firm, consistent and friendly dealing will accomplish more than many years of vacillation.—From Mr. Hughes' speech of acceptance.

AN ADMINISTRATION TOO CONTENT WITH LEISURELY DISCUSSION.

I do not put life and property on the same footing, but the Administration has not only been remiss with respect to the protection of American lives; it has been remiss with respect to the protection of American property and American commerce. It has been too much disposed to be content with leisurely discussion.—From Mr. Hughes' speech of acceptance.

THE SUMMER HABIT.

What Horsewomen Approve of For Hot Weather Wear.

This severely tailored habit is put up in linen crash in natural tone. The breeches button at the knee irregularly, while the coat of long revers takes a circular skirt. Brown bone buttons are the only trimming, matching the brown grosgrain band of the panama and Russian leather boots.

OFF FOR A CANTER.

A BEAUTY HINT.

How to Wash Your Face In the Right Way.

One of the methods of acquiring a clear, white complexion is so simple that it is almost amusing. It is merely to wash the face properly. This should be as regularly a part of the toilet at night as brushing the teeth. The procedure is in this wise: With hot water and a pure white soap thoroughly cover the face with lather, using a good complexion brush. The latter is better than a washcloth because it "scrubs" better and acts as a good stimulant to the blood vessels of the face. One need not be afraid of this thorough scrubbing, for long hours of rest in bed prevent any harm coming to the tender skin afterward. When the face is rinsed well with tepid water and gently and thoroughly dried with a soft towel rub a good cold cream into the open pores. When this has been thoroughly spread over the face and has remained there five or ten minutes gently wipe it off with a soft cloth, preferably silk. Do not rub the face too dry, for some of the cream should be left in the outer tissues of the skin. The severe scrubbing thoroughly softens and cleanses the skin of all dirt and stain, while the cream nourishes and whitens it.

PICNIC LUNCHEONS.

Hint About Carrying Food Daintily and Easily.

In homes where automobile luncheons or picnic parties are frequent it is a good idea to have on hand several fresh, clean egg boxes with compartments, in which eggs come from the store. Stuffed eggs can then be rolled in paraffin paper and stood upright in each compartment so they will travel without crushing or losing shape. Neither need the halves of the egg be kept together with toothpicks, as is frequently done. Dainty rolled sandwiches also keep their shape in these individual compartments. Loaf cake can be cut in pieces of a size to fit these partitioned boxes by lifting out the divisions and pressing the pasteboard edge on the freshly frosted surface of the cake. Replace the partitions in the box and allow the frosting to become firm. Then cut in squares as indicated by the markings. Each piece of cake will be of a size to fit. This eliminates carrying a knife and insures the neat appearance of the cake.

Citron Preserves.

Pare citron and cut in slices one and one-half inch thick and about three inches long. To each pound of citron allow one pound of white sugar. First make your sirup, using one pint of water to every ten pounds of sugar; skim well, then add fruit; boil one hour, or until tender; do not stir; slice two lemons thin, extracting the seeds; put this in the preserves with two ounces of root ginger (white). Do not boil long after adding lemon. This is excellent if made carefully. If you cannot obtain citron, watermelon rind can be substituted, but soak overnight in alum water and boil in clear water twenty minutes next morning.

Gay Raincoats.

Raincoats are now made of oil silk and are transparent. Bright reds, blues, lavender and green are some of the hues.

What Every Youngster Needs.

Having grown to a better understanding of good taste, modern mothers are adopting more practical play clothes for their offspring. The rompers shown here are made of percale trimmed with gingham.

Children's clothes are adorable nowadays, even when they are designed for the most practical purposes. There never was a season perhaps where such uniformly good taste was displayed in youngsters' garments as this year, for mothers have gradually grown to a better understanding of good taste in such matters and fewer offences are committed in the name of fashion.

The rompers shown here require 1⅓ yards of 36-inch percale to make for a child of two years. The front and back of the bloomers are cut in one with the front of the waist and the rompers close at the sides. While the illustration shows a high neck with a turn-down collar of plain percale, this may be modified to either a V-shape or a square line. The elbow sleeves are finished with band cuffs, or the sleeves may be made full length, if desired. They are cut in one piece.

The home dressmaker who would cut the bloomers properly must study the various sections of the pattern and the methods of their arrangement as shown in the accompanying cutting guide. It will be noted that the section marked "A" containing waist front and front and back of bloomers, is placed on a lengthwise fold of the percale. Next to this come the belts, one for the front and one for the back of the rompers.

Along the upper row are arranged, all on a lengthwise thread, the back, sleeveband, waistband, collar and sleeve. The second waistband is laid along the fold of percale to the right of the belts.

For the square or V-shaped neck, cut out neck edges of front and back along indicating small "o" perforations. The small "o" perforations in the sleeve show how it may be shortened. All changes in length should be made in the pattern before it is placed on the material to avoid waste of goods.

Gingham in plain color makes the most practical trimming for the rompers.

A Novelty Among Dresses.

6788

Frocks of voile and lace are quite the vogue for mid-summer wear this design being in blue and white. Gracefully caught up at the sides the skirt is "different" from most of the draped effects.

The well-dressed young woman likes what is novel, therefore she will readily favor this costume in dainty blue voile and lace. The frock closes at the back and has an underbody of blue chiffon. Drooping shoulders long enough to form their own sleeves, with the aid of a lace frill distinguish the overbodice.

The skirt is gathered in high-waisted effect to the bodice and caught up at the sides with deep shirred tucks. It is mounted on a three-piece foundation lengthened by a one-piece gathered lace flounce. In medium size the dress requires 1½ yards 36-inch lining for underbody and foundation, 3 yards lace 24 inches wide and 5¾ yards of 40-inch voile.

The outerskirt is unusual in shape, which is another way of saying that the home dressmaker will have to use the utmost care in cutting it. The section marked "M" is laid on an open width of the voile, but there will be sufficient room on the material to place the back, frnt and sleeve, if they are developed in voile. The piecing for the flounce is also laid on this open width of material.

The flounce proper is laid on a fold of material, as shown in the cutting guide. To cut the lining, fold the goods in half and place the front of the underbody and ffont gore of the skirt on the lengthwise fold. The back and back gore of the skirt are placed on a lengthwise thread of the lining material.

If the outer waist and the flounce are to be made of lace, cut off the edges of the front and back of the pattern on slot perforations, and flounce on small "o" perforations and place patterns on material with edges of front and back having slot perforations, and lower edge of flounce along bordered edge of material.

Voile is a decidedly important factor in the development of frocks which must give service, while they present a dainty effect.

The KITCHEN CUPBOARD

MUSHROOM TASTIES.

MUSHROOMS AND SPAGHETTI.—Boil half a pound of spaghetti in plenty of salted water until tender. Put one pint of water in a saucepan with juice of half a lemon, a teaspoonful of salt and half as much pepper, and when it boils add a quart of mushrooms and cook five minutes. Beat three eggs and stir them in; then remove at once from the fire. Drain the spaghetti and put a layer in the bottom of a baking dish, then a layer of the mushrooms and fill the dish up in this way, leaving mushrooms on top. Place in a hot oven to bake for five minutes.

Mushrooms With Marrow.—This dish is a favorite in some restaurants. Have the meat dealer split a shin bone and remove the marrow, and cut this into inch thick slices. Then boil it for one and a half minutes in a quart of salted water, using a teaspoonful of salt. Into a frying pan put a tablespoonful of butter and let get hot; then add five tablespoonfuls of chopped mushrooms and toss for five minutes. Sprinkle with a little salt and pepper. Drain the marrow; squeeze over it ten drops of lemon juice and then mix it with the mushrooms. Spread on hot slices of crisp toast and serve at once.

Mushrooms and Lamb's Kidneys.—Slice one lamb's kidney and saute in melted butter. Skim out of the butter and saute a dozen large mushrooms in the same butter, having washed and sliced them. Melt two tablespoonfuls of butter; add two tablespoonfuls of flour, one and a half cupfuls of tomato, a few drops of onion juice, one and a half tablespoonfuls of table sauce, a half teaspoonful of salt and a dash of pepper. Cook ten minutes; add mushrooms and kidney and cook gently until the kidney is tender. Serve in the center of a hot platter with a border of plain boiled rice or spaghetti and a cream sauce.

Mushroom Patties.—Make a good forcemeat of chicken or cold roasted beef and fill prepared mushroom caps that are all of the same size. First wash, peel and stem them, chopping the stems and mixing with the saute the caps in butter; fill with the forcemeat and put together to form a ball. Cover with a thick cream sauce. Place in a fine wire basket and fry in deep hot fat until nicely brown. Serve with sauce allemande.

Diarrhoea Quickly Cured.

Mrs. George Williams, Middleville, N. Y., in speaking of Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy says: "I cannot praise this remedy too highly. My mother used it for years at times when she had attacks of diarrhoea and it always relieved her quickly. A few doses of it is all that is needed." The prompt cure affected by this preparation has been the wonder and delight of thousands of sufferers. For sale by all dealers.

He Loved His Enemies.

James MacNeill Whistler looked upon life as upon a kind of warfare and was never so happy as when he was quarreling with somebody. He is quoted as having said when asked if he did not have many friends: "Yes, I have many friends, and I am grateful to them, but those whom most I love are my enemies, not in a Biblical sense. Oh, no, but because they keep one always busy, always up to the mark, either fighting them or proving them idiots."

Ancient War Automobiles.

Among some interesting documents in the old Bohemian city, Saaz, on the Eger river, is a picture showing an attack on the fortress Glatz, in Silesia, in which war automobiles were used. The mechanically driven cars were flat vehicles, protected by huge shields in front, in which the soldiers turned large cranks, the rotary motion of which was transferred to cog wheels and to the road wheels. It is estimated that these fifteenth century "chauffeurs" got a speed of four miles an hour out of the armored cars.

An Odd Globe.

A great globe ornamented with the map of the earth carved in stone decorates the estate of an eccentric Englishman at Swanage. It stands overlooking the sea and is visible for quite a distance. One may walk about it and study it in detail. The plane surfaces, such as the oceans, lakes and deserts, are decorated with scriptural texts which are supposed to apply especially to the locality they occupy.

Carlyle and His Pipe.

Carlyle smoked often and complained much of dyspepsia. A friend once ventured to suggest that his smoking might perhaps injure and depress him. "Yes," Carlyle said, "and the doctors told me the same thing. I left off smoking and was very meeserable, so I took to it again and was very meeserable still, but I thought it better to smoke and be meeserable than to go without."

COUNCIL MET LAST NIGHT

At the meeting of the Common Council last night, City Chamber Herbert W. Adkins presented receipts for the month of July amounting to $10,707.41. The cash on hand totaled $6,908.19, while an expenditure of $9,346.02 was laid out from the mainteance department.

Harry M. O'Brien also rendered a report in the capacity of the city sealer of weights and measures. He reported that from 825 articles tested only seventy-three were condemned. He also stated that 163 reweighings and remeasurings had been made.

The report of the Commissioner of Charities James D. Somers, showed an expense through the months of May and June of $564.22 of which $210.28 was the actual expenditure for the maintenance of this department. The amount of $353.94 having been paid on back bills. Commissioner Summers stated that every effort was being made to curtail expenses and that the demand for assistance was not so great.

Several repeitions of the violations of the health law in tearing the unsanitary placards from its resting place have been brought to the attention of our local health officer, Dr. A. L. Hall. Dr. Hall stated this morning that too many people have the idea that these cards have been attached to places in the form of a joke or are of no account, but he said that within the next few violations some would be brought into the city court to answer for this violation. He said that this movement was only a start for what will follow. Ice cream factories, alleys, back yards and all places open to the public will suffer in the attempt to rid the city of all possibilities of the spread of diseases.

Dr. Hall said that Fultonians should be cautious about letting small children go away to neighboring cities or to permit children to come into Fulton from other cities to visit. Syracuse is now included in the plague as is Cicero. Onondaga Valley. Therefore parents should be very particular about permitting the children to visit near these places.

LOCAL STREET CAR BUNKS INTO BICYCLE

A bicycle rider, named Kenneth Flowerday, who belongs to the Megiddo Mission at Rochester, was struck by local car No. 313 on South First street at three o'clock this afternoon. The rider and car were both travelling in the same direction, but Flowerday was too slow in turning from the track and the car struck the rear wheel of the machine, throwing the rider to the ground. He escaped luckily with a few minor bruises and torn clothing. The wheel was uninjured.

FIRE AND POLICE COMMISSION MET LAST NIGHT

At the meeting of the Fire and Police Commission last night reports were submitted by Harry L. Waugh, chief of the fire department, and E. J. Dyer, chief of police.

The commission also purchased a new fire alarm system switchboard, together with the motor for power generation. This will reduce the expense of the department greatly, for the reason that the prices on zincs, copper and blue vitriol are soaring. The new method will be much more dependable and accurate.

SMALL AWARD FOR LOSS OF FINGER

Alfred Chesbro an employee, of the Eureka Paper Company was awarded $79.88 by deputy compensation commissioner Richards at Syracuse yesterday for the loss of one half of the ring finger of his left hand. His hand was caught between the rollers of a paper machine and crushed. He regained the use of all his digits except the one that it was found necessary to amputate. He was granted compensation of twelve and one half weeks disability at two thirds of his wages or $6.39 per week.

DEMOCRATS CAN'T GET TOGETHER

HARD WORK FOR TAMMANYITES AND OTHER FACTIONS TO COMBINE ON CHOICE FOR GOVERNOR CANDIDATE

With State Senator Robert F. Wagner definitely out of the gubernatorial race, surface indications today are that Justice Samuel Eeabury will be the Democratic nominee for governor against Whitman.

It is said that Wagner has convinced Charles Murphy that when he declared he would not be dragged into the race that he meant exactly what he said and that Murphy has now given a gdudging consent to back Seabury. From other sources, however, it is said, that he has stated that he would not under any conditions consent to the nomination of the judge.

The predicament that Murphy and his allies find themselves in is helpful to Seabury. Try as they might they have been unable to agree upon a candidate that would be strong enough to defeat Justice Seabury in the primary battles. Senator Dagner could do this and that was the one reason why the up-state men were for him. In addition they believed that he could capture the German-American vote.

Continued talk is heard in some circles of the candidacy of Thomas Mott Osborne. Charles Tremain of Ithaca is also being discussed. Mr. Osborne is an out and out anti-Tammany man and it is declared that is one of the reasons why he was favored by the men from the Wigwam. It is said they believe that a straight out-and-out Tammanyite would have small chance of election, so they looked for an up-state Democrat. In fact it is said that Murphy and his cohorts intend to have theentire state ticket with the exception of the candidate for United States Senator made up entirely of up-state men.

The search for a candidate to enter the primaries against Justice Seabury will continue right up to the time that the Democrats gather at Saratoga the latter part of this week for the "unofficial" convention.

There is some gossip too that Murphy and his lieufenants are not sincere in their opposition to Justice Seabury, that they were working together and that all the talk of friction was all more or less stage play.

PRICE OF NEWS PAPER SOARS

ADVANCES IN PRINT PAPER CONTINUES WITH NO RELIEF IN SIGHT

The news print paper famine has reached a point where it is a serious menace to the newspapers of the country and the prining industry as a whole. The American Review of Reviews commenting on the situation says:

"A commodity even so indirectly related to the demands of war as paper is showing the prevailing tendencies to such a degree as seriously to embarrass publishers. The higher price of paper stock and the difficulty of obtaining it at all in England was a chief factor in the discontinuance in March of the London Daily Standard, after a career of sixty years, for a considerable portion of which it was the most important organ of the middle classes in England.

"In America the demands for paper has been increasing for six months, as a result of general business activity. At the same time supplies used in its manufacture have been decreased by war conditions and in some cases have been almost cut off.

"The supply of old rags is affected by the cutting off of the importations from the Suropean peasantry and by the demand for the making of gun SEVEN .... ETETT cotton. The chemicals used in bleaching the paper produced by sulphuric acid and alum are being devoured by the manufacturers of explosives, while importations of jute have fallen off until the price is doubled. An embargo has been placed on shipments of wood pulp from Norway and Sweden while Canada has stopped access to her vast resources some time ago.

"The newspaper publisher, is indeed, hard hit by war conditions in many other items of supplies besides basic one of paper stock. Virtually everything going into the manufacture of a daily newspaper has increased from ten to fifteen per cent.—inks, owing to the advances in the cost of acids and dyes from 300 to 500 per cent.; type owing to the higher cost of lead, tin and antimony—even the rubber and felt blankets wrapped around the press rollers and their quota to the increased cost of living of the daily."

Through an important bulletin just issued by a prominent concern which manufactures and distributes all grades of paper, it is learned that the causes of the present famine and increasing cost of paper are such as to indicate no change for the better in the near future. This bulletin states that a large proportion of bleached and unbleached sulphite and ground wood pulp used in the manufacture of paper has come from Europe; that the amount from the Central Empires has been entirely stopped while the pulp from Norway and Sweden has materially decreased. What is now being received is costing double its former value.

Dyes, chemicals and paper machinery and every other article which goes into the manufacture of paper has increased in price anywhere from twice to ten times the price paid a year ago. Labor has increased 25 to 50 per cent. It is not believed there will be any change until the European war is over and then months will elapse before prices can be adjusted. The bulletin expresses the opinion that the paper mills will never be able to go back on the old schedules and for that reason former prices will not obtain.

FOR A MERCHANT MARINE WITHOUT FEDERAL COMPETITION.

Again, we must build up our merchant marine. It will not aid to put the Government into competition with private owners. That, it seems to me, is a counsel of folly. A surer way of destroying the promise of our foreign trade could hardly be devised. It has well been asked—Does the Government intend to operate at a profit or at a loss? We need the encouragement and protection of Government for our shipping industry, but it cannot afford to have the Government as a competitor.—From Mr. Hughes' speech of acceptance.

DECRYING INTERFERENCE, WE INTERFERED IN MEXICO EXASPERATINGLY.

The dealings of the Administration with Mexico constitute a confused chapter of blunders. We have not helped Mexico. She lies prostrate, impoverished, famine-stricken, overwhelmed with the woes and outrages of internecine strife, the helpless victim of a condition of anarchy which the course of the Administration only served to promote. For ourselves, we have witnessed the murder of our citizens and the destruction of their property. We have made enemies, not friends. Instead of commanding respect and deserving good will by sincerity, firmness, and consistency, we provoked misapprehension and deep resentment. In the light of the conduct of the Administration no one could understand its professions. Decrying interference, we interfered most exasperatingly. We have not even kept out of actual conflict, and the soil of Mexico is stained with the blood of our soldiers. We have resorted to physical invasion, only to retire without gaining the professed object. It is a record which cannot be examined without a profound sense of humiliation.—From Mr. Hughes' speech of acceptance.

HOW TO ADJUST YOUR NEW CARBURETOR.

—In adjusting a carburetor the first essential is to be able to tell the difference between a weak and a rich mixture. In either case the car will lack power and may knock, and with too rich a mixture it may also overheat.

With too much gasoline, on the other hand, the car will respond instantly to the opening of the throttle, but with not the same vim as with a perfect mixture. A great excess of fuel will produce black smoke in the exhaust.

Too frequently, when one of these symptoms is recognized or the car is operating badly for any reason at all, the conclusion is that the carburetor needs adjusting, and, instead of improving it, it is made worse. Never touch the adjustments on a carburetor until you are sure that they require it.

Faulty ignition and leaky cylinders are often mistaken for bad carburetion. Before looking at the carbureter it is only common sense to make sure that the trouble is not elsewhere; otherwise you may complicate matters by throwing the carburetor out of adjustment.

A thin mixture may be caused by air leaks in the manifold, cylinder head gaskets, valve plugs or valve guides. Any of these will produce missing at low speed. A leak in any part of the manifold may be determined by noting whether smoke from a cigar or cigarette will be sucked in. Other leaks may be located by feeling or listening.

The mixture will be weak if the fuel level is too low in the float chamber, and this may be due to a bent float mechanism, a stuck float, or if there is a float level adjustment there may be some difficulty with this.

If the float is made of cork the shellac may gradually dissolve and the fuel will soak into it, making it heavier and consequently raising the level. Similarly a pin hole in a metal float will allow gasoline to enter and weight it. The cork float may be repaired by drying in an oven and then shellacking it again and the metal float by enlarging the hole, draining the gasoline out and then closing it with a little solder.

How to Look Well Dressed Without a Great Expenditure.

In the American Magazine is an account of one of the most successful insurance solicitors in the country, who attributes a large part of his success to the fact that he always looks well dressed and prosperous.

"If you have only one suit of clothes keep that one suit clean and pressed all the time," he says. "Press your trousers yourself every day if necessary. I have pressed my trousers lots of times. Keep your shoes shined.

"If you can afford several suits change off from one suit to another frequently, and keep all of them spotless and well pressed. I never wear a suit longer than the second day at a time. To change every day is better. It gives the clothes a chance to 'rest.' I always hang my clothes on hangers the minute I take them off. It gives them a chance to 'come back' into shape and the nap to come up again.

"It is a great economy to have lots of good clothes. A suit will last twice and three times as long and always look well if you keep changing off from one to another. Besides, people get tired of seeing a man in the same suit day after day for a whole season."

INFANTILE WARDROBES.

How to Dress a New Baby With Little Expense.

If you are preparing a layette for a brand new baby these are the things you will need: Four abdominal bands of soft flannel, unhemmed, six or eight inches wide and twenty inches long; four shirts of silk and wool or cotton and wool; four flannel skirts made to hang from the shoulders; four nightgowns or wrappers of outing flannel open in front.

Three knitted bands of wool and cotton, with shoulder straps; six very simple white slips; four dozen diapers—cheesecloth, birdseye or diapering; three pairs of socks for a summer baby or three pairs of long stockings for the winter baby.

One simple coat and cap; one pair of mittens for winter; two short, loose sacks for sudden changes of temperature; two crocheted, knitted or flannel blankets.

How to Avoid Smoke When Lighting a Fire.

Simple way of avoiding the smoke and gas which always pour into the room when a fire is lit in a stove, heater or fireplace on a damp day: Put in the wood and coal as usual, but before lighting them ignite a handful of paper or shavings placed on top of the coal. This produces a current of hot air in the chimney, which draws up the smoke and gas at once.

CAPTURED

John F. Mott In the Toils

HAS GIVEN OFFICERS MERRY CHASE

(By United Press)

Buenos Aires, Argentine, August 10—Charles S. Mott, of Syracuse, was arrested yesterday at Villa Rosario by Argentine detectives. The arrest was made at Villa Rosario in a thickly inhabited Argentine territory of Chaco near the Paraguay boundaries about 400 miles north of Buenos Aires.

Mott's arrest is a culmination of a long chase that has extended over a period of from four to six months. Deputy Attorney General Alfred L. Becker, left last June in the hope of capturing Mott, which was not at all definite. Mott disappeared about the first of the year and his whereabouts were not known until a cablegram was received from Panama several months ago saying he had been there.

Several months ago a large reward was offered by the county of Onondaga for the capture and arrest of Charles F. Mott, a former resident of Syracuse. He was charged with the crime of conspiracy alleged to have been committed in connection with the construction of the Tuberculosis Sanatorium of Onondaga County, he having been chairman of the Building Committee for said sanatorium.

NEW REGULATIONS FOR TRAFFIC IN NEW YORK

It is expected that a bill will be introduced in the legislature early in January embodying the main features of the traffic regulations of New Jersey and Ohio and based upon the standard code of traffic regulations compiled by the Street Traffic Federation of America. The announcement comes as the result of favorable action toward that end by various organizations during the past two weeks.

The principal feature of it follows the recommendations of a joint committee of the legislature studying traffic, will be that regulating headlights. State Senator Charles J. Hewitt and Assemblyman Clarence J. Welsh and John R. Powers adopted the federation's recommendation as to headlights which is now in effect in St. Louis, Cleveland, New Orleans, Indianapolis and is a state law in Massachusetts. Under this law the reflected light from automobiles must not rise more than forty-two inches above the ground when measured seventy-five feet or more ahead of the machine and must give sufficient light ten feet each side of the vehicle.

At the recent meeting of the New York State Automobile Association at Alexandria Bay a resolution was adopted favoring a state law for making traffic uniform. Some of the things urged are proper and uniform regulations, education of pedestrians as well as drivers and a reasonable enforcement by local authorities.

LARGE CROWD IS EXPECTED

GRANGE DAY AT THE STATE FAIR, SYRACUSE, SEPT. 11-16

We are greatly pleased by the splendid treatment we are receiving from the State Fair Commission, and especially the Commissioner of Agriculture, who is untiring in his efforts to make the coming fair the best ever, and is working with the State grange officers in perfect harmony that Grange Day may be a success. We can assure all members who come to the State fair that the Grange building will be open for their use at all times and that some of the state officers will be in attendance at all times and we invite all to come and make themselves at home. We expect to have a Grange band on Grange Day — something entirely new. As usual a program will be carried out which we trust will please all who are present. The Spelling Bee will be held on Grange Day and all who want to can try and see whether they excel in this attainment. We sincerely hope many of our members will be at the Fair "Grange Day" and help boom this splendid fair.

Last, but not least, an excursion rate of 1c per mile will be given by all railroads within 150 miles of Syracuse for September 12th. We want to see you!

While at the Fair be sure and call at the Grange building. Checking privileges will be had as usual but this has been so abused in the past that we shall have to make a small charge that all may receive the same treatment.—S. J. Lowell, Master New York State Grange.

PICNIC WAS A SUCCESS.

Yesterday afternoon a merry crowd of picnickers including the Mary Patterson Court of Amaranths and their friends, left the residence of Mrs. H. S. Stadelmyer, on Oneida street, for Baker's Grove at Minetto. The party was conveyed to their destination by auto and a jolly ride was enjoyed.

Over 120 guests from different parts of the county participated in the day's outing. Good music was furnished and dancing was one of the features of the day. There were games also, of various kinds, which added a variety to the program.

A delicious supper was served in the evening, with more delicacies than could be dispensed with.

Everyone reported having had a delightful time and the picnic will go down as another successful event given in charge of the Amaranths.

RAMPS INSTEAD OF STAIRWAYS

A NEW EXPERIMENT TO BE TRIED IN SYRACUSE SCHOOL BUILDING.

Syracuse, N. Y., August 10—A schoolhouse without steps, believed to be the first of its kind in the country is under construction in this city. It will be known as the Franklin school.

Neither is the two story building to have elevators to carry the pupils from one floor to the other. It is going to have ramps. A ramp according to Webster is "an inclined plane serving as a communication between different interior levels."

One of such levels would be the lower floor of the new buildings and the second floor would be another, and the roof of the building, upon which there is to be playgrounds and a fresh air school will be the third.

The new building will consist of a main structure with wings on each side. The floors in the wings will be half a story higher or lower than the floors in the main part of the building. The ramps will be in the wings. In passing from one floor to another in the main building one will ascend or descend the ramps. They take up considerably more room than a staircase, but are regarded as safer.

GRANGE DAY AT CHAUTAUQUA

Chautauqua, August 10 (Special)—Grange Day at Chautauqua occurred yesterady. The state grange master and other officers attended and the chief address was given by Charles M. Gardner, editor of the National Grange Monthly. His topic was "A Providential Creation."

GRANGE PICNIC AT CORNELL COLLEGE, AUGUST 18TH

The Pomona grange of Tompkins County in conjunction with the State officers are intending to hold a picnic at Ithaca, August 18th and sincerely hope that at least one thousand members will be in attendance. Brother C. M. Gardner, High Priest of Demeter, will give the main address which is enough to pay everyone for coming.

Woodmen Will Attend.

All Modern Woodmen of America are requested to be at the trolley station at 2:15 p. m., Saturday to go to Oswego for the preparedness parade.

Cloudburst In W. Va. Causes Heavy Loss

(By United Press)

Huntington, West Va., August 10—Governor Hatfield today ordered two more companies of the second regiment in the West Virginia flood district, where the report of loss of life and property has been confirmed. The estimate given is that more than thirty bodies have been recovered and the cabin death list is placed at 100. Among the bodies taken from the water were twenty-three recoverd in the town of Cabin Creek. Others are being taken from the creek above the town.

Australians Gaining Objectives Rapidly

(By United Press)

London, August 10—Further progress north west of Pozieres where the Australians yesterday penetrated the German trenches 200 yards on a 600 yard front, was reported by General Haig this afternoon. The Australians have gained the local objectives rapidly, being consolidated. The night was quiet except for bombardments of the British southeast of Trones Woods, by the German artillery, General Haig reported this afternoon.

Russian Troops Approaching Bistritza

(By United Press)

London, August 10—Russian troops under General Letchitzyki were approaching the Bistritza river only three miles east of the Galician city of Stamislau yesterday morning according to a despatch received from Petrograd this morning.

Italian Forces Occupy Austrian Position

(By United Press)

Rome, August 10—The strong Austrian position at Boschini south of Goritz, has been occupied by the Italian forces. It was officially announced this afternoon.

GERMAN ATTACK ON FRENCH FAILED

(By United Press)

Paris, August 10—On the Verdun front no important infantry fighting occurred during the night. There was an intermittent bombardment in the region of Fluery. In the Bostes a German attack on French positions northeast of Altkirk failed utterly. Many raids were carried out last night on the Somme front.

NATIONAL TOURING WEEK REALLY DISCOVERS AMERICA

Chicago, August 10—America is being discovered this week as she was never discovered in 1492. National Touring Week is accomplishing the greatest of discoveries—the discovery of America by herself. More than a hundred thousand automobiles, carrying half a million motor tourists, are abroad in the great American open, making the discovery complete with circuits of the beauty and wonder spots of the nation.

The remarkable feature of the "discovery" is that few of the motorists are more than two hundred miles from their homes. It is a discovery of the things nearest, which somehow seem to be the things hardest to discover. "See America First by Seeing Your Own State First" has proved the guiding text of American motordom. The home state has come into its own this vacation time of 1916.

The consequence of this home appreciation of nature cannot be overestimated. Motorists realizing that there is a wealth of scenic beauty near them as well as at spots too far removed to be reached without a special trip, will plan more automobile trips than has been their habit. National Touring Week not only has taken them once to the charm of the home state, but has shown them the way to many future home-state tours.

WEATHER REPORT.

Fair to-night. Friday showers. Moderate east to south winds.

YOU AND THE PAPER

The Evening Times is always hustling for you and yours.

But what are you doing for it?

The paper is always scheming and planning and laboring for a better community, for a more prosperous community.

Do you ever exert yourself to give the paper a boost?

The paper is always pushing you and your people to the front, giving you a good word before your neighbors and the public, assisting you to build up a reputation which will be of inestimable value to you throughout the years of your life.

But what are you doing? Are you reciprocating in any way? Do you ever suggest to your neighbors or your friends that it is a loyal paper, and that it should receive their support?

The paper devotes many hours and many pages in advertising the natural advantages of the community—of YOUR community—and in seeking to enhance the welfare of your community and of yourself.

But what of you? Do you ever seek to advertise the paper, or to swell its subscription list, or to increase its general usefulness to the community?

The paper is working for the community, and for you and yours.

But do you ever devote a minute or two of your time to its material welfare? Have you ever done so?

The duty of the paper is to supply you with the legitimate news of the town and community. But the paper goes much farther. Its labors in behalf of the community are endless and without end, and it will continue to advocate the cause of community progress as long as it is a paper.

You are an important part of the community, therefore its labors are in YOUR behalf.

But are you doing one single thing to requite the paper for all of its toil and expense in your behalf?

You take the paper, you say.

True, and you get more than value received in the news items alone. The fund of information which the paper hands you each publication day for a cent would cost you many dollars if you went out to gather it up yourself.

But this is not a kick, nor is it a roast. It is just a little food for thought in a few of your idle moments.

THE MAN WHO ADVERTISES

There are but two classes of merchants—those who ADVERTISE, and those who do not. The man who advertises has the BEST OF THE DEAL. He keeps HIMSELF before the public—and he keeps their quality and price uppermost in the PUBLIC MIND. People TALK about a man who advertises, because they know he has something WORTH advertising—or he wouldn't advertise.

THE GROUCH

The Great Creator in His wisdom created many men of many minds and temperaments knowing that if the sons of men were alike in wishes and desires it would lead to unending strife.

He created well, for man is the noblest work of God. But in some way there crept into the world a creature God did not create—a thing self-made, be it male or female, that is hated, despised and abhorred; a thing self-created, self-pitied and abnormally self-loved.

This self-created creature is the chronic grouch that walks here and there in every town and community searching for happiness—that he may destroy it. Flowers and children because they represent beauty and love, he detests. He reads as he runs that all men are liars and all women but creatures of evil.

In summer he reviles the bright sunshine and hates the green hills. In winter he reviles the cleansing snow and the purifying frost. The biterness of gall and wormwood is within his heart.

Children flee from him and his wife can be classed among the martyrs. Men shun him and the world hates him. From an early age he walks this earth spreading unhappiness and unbelief—a maker of evil and discord.

Let us throw the x-ray of self-examination into our own hearts and search out the little microbe that has a tendency to multiply and produce, in time, the hated grouch. There is too much love and sunshine in this old world of ours to spoil it with the cankor of selfishness.

AN ELOQUENT PASSAGE

Probably of all the beautiful an eloquent passages ever written by the inimitable George D. Prentice, the following is the finest:

It can not be that earth is man's only abiding place. It can not be that our life is a bubble. Else why is it that the high and glorious aspirations which leap like angels from the temple of our hearts are forever wandering unsatisfied? Why is it that the rainbow and cloud come over us with a beauty that is not of earth, and then pass off to leave us to muse on their loveliness? Why is it that the stars which 'hold their festival around the midnight throne' are set above the grasp of our limited faculties, forever mocking us with their unapproachable glory? And finally, why is it that bright forms of human beauty are presented to our view and taken from us; leaving the thousand streams of our affection to flow back in an Alpine torrent upon our hearts? There is a realm where the rainbow never fades; where the stars will be spread out before us like the islands that slumber on the ocean, and where the beautiful beings which pass before us like shadows will stay forever in ourpresence."

DOG DAYS

Dog days are coming upon us—the sluggish days when the ancients believed the Dog Star affected the health of the living creatures of the earth—the days when the sun sets in a sea of crimson, and a haziness comes about the earth before the twilight falls. Dog days, when little boys are advised not to go in swimming in the stagnant creeks, for fear of being poisoned—the days when the dogs go mad.

The ancients were a superstitious lot, and we have not gotten so far away from them that we can boast to any great extent. For there are many ancient superstitions still lurking with us, and not the least of them the one pertaining to dog days. But like all superstitions, the effects are in evidence even if the cause is a thing of mystery.

During the summer the waters become stagnant, of course. Dust overhangs the earth as at no other season of the year, giving a reddish glow to the departing sun. One is more liable to suffer from an injury, especially if he goes into stagnant water, than at other seasons. And dogs are more likely to "go mad" when it is hot and dry and dusty than at other times. But the Dog star has nothing to do with it, of course. The ancients believed it had, however, and that settled it, for them.

Along about this season of the year, and for more than a month, Sirius, the Dog star, one of the brightest stars in the heavens, rises just before the sun. It is a clear white star, but appears red at this season, and the ancients supposed that because it was so near the sun, as it appeared, that it had something to do with the heat, and brought ills upon the earth. So they dreaded Dog days, and sought to escape the evil influence of the star through all sorts of incantations. But, we know better—so here's to Sirius, the Dog star, radiant light of the early morning! We hope to be asleep as you ascend the heavens.

—The Ohio State Journal says: "It is humiliating to admit that there is one law for the rich and another for the poor in this country, but it will have to be acknowledged that a poor man who steals a ham to save his family from starving is generally sent to the penitentiary for five years or so, while a wealthy and influential citizen, like our eminent cartoonist, for instance, is allowed to wear a wrist watch around in public with absolute impuny.

—Teachers divide history into three epochs—savagery, barbarism, and civilization. Viewing the present war in Europe and the preparations for war on every hand one may well be excused for wondering if our history makers have not been a bit hasty. Have we really yet emerged from barbarism?

—If the European war should bring to an end the custom of rulers being "born into the job," something would be accomplished to offset the terrific price that is being paid.

How the Wilson Administration Has Penalized Patriotism

"Having in view the possibility of further aggression upon the territory of the United States from Mexico and the necessity for the proper protection of that frontier," President Wilson, on June 18, called out the mobile arms of the National Guard for federal service.

He did not call them out at their existing peace strength, but at war strength, which is practically double. Lacking a system of reserves, the National Guard organizations immediately had to start a campaign of recruiting, to bring about the desired increase in their numbers.

Patriotic young citizens, under the urge of the cry, "Your country needs you," volunteered for service in gratifying numbers. According to Senator Chamberlain, chairman of the Senate Committee on Military Affairs, the result is that about 135,000 citizen soldiers have been mustered into the federal service and are now on the Mexican border or in camp in their home states. There may be more, but the administration refuses to make known the exact figures.

The movement is costing the public treasury many millions of dollars; it is costing the individual citizen soldiers many millions more. They went to the front believing the cry, "Your country needs you," for war service. They sacrificed advancement in their civil occupations, severed home ties, suffered, in thousands of instances, great financial loss. The less patriotic, who did not believe the cry, or believing, declined to make sacrifices, fatten at home on these losses.

The real purposes of the call are slowly developing. They are two in number:

First, a patrol of the border to do the work which President Wilson's friend, Carranza, finds it impossible to do. Because the recognized government in Mexico is too ineffective to keep its own citizens in check and prevent them murdering Americans on American soil, the American government undertakes the costly task of doing that work for them. The murder of American citizens on Mexican soil is another matter. Carranza may go as far as he likes in that direction.

Second, a purpose of the mobilization on the border and in the camps is to train citizens to perform effective military service. The regular military establishment of the nation is manifestly too sma" for the actual military needs. To this extent the cry, "Your country needs you," was correct.

But these facts were not made clear when the call was issued. The idea was promulgated that men were needed for actual war service; not for military training. Deceit was practiced.

Opposing in the open legislation for universal military service, the administration by its acts has established what in essence is a system of compulsory military service. It is a system all the more vicious because it operates only against the patriotic, whereas a legalized universal training system equalizes the burden of military service among all men and all classes of men.

When, in 1914, Europe plunged into the greatest war of all history, and conditions in Mexico grew intolerable, intelligent men realized the fact that it was incumbent on this nation to build up its tiny regular army and put its other military resources in condition for use. National safety demanded this. And yet, in December of that year, four months after the European war began, President Wilson went before Congress and declared that all agitation for military preparedness was hysterical; that we were adequately prepared.

After a while the administration changed its mind and professed to believe in the necessity for preparedness. First came an enactment to increase the regular army by 20,000. But the body of the country, and even all parts of the Democratic administration, could not change front so quickly as the head. Recruiting for the regular army lagged. Not yet have the 20,000 been secured.

The need pressed. A new national defense act, providing for still more men in the regular army, was enacted. But still the men were not forthcoming.

Suddenly and without warning the administration issued its call for mobilization of the citizen soldiery. It seemed still obsessed with the Bryan notion that an army could be created by presidential ukase.

When the call went out the government did not own enough uniforms, shoes, socks, blankets, hats, wagons, trucks, horses, mules and other things essential to equip the men called; it had made no provision for transporting the troops called to the points where they were required.

Who suffered most by this amazing lack of foresight, this leaping before looking?

Only the 135,000 patriots who believed that their country needed them for national defense; only the men who are making the great sacrifices.

The whole disgraceful story may be summed up in the phrase, the administration has penalized patriotism.

True, it is accumulating, by subterfuge, a reserve of trained soldiers, but events have demonstrated that it cried "wolf" when there was no wolf. Should it be forced to cry "wolf" again, when the wolf is at the door, what will be the result?

How Much is Now Left of the Baltimore Platform?

The President had boldly signed the Pork River and Harbor bill, and his facile pen is dripping with ink eager to attach itself to a Pork Public Buildings bill.

The friendliest apologists of the President's part in the profligate waste of money wrung from the people by oppressive taxation have nothing better to say for him than that it is hardly fair to expect a man to say "I forbid!" in this Presidential year when he is a candidate.

The foregoing words describing the profligate waste of the people's money with Executive approval are taken without change from a plank of the platform on which Woodrow Wilson was elected in 1912:

"We denounce the profligate waste of money wrung from the people by oppressive taxation through the lavish appropriations of recent Republican Congresses, which have kept taxes high and reduced the purchasing power of the people's toil. We demand a return to that simplicity and economy which befits a democratic government."

How much is now left of the principles declared and the promises registered at Baltimore as inducements to citizens to vote for Wilson.

Possibly it is because he and his party have been such reckless, such wholesale repudiators of the pledges of 1912 that few people remember or care to remember what pledges were made in his behalf about forty days ago at St. Louis.—New York Sun.

ADEQUATE NATIONAL DEFENSE DEMANDED

We demand adequate national defense; adequate protection on both our Western and Eastern coasts. We demand thoroughness and efficiency in both arms of the service. It seems to be plain that our regular army is too small. We are too great a country to require of our citizens who are engaged in peaceful vocations the sort of military service to which they are now called. As well insist that our citizens in this metropolis be summoned to put out fires and police the streets. We do not count it inconsistent with our liberties, or with our democratic ideals, to have an adequate police force. With a population of nearly one hundred millions we need to be surer of ourselves than to become alarmed at the prospect of having a regular army which can reasonably protect our border, and perform such other military service as may be required, in the absence of a grave emergency. I believe, further, that there should be not only a reasonable increase in the regular army, but that the first citizen reserve subject to call should be enlisted as a Federal army and trained under Federal authority.—From Mr. Hughes' speech of acceptance.

LOWER CALIFORNIA.

Rugged and Barren, It Was Once a Land of Fable and Adventure.

Lower California, once a land of fable, romance and thrilling adventure, is one of the most sparsely settled regions of the Mexican republic. It has an area corresponding in size to that of the Atlantic coast peninsula of Florida, but nearly 700 miles more coast line owing to its extreme length of 760 miles. Florida has more than fourteen times as many people.

Varying in width from thirty to 150 miles, Lower California is a rugged, barren strip of land, with a mountainous backbone largely of volcanic origin. For nearly 200 years after its discovery by the Spaniards it was thought to be an island.

The southern portion of the peninsula has some rain, but the northern section is dry and arid, producing cereals, tobacco, grapes, cassava and sugar cane only after being thoroughly irrigated. The mineral resources are valuable and varied. Gold, silver, lead, copper, salt, gypsum, turquoises, opals and garnets are profitably mined. The silver mines of La Paz were worked by the Jesuits as early as 1700, three years after the famous padre, Salvatierra, established the first permanent Spanish settlement in the land.

The magnificent Magdalena bay, on whose protected waters, forty miles long and twelve miles wide, the Pacific fleets of the American navy have conducted their target practice in recent years, was discovered by Francisco de Ulloa in 1539 while on a voyage of exploration seeking the pearls and gold of the "Amazons."

Lower California has two capitals—La Ensenada, with a population of 2,000, sixty-five miles by sea from San Diego, Cal., and La Paz, with 5,500 people, many of whom earn a livelihood from the port's pearl fisheries, which are among the most important in the world.

In addition to its pearl oysters the waters of Lower California yield sponges, tortoises, sperm and gray back whales, while in the bayous and river mouths of the east coast many alligators are to be found.

Range Finding In Air Duels.

M. Georges Prades, the French writer on air craft, indicates the difficulty of finding the range in an air duel. If you have two machines flying in opposite directions, each at a speed of 100 miles an hour, and thus having a combined speed of 200 miles an hour, the distance between the two machines varies at the rate of nearly 300 feet a second, which means, he says, that within the space of five seconds required for aiming after estimating the range the target is 1.500 feet closer than it was at first. If the trajectory of your missile is slightly too curved you will fire over the target.

Turning the Turtle.

Turtle hunting is not without excitement. The method of capture consists of the simple act of turning the turtle on its back. Once in this position it is quite helpless. Its only defense is to cover its captor with sand thrown up by the powerful front legs or flippers. These are brought into action in an instant, and woe betide the captor who has his eyes and mouth open at the moment, for the sand is hurled with great force. When turned over the captive is dragged up the beach to above high water mark, and this is no easy task, for it weighs about four hundredweight.—London Telegraph.

Black Chocolate Icing.

When a black chocolate icing is wanted and there happens to be no chocolate in the pantry cocoa can be substituted for it in the following manner: Mix [illegible] six even tablespoonfuls of cocoa with five of sugar, one of butter and three of hot water. Cook the mixture until smooth and in the right condition for spreading. Test it by putting a little in a saucer and setting the saucer on an outside window ledge or where it will cool quickly. This icing is rich and dark and not very sweet.

Sardine Fishing.

In sardine fishing there are many uncertainties. There is a twenty-eight foot rise and fall of tide in the bay of Fundy, and especially constructed wooden picket inclosures are staked out in the water to gather in the fish. A man erected an inclosure in what he supposed to be excellent fishing territory, but got nothing. He deplored his loss and for a time failed to go near it. "Why don't you seine it again?" somebody asked. "What's the use?" he replied. "Let me try it." the other persisted. "Yes, and you may have all the fish you get." The other man pulled out $1.700 worth at one haul.

Asserting Her Authority.

Mrs. Saft came in from a chat over the fence with her neighbor, and her face was hard and red.

"Come here, Tommy!" she commanded her young son. "I am going to punish you, but open the windows first."

"What for?" said Tommy, beginning to weep.

"Well, I have just heard that that cat across the road said I have no authority over you, and I want her to hear you getting a whipping. Come here, sir!"—Chicago Herald.

RICHARD BENNETT IN "DAMAGED GOODS"
A MUTUAL SPECIAL FEATURE IN SEVEN PARTS, MADE BY AMERICAN

DAMAGED GOODS RELEASED HERE

"Damaged Goods," the drama that upset the country two years ago and became the greatest stage sensation the nation has seen, is to be shown here in motion pictures.

It is announced that this remarkable picture has been booked by the Happy Hour theatre for a run of two days. The first showing will be given tomorrow.

The motion picture version of "Damaged Goods" is even more remarkable than the speaking stage play. It tells more of the strange inner mysteries of the plot than was possible on the stage.

Most remarkable of all, the same actors who presented this play in its history making run on the speaking stage will be seen in the pictures.

Richard Bennett and his whole cast of co-workers, all actors of prominence on the speaking stage, enacted the play before the cameras of the American Film Company at Santa Barbara. The most painstaking and expensive work was necessary to tell this story on the screen with the force it demanded and yet with the delicacy necessary.

The plot deals with the disease which has been held an unmentionable thing for centuries. But it is related so dramatically, so cleanly and interestingly that it must interest everyone and offend none.

The picture was shown before the most critical audience that could be gathered when the Mutual Film Corporation through which it is released gave a private advance screening of "Damaged Goods" at the Broadway theatre in New York. On that occasion 2,000 doctors, lawyers, social workers, men and women, youths and girls among them, saw the picture and sat through it in spellbound silence. Then as the closing sub-title flashed on the screen the audience broke into applause that lasted for five thundering minutes.

"The Mutual version of 'Damaged Goods' is free from the taint which inheres in most of the 'sex problem' plays. It does not parade evil that good may come of it, it does not linger over the horrid and morbid to titillate perverted tastes under the preaching of a great moral lesson.

PRODUCE SHIPPERS LOOKING FOR SHORTAGE OF CARS

Central New York shippers are beginning to have grave apprehension about their ability to secure freight cars in sufficient quantities to handle their products this fall. This view is shared by the railroad people themselves and steps have already been taken to avert what may be a famine in rolling stock. Many railroads in order to avoid it are ordering wooden cars with steel frames.

The high cost of plates coupled with a scarcity is accountable for the shortage in the steel and the return of the wooden cars. Pittsburg firms have received orders for 1,000 cars from the Western Pacific; 1,000 for the Minneapolis and St. Louis, 1,500 car bodies for the Lehigh Valley, and 1,000 hopper cars for the Delaware and Hudson.

The rush to ship wheat, ore, coal and grains before the cold weather sets in is going to make a demand on the railroads that they fear they will not be able to supply.

In the meantime thousands of cars are tied up at terminals and embargoes are effective on many roads.

LETTERS FOR JUDGE SEABURY

BEING MAILED TO VOTERS ASKING THEM TO WORK FOR HIS NOMINATION.

Practically every prominent Democratic and enrolled voter in this county is in receipt of a letter from Gilbert E. Roe, a Republican, and former law partner of United State Senator Robert M. LaFollette, urging them to work for the nomination of Justice Samuel Seabury for governor. The letter says a committee is being formed to boost him at the coming unofficial Democratic state convention at Saratoga this week.

The letter is signed by nine Republicans, nine Progressives and two Democrats, one of whom is Commissioner of Immigration Frederick C. Howe and another G. H. Brown, secretary of the seaman's union. The letter reads as follows:

"To the voters of the State of New York:

From all sections of the state is coming the demand that Judge Seabury be the next governor. This demand is not confined to any party. The independent voters of all parties —and they will be more numerous at the next election than ever before— are for Judge Seabury. No matter what party nominates Judge Seabury he will draw many thousands of independent voters from the other parties. His demonstrated ability, is independence and freedom from petty party politics and his devotion to the highest ideals of American life, as shown by his record of public service have rightfully earned for him the confidence of the whole people.

"If you desire to co-operate in the independent movement to secure the nomination and lection of Judge Seabury, will you sign one of the enclosed blanks and secure the signature of such of your friends as are in sympathy with the plan and then send the blanks without delay to Gilbert E. Roe, 55 Liberty street, New York city? From those thus signifying their desire to assist in bringing about the nomination and election of Judge Seabury a committtee will be formed."

The Republican signatories with the exception of Mr. Roe, are not well known. The Progressives include Timothy J. Healy, Michael Schapp, Robert H. Elder, William Grant Brown and Lucius Tuckerman.

Welsh and White to Battle.

Freddie Welsh's lightweight title will sway in the balance in a twenty round decision contest at Colorado Springs on Labor day. Welsh has signed to meet Charley White of Chicago to a referee's decision. The Colorado Springs promoters will give a purse of $17,500 for the bout. Welsh to get $13,500 with the option of accepting 50 per cent of the gate receipts. White will get $4,000 for his end. Welsh will also receive 51 per cent of the moving picture receipts. Billy Roche of New York city will referee.

Matty's Record With Giants.

Christy Mathewson, the new manager of the Cincinnati Reds, went to the New York Giants in 1900 from the Cincinnati club in exchange for Amos Rusie.

Matty's start with the Giants was not a brilliant one, as he lost all three games that he pitched in 1900. But in 1901 he started out on his wonderful pitching career, which enabled the New York club to win five National league pennants and a world's championship.

In his seventeen years with New York Matty won 371 games and lost 190 for a grand average of .668. His best season was in 1909, when he won twenty-five games and lost six for an average of .806.

During his career with the Giants the "old master" struck out 2,188 batters, issued 782 passes to first and 4,282 hits were made off his delivery.

Winning With Discards.

Apparently the way to win a pennant is to go out and pick up ball players other clubs can't use. Stallings won that way in 1914 with Gowdy, Rudolph, Smith, Evers and Mann. Moran accomplished the same stunt last year with Demaree, Stock, Niehoff and Whitted. Now Brooklyn is leading with Marquard, Cheney, Coombs, Mowrey, Olson, Meyers—all major league discards.

McInnis Not Batting to Form.

Stuffy McInnis, the Athletics' star first baseman, is down in the doleful dumps of a real batting slump. For six years, including last year, he has batted well above .300. This year so far he has been hitting under .300. He is not the only one of the older stars who have hit the slide this year. His former teammates of that $100,000 infield also belong to the Slump Bros.' aggregation.

Fair Drivers May Race.

Promoters of the Labor day auto races at the Sheepshead Bay speedway, New York, are seriously considering staging a race for women drivers. Mrs. Nina Boney, a fair speed demon from the south, has issued a challenge to women racers, and she hopes that a race for her sex can be arranged.

Village Changes.

Everything in the dear old village seemed the same to Jones after his absence of four years. The old church, the village pump, the ducks on the green, the old men smoking while their wives gossip—it was so restful after the rush and bustle of the city. Suddenly he missed something. "Where's Hodge's windmill?" he asked in surprise. "I can only see one, and there used to be two." The native gazed thoughtfully around, as if to verify the statement. Then he said slowly: "They pulled one down. There wasn't enough wind for two of 'em."—St. Louis Post-Dispatch.

At the Beach.

It was at the seashore and they were sitting on the beach while the moon shone beautifully on the surging waves.

"What effect does the full moon have upon the tide?" she asked, looking sweetly up into his face.

"None," he replied as he drew closer to her, "but it has considerable on those who aren't tied."

No Faith In Presentiments.

"Tony," said a British officer to his soldier servant, "something tells me that I shall never come back alive. I seem to have a presentiment that way." "Then take no heed of it, sir," responded the servant. "Them presentiments is frauds. A cousin of mine had one once, and it treated him very badly. It was just like the one that's troublin' you now, sir. He felt sure that he'd be killed out in Egypt, so he divided his savings between his sweetheart and his bosom chum and went out to be shot. But never a scratch did he get." "And what happened when he returned home? Did they give him back his money?" "Not a farden, sir. They'd been and got married while he was away, and they'd set up housekeeping with the money."—Toronto Sun.

Believe with all your heart that you will do what you were made to do. Never for an instant harbor a doubt of this. Drive it out of your mind if it seeks entrance. Water and Greens For Chicks

During the spells of hot weather the drinking water for chicks should be replenished at least twice a day. Hot, stale water is not appetizing and will have the same sickening effect upon fowls as it will upon mankind. Unless they consume plenty of water the birds will not only suffer greatly from the heat, but will be unable to contribute much to the summer egg yield.

Bad odors arise with double strength on hot days, especially on premises that are not kept clean. Not only should the droppings be frequently gathered, but disinfectants must be employed. Bad odors harbor disease germs, and so long as they are present the health of the flock is kept in jeopardy. Another fruitful source of disease is unclean drinking vessels. Once a week they should have a good cleaning. A small lump of lime constantly kept in the vessel will assist greatly in purifying the drinking water.

During hot spells plenty of green food should be given and the quantity of heating food reduced. Green food has a medicinal effect. It keeps the bowels in good shape and it prevents scrofula taints of the blood. Fowls enjoy greens best in the morning. It seems to be a bracer for them, and it is then that it apparently does them the most good.

Orchard and Garden

Late lettuce, radishes and endive may be sown now.

Keep the cauliflower leaves tied over the heads if you want clean, white, marketable heads.

Keep the new strawberry beds clean of weeds and let the plants produce new runners.

The effect of spraying is noticeable now in clean apples and plums. It pays to spray.

Early celery is best blanched with paper or boards. It is more apt to decay if earth is used. Earth is best to blanch late celery.

Begin to save seed of shrubs, trees and perennials for next year's planting. Some may be planted now, and they will bloom next year.

HERE'S TO CAMPERS.

How to Build a Campfire For Cooking Purposes.

In the Woman's Home Companion are the following directions for building a camp fire:

If you add the contents of a small bag of charcoal to your wood fire as soon as it has a good start the fire burns with a steady glow conducive to culinary success.

We have a way of building a fire which has proved most satisfactory. With a stick or flat stone dig a trench about eighteen inches long and four inches in depth and width. Build the fire in this, placing two flat stones across the top, one for the frying pan and the other for the kettle. Bacon can be broiled by holding it on the ends of green pointed sticks. Potatoes, corn and apples can be roasted in the same way. One of the chief charms of this fire is that there is little danger of its spreading. Then, too, it can be easily extinguished. Be sure to carry matches and an old newspaper to start the blaze.

How to Mend the Screens Without Hailing a Carpenter.

The broken door or window screen is an eyesore all summer if it is left unmended or the repairing is done clumsily. The neatest way to mend the screen is to cut a piece of wire netting about three inches larger than the hole. Remove the wires around the edge of the patch for half an inch or more, like drawing away the threads from a piece of linen. Bend the resulting prongs at right angles and fit the patch in place with the wire ends sticking through the screen. Press the patch flat against the larger surface, then on the other side press the ends back to their original position. This secures the patch.

How to Set Hooks In Hardwood Without Splitting It.

To put hooks in hardwood first make a hole with a small gimlet; then slip the handle of a knife or any small steel article through the hook and turn it until it is secure in the wood.

REFUSED AN ADJUSTMENT

IN THE THREATENED NATION WIDE RAILROAD STRIKE.

New York, August 10 (Special)—The National Conference Committee of the Railways, which has represented the railroads of the country in their negotiations with the unions of train service employes, today asked the Federal Board of Mediation and Conciliation to offer its services in the matter in order to avoid the nation-wide strike threatened by the unions.

This request was made after the leaders of the train employes' unions had refused to join the roads in a request for mediation by the Federal Board.

The proposal which the representatives of the railways submitted to the unions at the conference this morning was as follows:

The National Conference Committee of the Railways has again given most careful consideration to the matters in controversy between us and to all that has been said in our various conferences which began on June first. We have also carefully considered the serious situation presented by the result of the strike vote of employees and the grave responsibility which rests on both parties to the conference to exhaust every honorable means to avoid the public injury which must inevitably result should you decide to exercise the power which the strike vote has placed in your hands.

After such consideration, it is our judgment that the proposals which the men have supported by their vote involve such extraordinary changes in operating methods and such radical revisions in established bases of compensation as to make it apparent that there is little probability of our being able to harmonize our differences of opinion unless this result can be brought about through the Federal Board of Mediation and Conciliation, which was created to assist the parties in just such circumstances as now confront us.

The National Conference Committee of the Railways is as sincerely anxious as your Committee can be to reach some amicable adjustment of the matters involved in the present controversy, but we are convinved that in the end we shall have to invoke the friendly offices of the Federal Board of Mediation. The unbroken experience of the past ten years sustains us in this view. During that period in practically no large concerted movement has a Conference Committee of Managers and a Committee of your representatives ever been able to reach a final and complete adjustment of the matters in controversy between them, until after they had invoked the provisions of the Federal Mediation Law. It seems to us that all the considerations that have existed in former controversies to prevent a settlement being reached by direct negotiations are present in an accentuated form in the present case.

It is not open to question that whatever we can do by direct negotiations, we can also do just as quickly and as effectively through Mediation; and experience has demonstrated that a common ground could be reached through the Mediators in cases where the parties have been wholly unable to reach such common ground through direct negotiations.

Accordingly we propose that you join with us in an application to the United States Board of Mediation and Conciliation and invoke its services for the purpose of bringing about an amicable adjustment of the controversy.

Speaking for the unions, A. B. Garretson of the Order of Railway Conductors, refused to join in this request and said that the union leaders would give their answer as to whether or not they would accept mediation to the representatives of the Federal Government when their services were offered.

LANDLORDS MUST MAKE REPORTS TO STATE DEPARTMENT OF HEALTH.

Lodging house and hotel proprietors throughout the state will soon receive letters from the State Department of Health, calling their attention to rule five of the state's sanitary code which requires the proprietors of all hotels, lodging houses, boarding places and other places where people are housed, to report immediately to health officers all facts concerning a person who is believed to be suffering from a communicable disease.

The circular letter will also call attention to regulation for the control of infantile paralysis, which requires hotel proprietors and boarding housekeepers and others to report the name and address of all children under the age of fifteen arriving at their establishment from another city or town in which infantile paralysis has broken out.

State Commissioner of Health Biggs says that in view of the epidemic that is raging in Greater New York, it is all important that children fleeing from there to other communities shall be kept separate from others and under constant observation so that they may receive treatment as soon as they develop any signs of the disease.

POSTAL DEPARTMENT CANNOT GET WHITE PAPER FOR ENVELOPES.

Post office authorities at Washington have sent out instructions to postmasters all over the country to the effect that owing to the shortage of paper and the heavy demand for the heavy stamped No. 8 envelopes that the department could not get the white paper nor secure the skilled labor, that it would temporarily curtail the issue of this size.

It added that if the business concerns and the general public would use No. 7 or No. 9 instead for the present that it is believed that they would answer and it would greatly facilitate matters.

There is only a slight difference in the size of the three types of envelopes.

SYRACUSE YOUTH DIES FROM INFANTILE PARALYSIS

Syracuse, August 10—Dorr Hammond, seventeen year old son of Fred Hammond, clerk of the Assembly, died yesterday afternoon at Lake Bonaparte from infantile paralysis.

The Hammond family have been at the summer resort for five or six weeks. The young man became ill last week and the case was at first believed to be typhoid fever. As his condition grew worse other physicians were summoned and yesterday it was diagnosed as paralysis. He sank rapidly during the day and died late in the afternoon.

Previous to his illness young Hammond had mingled freely with the younger folk at Lake Bonaparte, mixing freely with guests at the hotels and attending dances and other entertainments. Drastic measures it is said will be taken to prevent the spread of the malady in that vicinity.

The dead youth was a sophomore at Central High School, this city.

HOW PARSON BROWN HELPED FARMERS

Studied Up Life History of Hessian Fly and Found Preventive Measures Advocated By U. S. Department of Agriculture

"Mary, I've simply got to find out what the Hessian Fly is and what it does and why all the farmers are continually talking about it without seeming to do anything else," said Parson Brown to his wife, the other evening as he returned from a trip through the country-side. "I'm going to write to the Department of Agriculture and the state experiment station and see if I cannot find out about the pest."

The letters were sent and a few days later several bulletins were received by the Parson, who took them into his study and read them thoroughly several times. He learned the habits of the Fly, that the eggs hatch in the late fall, and that the young must have tender young wheat plants upon which to feed and deposit themselves, else they die. Finally in Farmers' Bulletin 640, of the U. S. Department of Agriculture, he read the following statement:

"All practical measures to combat the fly must necessarily be in the nature of preventatives, looking (1) to the elimination of the pest in the young plants in the fall, and (2) to the increasing of the vigor of the young plants in order to enable them to counteract the insect's efforts when present. Under the first come late sowing, rotation of crops, burning of the old stubble, and the destruction of volunteer wheat. Under the second should be classed the enrichment of the soil, its thorough preparation, and selecting and properly sowing the best seed."

In the same bulletin, he found a discussion of the value of some quick acting fertilizer as a preventive measure. The second statement was the following:

"The application broadcast of some quick acting fertilizer containing a large percentage of phosphate (phosphorus) made as soon as general infestation is apparent will cause the plants to tiller more freely and give them sufficient vigor to withstand the winter and thus increase the number of healthy stems the following spring. . . . While it may seem 'far fetched' to bring forward as a pre-preventive measure the enrichment of the soil, a fertile soil will produce plants that will withstand with little injury attacks that will prove disastrous to plants growing on an impoverished or thin soil. . . . It is also on the thin or impoverished soils that the difficulty of sowing late enough to evade the fall attack and at the same time secure a growth sufficient to withstand the winter is encountered, and whatever can be done to obviate this difficulty will constitute a preventive measure."

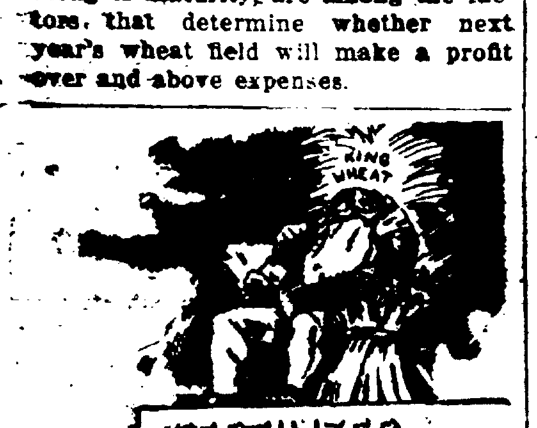
"Mary, I've not only found out about the Hessian Fly, but I've found out how the Government advises that the pest be combatted, and I'm going to get a supply of these bulletins and put the proposition up to the farmers in this community," said Parson Brown. So during the next week, he spent much of his time talking Hessian Fly to the farmers, and the indications are that his work is going to obtain more and better wheat per acre in that county.

BEAT YOUR WHEAT YIELDS!

FARMERS RAISING OVER 30 BUSHELS PER ACRE PROFIT FROM THEIR SEASON'S WORK.

The indicated average yield of wheat for 1916 is reported by the United States Department of Agriculture to be only 14.1 bushels per acre compared with 16.9 bushels per acre last year. Nine million less acres are in wheat and a decrease in total yield of three hundred million bushels less than last year is predicted. Wheat is a high priced crop and every bushel counts.

Weather conditions during the remainder of the current season will have an effect upon the yields. The early handling of the crop, including the plowing, preparation of the seed bed, the kind of seed used, the attention given to the fertility of the soil, and to the supplying of plantfood to give the crop a good start and carry it along to maturity, are among the factors that determine whether next year's wheat field will make a profit over and above expenses.



LIVE STOCK NOTES.

The young colt and the brood mare will do well to have a little bran in their rations.

A little pig, just like a growing plant, needs sunshine. In both cases it seems to be a sort of tonic that makes the best development possible.

A flock should be so handled that the sheep will follow the caretaker anywhere he may lead them.

No horse can do a maximum amount of work if he has poor feet or if his feet are not kept in good condition.

Salt, hardwood ashes and charcoal are ideal to keep in hog pasture, and if there is any other one thing needed it is pure water.

Turn the sheep on the lawn when the grass needs clipping and you will have no need for a lawn mower.

COTTONSEED MEAL FOR BEEF FATTENING

The price a feeder can afford to pay for cottonseed meal or oilmeal depends upon the other feeds available and the ability of the man to get results with these high priced feeds. Careful tests at the Missouri agricultural experiment station seem to indicate that the two feeds are of almost equal value, ton for ton, in fattening two-year-old steers, but oilmeal is to be preferred for cows if available at the same price, says H. O. Allison.

Although theoretically fed largely for the protein or muscle forming material which they contain, these concentrates have proved of very great value in increasing the digestion coefficient. In other words, they give the animal the power to get more out of the feed consumed. The flow of digestive juices is stimulated, and an effect is secured which even such succulent material as silage could not equal. In fact, Missouri experiment station bulletin 112, entitled "Corn Silage For Fattening Two-year-old Steers," indicates that both should be included in the ration unless the protein can be supplied in some such home grown farm product as alfalfa, clover, cowpeas or soy beans.

American breeders of the Aberdeen-Angus cattle have given much attention to early maturity, with the result that this breed now matures as early as any other. When matured and fattened they show form almost always symmetrical and not patchy. The Angus steers have won many prizes at the international show. The bull shown is an Aberdeen-Angus.

Other factors which influence the relative value of nitrogenous concentrates in rations for fattening cattle include the desirability of rapid gains, quick finish, the extra high finish and economical gains near the close of a long feeding period and the market price for feed and cattle. Cottonseed meal stimulates the appetite, thereby inducing rapid gains and a quick finish as well as assisting in maintaining the appetite when the animals are in high condition. It is also true when the prices of feeds and cattle are high that more efficient rations show a greater commercial advantage than when prices are low.

Lands Suited to Sheep.

Sheep do best on high, dry land—that is, on hard soiled land, where the grasses adapted to sheep are produced naturally or are easily introduced by cultivation. The short grasses or such as usually are termed pasture grasses are essential to the well being of the sheep. Cattle and horses will thrive and do well on hay grasses, on wet land grasses, tall grasses, but with the sheep it is different. They depend on the short growth, dry soil pasture grasses. It is important that they be not confined to wet, soft, boggy pastures. The sheep inclines to foot scald, sore feet and finally foot rot where the hoof is constantly under the influence of moisture in the soil.

Sheep Manure Valuable.

Sheep manure is one of the most valuable farm manures and if properly handled will greatly increase soil fertility. Animals on pasture scatter the manure over the land so that the maximum fertility is obtained. They spend the night on high, dry land, and in this way the poor soil is made profitable. Barren fields have been made productive by sheep.

Sheep on the Farm.

Barren fields are made productive and waste material in stubble fields, fence corners and along roadsides is converted into a marketable product by sheep, points out A. M. Paterson, instructor in animal husbandry in the Kansas State Agricultural college.

SEED LATE AND FEED WHEAT TO FIGHT FLY

Professor Grantham of Delaware Experiment Station Gives Methods to Prevent Damage and Secure Large Yiels.

Late seeding of wheat has been recommended as the only practical method of combatting the Hessian Fly. It has been demonstrated without a doubt that this is the only way the farmer can get at the problem. However, late seeding means that the crop is likely to go into the winter in a less vigorous condition than if sown at the normal time. In order to counteract this, some fertilizer should be used to cause the plants to grow more rapidly, even though late planted.

Experiments at the various stations have shown that late seeding will be accompanied by good yields if the crop is handled in such a way as to make a good covering for the land before the winter sets in. This can be accomplished only by having the land in excellent condition of fertility as regards plant food. Early plowing followed by frequent harrowings will often put the soil in a condition that will supply sufficient plant food to enable the crop to make rapid growth. However, this can only be done on land that is well supplied with organic matter and naturally fertile. In other cases, a liberal supply of available plantfood in the form of commercial fertilizers should be used.

Experiments by the writer have shown that a difference of two or three weeks in the time of seeding may result in equally good results, providing fertilizers are used with the late sown wheat. This is a point in wheat culture that should not be lost sight of by the farmers, as it means that the Hessian Fly can be avoided by late seeding, also that the late seeding will be accompanied by good yields if the proper fertilizers are used.—A. E. Grantham, Agronomist, Delaware Experiment Station, in the Practical Farmer.

Double Your Profits From Wheat

Millers pay more per bushel for high quality wheat than they do for that which only grades number four or five, according to a Chicago Board of Trade Members. Ohio Experiment Station Bulletin 243 shows that high quality wheat and large yields go together, thus giving the farmer double profits. The experiments reported in Bulletin 243 show a yield of 3.45 bushels of wheat per acre with 51% plump and 49 per cent shriveled kernels, where no fertilizer was used, against a yield of as high as 34.15 bushels per acre of which 94 per cent of the kernels were plump and but 6 per cent shriveled when the wheat was fertilized.

From 300 to 500 pounds to the acre of a suitable wheat fertilizer produces wheat that has nearly 100 per cent plump, heavy kernels and at the same time increases the yield. This means double profits on the money invested in fertilizers as there are more bushels of wheat grading No. 1 or 2 instead of No. 4 or 5, or lower.

Found Method By Accident

A farmer who accidentally stumbled upon the way to combot the Hessian Fly, is Oscar P. Sell, of Berks county, Pa. Three years ago, he found that an application of chicken manure to a portion of his field not only brought a larger yield, but also reduced and almost eliminated Hessian Fly damage. The following season he repeated his experiment using a fertilizer and manure, and found the same results. Last year he tried the same system for the third time and is now convinced that he will have very little trouble in the future from the Hessian Fly.

Making Maximum of Profit

What kind of fertilizer will you use on your wheat this fall? Myron A. Bachtell, soil specialist for the Agricultural College Extension Service, O State University, replies to the inquiries of farmers by advocating the use of a 3—12 mixture (3 per cent. nitrogen and 12 per cent. phosphoric acid) at the rate of from 200 to 300 pounds per acre where no manure is added to the soil. Where clover sod has been turned under for wheat or where a heavy application of manure is added the nitrogen may be omitted. Early plowing with a carefully prepared seed bed will aid the fertilizers in producing the maximum of profit, he states.

A comparison of the rows on either side with the central one in the above wheat field scene is a convincing argument that fertilizers pay. More fertilizers are used intelligently each year because the results secured have been found by experience to amply justify the expenditure.

Fighting The Hessian Fly

The Life of the Hessian Fly

The life history of the Hessian Fly is shown above. The life of the adult fly is but a few days, probably but a week or less, and the great mass of the flies will appear at about the same time. If the wheat is sown after the flies appear by the time the wheat is up they will be gone and the plants escape the attacks of the fly.

Experiment Stations urge you to sow wheat late in order to escape the Hessian Fly. Experience has taught you that the best yields are secured from plants that enter the winter with strong, healthy growth.

Solve This Dilemma by seeding late and hastening the fall growth by the use of 200 to 400 pounds of fertilizer containing 2% to 3% of available ammonia. Acid phosphate alone will not give the necessary, quick, strong, healthy growth. If the fly does not happen to be present this year, the good effects upon both the wheat and the grass seeded with the wheat will repay many times the cost of the added ammonia. You cannot afford to be without this Fly Insurance.

SETTLES ELECTION ARGUMENTS INSTANTLY

If you want to know how the political "machine" works; if you want to know the "strength" of each state; if you want to know how your state and other states have voted during the past twenty-five or thirty years—in other words, if you want to know a hundred and one different things about politics that the "other fellow" doesn't know, you have only to secure a copy of "The Presidency of the United States" and all of this desirable information will be yours.

This little book has been compiled by experts at great expense, and the information it contains is absolutely reliable and strictly non-partisan. It is not only intensely interesting but has a distinct educational value that makes it desirable for school children as well as for grown-ups.

"The Presidency of the United States" will be used by thousands of people this year as a quick and ready reference for information on all past and present elections, and as "final authority" for settling all election arguments and disputes.

The ability to answer correctly the questions this book contains indicates a more intimate knowledge of past history and current events than is possessed by the average citizen. Many a surprise is in store for anyone who thinks to do so without "brushing up."

We were fortunate in securing a supply of these books for immediate delivery. If you want one you can secure a copy at this office for "only ten cents."

"Be sure you are right—then go ahead," was the favorite saying of old David Crockett. Those who believe in this motto will find in "The Presidency of the United States" an abundant supply of historical facts and non-partisan information upon which to base their statements and arguments during the 1916 presidential campaign.

WOMEN PROGRESS

Foresee Emancipation of Sex as Result of War.

LEARNING MEN'S TRADES

Competition Between Male and Female Labor Expected After Conflict Look For Transformation of Household to Meet Condition.

Paris.—"Feminism is making great strides during the war," says Eugene Brieux, member of the French academy, discussing the future of the women of France. He predicts "a violent phase in the war of sexes" when the soldiers come home.

"Competition between male and female labor will be fierce," according to M. Brieux, and he says "women will abandon the career of housewife, while young girls, having learned how to provide for themselves, will no longer look to man as a prospective protector."

Marcel Prevost, another academician, expects the women who have learned to use the lathe making projectiles will turn out parts of automobiles and all kinds of machinery after the war.

Dr. Madeleine Pelletier, one of the leading French suffragettes, who says she despaired of feminism before the war, now thinks the necessities of life are going to impose what years of propaganda failed to effect—the emancipation of women.

As to domestic life, Mme. Pelletier looks for a complete transformation of the household to put it in accord with new conditions.

"Dirty dishes will be laid out on the doormat to be taken away by specialists, who will deposit them cleaned in the same place," she says. "Stockings will be darned by other specialists, leaving the women of the family to earn the price of two pairs in the time they would take to stop up the holes of one. Cooking as well as dishwashing will be done by specialists, while the lady of the house concentrates her attention upon the shop or the factory."

Mme. Pelletier as well as the academicians neglects the question as to what will become of the children. "It will be quite necessary for France to think of the children, though," writes a woman temporarily working at the lathe. "Future generations," she points out, "must make up the wastage of war in human life, and nothing could be more inopportune now than encouragement of the separation of woman from the home and the smothering of family sentiment."

BULL CHASES AUTO.

Owner Drove Machine Around a Field Until Animal Was Tired.

Federalsburg, Md.—Twiford Williams, a farmer living near here, had a thrilling experience with an infuriated bull. Williams ran his motor car into a field to look over the bull which he was contemplating buying. The bull made a dash for the machine.

Williams quickly turned on all the power the car contained and the machine shot away at a fifty mile an hour clip, but when it reached the gate leading out of the field Williams could not make the turn at such high speed.

The bull chased him around the field repeatedly and made desperate attempts to head off the car, but Williams, by carefully manipulating the steering wheel, managed to elude the beast, which finally became tired and gave the frightened man a chance to escape through the gate.

MADE FISH COOL; HOOKED 'EM.

Dropped Ice in Weeds, and in Short Time Captured Bass.

Rochester, N. Y.—Hibbard Raymond of the Lake Keuka Fishing club has discovered a new way to catch black bass in hot weather.

"Bass feel the hot weather as much as we do," he said, "so I planned to make a place for them to cool off in and then catch them out of it.

"I took a cake of ice and dropped it in the weeds in the rocky cove off Fish point. Two hours later I drifted by the spot with golden shiners on my hooks and captured two bass, one two and one-half and the other three pounds. I wheeled around and snagged a four pounder. A few minutes later I had caught eight nice bass. The cool water is refreshing to the bass and sharpens their appetites."

PLOWS UP BOX OF COINS.

A Thousand Dollars in Silver Found on Louisiana Farm.

Ruston, La.—While John W. Skinner, a farmer of this section, was plowing his field the blade of his plow struck an old iron box, which burst open, revealing more than $1,000 in old silver coin.

The money was brought here and deposited in a bank. It is mostly of foreign mintage, and some of the pieces are 139 years old. The identity of the original owner could not be traced.

Lightning Shatters a Clock.

Tiffin, O.—A bolt of lightning struck the chimney of the H. W. McFerren house in Tiffin during a heavy electrical storm recently. The bolt did not disturb either the brick or the plaster but followed the chimney to the interior of the house, where it struck a clock on a mantelpiece and scattered the wheels and other workings all over the floor. There was no other damage.

new fall favorites—a navy gaberdine richly braided with soutache. The open sides give a panel effect that is trimmed with novelty buttons.

BUTTON VARIATIONS.

Advance Tips About the Kind and Uses of Fall Fasteners.

Buttons are not at all left in the lurch because of the amount of hand work used. In fact, they serve to accentuate the special feature of the waist, coat or suit they adorn. Buttons increase the importance of pockets, belts and capes and give themselves a chance to assume extraordinary shapes and sizes.

Because of the vogue for dark suits with white hat, shoes or gaiters, white ivory buttons are allowed. Sometimes they are ringed with black or a fashionable color, sometimes they have a pearl center, but all of them are light in weight, and this accounts for at least part of their popularity. They are also made on dark taffeta dresses.

Those used on coats and suits are more conservative, mushroom and saucer shapes being the most popular. Balls, squares and cubes are also employed, as well as acorns.

Pearl buttons come in all sizes and shapes, from the large ball buttons appropriate for novelty suits and the flat style for separate skirts to the tiny ones for shirt waists. Heavy corded materials make use of ribbed buttons.

Checked suits may be thanked for the plaid and plaid checked buttons, as well as the black and white effects in combination with white rims.

White cotton crochet buttons, especially the tiny ones for blouses, are still suitable.

Among the new colors shown is a French gray button to match the shade now so popular in dresses. A ring of black is often used to enhance its beauty.

The Love of Books.

Baroness Bettina von Hutton, the well known novelist who is an American woman by birth, says:

"What a blessing it is to love books. Everybody must love something, and I know of no objects of love that give such substantial and unfailing returns as books and gardens. And how easy it would have been to come into the world without this, and possessed instead of an all consuming passion, say, for hats, perpetually raging round my empty soul. I feel I owe my forefathers a debt of gratitude, for I suppose the explanation is that they, too, did not care for hats."

Sweet Pickles.

One peck green tomatoes sprinkled with salt; when sliced, let stand overnight to make sweet pickles. Drain off the water and put in a kettle with sufficient vinegar to cover. Add one-half pound sugar, one-half cupful white mustard, twelve green peppers and ten onions chopped fine. Put in a bag two ounces of cloves, one-half ounce allspice and a little mace. Boil slowly three hours.

Hats With a Front Flare.

There is a strong tendency toward the front flare in the new transparent and straw hats. While this brim line is not becoming to many faces, it can be so arranged that the flare comes at one side or tip tilted. A bit of soft frizzed braid or a twist of silk help also to relieve the severity.

Cherry Sauce For Ice Cream.

Melt a cupful of sugar and pour it boiling hot over two cupfuls of pitted cherries. Cool and serve with vanilla ice cream.

The New Note For Autumn

One of the advance fall models in street costumes developed in rich brown broadcloth and trimmed with moire and braid.

When one sees velvet hats of new vintage on the fashionable thoroughfares and advance models in furs in exclusive shops, the next thing to do is look for the first hints in Autumn costumes. Away and ahead of future rivals this costume has put in an appearance. It is fashioned of handsome broadcloth in the rich shade of brown which is to be so fashionable and trimmed with moire silk and braid. The back gore of the gathered skirt is cut in one with the back of the waist and with the sides and front, may be perforated for shorter length to be worn as a tunic. In medium size the costume requires 4¼ yards 54-inch material, with 1⅛ yard lining 36 inches wide for front and back.

The lining should be of satin taffeta and is folded in half so that the two sections of the pattern may be placed upon it, as shown in the cutting guide.

The broadcloth is folded carefully in half for the arrangement of the costume sections. The belt is placed into position first, directly on the lengthwise fold with the lower sleeve section next to it, on a lengthwise thread. The blouse back and back gore comes next, laid on the fold of broadcloth followed by the front gore of the skirt, arranged in the same way. The collar is sandwiched between sections "E" and "G." Along the upper row are laid the side gore of the skirt, the cuff, front of the waist, upper sleeve section and facing, all on a lengthwise thread of the material.

If made of velours or plush this costume may be used until late in the season without an extra wrap. It is equally charming, however, of the soft, shimmering light materials.

The lines of such a frock may be practically straight, with or without belting that does not draw the frock ino the figure. There are many such models in serge, but there are even more that, while not fitted or boned, are brought in a little at the waist line by a very narrow waistband or belt or merely by a seam, and blouse just enough for becomingness without sacrifice of trimness.

A Pious Little Frock

Checked gingham and lawn join hands in the construction of this frock for girls and juniors. The sectional circular collar is an item of importance, being made of hemstitched lawn.

For the little girl on her best behavior there is this correspondingly pious frock of checked muslin trimmed with white collar and cuffs. The collar is both sectional and circular, with the front and back of waist gathered to the yoke. The skirt is a one-piece affair and may be side-plaited or gathered. In medium size the model requires 3¼ yards 36-inch gingham, with 1 yard of white lawn for the trimming.

The systematic way of going about the making of the dress is to start with the waist. Hem the front first then gather the upper edges of front and back. Turn under lower edges of front and back gores on slot perforations and lap on gathered edges of front and back. Close underarm and shoulder seams as notched, lap right front on left and stitch lower edge to position. Gather lower edge of waist between double "TT" perforations. Close back seam of belt and sew to waist. Next turn under the lower edges of the 3 collar sections on small "o" perforations. Lap upper section on the center section, and lap the center section on the lower section, notches and edges underneath even: stitch ½ inch from folded edges easing any fulness underneath. If desired, the lower section may be omitted. Sew collar to neck edge, notches and center-backs even.

Gather the lower edge of the sleeve next and close seam of sleeveband as notch; sew to sleeve, then close the sleeve seam. Sew in armhole, small "o" perforation at shoulder seam.

Now, take the skirt and close back seam, then hem the lower edge. Form plaits, creasing on lines of slot perforations; bring folded edge near centerback to the seam and bring remaining folded edges to corresponding small "o" perforations, press plaits. Sew skirt to lower edge of belt, center-fronts and center-backs even.

Finally the belt is adjusted to position. This may be of ribbon or linen, the latter being preferable for tub materials.

A WILD MAN IN WEEDSPORT

GREAT EXCITEMENT PREVAILED IN THE QUIET LITTLE TOWN WHEN "BAD BEN" TURNED LOOSE.

Weedsport, N. Y., August 10—Trey closed the blinds and dove into the cyclone cellars in this town yesterday afternoon all along Main street when "Bad Ben" Timson, from Rochester, went on a rampage and held the business portion of the village in abject terror for half an hour against all comers. Nothing like it has been seen in this place since the good old canal days when they used to engage fighting room in advance.

Timson is a stranger in Weedsport; that is, he was a stranger, but they know a lot about him now. It took six men to round him up and land him in the village lock up and when they had him safely behind the lock and bars he ripped things up the back in a manner that threatened the very lock up itself. He went through the best cell in the cooler like a bull pup through a lace curtain and when he had finished with the cell furnishings he tried to tip over the coop. He did not quite accomplish this, but it is said around the village that they had to prop up the rear end.

Where Timson came from or why is not known to the natives hereabouts. The things that the village authorities are worrying about is how they can get him out of Weedsport and the town of Brutus. He is just as welcome in this place as poison ivy at a Sunday School picnic, Constable Maul says that as a nut Ben would win first prize in a lunatic asylum without letting out a single yell.

About the first thing that was particularly noticeable about Ben was a wild and blood curdling screech that he emitted down the street somewhere and then he appeared in full view out in the middle of the road in a high state of animation.

In one hand he carried a burglar's dark lantern and in the other a screw driver and a monkey wrench that any self respecting safe would be ashamed to be opened with. It wasn't a modern set of yegg tools, but it added a lot to Ben's general appearance as a first class nut from the violent ward.

He was wild, there wasn't any question about it, and he was threatening, so threatening that there was considerable compunction on the part of the citizenship generally to try and check his onward drive through the street. In fact the street became deserted immediately and Ben was in complete mastery of the position, and had things all his own way.

He had traversed about the length of the street and the time had come when it was evident that a brain like his, hit by the sun, might conceive any one of a thousand things that might ruffle and upset the quiet and dignity of any community, when Constable Maul was called upon to perform his sworn duty. Constable Maul took one look at Ben, and was immediately convinced that pinching Ben was not exactly a one man job, so he went for reinforcements.

He drafted five others. They went forth cautiously, but nevertheless forth, and after some manoeuvring succeeded in generally surrounding Ben with just enough open spots at intervals to allow him to get through without serious trouble if he really went mad, but he calmed somewhat and they lugged him to the lock up, where he was securely locked and bolted down.

Inside the cell Ben finally realized that he was considerably circumscribed and he prepared for an onslaught. He ripped off his clothes, tore them into shreds and wrecked what meagre cell furniture there was on hand. He made the bed look like odds and ends from a garret cleaning and then tried to shake the place down.

Today he was somewhat quieter. The town officials late today bought him a new suit and considered means of getting rid of him. The village of Weedsport doesn't want him; the town of Brutus refuses to have him unloaded on its cares and the county hospital positively refuses to have anything to do with the case. Superintendent of the Poor Arthur Smith opines he belongs to Monroe county, so just what will be done with Ben remains to be seen.

Ben refuses to help out the authorities in any manner besides saying he is "Bad Ben" Timson, of Rochester, N. Y.

BIG FAIR IS NOW ASSURED

MANY NEW AND NOVEL ATTRACTIONS WILL BE SHOWN NEXT WEEK.

Wednesday, the sixteenth will be set aside as Governor's day in the Oswego County fair program. Invitations were sent out last week to Governor Charles S. Whitman, Speaker T. C. Sweet and Francis M. Hugo, Secretary of State. Their acceptances have all been received and speeches will be made by these dignitaries. The judge's stand on the race track will be the platform from which these speakers will orate. This is an additional feature, for not in a long time have we been honored by the Governor's presence.

Notification has also been received from the New York Jockey Club that they will offer a fifty dollar premium. This means that with the thirty-six horses which they have scattered throughout the state at the rate of one per county, Fulton is to be honored by one of the best. "Barleythorp" an English thoroughbred stallion will be shown. He is probably one of the best in the country and is under the supervision of Dell Ware, of Hannibal.

The mid way too is to have many new additions, including the largest, fattest and smallest people in the world. Many new side shows have been booked and one of the most successful years is assured.

The auto display has already monopolized the main building and it has become necessary for the officials to pitch a tent for those desiring more space for auto exhibits.

An experienced balloonist will make an ascent and parachute drop every day. The trained bear "Big Jim" will also be shown in his nearly human stunts. This bear possesses a wonderful brain and it is surprising to witness his tricks.

Boy Injured.

Carlisle Pomeroy was seriously hurt this afternoon while crossing the street. Carlisle, who had been playing with neighboring children started to cross the street to go home. An Italian riding a bicycle going south along East First street between State and Pratt did not see the little fellow and crashed into him. The little fellow was knocked unconscious and it was found necessary to call Dr. G. G. Whittaker. A severe bruise on the right temple and a severe shaking up were the results.

NEW RELIGIOUS SECT HAS INVADED FULTON

A house boat containing a party of non-sectarian missionists have docked at the foot of Rochester street hill. The organization is known as the Begiddo Mission and came from Rochester.

Years ago the organization was founded by the Rev. L. I. Nichols, who has made a complete study of the Bible. He had built for the purpose of distributing small religious pamphlets, a large boat sailing on the Mississippi and Ohio rivers. This boat carried 1,000 people. Thirteen years ago they moved to Rochester, where they made their headquarters. A host of deaconesses are employed in this work.

The belief of the society is at the second coming of Christ there will be established equity and righteousness for all. Fully two hundred are numbered within their ranks.

There are in the boat five young men, who are Captain B. W. Simmons, Ruey Hughes, Fred Lowe, Joseph Stevens and Kenneth Flowerday. A thorough canvass is being made of the city in an attempt to sell the pamphlets.

DAN DARLEIGH AND FATHER VISIT THEIR NATIVE TOWN

Daniel Darleigh, manager of the Quirk Theatre, has returned from a three days' trip to Plattsburg, Steuben County. Dan stated that he was accompanied by his father, Edmond Darleigh, who is eighty-three years old. "Some walker," says Dan. "I thought that I was there when it came to hiking, but my father hung the hot weather sign on me." Platsburg is the birthplace of both father and son and a most interesting trip was experienced.

ORLEANS COUNTY SETTLERS HELD ANNUAL PICNIC

The Orleans county settlers enjoyed their anual picnic yesterday afternoon at the Fair grounds. About one hundred and fifty of these people have now located within the proximity of Fulton and yesterday a get together outing was held. Athletic events took place, a ball game was staged between the RowleeDistin team and the Orleans county team, the former winning by the narrow margin of one run.

The following officers were elected for the ensuing year. Mr. John Buckner, president; Ruth Baldwin, treasurer; Pearl Lenton, secretary. This is to be an annual occasion.

PLACING GAUGES IN RIVER

Men From State Office Establish Headquarters at Fulton During Survey of Water,

Engineers Carl F. Hopstein, Guy Moulton, Jr., and F. G. McMahon, of the barge canal engineers office in Syracuse, were here today, looking over the water levels, with a view of establishing water gauges along the canal. These gauges are to regulate the water, that there may always be an adequate supply on hand for locking purposes.

Owing to the heavy spring rains, the water in the river has been higher this summer than in several years past. Usually in the latter part of May the water was drawn so low in the levels by the locking of boats and the operations of the mills along the river that the crest of the dams has been reached. But this condition did not occur this year until about a week ago.

The gauges will be placed in different sections of the river, to determine from day to day the supply of water that can be used for canal purposes.

The engineers are stopping at the Clark House and expect to be engaged in the work in this section for several days. They are now working in the city.

ROWLEE—DISTIN PICNIC

About one hundred and fifty clansmen atended the Rowlee-Distin picnic at the Fair grounds yesterday. John Distin was president of the event this year.

A ball game, as usual, was played between the married men and single men, the latter winning by a narrow margin. Races were held and proved very interesting. Dinner was served in the dining hall.

Lewis Ive was eleceted president and Miss Earl Rowlee, secretary for the ensuing year and a larger event is sure to come. It has been the custom of this family to hold an annual outing and for the past forty years they have been enjoyed.

Detained at Ellis Island.

News has been received that Aristidez Rizon, brother and cousin of Alexander Rizon and Charles Proderas, conducting the shoe shop in Cayuga street, has been detained at Ellis Island by the authorities. Rizon was accompanied to this country by Mrs. Eliena Lotarios and two small children, from Greece. Mr. Rizon has furnished the proper credentials and his brother is expected in this city soon.

HOW TO PREVENT THE SPREAD OF INFANTILE PARALYSIS.

—Dr. C. Bolduan, director of public education of the New York city health department, and Dr. Simon Flexner, director of the Rockefeller institute, explained how to detect symptoms of infantile paralysis and how to ward off the disease and prevent its spread.

The first symptoms are fever, bowel disturbances, headache and irritability.

After a few hours pains develop, usually in the lower part of the legs and in the feet.

Sometimes there are also pains in the region of the spine, in the arms and neck—stiff neck.

Within twelve hours the patient is unable to move his arms or legs and sometimes cannot talk.

Vomiting, delirium, twitchings and convulsions accompany the progress of the disease.

A temperature of from 100 to 106 degrees lasts two or three days.

Sometimes, but rarely, the patient has chills, sore throat and skin eruptions.

Health is no protection. Often children go to bed apparently well and awake in the night with the first symptoms and are partly paralysed by morning.

Cleanliness is the only known preventive.

The isolation of children in the house is next in importance.

Have children wash their hands and faces often.

Avoid buying candy, ice cream and fruits which are eaten without being cooked from peddlers and storekeepers who are not careful of their wares.

Don't kiss children on their mouths.

Keep their noses clean. This applies especially to young babies.

Don't cough in their faces.

Protect them from flies.

The germs of this disease, which are so small that they cannot be seen with microscopes and which pass through germ filters, almost always enter the bodies of their victims through the mucous membranes of the nose and throat.

Keep children away from their mates in the streets or at moving picture shows.

Report all cases at once to the board of health, so that the city's doctors can immediately investigate and remove the patients to hospitals.

Adults are not free from the disease. If your hands are dirty or if you are not careful about the preparation of your children's food, remember that you can give your little ones the disease as readily as can outsiders.

HOW

To Wind Watches So They Keep Good Time

YOU cannot secure the best services from a good watch or clock unless you know how to wind it so as to cause the least wear and irregularity in its delicate machinery.

A watch should be wound at the same time every day. If allowed to run down, or even almost do so, and then wound up until it will not wind any farther, it cannot do as perfect work as a watch that is not allowed to run to its full capacity or wound up until it is as tight as it can be made.

If the watch is wound both morning and evening at about the same hour and the key is given only enough turns to wind it a little less than half what it could be wound the watch will run more evenly, wear much longer and keep more accurate time than if it is wound up tight once a day.

A watch spring will last longer if it is wound when there is the least extreme of temperature, and morning and evening are, of course, the best in that respect.

It is more or less dangerous to wind a watch during a heavy electric storm, and it is best to avoid winding while on an electric car.

An eight day clock should be wound twice a week at as regular periods as possible to secure the best results. Never allow the clock to run down, and if possible do not wind it until it is tight.

Learn by experience just how many turns of the key it takes to wind the clock to run eight days, and then when half the week is gone wind the clock by giving the key just half as many turns as it would require to wind it all the way. More accurate time will be had, and it will avoid placing any of the parts on a strain, which is frequently the cause of good clocks giving out in some particular before they have served half as long as they should.

A little attention to this advice will lengthen the life of any watch or clock and make it a better timepiece.

ANOTHER CONFESSES TO MURDER CRIME

Steilow Has Been Snatched From the Death Chair

WITH HEAD SHAVED AND PANT LEG SPLIT AWAITING EXECUTION WHEN ORDERS CAME

* * *

(By United Press)

New York, August 11—Charles F. Stielow, who has been reprieved five different times from death in the electric chair at Sing Sing is declared innocent today in a confession made by Irving King in jail at Middle Valley, N. Y., early today.

Charles F. Stielow was saved from death in the electric chair at Sing Sing at 4:30 o'clock in the morning by a stay granted by Justice Charles L. Guy.

The order reached the death house as the man had been dressed in his death clothes and was receiving final spiritual comfort.

That afternoon Justice Guy supplemented his temporary stay, which expired at eleven o'clock that night, with an order calling upon the District Attorney of Orleans county to show cause on August 23d why a new trial should be granted to Stielow. The grounds are newly discovered evidence.

This action was taken after a two-hour conference between Justice Guy and the prominent persons fighting for the life of the convicted man. Immediately Mrs. Inez Milholland Boissevain started for Sing Sing to deliver a copy of the order to Warden Osborne. It acts as an automatic stay of execution until the matter is settled in Rochester on August 23.

The new evidence is contained in two affidavits. It is understood they show that a strange peddler slept in the home of the farmer whom Stielow was convicted of murdering, together with his housekeeper, near Medina in July, 1915. This man disappeared after the tragedy, and it is possible that Irving King is the man who was in the farm house on the night of the murder and that he committed the crime instead of Stielow who was convicted.

CHARLES. F. MOTT ANXIOUS TO COME BACK

(By United Press)

Direct report from Charles F. Mott today says that he is willing to return home immediately and no requisition papers will be necessary. Mott left about the first of the year and it was charged that the county was looted out of about $42,000 in connection with the erection of the Onondaga Sanitarium of which he was supervisor.

Candidates Named for Democratic Ticket

(By United Press)

Caratoga, N. Y., August 11—The Democratic conference was called to order at one o'clock this afternoon. It developed that the leaders had completed a state ticket although there is a doubt about candidates for two or three offices. The slate includes: Governor, Samuel Seabury; United States Senator, William Church Osborn, of Putnam County; Lieutenant Governor, Calvin J. Huson, of Yates County; Controller, Michael J. Walsh; Attorney General, John M. Murtaugh, Chemung County; Secretary of State, Joseph P. Zenzer, of Erie County; Treasurer, Gerald Fleuhrer, of Orleans, or Charles D. Steurer, Bronx County; State Engineer, John A. O'Connoer, of Albany, or Paul Schulz, of Rennsleaer; Chief Judge Court of Appeals, Judge Charles A. Collin, of Chemung County.

WAR ? TAX WILL STAY IN FORCE

DEMOCRATIC LEADERS WILL INSIST ON CONTINUING THIS SOURCE OF REVENUE.

It is highly probable that Oswego county people will continue to pay the one cent tax on telephone and telegraph toll message under the terms of the war tax measure for another year.

The present law expires December 31st and there was some talk that the two above named taxes would be eliminated when the measure was redrafted for another year. However, the Democratic leaders in Congress have practically decided that the Tax shall be continued in the new law.

It was also agreed that several other of the taxes will be continued as long as it is deemed necessary by the government. The tax on sleeping and parlor car tickets and freight receipts will stay in force, and the tax on the first two increased from one cent to two cents and the tax of $5 per year on billiard and pool tables as well as bowling alleys will be extended to apply to both these types of tables located in private homes. This is done by striking from the existing law the language which makes the tax applicable to tables in public use.

The tax on bonds, debentures, and certificates of indebtedness is to be retained; also the tax on custom house entries, which is to be graduated up to twenty-five cents. Steamboat passenger tickets and insurance policies are also continued subjects of taxation.

SCHUMANN MUSICAL CLUB

WILL GIVE A COURSE OF ENTERTAINMENTS IN FULTON. SEASON 1916-1917.

The Schuman Club are making plans for an entertainment course of four numbers, to be given during the coming winter. The artists have been secured through the Eastern Lyceum Bureau, of Syracuse and Boston.

The concerts will probably be held in one of the churches.

The Rices—Mr. and Mrs. Rice in joint recital, readers and impersonators.

The Stockholm Concert Company, violin, flute, cello and piano.

Mrs. Grace Bonner Williams, concert singer. She has appeared with the greatest oratorio societies in this country and Canada.

Karl Barleben Musical Club, violin, soprano, baritone and piano. Karl Barleben is a member of the Boston Symphony Orchestra at the present time and has appeared as soloist with the orchestra.

THE PRISONER RECAPTURED

ITALIAN WHO ESCAPED THIS MORNING AGAIN LANDED IN CITY JAIL.

James Garlan, an Italian, age fifteen years, who was brought from Minetto by Constable Kennedy this week, escaped from the city jail this morning. Garland was wanted by the New Jersey Officials for breaking jail and was being held by the local police awaiting the arrival of the probation officer.
ed his daily task of bringing the meals
ed his dail ytask of bringing the meals to the prisoners and at 6:30 o'clock this morning was making his rounds with the breakfasts. Upon arriving at the private compartment for women and children he noticed the filthy appearance of the room and made a remark to young Garland that he was not keeping his room decently. Garland admitted that it was in an untidy condition, and as Marshal Youngs placed the food on the table the young culprit quickly pushed the door and made a hurried getaway.

Officer Youngs notified Chief Dyer of the break and a squad of officers were readily placed on his trail

It was found that several attempts were made to get away. A valve attached to the radiator in the cell was torn from its place and was used to dislocate bricks. In two places the walls had been scratched by the young man. It was evident that the escape had been carefully planned inasmuch as he had abandoned the attempt at removing bricks and had planned to use the knock-out method.

After a search of a few hours about the outskirts of the city Chief Dyer obtained a cleu and the prisoner was apprehended in the barn belonging to John Bowley, at 411 Cayuga street. The young man was taken to the city jail and placed in a steel cell from which his escape is improbable.

$6,000 FOR WAR SUFFERERS

Syracuse Jews Raising Fund—Mass Meeting Sunday

The Syracuse Relief Committee for Jewish War Sufferers has raised since May 19, $1,061.56 for destitute Jewish inhabitants of the war zones. Prior to this date $4,952 was obtained and forwarded to the Central Committee in New York, so that in all $6,013.56 has been collected.

A mass meeting will be held Sunday evening at the Poaley Tzedek synagogue, at which Rabbi Levin of Utica, formerly of Rochester, will be the principal speaker.

British Troops Continue Slight Gains in Fighting

(By United Press)

London, August 11—British troops continue their gain north west of Pozieres advancing slightly at certain places in the fighting last night. General Haig reported at the war office this afternoon.

Germans Are Attacked and Prisoners Taken

Paris, August 11—French troops broke the long lull on the northwest front of Verdun, west of the Meuse last night, attacking and cleaning up a German trench east of Hill 304. It was officially announced today. Several prisoners were taken. North of the Somme French artillery bombarded the German organizations effectively throughout the night.

Stamislau Captured By Russian Troopers

Paris, August 11—French military critics declared today that they had every reason to believe that the important Galician city of Stamislau has been captured by the Russians though they disclaim the possession of any information from official sources.

French Troops Have Begun Activities

(By United Press)

London, August 11—Indications that the long expected offenses of the Allies in the Balkans may have begun were contained in a dispatch received here this afternoon by a sudden blow on the Dorian front, thirty-eight miles north of the Salonika front. French troops have captured the railway station at Dorian evacuated by the the Allies when they retreated from Servia last fall. An official statement from the French War Office carried this announcement this afternoon. An Athens dispatch to the central news at about the same hour reported that a great battle was raging on the Balkan front.

The Allies occupied not only Dorian station, but the ground adjacent, the dispatch said. The British war office thus far has made no announcement of the beginning of the great drive expected to sweep the armies of the central powers out of Servia.

Russians Are Making Rapid Advances

WHO MAKES YOUR TOWN

When salesmen and solicitors from your neighboring towns call at your door, do you allow yourself to be talked into giving them an order? They represent firms who pay neither rent nor taxes to help support your town. Were it not for your local merchants you would have no pavements, electric lights, police protection, etc. Do you ever stop to think of that? Next time you are approached by an out-of-town solicitor for your dying, cleaning and pressing work be fair enough to see your local dealer first and get his prices—there is no question about his excellent and satisfactory work. The same applies to your extracts. Be fair with your local druggists. Spices, teas, coffees and extracts of as good a quality as you may wish can be procured of your local dealer, notwithstanding assertions to the contrary that was made to us at our home a few days ago by an agent soliciting for an out-of-town firm. Spend your money with your local dealers whenever possible and you receive indirect benefits from it after you have spent it. Send it out of town and it goes to benefit some other locality. If you have been careless in this respect stop and think and then BE FAIR.

A TOWN THAT WINS

What makes a town grow into a city while others with equally good locations remain villages? It is because in one case there are men of push and energy, who are not afraid to spend their time and money to improve their town. Wherever they go they will tell of the advantages of their town; they write about it in every letter; send circulars and newspapers to every acquaintance whom they think can be induced to visit their town, and when anyone visits it, show him all the attractions of the place and treat him with such kindness that he falls in love with them and the place at once. They don't give advertisements and spend their money with a paper out of the city.

They spend it with the home paper. A town that protects home industries always wins.

ADVERTISING

The purpose of store advertising is not merely to sell goods, but to sell more goods—to make friends, build up a patronage that will not only stick but grow. Newspapers reach the greatest number of people in the immediate vicinity in the most natural way, at the least expense, and they are therefore the best of all mediums for the stores. In a newspaper you follow the lines of least resistance—you follow with the stream—you talk to an audience already assembled, to the people who want to read—their mental cosmos is right—they are on your wire, and they won't ring off if you hold their interest. Attraction is the basis of all advertising—the store is the sun, the customers the planets that revolve around it.

HAS CHRISTIANITY FAILED?

If nations were to have peace undisturbed, while persistently violating the laws of God, men would have good reasons to doubt their religion. But in the midst of an unrighteous peace, the sword has come. What further need have we of witnesses?" In these words President Wood, of Cumberland college meets the charge that the war means that Christianity has failed.

Much of national policy he says, has been built upon the falsehood that it is right for nations to do these things that are forbidden to individuals. The religion of the individual life has not been carried into the national life. Here are some of the particulars that he cites. Christianity admonishes the strong to bear the burdens of the weak; nations compel the weak to support the strong in luxury. Christian men speak the truth; the dimplomacy of nations has been full of deceit. Christian men do right even to their own hurt; nations change as often as they find they are hurt. Christianity teaches the life of love; nations employ the laws of force. Only in barbarous communities do men fill their houses with weapons against their neighbors; civilized nations spend a large portion of their revenue, which they wring from the poor, for instruments of war. Christians try to overcome evil with good; the policy of nations is to overcome evil with evil.

The truth of this indictment is too great for comfort. Suspicion, envy, jealousy, deceit, hatred, selfishness—how frequently they have cropped out in international intercourse. It will be only when these are banished and in their places have been put faith, love, truth, helpfulness and magnanimity, that the nations can really call themselves or be called Christian.

HELP FOR UNFORTUNATES

An Ohio ex-convict, who profited by his experience, has hit upon a plan for affording timely help to others of his class. He has established an employment agency for the sole purpose of providing honest work for graduates from the state's penal institutions.

Imbued with that sympathy which comes of association, he is fitted to carry out his plan. He knows the difficulties which confront the ex-convict. How almost impossible it is to get or hold a job; how for some reason, society looks down in scorn upon the man who has suffered a moral lapse—and been caught at it.

In explaining his idea this reformer says: "There is no such thing as inherent criminal tendencies. I had exceptional opportunity to study the so-called 'criminal class,' and I do not believe there is a man in the institution whose dereliction from the paths of duty cannot be traced directly to environment, use of drugs, circumstances, sudden passion or sudden and great temptation." As evidence of the correctness of his theory he points to the fact that not one of the large number for whom he has found work has betrayed the trust reposed in him.

While looking out for the material interests of the ex-convicts he does not lose sight of those of the employer. Keeping in touch with the penitentiary authorities, he studies the record of each candidate for work, goes into the history of his offense and the causes which led to it and carefully investigates his record as a prisoner, the results of which investigation are given to the employers, but are otherwise kept secret.

It looks like an excellent plan suggesting the advisability of a broader application, in which the states themselves might help effectively.

CIVILITY

Don't try to bully the world. It does not pay. Whoever enters the ring for a rough and tumble fight with public opinion is pretty sure, eventually, to be "knocked out." Society is a Sampson, and who would think of encountering with a single pair of fists, a hundred-armed fellow? Better shake the multitudinous hand of the giant, good naturedly, than unnecessarily provoke his wrath. Despise the world if it so pleases you, but as you have to live in the world and to lean on the world, it is just as well to treat it civilly. Shrewd men, who understand their race, never seek a quarrel with society. They understand that it is possible for an individual to lead and quietly control a community, but not to fight it down and not force it to their way of thinking by means of narrow laws. If you desire to reform supposed or real evils or disabuse your fellowmen for their prejudices, the surest way not to succeed is to resort to denunciation and abuse. Kindness, conciliation and the influence of a good example—these are the true and effective means of reform.

—Benjamin Franklin never said a truer thing than this: "If every man and woman would work four hours a day at something useful, want and misery would soon vanish from the world and the remaining portion of the day might be devoted to leisure and pleasure.

—Whenever anything we have been thinking of buying is really marked down in the price, the announcement is accompanied by the depressing information that this sale is strictly cash.

—There was a time when the American farmer needed the indulgence of the other fellow, but that time has passed. It is the other fellow who needs the indulgence of the farmer now.

The man who is in debt is like the horse on the tread mill; that used to be run to furnish power for threshing years ago. He is forever climbing, but never gets up.

—Wheat may go up and flour follow, but the appetite knows no abatement. The poor know this best.

TO AID DEFECTIVES

Abram I. Elkus Would Have Factories Established.

NEED MEDICAL ASSISTANCE.

Subnormal Persons Now Burden on Public Might Become Self Supporting if They Were Put to Suitable Work, Says Ambassador to Turkey.

New York.—Abram I. Elkus, the new ambassador to Turkey, succeeding Henry Morgenthau, has long been one of the foremost lawyers in New York city, and as counsel to the state factory investigating committee was active in bringing about much remedial legislation in New York state. The medical aspect of factory legislation is treated by Mr. Elkus in an address delivered before the Society of Medical Jurisdiction in New York.

Whether there is to be a new era of physical health and well being for the great mass of our people, those who toil in the mills and mines, in our factories, workshops and other industrial establishments, depends in a substantial measure, Mr. Elkus said, upon the interest that the medical profession, as such, will take in the near future in matters of factory legislation and social reform generally. He went on to define a field for practical reform, which so far has been ignored entirely. He said:

ABRAM I. ELKUS

"There are some men and women, and their number seems to be increasing, who are not able, because of physical or mental defects, to do any kind of work or to work for regular hours every day or whose employment has to be selected to fit their particular type. These are generally classified as subnormal persons. This does not mean—as physicians know—that they are insane or idiotic or unable to care for themselves. They need some assistance in caring for themselves so that they do not become an absolute burden upon the people at large.

"What greater work could be done than to employ competent physicians to make a study of these subnormal unfortunates and to establish factories under competent medical supervision where they could be put to work suited to their needs, where their health could be studied and improved and they themselves restored to the great body politic as healthy men and women?"

RECRUITS GAIN WEIGHT.

Company of U. S. Marine Corps Benefit by Training in South Carolina.

Port Royal, S. C.—Plain, wholesome food, fresh air and regular hours caused the recruits of the Ninth drill company of the United States marine corps, in training at the recruit depot here, to gain almost seven pounds per man in weight after fourteen weeks of instruction. This company of fifty-six men weighed upon enlistment 8,076 pounds, and at the end of fourteen weeks' training it increased to 8,467 pounds, a gain of 391 pounds.

This same company had a chest capacity upon enlistment of 11,909 cubic inches and after fourteen weeks had increased it to 13,295 cubic inches, a gain of 1,386 cubic inches. The physical gain of this company was 38 per cent.

WEDDING CALLED OFF.

Prospective Bride and Groom Used Pictures of Movie Stars.

Hagerstown, N. D.—Because they resorted to the deception of sending each other photographs of moving picture stars Miss Esther Gulbranson of Minneapolis and William Benjamin failed to recognize each other when they met in Hagerstown according to appointment to be married.

"No wonder I did not recognize him," Miss Gulbranson said.

She had received, she said, a picture of a famous movie star, while Mr. Benjamin said the photograph he got through the mail was that of a screen beauty famous the world over. The romance began through a matrimonial paper. The marriage was called off.

AVIATION ILLNESS.

Peculiar Distress That Comes to Many Aerial Navigators.

FLIERS SHOULD BE ROBUST.

They Should Also Be Young, Resolute and Cool Headed, With Sight and Hearing and Nervous and Vascular Systems Perfectly Sound.

Those who are up into the air in flying machines as well as those who go down to the sea in ships are troubled by peculiar and unpleasant physiological disturbances which may at times be of grave moment. This is especially true of aeroplane pilots or passengers and to less degree of those who ascend in balloons or dirigibles. The tremendous importance of aviation in war lends this subject peculiar interest, and Larousse Mensuel (Paris) devotes a special article to the topic. The author, Dr. Laumonier, states that the symptoms vary according to the period of ascent, of descent and of landing.

In ascending an acceleration of the respiration and pulse are frequently noted at from 1,200 to 1,500 meters altitude, accompanied by a slight headache located in forehead and temples and by indefinable discomfort without vomiting or nausea. At 1,800 meters there is a diminution in the keenness of hearing; at times there are hallucinations and finally an "asthenic" condition which prevents the muscles from obeying the will with adequate rapidity.

On descending the palpitations of the heart become violent and are accompanied by a sensation of anguish, the headache is intense, the aviator has an increasing sensation of heat of the skin, especially of the face, and a desire to sleep, which is sometimes so strong that the eyes involuntarily close as he approaches the earth, in spite of imminent peril.

Strange to say, on landing these troubles are augmented. Besides the headache and the somnolence, hyperemia of the conjunctive (conjunctives) is observed, with cyanosis of the extremities, acceleration of the pulse and constant increase of arterial pressure. The aviator often falls asleep as soon as he lands, and this sleep is troubled and nonrefreshing, while the headache may persist for many hours or even several days.

The ascent symptoms recall those of "mountain sickness," but are produced at a less altitude, because of the nervous tension, the cold and above all the relative rapidity of ascension. But what distinguishes aviators' sickness from mountain sickness is that the symptoms persist during descent and are aggravated after landing. There are besides vasomotor reactions with hypertension which are peculiar to this malady and give it, according to Cruchet and Moulinier, a sort of nosographic autonomy. However, these troubles are not felt with the same intensity by all aviators. Some find they diminish with experience, as in the case of seasickness. It appears to be true that their intensity depends principally on the rapidity of the descent.

The causes to which are ascribed these symptoms include cold and physical, nervous and moral fatigue. While cold may provoke the imperious need of sleep, it cannot be the sole cause, since the somnolence increases on descending into warmer air and after landing. Analogous objections are made to fatigue as a cause.

The most important of the determining causes, according to the authorities quoted above, is speed, not horizontal, but vertical speed, which causes rapid decompression and recompression in ascending and descending. At Pau Legagneux ascended to 3,200 meters in twenty-eight minutes, whereas it would have taken an Alpinist eleven hours to ascend the same distance on foot. At Varenne-sur-Allier Vedrines descended in three minutes from a height of 3,000 meters. The difference of gaseous tension is too great for the organism to regain its equilibrium in so short a time.

Since these symptoms are not morbid they disappear naturally in a few hours or at most a few days, their cessation being favored by rest, sleep and moderate warmth. Nevertheless they are of grave importance because of the dangers to which they expose aviators.

Hence it is highly advisable that fliers should be young, robust, resolute and cool headed men, with sight, hearing, nervous and vascular systems perfectly sound. And there should be rigorous elimination of candidates who have a tendency to heart trouble, epilepsy, tuberculosis, hardening of arteries, nervous troubles, etc. They should have methodical and progressive training, a diet nourishing, but not bulky, and as little fermentable as possible. They must abstain from alcohol and not abuse tea or coffee.

The clothing must be very warm, but not heavy enough to restrict movement. The wearing of goggles, putting cotton in the nostrils and greasing face and hands will be sufficient protection against cold. Finally they are advised to mount as slowly as possible and to descend even more slowly.

The big advertisers are the big merchants.

HANK AND PETE

PETE TRIES HIS HAND AT CHEERING UP THE SICK

BY KEN KLING

Ruler of Russia's Title.

The general allusion to the ruler of Russia as the czar is, strictly speaking, incorrect. His official title is "emperor and autocrat." Czar is the old Russian word for lord or prince and was abandoned by Peter the Great on his triumphal return from Poltava, his crowning victory over Charles XII. of Sweden. Since then the Russian monarch has been officially entitled emperor, and at the congress of Vienna in 1815 his right to the imperial term was admitted by the powers, with the proviso that, though he was emperor, he had no precedence over the kings of western Europe.—St. James' Gazette.

ANGER AND HATRED.

Hate and anger are passions that poison both the mind and the body. As surely as mechanical friction wears away the bearings of an unoiled engine just so surely will the self generated friction of hate and anger tend materially to shorten the life of the human being who foolishly gives way to them.

Rural Life Longest.

For white males the expectation of life at birth in rural localities is 7.7 years greater than in cities, at the age of ten 5.4 years greater, and until the age of thirty-nine is reached there is a margin of more than five years in favor of the country. Thereafter, says the Medical Record, the difference becomes gradually less, but is always in favor of the country until the age of eighty-eight is reached, at and after which the cities show a slightly greater longevity than the rural localities. For white females the difference between urban and rural longevity, while pronounced, is somewhat less than in the case of males.

Too Previous.

A fat, middle aged widower took a young girl graduate's hand in his and said timidly:

"Your mother, my dear Alice, has given her consent, and I"—

But the girl snatched her hand away.

"No," she said. "It can never be. My respect for you is great, Mr. Prendergast, and I will be a sister to you."

"No, you won't, either. You'll be a daughter to me. I'm going to marry your mother."—Washington Star.

Nest of the Marsh Wren.

When the marsh wren builds his nest he selects a spot near the water's edge or in a swamp filled with reeds and grasses, and he employs the art of a bridge builder with the daring of a steeplejack. The nest is shaped like a globe, with small openings in the sides. The bird hangs it among the reeds high enough so the spring from it cannot disturb it.

He lines it with feathers, providing a soft cradle for him to rock with the summer breezes. Often a colony of marsh wrens will build their nests in the same swamp, and they keep up a scolding chattering accompaniment to the croak of the frogs

Disobeying Orders.

The porter of a small hotel being attacked by illness while on duty his kind employer sent him upstairs to bed and called a physician. When the doctor came down after having attended his patient the proprietor accosted him.

"Well, doctor, how did you find him?" he asked.

"He's coming down with the grip," was the doctor's reply.

"If he does I'll send him back to bed. I warned him not to lug any more baggage today."—Exchange.

Bishops and Cats.

Canon Liddon, like Archbishop Whately, was a lover of cats. His biographer relates that a little niece who lived with him at Amen Corner once dined with her uncle at Fulham palace. In the drawing room after dinner Bishop Jackson told the child that her uncle was splendid company. "What times you must have with him in the evenings!" he added. "What does he talk about?" "Cats," she replied. "Oh, yes," said the bishop, "we all know of Canon Liddon's affection for cats, but he can't talk every night and all night about cats. What does he talk about when he is not talking about cats?" "Bishops," replied the little niece.—London Mirror.

An Ancient Steam Man.

There are a host of authorities on hydraulics and mechanics that could be quoted to support the assertion that the steam engine is not a modern invention. Carpini in the account of his travels, A. D. 1286, describes a species of aeophile, or steam, engine made in the form of a man. This contrivance was filled with "inflammable liquid" (probably petroleum) and made to do terrible work in the battles between the Mongols and the troops of Prester John.

What Housewives Are Glad to Know

Bills of Fare For the Children's Home Lunch

Eggs—boiled, coddled, poached or scrambled—bread and butter, spinach or other greens, cake.

Beef stew with vegetables, milk; crisp, thin tea biscuits, honey.

Dried bean or pea puree, toast, baked apple, cookies.

Vegetable milk soup, zwieback, rice with maple sugar and butter or with milk or cream.

Potato chowder, crackers, jelly sandwiches.

Cold meat, creamed potatoes, peas, bread and butter, frozen custard or plain ice cream and plain cake.

Lamb chop, baked potatoes, bread and butter, sliced mixed fruits, cookies.

Baked omelet with spinach, kale or other greens, bread and butter, apple sauce, cake.

Milk toast, string beans, stewed fruit, cake.

Boiled potatoes, codfish gravy, bread and butter, lettuce, custard.

Home Cookery

Apple Sponge.

Half a cupful of sugar, half a cupful of milk, two eggs, one and a half cupfuls of flour, two teaspoonfuls of baking powder, half a teaspoonful of salt, five sliced apples. Beat eggs, add sugar, flour in which baking powder has been sifted and milk. Beat well, add apples, pour into buttered baking dish, bake in moderate oven one hour and serve with sugar and cream.

Cold Meat With Pea Salad.

Slice some cold chicken or lamb in equal sized slices and trim carefully. Place these, overlapping each other, on a chilled platter, and around the meat put crisp white lettuce hearts filled with cold cooked peas mixed with plenty of mayonnaise dressing.

Gooseberry Ketchup.

Cook the gooseberries in a little water until soft. Press through a colander to remove the skins and then through a sieve to remove the seeds. Add two-thirds as much sugar as fruit, and cinnamon and cloves to taste. Cook slowly a half hour and bottle hot.

Making Bouquets

In making bouquets or arranging flowers in vases amateurs often make the mistake of placing all the leaves around the outside and of massing the flowers tightly. This is suitable for a small corsage or buttonhole bouquet, but is not good for other purposes. The leaves and flowers should be mixed so as to present a natural, growing look, and not enough flowers should be placed in one vase to give a crowded appearance. The simplest and surest way of securing a graceful, well balanced bouquet is to put the foliage in the vase first, using enough to make the leaves stand up nicely and not enough to crowd the vase. Into this foundation stick the stems of the blossoms, making sure that they reach down into the water. It is easy by this method to make few or many flowers show off to advantage. Even when a bouquet is to be taken away this will be found the surest method of securing good arrangement.

The Newest Jabot

Out of 175 designs for fall neckwear the handsome jabot here illustrated, originated by the Association of American Neckwear Manufacturers, was chosen for its chic effect. The fabric is white net, daintily embroidered in tiny daisies, the high standing collar being attached to the jabot by narrow black moire ribbon.

String Bean Salad.

String the beans and boil whole. When tender and cold slice each lengthwise and place them carefully crosswise on a platter. Season them an hour or two before serving with a marinade of a little pepper, salt, three spoonfuls of vinegar and one spoonful of olive oil. Just before serving drain off and mix with salad dressing.

Frozen Desserts

Dainty Frozen Pudding.—One quart of very ripe blackberries, two cupfuls of water, one and one-half cupfuls of sugar, a pinch of salt, one tablespoonful of lemon juice, one-fourth cupful granulated tapioca, one cupful of whipped cream. Cook and mash the blackberries through a very fine strainer. Add the sugar and salt. Boil the tapioca in the two cupfuls of water until clear. When cold add the blackberry and lemon juice and freeze.

Frozen Currant and Raspberry Punch.—Two cupfuls each of ripe currants and raspberries, two cupfuls of sugar, two cupfuls of water, half cupful of orange juice. Crush currants and put them into an agate saucepan with one cupful of water. Boil for three minutes and mash through a fine strainer. Mash raspberries and cover with one cupful of cold water. Boil the sugar and water for three minutes and cool. Freeze.

Frozen Banana Pudding.—Three cupfuls of milk, one-fourth cupful of cornstarch, one-half teaspoonful of salt, two cupfuls of mashed bananas, one cupful of sugar, one teaspoonful of lemon juice. Put the milk on in a double boiler. When hot add the cornstarch, sugar and salt, mixed with cold milk until smooth. Cook for twenty minutes. When cold add the bananas. The lemon juice is added just before closing the freezer. Freeze.

Frozen Caramel Custard.—One quart of milk, two cupfuls of sugar, one-half teaspoonful of salt, one teaspoonful of maple flavoring, two eggs, four tablespoonfuls of cornstarch. Heat the milk in a double boiler. Mix the cornstarch with a little cold milk, two eggs well beaten and one cupful of sugar. Add salt. Cook for ten minutes. One cupful of sugar is melted and slightly burned. To it add half a cupful of cold milk and add to the custard. When cold add the flavoring and freeze.

FLOWER NAMES.

Camellia was named from a missionary in the orient, Kamel. On his return to France he brought with him some gorgeous specimens of a flower which he called the rose of Japan. His friends, however, gave it his name, Camellia.

Dahlias were brought from Peru by one Andre Dahl.

Fuchsias were named for their discoverer, Leonard Fuchs.

Magnolias received the name of Professor Magnol de Montpellier, who first brought the beautiful trees from Asia and America to France.

Anemone means to tremble with the wind.

Lavender, so called because the Romans put a spray of them in the water to perfume the hands. The Latin word to wash is lavare.

LIFE INSURANCE NOT AFFECTED

THE WAR HAS MADE NO CHANGE IN SOLVENCY OF OLD LINE COMPANIES.

(By United Press)

Albany, August 11—The business of life insurance, as reflected in the annual report of Jesse Phillips, State Superintendent of Insurance, available to-day, indicates that notwithstanding the present deplorable conditions in Europe and the apparent general unrest, the prosperity of the life insurance companies reporting to the New York insurance department has not been appreciably affected.

Though a certain amount of uneasiness has developed from time to time among the policy holders of the companies doing business within the belligerent countries of Europe, and occasionally doubt has been expressed in some quarters as to the effect the war would have on the financial ability of those companies to maintain their usual high degree of solvency, it is notable that the death losses of the few companies having any large amount of insurance in force on the lives of persons among the warring nations are in some cases less than in previous years, notwithstanding the large amount of insurance in force, and in others show only a normal increase.

This no doubt is due in a measure to the fact that a large proportion of the policyholders in such countries are above the military age; that is, at least, above the age for the activities of extreme danger, and also that of late years the European business has not been exploited to the same extent as formally. The companies doing business are in most, if not in all instances, protected by special conditions in the contracts, particularly in those written in recent years. It would seem at this time that there need be no fear but that they will in the future as in the past be amply able to protect their assured and pay in full all just claims that may be brought against them.

Superintendent Phillips says it is evident that the life insurance investigation of 1905 has much more than justified itself and that the legislation resulting therefrom must have the unqualified approval and endorsement of all persons having the interests and well being of the insurance business at heart.

Mr. Phillips says "The value of the legislation enacted in 1905 becomes more and more apparent, especially to those who have studied life insurance conditions, both before and since putting in force of the legislation referred to."

In 1915 the total income of the life insurance companies was $925,732,364 an increase of $51,371,759. The amount of premiums received was $684,632,053, or $30,711,159 more than in 1914. In 1915 the companies disbursed $713,643,172, being $69,326,415 more than in 1914. Of that amount $512,390,266 was paid to policyholders, while the cost of management, including shareholders' dividends, was $201,252,906. The insurance issued in 1915 was increased $127,384,585 over the insurance issued in 1914.

HAVE ROSY CHEEKS AND FEEL FRESH AS A DAISY—TRY THIS!

Says glass of hot water with phosphate before breakfast washes out poisons.

To see the tinge of healthy bloom in your face, to see your skin get clearer and clearer, to wake up without a headache, backache, coated tongue or a nasty breath, in fact to feel your best, day in and day out, just try inside-bathing every morning for one week.

Before breakfast each day, drink a glass of real hot water with a teaspoonful of limestone phosphate in it as a harmless means of washing from the stomach, liver, kidneys and bowels the previous day's indigestible waste, sour bile and toxins; thus cleansing, sweetening and purifying the entire alimentary canal before putting more food into the stomach. The action of hot water and limestone phosphate on an empty stomach is wonderfully invigorating. It cleans out all the sour fermentations, gases and acidity and gives one a splendid appetite for breakfast.

A quarter pound of limestone phosphate will cost very little at the drug store but is sufficient to demonstrate that just as soap and hot water cleanses, sweetens and freshens the skin, so hot water and limestone phosphate act on the blood and internal organs. Those who are subject to constipation, bilious attacks, acid stomach, rheumatic twinges, also those whose skin is sallow and complexion pallid, are assured that one week of inside-bathing will have them both looking and feeling better in every way.

SMALL RUBBISH PILE ABLAZE, CAUSES ALARM FOR FIRE DEPARTMENT

The fire department was called last night to the corner of Sixth and Pratt street. The alarm was sounded at 8:44 o'clock, but it was only a matter of a few minutes before the chemical wagons returned, after finding a burning pile of brush.

Neighbors living in the vicinity of Sixth street became frightened by the sparks which were flying plentifully from the smouldering fire and rang in the alarm.

Owing to the torn-up condition of East First street, it was necessary for the fire department to detour to Oneida street and thence to Broadway. This made the trip much easier for the horses.

LITTLE CLEVELAND WILL HAVE "SAFEY FIRST" BELLS

The village of Cleveland, Oswego county, has had its demand for "safety first" satisfactorily considered by the Public Service Commission and the New York, Ontario and Western railroad will place electric alarm bells at the grade crossings on Clay, Mill and North streets in that village. Residents who made complaint to the commission regarding the matter say they are fully satisfied with the commission's decision.

THE BAGGAGE SMASHERS

WILL NOW BE UP AGAINST A HARD PROPOSITION.

The United States Department of Agriculture has announced that a machine has been invented with which the exact strength of boxes and other carriers may be tested. Immediately a roar of applause rang full and clear through every baggage room in America.

It must be realized that in the course of their work or, to be exact in their coarse work, the baggagemen frequently encounter a bundle, bag or package that they actually cannot smash. Who has not seen some conscientious baggageman at some time or other, slamming a bag around in a secluded spot of the wrecking room determined to do his full duty even if he had to knock the side out of the depot.

That, it seems, is all past. This is the day of efficiency and with the new device, these faithful workers need merely test a package to learn its vulnerable spots, and then throw, kick it, hit it with another trunk or do whatever was required to prove to the traveler that his luggage had not been ignored.

The new machine consists of a hexagonal drum with three and one half foot sides lined with steel sheets. Pieces of scantling bolted to the bottom form what are called "hazards."

In making the tests package filled with cans containing water are placed in the drum which is then rotated. For convenience in observing the results of the tests, the sides and ends of the box are numbered with large figures and in addition other numbers are placed at specified points on each side.

The "hazards' cause the boxes to be carried part way around and then dropped back to the lower level of the drum. Each fall of this sort is a pretty fair imitation of the probable treatment it would receive in shipment.

None of the modish baggage rooms from this time on can afford to be without one of these wallop recorders.

His Gentle Hint.

Friend—I suppose if people would do just what you tell them you would have a great deal less trouble.

Doctor—Yes, indeed! [illegible] some of them to settle their accounts. —Boston Transcript.

A FARMERS' LOAN BANK

WILL BE A GREAT CONVENIENCE FOR LOCAL TRAINERS.

Agitation for the location of a farmers' loan bank in Central New York, probably at Syracuse, has aroused in farmers in this section a curiosity as to exactly what the farm loan act means to them. The measure is intended to lend financial aid to the agricultural man at normal interest rates and on long time. It is predicted that the system will not be in operation for six months and it is possible that loans will not be made before next spring.

In operation, the system to some extent will do for the farmer what the Federal Reserve system does for the business man. The farmer will be given an opportunity to secure money on his most available commodity, his land, just as the merchant and manufacturer have been enabled through the federal reserve system to have his paper, based on commercial transactions, find a ready market.

The new scheme has many points of resemblance to the federal reserve act, but in many essential features is different. In no way will the banks created under it do commercial banking, and while it is possible in years to come, they will have funds to loan that will amount to several millions, it is not believed probable that the system will have the resources of the federal reserve system.

The act provides for a division of the continental United States into twelve land bank districts, with a federal land bank in each. The work of designating these districts and selecting the centers at which the land banks are to be located will be the first important duty of the farm board and is expected to result in just as many bitter contests, as preceded the announcement of the twelve federal reserve districts and the location of the banks. The only directory provision in the farm loan act says that land banks shall be located with special reference to the farm loan needs of the country, so the board will have a wide discretion. Many applications from cities, especially in the northwest and southwest have already started to pour in. The board, however, will not announce its conclusions, until after it has made a tour of the country and held hearings in many states.

The banks will not, except in special cases, loan direct to the farmers, but through the agency of the National Farm Loan Associatios, which may be organized to any number in a land bank district by any ten owners or prospective owners of farm land, who desire to secure loans on farm property. Applications for charters for these associations must go to the farm loan board and may be refused by it. No associations will be chartered unless it is shown that signing members desire loans totaling at least $20,000.

In applying for membership in an association a farmer must take five per cent. of the face value of the loan in stock of the association. Application for loans are to be passed upon by a loan committee of the farm loan association. Loans will be made only on first mortgages or farm property and the value of the land will be the main consideration. The land will be subject to inspection by an appraiser of the farm loan board. Loans will be made only for the purchase of land, for its improvement or for the purchase of live stock, equipment, fertilizers or to provide buildings on a farm or to liquidate indebtedness existing when the first association was formed in the county where the land is located. No loan will be made for more than $10,000 or for less than $100. Interest will not be charged greater than six per cent. The loan itself will be reduced through an amortization plan providing for reduction by annual or semi-annual payments on the principal. No mortgage shall run for more than forty years nor less than five and there are the necessary provisions in the law for satisfaction of overdue interest or amortization payments.

The money to be loaned will come through the federal land banks, passed to the hands of the National Farm Loan Associations and to the farmer. The capitol stock of the land banks will not give them much loaning power, so Congress increased that power greatly by allowing the banks to issue farm loan bonds and sell them in the open market. The act provides that when a federal land bank has loaned $50,000 to farmers it may issue a corresponding amount of farm loan bonds and that the total that may be issued by any one bank on a minimum capital of $750,000 is to be twenty times that capital. This would give each bank $15,000,000 and the whole system $130,000,000 to loan on first mortgages.

Farm loan bonds are to be made attractive by payments of not more than five per cent interest and a provision that shey shall be exempt from federal, state or city taxation. They are made legal investment for trust funds. They are not to be obligations of the United States, but will have behind them the first mortgages on farm lands. These mortgages are also exempt from taxation.

In case local conditions do not favor formation of farm loan associations land banks may be empowered by the farm loan board to make loans to farmers through agents it approves such as banks, trust or mortgage companies, and the law permits establishment of joint stock land banks to lend directly to borrowers on first mortgages of farm lands. These banks will be under the supervision of the farm loan board, but will not be assisted by the federal land bank funds as will loan associations. The stock banks, however, which are to be capitalized at not less than $250,000 each, also may issue farm loan bonds exempt from taxation and based on first mortgage securities to the extent of fifteen times their capital stock. These banks are subject to the same provision of the law in respect to interest rates, etc.

In the beginning the federal land banks will be governed by directors appointed by the farm loan board, but after subscription from farm loan associations to any federal land bank's capital stock reach $100,000 an elective system will be effective, with three directors chosen by the board and six by the loan associations.

The board will approve compensation paid directors and officers of the banks. The loan associations will be directed by unpaid officers except a secretary and treasurer or a secretary-treasurer.

Banks and loan associations will be subject to the customary examination by persons appointed by the farm loan board and the law provides penalties for infringements of its provisions or counterfeiting of farm loan bonds.

WILL RETAIN THE OLD SITE

RAILROAD COMPANY HAS THE RIGHT TO LOCATE DEPOT

(By United Press)

Albany, August 11—A railroad company still has the first privilege of saying where its station shall be located, where public convenience and necessity are adequately subserved, according to the up-State Public Service Commission today. Accordingly the station at West Falls, Erie County, will be rebuilt on its old site. When the West Falls station of the Buffalo, Rochester and Pittsburg railroad was burned two years ago the company prepared plans for its reconstruction, but a considerable sentiment was aroused among the patrons of the station for its removal to a new site a half-mile from the old one. An equal sentiment was manifested in the community in favor of the present site, which is contiguous to a fine State road.

The railroad company throughout the proceedings remained neutral in an effort to satisfy its patrons, but in the end was obliged to take a stand in favor of the old site. The Commission finds the plans are adequate for the needs of freight and passenger traffic at this point and will be adequate for years to come despite the rapid growth of the territory which it serves.

In view of the adequacy of the company plans the Commission finds it is without power to change in location, as the law delegates to it the power to order a change only to insure the adequate service of the public. This view is adopted despite the generosity of the proponents of the new site who guaranteed a free site to the railroad and promised to build adequate roadways to the new site.

VITAL WHEAT NEEDS WILL BRING SUCCESS

Leaving Undone Any One of Four Necessary Steps Means Partial Failure.

If there are four essential and necessary steps in growing a crop, and we follow three and neglect one, often we might just as well have omitted the three since a poor crop is certain to follow. Whoever uses good seed, prepares a fine, firm seed bed, uses lime, but neglects to supply wheat with available plant food in sufficient quantities will not harvest the largest number of bushels of best quality wheat.

You cannot grow strong, sturdy wheat plants from a sluggish start. The tiny plants need assistance from germination to maturity. The roots take up in solution ammonia, phosphoric acid and potash. These plant-food elements are found in the soil, being gradually available to the crop; the deficiency of plant food is supplied through fertilizers. They are carried to the growing leaves, and under the action of sunlight, are manufactured into plant cell material that makes plant growth. Ammonia is the food that helps baby plants by giving them a dark green color and producing stalk growth. Plenty of available ammonia in the fertilizer gives the young plants a running start.

Harris in Cornell University Bulletin 252 states:

"The number of kernels of wheat per pot increased with the fertilizer."

Filling the Kernels.

Wheat is grown primarily for the grain. Phosphoric acid is the plant food that is most intimately concerned with forming and filling the kernels. Late in June or early in July, the tiny wheat flowers open and become fertile and the new wheat berries begin to develop. The time between the flowers becoming fertile and the complete filling of the kernels is very short—not over ten days or two weeks in most cases. As the kernel contains 75 per cent. of the phosphoric acid of the plant, this plant food ingredient plays a very important part in filling the kernel and making the crop.

Thatcher holds that the relative protein content of grain is determined chiefly, if not wholly, by the rapidity of ripening of the kernel. Thus it is easily seen that the amount of phosphoric acid available for plant food at this time may determine the quality and yield of the crop.

Strengthening Straw.

The third essential plant food, potash, gives strength to the straw, assists in the transportation and laying down of the starch in the kernel and along with phosphoric acid plumps the grain. If the kernels are shriveled or small, the straw weak and inclined to lodge, more potash should be applied in the fertilizer. Available ammonia, phosphoric acid and potash are the three plant foods applied in fertilizers. They cause plant or stalk growth, form heavy, plump kernels, hasten maturity and make strong straw, insure good clover catches and quality wheat. Fertilizers should be selected of such an analysis as will make up for the deficiencies of the available plant food in the soil and supply the special needs of the wheat under various farm conditions. Best results will be secured by using 200 to 400 pounds of fertilizer on loam or clay soils analyzing 2 to 4 per cent. ammonia, 8 to 12 per cent. phosphoric acid and 2 to 4 per cent. potash. On sandy or poor soils more ammonia should be used. Owing to the war conditions making potash scarce and high priced, a much smaller percentage of potash is advisable until these abnormal conditions adjust themselves.

Fertilizers give crops a quick start, strengthen straw, hasten maturity, better the quality and increase yields and profits.

Feed Vegetables Several Times

For years hundreds of successful truck-growers have been making one, two or even more applications of fertilizer on crops each year with profit. The method gains favor because it is a money-maker. Sweet corn, beans, cabbage, tomatoes and a host of other crops benefit greatly by this practice. Apply with a cultivator attachment, five-hole grain drill or fertilizer bugle. If crops are slow in starting use a fertilizer containing more than 1 to 2 per cent ammonia. To hasten maturity and to improve quality, use a fertilizer containing 8 to 12 per cent phosphoric acid. If soil is muck, or if for a root crop, apply a fertilizer containing more than 2 per cent potash.

Applying Fertilizers On Wheat

1. Apply all the fertilizer through the fertilizer attachment of the grain drill at seeding time.
2. If you have no drill with fertilizer attachment apply all through broadcast lime and fertilizer distributer.

Be sure to work the fertilizer into the soil thoroughly before sowing wheat.

Many years of field tests with complete fertilizers on wheat are compared with unfertilized fields by showing the corresponding yields.

DOUBLING THE WHEAT YIELDS

CONTROL OF SMUT, HESSIAN FLY AND PROPER FEEDING PRACTICAL AND PROFITABLE.

Farm practice on thousands of American and European farms, together with the results obtained by more than 50 years' testing by foreign experiment stations combined with more than 30 years' work by American experiment stations have demonstrated that the yields and net profits from the United States' wheat crop can be increased many times. The elimination of smut from wheat in the United States would save American farmers from ten to fifteen million dollars annually.

The control of the Hessian fly would save many times that amount. The use of a sufficient amount of a balanced plantfood ration has added from 8 to 10 bushels per acre to the average annual yield of a single community. Sixteen Pennsylvania farmers, by the use of 500 pounds of fertilizer per acre, raised an average of 30 bushels of wheat per acre. Last summer 36 farmers in one section of Virginia averaged 38.1 bushels per acre.

STAMP OUT THE FLY

"Three things are necessary in waging a successful warfare against the Hessian Fly, viz.: thorough preparation of the soil, so as to form the best possible conditions for germination; heavy fertilization, if the soil is not already in good condition, so as to insure a quick and rapid growth, and late sowing so as to compel the flies to go elsewhere to deposit their eggs."

This extract from Bulletin 194 of the Indiana Experiment Station contains in a nut-shell the main conditions to be handled in the control of the pest. The Illinois Circular 146 also makes a good point when it declares: "A vigorous wheat plant is much better able to react against an attack of the fly, especially by stooling freely or throwing out an abundance of new shoots from the root. Whatever tends, consequently, to give vigor to the plant reduces proportionally the percentage of loss."

This leads to the conclusion that a fertilizer containing at least 2 per cent ammonia and at least 10 per cent available phosphoric acid may be the salvation of the crop, and the experience of many users bear this out.

How the Name Was Given

The common name, "Hessian Fly," was long ago bestowed upon this insect by Americans, because of its having committed some depredations on Long Island, New York, in 1779, in the vicinity of Lord Howe's old encampment of three years before. The Hessian mercenaries who constituted a part of this army were much despised, both at home and in America, and, on the supposition that these soldiers had brought the pest with them from their native country in the straw used for their bedding while en route, it was given the obnoxious name of "Hessian Fly."—Farmers' Bulletin, No. 640, U. S. Department of Agriculture.

Uncle Sam's Expensive Guest

What are you doing to stop the Hessian Fly? Your co-operation with your neighbor means as much to you as to him, and even if it didn't you owe a duty to your community to help in this eradication.

Remember these three things—sow late, prepare the ground well, and add available plant food to your soil. Give the young plants a late start to be free from the fly, but also give them a chance to obtain food by applying at least 200 pounds of fertilizer containing 2 to 4 per cent ammonia so that they may have a good growth before winter sets in.

"Swat the Hessian Fly" is the battle cry of the farming members of this big family of Uncle Sam.

CONTROL OF THE HESSIAN FLY

LATE SEEDING AND JUDICIOUS FEEDING RECOMMENDED BY DEPARTMENT OF AGRICULTURE.

Methods for controlling the Hessian fly, the worst pest of the wheat field, in the fall-wheat-growing sections may be summarized as follows: Sow the best of seed in thoroughly prepared, fertile soil after the major portion of the fall brood has made its appearance and passed out of existence, and, if possible, sow on ground not devoted to wheat the preceding year.

While it may seem "far fetched" to bring forward as a preventive measure the enrichment of the soil, a fertile soil will produce plants that will withstand with little injury attacks that will prove disastrous to plants growing on an impoverished or thin soil. This is because a fertile soil will enable an infested plant to tiller freely, and these tillers will have sufficient vitality to withstand the winter and send up head-producing stems in the spring. It is also chiefly on the thin or impoverished soils that the difficulty of sowing late enough to evade the fall attack and at the same time secure a growth sufficient to withstand the winter is encountered, and whatever can be done to obviate this difficulty will constitute a preventive measure.—Farmers' Bulletin 640, United States Department of Agriculture.

FEED-UP YOUR FIELDS INCREASE YOUR YIELDS

There is a farmer whom I know who shows that he is wise,
He knows that larger yields of wheat
come when you fertilize,
With crop reports much lower than last year and prices high,
The farmer easily can see that plant food is his best buy,
Some nitrogen will help the growth,
phosphoric acid, too,
A little potash strengthens straw and plumps the kernels, too.
Let's help the plants make good stalk growth and fill the kernels plump,
By feeding them with plant food (Sir)
—Then watch the profits jump!
The profits come with larger yields,
the average crops don't pay.
So why not get your share of gain—
the fertilizer way?
With wheat you have a high-priced crop and extra bushels count,
Fertilize your fields, bring up your yields and watch your profits mount.
And when you see just how it pays
this year to fertilize your wheat,
Next year you'll feed your other crops and all your records beat.
For farming is a game in which the Golden Rule applies,
You feed your crops and they feed you, so, therefore fertilize.

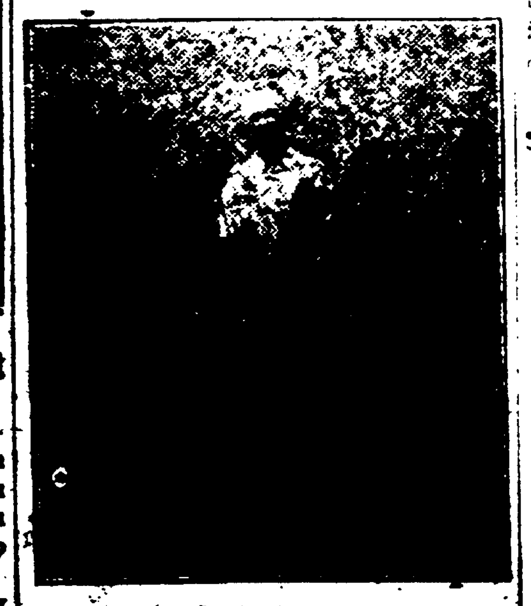
—Melvin Ryder.

WHERE THE FLY HAD BEEN BAD.



The above field of wheat, measuring over five feet in height, was grown by I. D. Smith, of Hamburg, Pa., this year, in territory where the Hessian Fly has been particularly bad. By the use of 500 pounds of high grade fertilizer, he is able to "insure his wheat yield" and produce the vigorous growth necessary to carry the crop through the winter and to withstand the attacks of the destructive Fly.

"Damaged Goods," the drama that upset the country two years ago and became the greatest stage sensation the nation has seen, is to be shown here in motion pictures.

The motion picture version of "Damaged Goods" is even more remarkable than the speaking stage play. It tells more of the strange inner mysteries of the plot than was possible on the stage.

Most remarkable of all, the same actors who presented this play in its history making run on the speaking stage will be seen in the pictures.

Richard Bennett and his whole cast of co-workers, all actors of prominence on the speaking stage, enacted the play before the cameras of the American Film Company at Santa Barbara. The most painstaking and expensive work was necessary to tell this story on the screen with the force it demanded and yet with the delicacy necessary.

The plot deals with the disease which has been held an unmentionable thing for centuries. But it is related so dramatically, so cleanly and interestingly that it must interest everyone and offend none.

The picture was shown before the most critical audience that could be gathered when the Mutual Film Corporation through which it is released gave a private advance screening of "Damaged Goods" at the Broadway theatre in New York. On that occasion 2,000 doctors, lawyers, social workers, men and women, youths and girls among them, saw the picture and sat through it in spellbound silence. Then as the closing sub-title flashed on the screen the audience broke into applause that lasted for five thundering minutes.

"The Mutual version of 'Damaged Goods' is free from the taint which inheres in most of the 'sex problem' plays. It does not parade evil that good may come of it, it does not linger over the horrid and morbid to titillate perverted tastes under the preaching of a great moral lesson.

GIFT OF THE GAB.

Why Stephenson Thought There Was No Power to Equal It.

When George Stephenson, the perfector of the locomotive, was visiting the seat of Sir Robert Peel at Drayton on one occasion, says the writer of "Famous British Engineers," there happened to be present Dr. Buckland, the scientist, and Sir William Follett, the famous advocate.

Stephenson discussed with Dr. Buckland one of his favorite theories as to the formation of coal and, though undoubtedly in the right, was ultimately vanquished by the arguments and oratory of the doctor, who was a better master of tongue fence than himself. Next morning while pondering over his defeat in the solitude of the garden he was accosted by Sir William Follett and confided to that gentleman the story of his failure.

Sir William, acquainted with the details of the matter in dispute, agreed to take up the case and soon afterward attacked Dr. Buckland on the subject. A long discussion ensued, in which the man of law completely silenced the man of science, who was at last compelled to own himself vanquished. Sir Robert Peel, highly amused at this example of "tit for tat," then turned to the inventor and inquired, with a laugh:

"And what do you say on this matter, Mr. Stephenson?"

"Why," he replied, "I will only say this—that of all the powers above and under the earth there seems to me no power equal to the gift of the gab."

"PRESIDENCY" BOOK

NOW READY

Contains Facts, Figures, Dates and Data About All Past And Present Elections

SETTLES ELECTION ARGUMENTS INSTANTLY

If you want to know how the political "machine" works; if you want to know the "strength" of each state; if you want to know how your state and other states have voted during the past twenty-five or thirty years—in other words, if you want to know a hundred and one different things about politics that the "other fellow" doesn't know, you have only to secure a copy of "The Presidency of the United States" and all of this desirable information will be yours.

This little book has been compiled by experts at great expense, and the information it contains is absolutely reliable and strictly non-partisan. It is not only intensely interesting but has a distinct educational value that makes it desirable for school children as well as for grown-ups.

"The Presidency of the United States" will be used by thousands of people this year as a quick and ready reference for information on all past and present elections, and as "final authority" for settling all election arguments and disputes.

The ability to answer correctly the questions this book contains indicates a more intimate knowledge of past history and current events than is possessed by the average citizen. Many a surprise is in store for anyone who thinks to do so without "brushing up."

We were fortunate in securing a supply of these books for immediate delivery. If you want one you can secure a copy at this office for "only ten cents."

"Be sure you are right—then go ahead," was the favorite saying of old David Crockett. Those who believe in this motto will find in "The Presidency of the United States" an abundant supply of historical facts and non-partisan information upon which to base their statements and arguments during the 1916 presidential campaign.

A Hint For Early Autumn

Blue serge suit, having a coat trimmed with belt and buttons of red leather. The wide two-piece band at the lower edge is an important feature of the design.

It was left to one of the famous Paris dressmakers to create the something different in the blue serge coat-a model that is a compromise between the conservative and the sportswomanlike. What there is of a belt is made of narrow red leather and the buttons on the deep pockets are of the same trimming. Collar and cuffs are of self-material, though they would be wonderfully smart faced with red faille. In medium size the costume requires 5 yard 54-inch serge, with ⅝ yard lining 3 inches wide for the front and back of the coat.

The lining is an exceedingly simple matter, involving merely the closing of the underarm and shoulder seams. The sleeve offers a few difficulties, however, though its construction is easy. Place the "T" on corresponding small "o" perforations, plait and tack, then close the seam. Line the cuff next and sew to lower edge of sleeve. Lap the front rounded end of cuff on back end, and tack to positions on sleeve, bringing corresponding small "o" perforations together. Adjust sleeve to position, stitching along line of small "o" perforations in lining front and back, bringing corresponding single large and double small "oo" perforations in sleeve and lining together.

With lining and sleeve out of the way the coat may now be taken up. Close the underarm and shoulder seams as notched, the large "O" perforations indicating the center front. Gather front and back, making two rows. Slash front and back about ⅜ inch outside of gathers in front and back, about ¼ inch above and below gathers and finish edges for openings to pass the narrow belt through. Bring small "o" perforation in narrow belt to underarm seam, and bring large "O" perforation in belt to center-front. Draw gathers to fit belt and stitch to position.

The band at the lower edge of the coat is a distinctive feature of the trimming. Close back seam then turn under upper edge on slot perforations. Adjust to position on coat. Stitch band to position at upper and front edges, and stitch along line of small "o" perforations in band. If desired, the upper edge of band may be left free and fastened with buttons.

Three things only remain now, to arrange the outside of the coat on the lining, and adjust underfacing to position and line and sew collar to neck edge. This makes an exceedingly smart garment.

An Effective Satin Skirt

A three-piece skirt of blue satin at once fashionable and practical. It is gathered at the top and the inserted side gores are finished with deep headings at the hips.

A skirt that is at once fashionable and practical is shown here. It is a three-piece model gathered at the top and having an inserted side gore finished at the upper edge with a gathered heading. It is fashioned of dark blue satin to be worn with separate waists. In medium size the design requires 4¾ yards 36-inch material, with ½ yard lining 36 inches wide for the foundation yoke.

Today's homedressing lesson deals solely with the cutting of the skirt, this being very important if it is to look right when finished. The yoke might be cut and put away first, because it is so simple. The pattern is laid on a lengthwise fold of the lining, and two or three strokes of the scissors convert it into shape.

For the side gore of the skirt an open width of satin is required, but the front and back gores are laid on a fold of material, the front gore directly on a lengthwise fold and the back gore on a lengthwise thread. For a shorter length than is illustrated cut off the lower edges of the gores or turn the hem deeper.

In the advance skirt models satin now falls in soft folds where taffeta rustled noisily some weeks ago, but despite its softness the satin skirt is no less wide than its bouffant predecessor. Blue and black satin used alone and combined with a contrasting color in some striking way is exceedingly smart.

When one comes to woollen separate skirts the details of the story expand beyond telling. Every sort of tweed, homespun, frieze, serge, gabardine, corduroy, &c., is drawn upon, and a newcomer in the list of smart skirt materials—as well as of frock materials—is alpaca or mohair.

FOR BATHERS.

A Kit to Take on Your Vacation Dips.

For the bathing girl there is a special bathing kit of toilet requisites packed in a flat box which will not take up much room in the bathing bag. The box contains talcum powder, cold cream, sunburn lotion and toilet water, a big powder puff and a lamb's wool powder pad. Vanity belongings, such as rouge and lip stick, may be added to the assortment if desired, and in a crevice in the box the forehanded woman will tuck a supply of hairpins, large and small. The big powder puff is for powdering the skin freely after the bath, the lamb's wool pad for use in powdering the face. The toilet water will be refreshing on face and neck if salt water has left them dry and sticky, a combined state which salt water only is able to produce. The cold cream should be rubbed into the skin of arms and neck before going into the water as a guard against sunburn, for even in the hottest sun a bad burn is impossible if the skin is well creamed. It is not necessary to leave one's bathhouse showing a shiny nose and glistening arms. If the cream is thoroughly rubbed into the skin and the latter dusted over with talcum the application will not be apparent. And the sunburn lotion in the kit is for use if the cream has been omitted with disastrous result to complexion and arms.

banded with silk disks. It comes in biscuit color, circularly made, and also in taupe, these still being favorite tones for the autumn.

To Clean a Gas Range.

Take out all the parts, including the iron tops, the burners, etc. They will lift out easily. Place them in a tub or wash boiler and cover with very hot water. Dissolve half a cup of lye in the water and let them stand for an hour or so, or overnight would be better, if you can manage it. Great care should be taken that the hands do not come in contact with the lye water. The head should be kept turned away from the two when the lye is turned into the water, as it is very disagreeable to get the fumes.

If this is done once a month, or even once in two months, if there is not much cooking, the range will always be perfectly free from grease of any kind.

If your oven turns rusty or smells musty, rub the interior with French chalk every few weeks. This will give it the appearance of an enameled oven. It is worth trying.

When Umbrellas Were New.

The umbrella was described in early dictionaries as a portable pent house to carry in a person's hand to screen him from violent rain or heat. John MacDonald, a British footman who wrote the story of his life about 1778, said that he had a fine silk umbrella which he brought from Spain, but he could not with any comfort use it, the people calling out, "Frenchman, why don't you get a coach?" The hackney coachmen were clamorous against their rival, but the footman says he persisted for three months till they took no further notice of this novelty. Foreigners began to use theirs and then the English. But in the east the umbrella was in use long before that time.—New York Sun.

TODAY'S FASHION NOTE

Here is a fascinating frock in cream colored net trimmed with dainty pink satin ribbon. The skirt is built up in three flounces, each edged with the ribbon and the waist is draped over a vest of silver gauze. Puff sleeves with narrow ruffles and a belt of pink satin complete the details. In medium size the model calls for 8 yards 40-inch net, 3-8 yard gauze and 15 yards of narrow ribbon.

Major Frazier Inspects Harbor Prior To Awarding Contract

Oswego, August 11 (Special)—In connection with the visit here yesterday of Major Lawrence V. Frazier, United States engineer in charge of this district, it was announced that a contract would be awarded soon for the rebuilding of another section of the breakwater.

Major Frazier came here in his private yacht on an inspection tour. He went about the harbor with John C. Churchill, resident engineer, and considerable time was spent along the breakwater. This morning he left for Cape Vincent and after making an inspection there he will return to Buffalo, where the district headquarters are located. It was stated that bids would be solicited soon for the rebuilding of a section of the outer end of the breakwater.

OSWEGO MILK DISTRIBUTORS

ARE ON THE GRILLING IRON TODAY. MANY WITNESSES BEING CALLED.

Syracuse, N. Y., August 11—Accuracy of Syracuse milk distributors' accounts of milk and dairy products purchases and sales was delved into by the joint legislative committee on dairy products at its session in this city yesterday. The law requires that a detailed record of such transactions be kept and the probers questioned all the witnesses on this point. Like other cities it was found that the records were not always kept strictly in accordance with the law.

Several witnesses testified here. They included ice cream dealers, milk and dairy product distributors and producers.

E. R. Hawkins, of the Cloverland Dairy company testified that his firm kept only a sales book and did not keep a stock account showing the amount of milk taken in, sold, etc. He admitted in reply to questions that thefts of milk might occur without the company's knowledge. He was ordered to bring his books when he returned to the hearings.

John A. Pease, of the Netherland Farm Dairy Company had his records on a piece of paper.

Albert L. Brockway, dealer and distributor of Auburn, told the committee that a law should be passed making it obligatory to bottle all milk for the retail trade. He believed this method would help the farmer. He believed the milk should be labeled as to its strength and that the sale of skimmed milk for the poor people in New York should be allowed, provided it was labeled as such. He declared that New York state had fallen behind in dairy production because the producers are not making a fair profit.

The committee left last night for Oswego, where a meeting is being held, today. Numerous witnesses have been called and the Oswego investigation will be as thorough as the one held in Syracuse yesterday.

Health Officer Denies New Cases of Infantile Paralysis.

Oswego, August 11 (Special)—Dr. James K. Stockwell, health officer, denied last night reports that were in circulation that addditional cases of infantile paralysis had developed here. There are no cases under observation and the health officials have no fear of an epidemic in this city.

The condition of Venila Coe, 5 year old daughter of Leonard Coe of this city, who is suffering from the disease, at a cottage at Lake View, was reported improved tonight.

Killed By a Bull.

James Dwight Kershaw, seventy-seven, was killed at 4:30 o'clock yesterday afternoon by a mad bull on his farm at Pompey Center. He was alone in the pasture when the animal suddenly attacked him.

The Motorman Died.

Auburn, August 11 (Special)—William Forbes, of No. 161 South Seward avenue, the Auburn & Syracuse Electric Railroad motorman whose car collided with a steam traction engine at 7:30 o'clock yesterday morning two miles east of Skaneateles, died at 11:45 o'clock last night in the Auburn City Hospital.

Bracelets.

Bracelets have been worn as ornaments by almost every nation, savage as well as civilized.

To Hang a Skirt.

An easy way to hang a skirt by oneself is to put a piece of chalk in the opening of the dining table and push the table together so as to hold the chalk firmly. Then with the skirt on turn slowly around, chalking the skirt as you turn. This done, take the skirt off and with a yardstick mark off the same number of inches below the chalk line that you desire it to be. If carefully done you will have a beautifully hung skirt.

Red Cedar.

Red cedar chests, in which supplies of all kinds can be stored, but which are especially useful for things that moths like, can be bought in the shape of window seats. With a few cushions they are made into a part of any room where they are placed. These chests are bound with brass and are made with good locks.

FOURTH OF JULY TO BE TOY DAY

AMERICAN TOY MANUFACTURERS WILL ATTEMPT TO INAUGURATE A NEW FAD.

Should toy manufacturers of the United States achieve their desire, Santa Claus will soon die from overwork in hot weather, and the omnipresent American youth will loudly howl in protest. Strange as it may seem, toymakers in this country have plans afoot for the institution of a second Christmas and a partial abandonment of the glorious Fourth of July.

Imagine old Santa driving his reindeer from the ice fields of the North Pole to distribute mechanical devices, dolls and Christmas trees to millions of boys and girls in the United States on a roasting hot Fourth of July morning. The jingle of sleigh bells would mingle strangely with the snap and bang of firecrackers.

Now that the German and French toy markets are closed to the United States buyers, manufacturers of toys in this country believe there is a chance to further the safe and sane propaganda for the Fourth and to place another branch of American made products in its rightful position. There has been during the past few years an ever increasing tendency to make Easter week a time for general shopping similar to the Christmas rush. In the same way, it is proposed to establish the Fourth of July as a time for the giving of toys, instead of wasting money on injurious firecrackers. The war has put a complete embargo on the exportation of dolls and toys from France and Germany. Germany has been the toy shop for the United States since pioneer days. Agents of the American stores are continually traveling through Germany and buying dolls, glass Christmas tree hangings and imitation pine trees. From France come a higher grade of dolls and mechanical dolls.

There is little fear that there will be a shortage Christmas in the supply of toys and dolls for the American manufacturers have set to with a will and although they have not yet been able to duplicate all of the German and French dolls and mechanical toys, the United States products will give just as much satisfaction. Formerly more than two thirds of the Christmas toys came from France and Germany. It is just as hard to get the usual number of Japanese playthings which have in former years added much to the doll families of America's little daughters.

The toy makers of the United States are to meet in Washington soon to discuss the situation and to find out the best means to convince the public that the Fourth of July should be turned into a gift giving holiday.

PLAN MORE WORK ON BREAKWATER

MAYOR AND ALDERMEN MAKE INSPECTION OF WATERHOUSE AND CHURCH'S CREEKS.

A committee of the Common Council consisting of Mayor Victor C. Lewis, Alderman Van Valkenberg, Baker and McKay made a trip to-day to Waterhouse and Church's creeks to investigate the complaints of persons living in those vicinities. It had been claimed that the creeks were in an insanitary condition.

It is the opinion of the committee that the beds of the creeks are badly in need of cleaning, but the question of whom shall pay the expense of the work is as yet undecided. The Board of Public Works will, at its next meeting, decide this matter.

THE QUIRK TODAY

When "His Brother's Wife," is shown on the screen at the Quirk Theatre today, picture fans in this city will not only see Carlyle Blackwell, their favorite, but also see opposite him the most charming leading lady who has ever played and costarred with Mr. Blackwell in the person of Ethel Clayton, recently added to the World Film forces after several years the featured star of the Lubin forces.

Seek Views on Advancing Clocks

Ogdensburg, August 11—The Ogdensburg Chamber of Commerce has received a communication from the Rochester Chamber of Commerce asking the views of local business men on the question of conserving daylight by setting the clocks of the nation ahead next year. The clocks would be advanced one hour during the summer season. It is not known yet what the sentiment of local business men is.

Driver Struck By Train.

Pulaski, August 11 (Special)—A. Frost, driver of a large truck used in road construction on the Pulaski-Altmar highway, was badly injured last night when the truck was struck on the Salina street crossing of the New York Central by train No. 18, bound for Syracuse.

Frost was placed on the baggage car, and after a change of engines the train left here at 1:10 for Syracuse. Frost was taken to a hospital there.

"Secret History."

Each player is requested to write on a card or slip of paper the name of some well known woman in history or fiction or in modern life. These are dropped into a basket, and all are then asked to write upon another set of papers the names of certain men whose names and careers are familiar to the average person. These are put in a second basket and well mixed, and both are passed around.

Each player draws one paper from each basket and cudgels his wits to write or tell a brief story bringing in the names of the man and woman that he has drawn, as hero and heroine. The more impossible and ridiculous the better. One person who drew "Rip Van Winkle" and "Xantippe" represented Rip's wife as a reincarnation of the virago who made Socrates' life miserable.

"Mother Bird and Hawk."

This is a fine out of door game and may be played by a large number. Children are arranged in groups in a row. Each group has the name of some bird, such as robins, sparrows, canaries, etc. About fifteen yards to the right of the birds and in front of them is a space for the "mother bird." The same distance to the left is reserved for the "hawk." The mother bird calls, "Come out, canaries" (or any other group). At these words the canaries all run to the mother bird, the hawk trying to intercept and capture them. If tagged they are imprisoned by the hawk. If they reach the mother bird's home without being tagged they are safe. Game continues till all birds have been called out.

Decapitation.

For ONE, which flows from tropic trees,
Men brave the storms of southern seas.
TWO'S thought to bring its wearer ill,
Yet's purchased and paraded still.
My dearest friend I call my THREE,
Though some rebuke me, half in glee,
And say, "That is but slangy lore.
His name is Albert—call him FOUR."

Sewing Hint.

Every woman who has ever attempted to lay hems on napkins or tablecloths or to hem them after they are laid knows the impossibility of doing them quickly or well if the stiffening is not first removed. One way to get them in proper condition is to rub the linen between the fingers and thumbs along the entire length of the hem. This gets out the stiffness and prevents needles from breaking.

Another and better method is before the linen, napkins particularly, is cut apart, wet it along the line of division and for about an inch on each side with a small toothbrush dipped in soapsuds. Not only will the thread draw with few if any breaks, but the hem can be laid with much greater ease. Never attempt to cut linen by the eye. It takes little more time to draw a thread, and that is easily made up by the quickness and accuracy with which the hem is laid.

Forces Are Pursuing Retreating Austrians

(By United Press)

Petrograd, August 12—General Letchitski's forces have crossed the Zlota Bistritza River near Stamislau in pursuit of the retreating Austrians on the Czarna Bistritza River in the region of Nadzorna, twenty-two miles southeast of Stamislau. It was officially announced today.

NATIONAL GUARDS ORDERED TO BORDER

(By United Press)

Washington, August 12—The general orders of the war department to commanders were issued at the war department today to send all of the remaining national guard organizations in their district to the border as soon as they have been fully equipped.

Germans Dropping Bombs On English Coast

(By United Press)

London, August 12—Two German aeroplanes dropped four bombs on the English coast near the city of Dover at 12:25 this afternoon. General French commanding the home forces reported no material damage was done.

ITALIAN VICTORIES

(By United Press)

Rome, August 12—Italian troops scored further victories in the city of Goritz, crossing the Dallome and carrying the western slopes of the Monte Mazlozen. It was officially announced this afternoon. Italian detachments have occupied Occashidsella.

PREPAREDNESS CELEBRATION

FULTON IS BEING WELL REPRESENTED IN OSWEGO TODAY.

Fulton is represented by several organizations and city officials in Oswego this afternoon. Mayor Victor C. Lewis will head the contingent from Fulton and he will be accompanied by the aldermen, supervisors, and other city officers. Postmaster Conley will head the post office employes.

Exalted Ruler J. W. Stevenson issued directions to the Elks' lodge to meet at the Elks' Home this afternoon at 2:30 o'clock. They had a special car for Oswego. The Elks wore white trousers, white shoes, white sailor straw hats with purple bands, white shirts and purple ties and white gloves.

The Modern Woodmen of Fulton, will make their first public appearance in their new uniforms in the Oswego parade. The marching club will have more than fifty members in line and they are sure to make a hit with the crowd. The Woodmen will wear white shirt and trousers, white hats, with a red silk band inscribed M. W. A., and green neckties. They will also carry axes. The new silk banner will also be shown for the first time. This was awarded for the largest gain in membership in the year 1915 in New York State camps. The camp has also the largest membership in the State of New York and won second prize for that reason.

The Odd Fellows of Fulton will be up in front in the parade and will show the Oswego folk that the Oswego marching club of the order does not monopolize all the marching skill. They will be uniformed in white duck trousers, white shoes and hats. The Maccabees and the Red Men will also be in line and will probably be uniformed.

The noted Elks' band of Fulton, headed the contingent from this city. Chief Dyer led a platoon of ten policemen from this city in the parade. This is the first time that the Fulton finest have appeared in a parade outside their own balliwick.

In addition to the organizations many Fultonians are making the trip by auto, trolley and steam railroad. The Fulton people are thorough believers in and exponents of reciprocity. They gratefully recall the large attendance of Oswegonians at the Fourth of July celebration.

THE DEAD TOWN

Did you ever go into a town, and as you stepped from the train, have it strike you suddenly that the town was dead? Have you ever had a town described to you as a "dead town?" Have you ever stopped to analyze just what is meant by these words "dead town?" In the last analysis they mean just one thing—and that is that the merchants of the town don't advertise. A dead town has certain positive aspects of demise which are as bald as a piece of crepe hanging on the door of a private house. The stores seem to be merely existing. Their shelves are covered with apparently unsaleable goods. The storekeepers seem to by vying with each other to see which will win the prize as the town grouch. If you talked with them they knocked the town, they knocked the business, they knocked their neighbors. They were continually complaining that other people did business and made money, but that they didn't seem to be able to sell anything. They guessed it was the town. Yes, that was it,—the town. If you ask that merchant if he advertised, he would have looked at you with amazement. What was the use of advertising when business was so bad? People who had money to spend, he would tell you would go to Syracuse. No, he would say he didn't advertise? He wouldn't throw good money after bad. On the other hand, go into a live town and what will you see? The merchants have attractive displays in their stores. The daily newspaper is filled with big announcements of special sales or low priced goods. They are not afraid of other towns because they have the same means to reach the people—advertising—that makes the big cities great. The local newspaper is pushing, pushing, pushing. Everybody is working and everybody is happy and boosting. If you want a live town get behind the daily newspaper and the newspaper will do the rest. Forget the timeworn arguments that the paper is a dead one. The paper is alive enough if the people are alive. The surest test of a live town is a live newspaper, and a newspaper can't be alive unless the town boosters do their share.

SOME COMPLIMENT

It is not often an editor hands himself a compliment.

But this is the exception, and that is just what we are doing because a certain well known citizen of this community has and is persistently recognizing the value of this paper as a reliable disseminator of local news, and has paid us this compliment in a manner which speaks volumes for his knowledge of the good things of life.

He is not destitute of this world's goods, but he possesses the rare faculty of holding onto that which he gets, lest the pangs of poverty overtake him in his declining years.

He possesses a wide knowledge of local affairs, because he is a constant reader of this paper, and the knowledge extracted therefrom is turned to good account in his own behalf.

If an important event is soon to occur, he knows of it in advance, because he has read of it in this paper.

And if an acquaintance is sick, or death has overtaken some member of a family, or the stork has paid a visit to the home of some friend, he is among the first to extend his condolences or congratulations—because of these, also, he has read the paper.

He is a man of wisdom—a pillar of strength—with a brain which absorbs to the utmost of the essence of life.

Few things escape his notice, for he is ever on the alert.

But the one thing which he never overlooks is this paper, and therein lies the compliment which we take unto ourself. It gives us a feeling that we are something more than a mere worm in human shape, that we may be even a whole cog in the community wheel.

True, he is not a subscriber to the paper—his dollar never reaches this office—but he reads the paper just the same.

For his neighbor is a subscriber and pays in advance, and in his generosity he lends the paper to the "pillar of strength' by request.

But it may not always be so, in time we have hopes that the "pillar" will pay us the super-compliment of permitting us to add his own name to our subscription list—paid in advance, of course.

Time sometimes works wonders even in the newspaper field.

And we have hopes, strong hopes.

THE REAL "GOOD FELLOW"

The real "good fellow" is the fellow that knows something good about everybody and tells it. He never knocks on his neighbor or digs up the past. He always lends a helping hand to the fellow who is up against it and gives him a chance to make good. He never forgets to do and say the little things that makes his wife happy. His children find him a jolly chum and an everready playmate. His home is a haven of love, happiness and contentment. The real "good fellow" is the world's greatest asset.—Bert Morehouse in Ginger.

WOMAN'S WISH

Woman is the most patient of all mortals. She will toil and moil, and sew and cook. She will nurse sick children, and wait on her husband. She will sacrifice all, surrender all, forego all the ordinary pleasures and pastimes of life, and obey implicitly the call of duty. In return she asks and must have her husband's sympathy and love; without it the world appears a blank. A few words of encouragement and sympathy from the husband to the tired and discouraged wife, rest and encourage her more than anything else.

—The price of flour continues to advance. The Republicans say it is the tariff. The Democrats say it is the war. The Socialists say it is the result of the system. What do you think, Mr. Workingman.

—It is strange that those who profit by war don't fight and those who profit by industry don't work and those who profit by the government don't obey the laws.

True Christianity will make the machinery of peace sing a sweeter song than all the roar and rumble war's machinery ever made.

STATE OF MIND

The world is not run by logic or argument. It is the state of mind that controls affairs social, political and religious. Against the state of mind facts strike like drops of water on a duck's back. What's in your mind is of far greater importance than what is coming to it. If you could only know a man's state of mind, you could tell exactly what position he will take upon all questions that arise.

The lesson from all this is that one ought to be very careful to create the right state of mind. It is something he cannot let go by default. And how is it done? By exposing oneself to the right environment; by cultivating the right companionship; by associating with nature; by communing with the infinite; by abstaining from all hate, prejudice and selfishness. That is the way to get the right state of mind.

It is one of the fruits of the spirit, like all virtues are. If anything is intrusted in, there will come a false judgment. How often have we seen a man's state of mind assailed by favors, dinners, trips, games, promises. That practice is constantly going on, especially in politics and public affairs. Don't wait for such influences to create a state of mind. Do the work yourself through the power of noble influence.

And most of all is the caution needed in our educational scheme, where boys and girls are trained for citizenship. There can be no true citizenship when the state of mind is a strawpile to be blown hither and thither by every little breeze of opinion that comes along. That will not occur if the state of mind is reverent, cheerful, frank, clean, sincere, serious, generous. If one's life is adorned with these qualities, his state of mind is safe against arrogance and selfish appeal.

LET CONSCIENCE WORK

Take up a daily paper, any of them. The chances are that if you scan it closely you will see recorded an automobile accident.

Three times out of four it is attributable to the fact that the wrecked car or cars were traveling too fast for control at the crucial moment, due to the insatiable mania of the average autoist for speed.

Every community has passed laws seeking to regulate the pace for automobiles. Our roadways teem with notices of fixed gaits and warnings of penalties for exceeding the limit. But it is absolutely impossible to so police the thousands of miles of highway that even a small per cent. of the violators of the speed ordinances can be detected.

There's but one remedy. That's for every man and woman who drives an auto to make a solemn mental pledge to observe to the letter the speed restrictions, and not alone that, but to follow the ordinary rules of caution in passing another vehicle. It's a matter for the individual action of every automobile driver, a matter of conscience alone.

Will you pass upon it for yourself? Reflect and determine to the satisfaction of your own conscience if you are always safe and sane in your driving. If you are not, be it once in so often, you are criminally negligent.

A serious accident may never happen to you, but if you are careless it is likely to happen at any moment. Then it's too late.

ARE YOU POOR

That young man who thinks he is poor because he has no bank account, little understands the value of God's free gift of health and strength, little appreciates the fact that the brightest and best of the country are self-made, and come to the notice of the world from just such beginnings. Not by idly moaning that they are poor, but by going carefully to work, perfecting themselves in their chosen pursuits and becoming so useful to those about them that their services are always in demand, whether it be on the platform, in the shop or in the kitchen, for all are honorable alike.

—The mothers of this town who are responsible for the girls who gad the streets should stop and think what they are doing. These girls are no longer children. They are at the impressionable age. Where will you have their impression come from—from the riff of the street or from home? It is for the mothers of this town to settle the question.

—Whenever we hear a man blaming God for the want and misery in the world we rejoice that our God doesn't belong to him.

This week our extract is from an essay on THRIFT by Hyman Wanderman, of Yonkers High School, Yonkers, N. Y., who received the fourth prize of $15.00 in gold.

"The future is in the hands of the present, and the present should provide for the future, for we must have something laid by for our old age and the 'Rainy Day.'

"If we save what we can, though it be but a cent a day, and put it away systematically, we are doing correctly, for we are contracting a habit which will cause us to save all we can when our incomes are larger.

"Extravagance invite failure, and failure rarely fails to respond to the invitation."

What to Do For Insect Bites

The most common bites or stings are those of the bee, wasp, yellow jacket, spider, horse fly, yellow fly, red bug or chigger, flea, mosquito and bedbug.

In case of a sting of any kind the first thing to do, of course, is to remove the sting. This can best be done with the point of a knife or needle, but care should be taken not to break the skin for fear of infection. Then the next best thing perhaps is to apply ammonia water or soda water to the affected parts.

In the case of bites, as well as of stings, when the sting is removed, as a rule, a paste of common baking soda applied to the affected parts or these bathed in ammonia water is all that is necessary. Where the poisonous effect is severe, however, send for a doctor. In the meantime the patient should lie down and keep quiet.

An application of a 50 per cent solution of a saturate solution of potassium permanganate, which you get at the drug store, is very efficient for insect poisons and for the poisons of plants, too, such as poison ivy and sumac.

HOW AUTOS CAN OBTAIN GREATER MILEAGE TO THE GALLON.—Gasoline is elastic. A gallon will drive a car almost any distance—the record is nearly ninety miles—says a writer in the current number of Motor Print. This is food for thought for those who are worrying over the high price of fuel. By taking a few simple precautions it is possible for every owner to reduce greatly the consumption per mile.

If the car is run too slowly or fast there is fuel waste. Fifteen miles per hour is a good average.

Until now the average motorist has been careless about the amount of fuel he used because it was comparatively cheap and was a small percentage of the total car expense.

Make sure that you are getting all the gasoline that you pay for. Some owners are not. Watch the counter on the pump to see that it registers the correct number of gallons and that the operator does not tamper with it while filling your tank. Furthermore, be certain that you obtain full measure. Some gasoline pumps leak; others have been "fixed" to give a short gallon. It is almost impossible to find the error by examining the pump, so it is necessary to check the amount in your tank by frequent measurement, or, if this is not feasible, it is advisable occasionally to buy a gallon in a can of your own and measure the quantity when you get home.

Most cars can be operated with a leaner mixture without affecting the production of power. Some motorists may even deem it advisable to run with a very lean adjustment, notwithstanding a reduction in hill climbing ability or speed. The exact adjustment must be determined by trial.

An auxiliary device which may be attached to the manifold and operated from the dash should be used. It will be found helpful when running with light load along a smooth, level road or downhill. When the motor is used as a brake the suction on the carburetor is reduced to a minimum by opening the auxiliary air device wide.

The car should run easily. All the bearings should be well greased and free. It should be possible to push the car without difficulty with one hand on a smooth, level surface. The importance of reducing friction to the minimum is shown by the fact that a racing car in good condition may be pushed with one finger.

How London Got Its Seagulls.

The seagulls which visit Regent's park and hold converse with their brethren in captivity are no doubt descendants of the birds that suddenly appeared in London about twenty-five years ago. Previous to this seagulls had never been seen so far inland, but the severe weather probably brought them in search of food. By a lucky chance for them as they hovered over Blackfriars bridge a coster was passing with a barrowful of sprats. People bought pennyworths to feed the birds, which after this not only came every day to the same spot, but spread the news to their distant relatives and friends, and so it was that London got its seagulls.—London Chronicle.

Slow Parting.

William Dean Howells, the novelist, was talking about a poet.

"His work is overrefined, overdelicate, overnice," he said.

"In short, his work reminds me of the young husband who said to his bride at the end of the honeymoon:

"'Darling, I'll have to leave you every morning hereafter to go to business; but, to make the parting less abrupt, I'll no longer take the 8:15 express, as I used to do. I'll take the 8:20 slow accommodation.'"

Temperature of Sea Water.

The temperature of ocean water varies at the surface from 28 degrees F. at the poles to over 80 degrees F. in the tropics. The cold water toward the poles has an annual variation of less than 10 degrees F. at any one spot, and the warm water of the tropics also has an annual variation of less than 10 degrees F. in a band that nearly encircles the earth. This is the region of the coral reefs and atolls. Between these regions of small annual variation there are two bands surrounding the earth where the annual variation is greater and may exceed in certain regions 40 degrees F. at any one spot.

Says the Old Philosopher.

"We can't all be cap'ns, colonels an' gin'rals, my son," said the old philosopher. "Providence has so fixed it that somebody must lead an' somebody must follow. The hilltop looks good to us, but we're closer to the thunder up there, an' ef we can't stand steady on our feet it's mighty apt to shake us down."—Atlanta Constitution.

Admitted.

"Your husband appears to believe in himself thoroughly!"

"Yes; he is credulous."—Exchange.

Count Up Your Sins.

Augustus Montague Toplady's world famous hymn, "Rock of Ages," originally appeared in the Gospel Magazine for October, 1775, and was prefaced by a terrifying list of the number of sins the average man may be supposed to commit during the course of his lifetime.

"At ten years old," computes the morbid mathematician who wrote the article, "each of us is chargeable with 315,036,000 sins, at twenty with 630,720,000," and so on until at eighty the list stands at 2,532,880,000.

THE PATH OF DUTY.

Do not let impending difficulties unman you, but face them bravely if they come. Oftentimes the hindrances that lie in the path of duty may be compared to the tollgates upon our turnpike roads; they are kept shut until we are just upon them and then fly open, as it were, of themselves. And that is true enough. If they had been open a week beforehand we could but have gone through at last.—John Newton.

Ready With His Tongue.

James T. Brady, a prominent member of the New York bar in the last century, was noted for his ready wit. Quick as Mr. Brady was with the readiness of his race for repartee, he sometimes met his match among his own countrymen. He was once examining an unwilling witness who persistently called him Mr. O'Brady. At length, even his proverbial good nature being a little ruffled, he said to the witness: "You need not call me Mr. O'Brady. I've mended my name since I came here and dropped the O." "Have ye, now?" retorted the witness. "'Pon my word, it's a pity ye didn't mend yer manners at the same time!"

It Didn't Pay.

"Do you think politeness always pays?"

"I do not. I got this black eye from being polite."

"How so?"

"At the Slugger Smith-Swatter Jones prizefight last night. I was there on a complimentary ticket that Slugger gave me."

"What of it?"

"He got knocked out cold in the third round, and I, to be polite, went around and told him I enjoyed it very much."—Puck.

When They Ate From Trenchers.

Wentworth Woodhouse has long been famed for its hospitality, but in the eighteenth century, when professional caterers were unknown, guests there had to rough it. On Jan. 7, 1732, Richard Wardman writes from Wentworth Woodhouse that "my lord is to have a great diner for all his tenents and some other of his loveing gentlemen that is parsons and dokters and potheccarys, and none is to be admitted but what has tickitts. I am told they have killed eighteen Does, Barons and Spondones. His lordship has got a man to make him three Hundred duzon of wooden trenchers. He finds him wood, and the man makes them."—London Mail.

Jenny Lind as a Child.

Jenny Lind as a child of three years was the lark of her parents' house. As a girl of nine she attracted the attention of all lovers of music and entered the Stockholm conservatory as a pupil. Her continuous studies at so tender an age caused the sudden loss of her voice, and for four full years she pursued her theoretical and technical studies, when suddenly the full, sweet sounds came back, to the delight, as every one knows, of thousands for many years.

"My ma don't allow me to play with you," said the boy with the freckles. "She says you're a bad boy."

"My ma don't allow me to play with you, neither," retorted the red headed one. "She says you're the worst boy in the neighborhood."

Dr. Johnson's Cudgel.

The reign of George II. was a great fighting time. Every man who went abroad knew that he might have to fight to defend himself against footpad or bully. Most men carried a stout stick. When Dr. Johnson heard that a man had threatened to horsewhip him he ordered a thick cudgel and was easy in his mind. There were no police, and therefore a man had to fight.

PROFIT IN CAPONS.

Altering Cockerels the Best Way of Handling Surplus Males.

Cockerels allowed to follow their natural growth are marketed in the fall after five or six months' growth at low prices, when surplus stock is being sold from every farm preparatory to housing the flock for winter, says the Orange Judd Farmer.

The course which successful poultrymen now follow is to caponize the cockerels and put on the market a well fattened bird that brings a high price. Caponizing is an operation made easy by experience that removes the sex organs. The cockerel then loses his male characteristics, and he much resembles the female in general appearance and in disposition. The tendency to crow, to fight or bother the hens is overcome, and as a gentle bird he eats, grows and lays on fat. This is just what the poultryman wants, for capons are prime for the market between late December and April, when the prices are comparatively high. At this time the capons weigh from eight to twelve pounds and are worth 18 to 30 cents live weight on big city markets, depending upon weight conditions and supply and demand.

The Buff Orpington is a utility bird, being an excellent layer and a splendid table bird. It has a long, deep breastbone well clothed with flesh that is kept soft and tender for a longer period after maturity than most meat breeds of poultry. The cock shown is a Single Comb Buff Orpington.

The heavier breeds, such as Brahma, Plymouth Rock, Orpington or Wyandotte are usually preferable for caponizing. Some growers have success with the lighter breeds; but, generally light bred cockerels such as White Leghorns are quickly fattened in the late spring or early summer and are sold as broilers or fryers at high prices.

Cockerels are caponized at six to ten weeks of age, when the shock of removing the sex organs is not harmful. Even a child can do the work, but it takes a little practice to get the right knack. Sharp instruments of proper design are essential to make a clean cut in the side of the fowl and sever the cords holding the organs. There are good makes of instruments upon the market which are available at a reasonable price and accompanied by complete set of directions. A skillful operator will do the work in one and one-half or two minutes per fowl.

A day and a half after the operation the capons are fed for the first time, being given soft feeds and plenty of water until after a week, when they may be turned with the flock. About three weeks previous to marketing the following winter they are penned and fattened. A good fattening ration is seventy pounds of cornmeal, thirty pounds of low grade flour, twenty pounds dry beef scraps and ten pounds wheat bran. About a quart of buttermilk or sour milk is mixed with each pound of the mixture and fed twice a day in amounts that the fowls will clean up in twenty or thirty minutes. This, of course, is supplemented with all the fresh water, grit and charcoal the capons will use.

Feeding Oats to Chickens.

The new oat crop is now being harvested, and if you have plenty of this grain no better food can be found for your chickens. You can feed them straw and all and let the chickens thrash out the grain for themselves, or you can feed the oats after they are thrashed. They are better for the chickens if they are soaked overnight, as then the husks are not apt to hurt the fowls' crops.

Keep the Good Rooster.

It is not necessary to "swat the rooster" if he be valuable for breeding purposes. Indeed, it would be highly foolish to so lose a fine bird. But when the breeding season is over he should be kept separate from the hens, since infertile eggs, eggs where there is no rooster, keep fresh much longer than fertile eggs.

Keep Vermin Off the Hens.

It is a hard proposition to have heavy egg producing hens and a house full of lice at the same time. Get rid of the lice and you will soon notice the difference in the laying of the hens. Hens will not lay well when they are troubled by vermin. Get down to business and clean house.

POULTRY PICKINGS.

Don't keep fowls for which you have no use.

To keep up the stamina of your breeding stock the males should be changed every year.

For best results in breeding do not have the male too closely related to the females.

Continually cleaning up to keep clean is what pays in poultry keeping.

When the parent birds lack vitality the chicks are naturally weak, not worth raising, and it is time, patience and money thrown away.

FOWLS NEED EXTRA CARE DURING MOLT

Molting is not a disease. It is a condition. It is a critical period, often developing whatever weakness there may be in a fowl. While it is not a disease, it may so aggravate a weakness that sickness and death very often follow.

All things being equal, hens of the same breed should molt at virtually the same time. The season usually starts in August and continues for about 100 days—that is, to say, that length of time will be consumed from the first falling of feathers to the completion of the coat.

When a fowl is in good health the growth of the new feathers will be rapid. As fast as the old feathers drop the new ones can be seen coming. In such cases there will not be that nude or ragged appearance noted as in the case of a slow or hard molt.

Hens that are very fat will shed their feathers quickly enough, but they seemingly lack the power to renew the coat. On the other hand, a fowl very poor in flesh will have great difficulty in even shedding its feathers.

The natural process of molting, although often accompanied by ailments, for which generous diet, warmth and cleanliness and good air are the best remedies, is not to be included under the head of "loss of feathers and mange." This matter is analogous to mange in cattle and proceeds from similar causes (half starvation and uncleanliness), inducing debility. A firm, smooth plumage always indicates health in poultry, and when the feathers are ruffled and staring (unless in molting) the presence of some disease may be inferred.

Hens during the molting season, which usually begins in August, need good care. Clean, protected houses are important, as also is exercise. The food must be more of a nitrogenous order, such articles as corn, cornmeal, middlings and potatoes to be given sparingly. The amount of bran and green bone should be increased. The males should be separated from the females. An orchard is an ideal place for hens during this process. The hen shown is in the molting period.

In 1906 the Cornell university arranged a series of experiments in forced molting compared with the natural molf, and among the findings was that the oldest feathers were shed first regardless of the age of the hens. Hens have individual traits as to season of molting, but seldom as to rotation of molt. The molt is more quickly completed in young hens than in old ones. Hens molting very late molted in less time than those molting earlier. The "forced molt" in one year did not influence materially as to time and completeness the molt of the succeeding year. Furthermore, the starved hens produced fewer eggs after the molt was completed than did those that had a natural molt, and paid a much smaller profit.

Another point brought out was that there was less mortality in the two-year-olds, which were fed dry mash, than in either the one-year-olds or three-year-olds, which were fed a wet mash.

The general conclusion is that it is not profitable to "force a molt" by starvation methods and that apparently it is good policy to encourage hens, by good care and feeding, to lay during late summer and fall rather than to resort to unusual means to stop laying in order to induce an early molt with the hope of increasing productiveness during early winter, a season which is naturally unfavorable for egg production. In short, it appears wise to let hens lay when they want to lay.

LAW TO BE SIMPLIFIED

DELAYS IN COURT PROCEEDURES TO BE ELIMINATED. OTHER REFORMS TO BE MADE.

Shall the code of civil procedure be repealed and a simplified code, known as the "short practices act" be substituted in its place?

Oswego County will be visited within a few weeks by a state legislative commission headed by Senator J. Henry Walters, of Syracuse, who seeks to learn the opinion of lawyers on the question.

A movement is on foot to repeal the code because every year it is amended in many sections and some lawyers claim that unless a practitioner keeps well posted on the amendments he is liable to meet with serious trouble in the preparation of his papers and in his pleadings before the courts in every practice of the legal profession. Others are of the opinion that a system of no code and leaving the rule of practice to be described by the courts would be unsatisfactory in any sense. Still another element believe that while the code should be retained it should be simplified and stripped of many of its technicalities.

There is a difference of opinion among local lawyers as to the advisability of changing the code. Some are opposed to such action saying that the present code should be left alone. Others are non-committal because they have not read the proposed new code.

Very few local lawyers have studied the new code. It comprises four volumes and while nearly every local attorney has a set of the proposed code, very few have given it diligent study and for that reason were not willing to comment upon it.

The legislative committee which will visit this county is composed of Senators J. Henry Walters, of Syracuse; Charles D. Newton, of Genese, and William B. Caswell, of Brooklyn and Assemblymen John Knight, of Arcade; Abraham Ellenbogen and Frank Aranow, of New York, and August C. Flammann, of New York.

Explaining the situation Frank P. Malpass, of Syracuse, lawyer and secretary of the committee says:

"The judges and lawyers of the state are being called upon to express their ideas and opinions as to one of the most important reforms attempted in New York state in years, namely the revision and simplification of practice and procedure on civil causes in all courts of the state.

"There has been much discussion in recent years about the law's delays and as to the high cost of justice in our courts. Since 1876 the courts of the state have been bound hand and foot by the present civil practice act known as the code of civil procedure. This act has been criticised from one end of the state to the other as too technical, too inelasic and too minute in practically every particular to permit of equal justice in all cases. There has been a continuous demand for its abolition entirely or for a radical condensation and simplification.

"Various state boards and committees have wrestled with the problem and presented plans and suggestions for what each thought to be the solution, but to date none of these have been adoped in its entirety. The latest plan to be offered was reported to the legislature in 1915 by the state board of statutory consolidation, which had been at work upon the subject for a number of years. The chairman of the board A. J. Rhodenbeck, of Rochester, now a Supreme Court Justice, gave his personal attention to the work of classification and revision and his plan in detail in the form of four printed volumes has been widely distributed throughout the state. A joint committee of the state legislature is now investigating the whole subject and also giving careful attention to the plans proposed by Judge Rhodenbeck.

"A number of public hearings will be held by this committee during the next few weeks, the first of which will be held in Binghamton.

"The committee is endeavoring to ascertain the general sentiment as well as the views of the bench and bar upon two questions in particular as a guide to the character of its report to the legislature. The questions are: 1—Should the present code of civil procedure be repealed and abolished and its place taken by brief legislative practive act defining the fundamental rules underlying court practice and leaving the details of the practice to be governed by rules to be made by the courts instead of the legislature?

2—Should the code of civil procedure be revised, condensed and simplified but not absolutely abolished, the powers of the legislature and the courts as to the making of court statutes and rules to continue as heretofore?

"The committee has taken no definite stand in the matter up to this time. This subject is of such overwhelming importance to the lawyers of the state that there should be a large attendance at the local hearing.

Proper Method of Pressing Garments

Good pressing is not only an important part of dressmaking and tailoring, but it is also one of the most important features in the care of clothing.

Skirts should be pressed over an ironing board.

The board should not be too heavily padded. The covering should be drawn tightly and should be of a firm, smooth material that will not leave the imprint of the texture or weave.

Darts and curved seams should be pressed over a curved surface such as a tightly padded cushion.

Sleeve seams may be pressed over the handle of a broom after covering it smoothly with cloth.

Use the curved edge or side of the ironing board when pressing open seams. This prevents the edge of the seam being pressed into the garment.

Nearly all pressing is done on the wrong side of the garment.

The seams may be dampened if the material permits. For surface pressing lay over the material a damp cloth and press dry. When pressing on the right side a firm dry cloth is first placed over the garment.

Use a rather heavy iron for pressing.

Press slowly. Lift and place the iron, bearing down heavily.

Always avoid a sliding motion, as it is apt to stretch the material.

FARMERS TO GET RAISE IN MILK

IF THEY WILL ORGANIZE AND CONTROL THE MARKETING OF THEIR PRODUCTS.

The State Department of Foods and Markets, of which John J. Dillon, is the head has announced a plan whereby it is asserted thousands of dairymen throughout the state who are furnishing New York city with 800,000,000 quarts of milk annually and as many more million quarts to other cities can obtain one cent per quart more.

In the outline of the plan the farmers are held responsible for the fact that they are selling milk at a loss. They are charged with a lack of organization, a willingness to accept what the distributors offered. It is pointed out that in forty years the producers have not set the price.

The department has studied the milk situation for nearly a year and, it is said, demonstrations have proved that a profit could be made after the dairymen are paid one cent per quart more than they are getting now. Announcement of the result was hastened because of the threatened strike among the farmers. They are urged not to sign new contractes before October 1st without fully considering the plan.

The scheme is to perfect throughout the state dairymen's organizations to take over the factories operated by the big distributors, appoint these organizations selling agents and attend to collections and bottling, now done by the trust. The department will act as selling agent if the organization desires. It is argued that the distributors would offer little opposition to the reduced expense; the dairymen would earn the one cent increase with little outlay and with less labor.

Another benefit to the farmer would be that he would make his own inspections or his association would make them. Much dissatisfaction has arisen from these inspections whereby the grade of the milk, therefore the price, is fixed by the distributor. The associations would have to examine herds and attend to the health details demanded by the state. This, however, is considered negligible with good profits assured.

"The department does not believe in disturbing existing business conditions," said Commissioner Wilson, "as any radical disturbance results in waste. If the dealer takes a reasonable part in the consultations and the adjustment of prices to the producer and the adjustment is cost to the consumer, he will have much to gain in the comprehensive organization of the producers. If he should selfishly attempt to maintain the system he has so long maintained with disaster to the producer, he would invite a contest that might prove disastrous to his organization.

"If the large dealers refuse to pay a reasonable price for milk, depots must be established where milk can be sold at wholesale to storekeepers, bakers, ice cream manufacturers and the like."

The department admits that if the big distributors fight the plan milk could not be marketed to individual customers as is now done by the large companies. Opposition is not expected as the trust officials have expressed themselves willing to adopt any measure that will be of benefit to the dairymen provided that it does not cut into their claimed profits of one mill per quart.

"A great state industry is concerned in this matter," says Mr. Dillon. "Dairying is the state's greatest industry and it cannot afford to let it decline. Whole sections of the state are going out of the milk business and unless the industry can be put on a paying basis the milk produced will not be sufficient for the needs."

"A slight advance to the producer will increase the production to normal capacity of farms and the danger of a further advance to the consumer will be averted. A prosperous condition of our farms will increase their taxable value and will result in a profit as well as honor and glory to the state."

The commissioner believes that if the plan is taken up immediately time will be afforded to perfect the organization before the new milk contracts with the distributors are signed. He believes the associations would put producers in a position to market milk strictly on the basis of supply and demand and with milk and cream available customers will not go without them to support a monopoly for a small number of dealers, no matter how powerful they may have seemed to be when milk could only come through them."

HOW

To Feed the Family Well and Inexpensively

IN response to several inquiries as to the minimum cost of food for a family we publish herewith a list of articles of food sufficient for a family of five for one week, says a bulletin of the New York city department of health. It may be of interest to our readers to know that this diet supplies about 9,500 calories and 430 grams of protein per day. On the assumption that the family consists of two adults and three children this allowance is ample:

1 lb. butter	$0.4[illegible]
1 bag sugar (2½ pounds)	.2[illegible]
1 lb. rice	.0[illegible]
1 lb. dried peas	.0[illegible]
1 lb. beans	.0[illegible]
1 lb. farina	.0[illegible]
1 lb. oatmeal	.0[illegible]
½ box cocoa (¼ pound)	.1[illegible]
4 lb. prunes	.[illegible]
1 lb. onions	.0[illegible]
6 lbs. potatoes	.2[illegible]
1 head of cabbage (medium size)	.0[illegible]
1 lb. cheese	.2[illegible]
2 doz. eggs	.0[illegible]
2 lbs. meat daily at 20 cents	2.8[illegible]
2 loaves of bread daily at 8 cents	1.12
2 qts. of milk daily at 7 cents	.[illegible]
Total	$7.81

The list of foods here shown has been tested practically for about two years. The nutritional results have been excellent, a fact which indicates better than any theoretical study would do that the diet combines all the food elements needed by the body.

If we could devise a plan for insuring such a diet or its equivalent to all the poor people in this city we would materially reduce our death rate. In many instances of malnutrition encountered at the department's clinics the fault is due to ignorance of what constitutes a proper diet. The department of health has been trying to spread such knowledge for some time. Certainly this list should prove invaluable to the housewife who is trying to provide a wholesome diet at a very limited cost.

TIP FOR MOTORISTS.

How to Remove Greasy Dirt From Your Lily White Hands.

The owner of a car who cares for his vehicle to a large extent generally makes up his mind to having dirty hands when some periodic and greasy job falls due. There is no real need for this, as a little care beforehand will obviate the retention of the greasy dirt afterward. Before starting work on a greasy piece of machinery take cylinder oil and rub it well into the skin. After the work is done do not take the grime off by rubbing the hands on waste or a cloth. Instead put on some more cylinder oil or any light oil liberally, using it as you would soap and water. When the oil has worked under the grease and cut it loose from the skin wipe the hands thoroughly on a piece of waste. When you have wiped off the oil you will find that it has taken the grime with it, leaving the hands ready for a good wash with soap and water. If the motorist will try a tar soap for this final stage he will be [illegible] When on the road the hands can be made fairly presentable by using the oil wash alone, leaving the soap and water until reaching the destination. This method of keeping the hands in shape is used by many of the mechanics in big repair shops and in motorcar factories. It is a particularly useful tip just at this time, when all the cars in America are being run out of the garages for their season's work, most of them by owners, who have no decided preference for dirty hands.

COOK SPEAKS.

How to Cook Vegetables and Conserve Their Food Value.

It is important that vegetables should be prepared and cooked in such a way as to conserve all the available food material and their mineral salts. The portion of the vegetable next to the skin contains the greater quantity of mineral matter, protein. Carrots and vegetable oysters should be scraped. Other vegetables should be pared as thinly as possible.

When the liquid in which the vegetables are cooked is drained off it carries with it much that is valuable, says Good Health. As far as possible this should be saved and used as the foundation for soups and sauces.

Vegetables should be cooked only until tender. Many vegetables develop a strong and unpleasant flavor and are rendered less easily digested by overcooking. This is especially true of cabbage, cauliflower, etc. When overcooked they also take on a reddish hue.

Strong flavored vegetables, such as onions, cabbage and turnips, should be cooked uncovered.

How to Pull Your Auto Out of a Hole.

If the rear wheels are stuck in the mud dig holes in front of the front wheels for them to fall into to give the initial start, and if the car does not continue then block the rear wheels instantly and repeat the operation. Place brush in front of the rear wheels and turn them as slowly as possible to keep from churning. If one rear wheel is on good road, try putting on the hand brake fairly tightly to destroy the action of the differential, or fasten the mired wheel so that it cannot turn and the other wheel will do the work and slide the mired wheel along the ground.

The instant you realize you are getting stuck in sand or mud stop right there and look over the situation instead of fighting the car and burying it deeper and deeper.

WHY

Mufflers Are Necessary On All Automobiles

LET us consider the case of the muffler. The exhaust valve opens while the burned gas is still under a pressure of from twenty-five to thirty pounds per square inch. If this were exhausted directly into the air the resulting noise would stifle conversation in the car, annoy everybody along the street and very quickly get the driver into difficulty with the police. The muffler prevents all this. It provides a chamber in which these exhausted gases may expand and cool somewhat and at the same time breaks up the pressure by allowing it to leak out slowly through a number of very small holes instead of letting it loose in one "big noise."

In the early history of the automobile mufflers were not used, and everybody for blocks around knew when an auto was coming. As the automobiles increased in number this became a nuisance and was stopped by law. Then they sought a means of stifling the sound. In the early muffler there was trouble because the gas would back up in the cylinder and decrease the power of the motor. It was thought there was no way to decrease the sound without decreasing the power. Therefore the automobile manufacturers devised a valve to "cut out" the muffler on the car whenever extra power was desired. Sometimes the back pressure was so great as to interfere when driving through heavy roads or up hills. The "cut out" let the gas exhaust directly into the air instead of going through the muffler. At the present time nearly every city has a law prohibiting entirely the use of muffler "cut outs."

As a matter of fact, those well posted on automobile engines understand today that the "cut out" is absolutely unnecessary if the muffler is kept in proper condition. Muffler manufacturers have been able to produce a design with which there is no back pressure at all.

The average driver, however, does not know that his muffler needs as careful attention as any other part of the mechanism, and so he neglects it. In these days of noiseless cars it requires a great number of very small openings inside the muffler. These become clogged with soot or carbon from the exhaust. The deposit collects very rapidly, especially when the grade of the oil is poor or too much oil is used. It also results when the carbureter is adjusted to give too rich a mixture. When these small openings become clogged the exhaust gas cannot escape readily, and naturally the cylinder of the engine is not clean at the exhaust stroke. Result: It is impossible to bring in a full cylinder of new gas on the next intake stroke. There is not a full charge to explode, and this means a loss of power to the engine.

How to Make Bechamel Sauce.

Put a tablespoonful of butter in a saucepan and as it melts add half an onion, chopped fine, and let it stew until tender, but do not let it brown. Mince two ounces of raw ham, add the ham and let it brown. Then add a stick of celery, chopped fine, and half a carrot, also chopped fine. Add a bunch of sweet herbs, chopped fine; two cloves and four allspices. Let all simmer gently for two minutes without browning. Then add half a pint of cream by degrees, but do not heat it. Stir until the whole is velvetlike. Strain and set on the fire for a few minutes to heat.

HOW TO PICK OUT YOUR NEW "SPECS."—If you find it difficult to thread a needle, if the printed page dances before your eyes, if you feel an inclination to avoid reading because it "makes you nervous," if your eyes are red rimmed or perhaps puffy looking after an evening of bridge, undoubtedly the time has come when you need glasses—not necessarily that badge of declining years, "sight glasses," but certainly the beneficent "rest glasses" which make so much difference in comfort and happiness and, if women did but realize it, in the condition of the nerves. "Rest glasses" take the strain off the eyes, make needlework and reading more enjoyable and incidentally help to put off the day when "sight glasses" will be needed. When you need "sight glasses" you will know it. No one will have to tell you that—you can no longer read newspaper print—but there are dozens of women struggling along, straining their eyes over fine sewing and trying to read music in the light that always used to seem good enough over by the piano, who do not realize that inexpensive "rest glasses" would improve their spirits and their tempers. Nothing makes one nervous and irritable—even depressed and blue—like the need of help for the eyes.

The straight bar of metal bisecting the nose makes the eyes look nearer together and imparts a hard, shrewd look to the face. The nose piece with an arch or curve rising over the nose seems to blend into the lines of the face and eyebrows, and glasses are not the first things one thinks of when gazing at that face.

THE HUSTLER.

How to Look Well Dressed Without a Great Expenditure.

In the American Magazine is an account of one of the most successful insurance solicitors in the country, who attributes a large part of his success to the fact that he always looks well dressed and prosperous.

"If you have only one suit of clothes keep that one suit clean and pressed all the time," he says. "Press your trousers yourself every day if necessary. I have pressed my trousers lots of times. Keep your shoes shined.

"If you can afford several suits change off from one suit to another frequently, and keep all of them spotless and well pressed. I never wear a suit longer than the second day at a time. To change every day is better. It gives the clothes a chance to 'rest.' I always hang my clothes on hangers the minute I take them off. It gives them a chance to 'come back' into shape and the nap to come up again.

"It is a great economy to have lots of good clothes. A suit will last twice and three times as long and always look well if you keep changing off from one to another. Besides, people get tired of seeing a man in the same suit day after day for a whole season."

INFANTILE WARDROBES.

How to Dress a New Baby With Little Expense.

If you are preparing a layette for a brand new baby these are the things you will need: Four abdominal bands of soft flannel, unhemmed, six or eight inches wide and twenty inches long; four shirts of silk and wool or cotton and wool; four flannel skirts made to hang from the shoulders; four nightgowns or wrappers of outing flannel open in front.

Three knitted bands of wool and cotton, with shoulder straps; six very simple white slips; four dozen diapers—cheesecloth, birdseye or diapering; three pairs of socks for a summer baby or three pairs of long stockings for the winter baby.

One simple coat and cap; one pair of mittens for winter; two short, loose sacks for sudden changes of temperature; two crocheted, knitted or flannel blankets.

How to Avoid Smoke When Lighting a Fire.

Simple way of avoiding the smoke and gas which always pour into the room when a fire is lit in a stove, heater or fireplace on a damp day: Put in the wood and coal as usual, but before lighting them ignite a handful of paper or shavings placed on top of the coal. This produces a current of hot air in the chimney, which draws up the smoke and gas at once.

THE GIRLS AT HOME SADLY MISSED BY OUR BOYS NOW ON THE BORDER

No One There to Cheer the Troops With a Word or a Smile—El Paso Women Pay No Attention to Men In Khaki

Little Stories About Daily Life of Those Who Are Protecting Country Under Rays of August Sun In Texas.

IF the girls "back home" could know how much the soldier boys now on the border yearn for woman's society they would or should feel both sorry and glad—sorry that they cannot be there to cheer their young men friends with a smile and a word and glad that their sex is receiving the compliment it is from the boys in khaki.

If any one wishes to know the greatest deprivation of camp life far from home, tell him it is just this—the loss of women's society.

To every man in the 25,000 or more citizen soldiers now concentrated near El Paso women have had a part in his home life. If he is not married, he has perhaps a girl in whom he is interested, and if not that he has had at least the benefit of meeting women in his everyday life of store, workshop, office.

His evening stroll usually has been brightened at least by a "how-de-do" from some girl of his acquaintance.

Heroes Can't Understand It.

How much this meant to him Johnny Doughboy did not understand until he reached the border. On the way down, at towns through the middle west, he was feted by motherly women and cheered by girls who gave him their addresses and gazed at his uniform and accouterments as at the trappings of a knight.

Being a hero, he made acquaintance among the fair sex without trying. They came to him and, casting aside maidenly reserve, asked his name and gave their own.

Here in the lonesomeness of camp, amid heat and dust and an eternal sunshine that blazes at him all the time from morning to night, the soldier boy finds himself deprived of even a single word with a woman.

No women visitors come to his camp. It is a working camp. Visitors are not welcomed. The only woman seen in it for days on end is a prim old lady who teaches Spanish, accompanied by her daughter, a pretty girl of seventeen, who walks with her eyes on the ground.

It is good to look at this fresh and modest girl, but it only serves to accentuate the heart hunger of the boys who gaze at her. "Oh," say they, "if a fellow could only speak to her! Just to hear her say it was a fine day would be a relief."

This may seem odd to folks at home who have never experienced the great loss of being excommunicated from the society of the gentler sex, but the feeling is exactly the feeling of ninety-nine in every hundred men who see an occasional woman in camp.

Lonesome as a Desert Island.

But, say the girls at home, don't the soldiers get a chance to go to town and meet people socially?

They go to town. But in the case of the enlisted men their diversion there consists of wandering about the streets for an hour or two in the evening, buying a few postcards and some simple refreshment and "beating it"—soldiers' term for hastening—back to camp before 9:30, empty handed, empty hearted and as lonesome as a man on a desert island.

This lonesomeness is increasing from what the soldier sees in town. The streets through which he lounges lonesomely are filled, between 7 and 9, with promenaders, El Paso people, who, lightly dressed and clean, look as if they were cool.

They look contented, and in their content they gaze right through Johnny Doughboy from up north without seeing him or betraying any consciousness of his presence in the same street with them.

This particularly is true of the feminine portion of the crowd in the street. The soldier in his dusty khaki is no hero to them. As he passes through their vacant gaze he feels that the warm greetings he received on his way across the country must be part of a fantastic dream.

A Study In Brown and White.

The soldier from the north discovered early in his stay here that womankind in El Paso is of two kinds, presenting a study in brown and white. Possibly in no other American city may you see such contrasts in large numbers of women.

Half the women one sees on the street are Mexican, in all shades of brown, from deep, old bronze through sepia to nearly white. Some of the darkest are of Indian type, and only braids on either shoulder and a blanket would be needed to transform them, visually, to children of the wild.

Others have a cast of features suggesting the Asiatic clear cut, with the regularity of the Aryan race, racial relics, one would say, of some forgotten people out of the dim past who emigrated to this part of the world before recorded history began.

Here and there you see a face almost purely Spanish, pale, large eyed, delicate, with black hair on a low brow and full red lips.

All these women wear black with a black cloth or mantilla on the head. Their skirts are long as the fashion goes today and they walk the streets with the quietness of nuns.

Lawson's Decoy Dog.

Occasionally an enlisted man of social training has the hardihood to carry off a girl at the roof garden for a quiet chat under the trellis and the stars and a glass of lemonade. El Paso women are abstainers.

One such adventurous youth is Douglas Lawson of Boston, son of Thomas W. Lawson, who won his way into the restricted circle of the roof garden by a gentle stratagem.

He was encountered one evening recently in his uniform of a sergeant in the First artillery carrying a tiny Chihuahua dog in the bend of his mighty arm. He is something more than six feet and a giant in muscular development, and the dog might weigh a pound.

"Why the dog?" said the correspondent.

"Sh-h!" said "Dug." "This is the greatest decoy in the world. He is my Siberian bloodhound."

We watched the dancers trotting about the floor. At the end of the dance the decoy began to function. The prettiest girl in the hall dropped her partner's arm and came straight at "Dug."

"Oh, what a love of a dog!" said she. "May I hold it?"

Sergeant Lawson was willing, and the party adjourned to the pergola. Introductions followed.

Other girls came up and petted the dog. Before his leave was up Sergeant Lawson had greatly enlarged his social circle.

"There are more ways than one of beating this game," he remarked as he tucked his "Siberian bloodhound" into the front of his tunic and started back for camp.

Married Men Should Leave.

Married men among the Illinois troops in Brownsville should, unless they be officers, take advantage of the dependency clause provided by congress if they feel the welfare of their families is jeopardized by their sojourn on the border.

This was the positive declaration of Brigadier General James Parker, the commander of the Brownsville district, when the subject of coercion on the part of some Chicago employers was brought to his attention.

"This situation was bound to arise," said the general. "When the employers consented to take care of families of their employees who would suffer keenly by deprivation of salary the impression was general that the army was going into Mexico soon. This has not happened. Now this problem arises. The married man's place is back at home unless he feels his family is not going to suffer in any way by his absence."

"But, general," protested some one, "these boys feel that an odium will exist if they leave. What will the folks back home say?"

The gray haired veteran scowled.

"Odium?" he repeated harshly. "From whom would the odium come? There are thousands and thousands of single men, scot free, walking the streets of our big cities, enjoying themselves. Why aren't they down here? This is where they belong, not the married men. Let anybody in Chicago criticise a married man for going home and I'll give him reasons for his going. When I mustered in New York regiments in the Spanish-American war I refused married men because I wanted soldiers who did not have family troubles worrying them. And study in after years convinced me that I did right."

Miss Cudahy Sends Provisions.

Miss Mary T. Cudahy, daughter of the late Michael Cudahy, the Chicago packer, has the comfort and happiness of the boys of the Seventh infantry close to her heart. As proof she mailed a key which was received by Colonel Daniel Moriarty. It was not the key to her heart, however, but her letter explains.

"I am inclosing a key," she wrote, "for a trunk which I am forwarding by express. It contains some of the things which I saw by the newspapers you have asked for from the Red Cross. These things will add a little to the comfort of the men.

"P. S.—The trunk is an old one which I do not need any more."

A Satisfied Soldier.

Following is a copy of a letter received from a New York soldier in Texas, giving rather a vivid but truthful picture of the conditions prevailing in Camp McAllen:

We are extremely comfortable now, and I don't know when we have been so cheerful since our arrival here. Personally I have never felt so wonderfully happy in my life. I adore it all. The work is extremely hard and the heat terrific, but as they give you a siesta from 12 until 4:30 every day it saves the men a lot and gives you time to do a lot of personal things. Yesterday and the day before I worked constantly without stopping from mess to mess. The food now is delicious and nice cold water on tap constantly. We also have built an exchange, where you can get all soft drinks, ice cream, shoe laces, etc., and they take one's clothes and have them washed for you. It is run by the sheriff of the county. So any sympathy you waste on me personally must stop immediately. Some of the fellows in other regiments and outfits have suffered terribly and been very ill, but haven't done half the work. The squadron, on the other hand, are in the pink of condition and working like mules. That's what good physical condition, a great deal of precaution and two weeks at camp before arriving have done for us. The camp is kept immaculate and great care taken for the prevention of any disease. We get the daily papers only five days late but it's all the same in the end. I wish you could be here and see us work. Our day consists of getting up at 5, dressed at 5:10, grooming and feeding until 6, drill at 7:30 until 10:30, feeding, watering and grooming at 4:30 again. Then nothing to do until "taps" except eat, smoke, talk and sleep. Of course we have to board on floors build a woodshed for the horses, police camp, etc., but they have details for that. Then there is very strict sentry and outpost duty at night, as times are a bit uncertain in this district, and precaution of best kind must be taken. We go on sentry duty about every fourth night.

Some of Villa's Traits.

Dr. Jerome Triolo, a soldier of fortune who has served several years in Villa's army in a medical capacity with the title of lieutenant colonel, told some stories that show he is quite an interesting person to meet after all.

"There were several reasons why Villa was a great man," said Dr. Triolo, "but the chief were the fact that he was always reliable about paying his men. If he ever had money his men got their share and he was an unusually clever strategist. No one could have taken Juarez in the clever manner in which he did without being one.

"It was commonly believed in the latter part of November, 1913, that Villa was on his way to storm Chihuahua City. Several miles outside, however, his army held up a train which was leaving Juarez for that place. He forced the conductor to send a telegram back to the Juarez authorities that he was returning, as Villa was advancing toward Chihuahua with a large force and he feared that the train would be unable to get through. After this message had been sent Villa and his merry band hopped on the train and rode back into the city of Juarez. The inhabitants had prepared no greeting for him and were so surprised to see him that they were able to offer no resistance to his invasion. It was surrendered to him almost without a struggle.

"Of course Villa was cruel, but that detracted in no way from his generalship, for Villa is no more cruel than any of the Mexican people. He thought nothing of taking life. At Torreon he lined them up seven deep for their execution in order to save ammunition. In Juarez one day Villa stopped a peon with a bundle of stolen calico under his arm.

"'Where did you get that?' asked Villa.

"'I found it on the street,' was the rather flimsy answer. Villa turned to a soldier by his side.

"'Shoot him,' he said calmly, and walked on. The man was shot.

"On another day in the same town Villa spied a rider wanted for some crime going down the street. He pointed him out to a guard with his usual laconic request, 'Shoot him.' I doubt if the man shot ever knew what struck him.

"If a person asked a favor of Villa when the latter was in a bad mood he was just as apt to be shot as to have his favor granted. After executions he was particularly morose, and it was an extremely hazardous proposition to approach him for two or three days afterward."

His Cry of Wolf.

The bad boy of the legend who cried "Wolf!" was a poor amateur in results obtained compared with Corporal Franklin King, Eighth Massachusetts, in charge of a border patrol near Torcer, eight miles from El Paso.

He told of the discovery of a band of at least 150 bandits moving over the border through Lasca pass and toward Finlay, and that started two companies of cavalry thundering out of El Paso on a freight train and also out of El Paso an entire battalion of infantry packed tight in ten motor trucks intent on saving the population of that hamlet and with orders from General Bell to mete out drastic punishment to the Mexican marauders.

But Corporal King had sent out his report on an observation with the naked eye over a distance of five miles, and with the coming of the cavalry and infantry, hot for a tilt with the bandits, came the information from a scouting party that the "bandits" were a harmless herd of about 200 horses, the property of Dave Allison and Dad Finlay, famous rifle shots and ranchers, who had been making their way toward Finlay.

"The cavalry has the honor to report that here are the bandits," said Lieutenant Rabogg, pointing to the two ranchmen, "and we have also found 200 horses that belong to them."

The investigation showed that Allison had stopped at the precise time and place described by Corporal King to tighten up his pack and look over his herd grazing at the place.

A Bit Lonesome.

Down in Donna, Tex., doing border duty is Private Kit W. Hilman of the hospital corps, Second Texas infantry, who apparently is lonesome. He has written the following letter:

I am very lonesome, for, believe me, this is some lonesome and also hot place. And every one in our outfit has some one to write to and some one to write to him, while I have no one at all to hear from anywhere, any time. And you people in that country can't imagine how lonesome it is here without a word from civilization. And if you would be so kind you might help me out. I am twenty-one years old, height five feet three inches, hair dark, eyes dark, complexion also dark—tanned in this sun. Have no bad habits. Am straight and honest and can give references if needed.

KINGLY QUEENS.

Elizabeth of England, Maria Theresa and Catherine the Great.

It is said that Queen Elizabeth bore a greater variety of popular nicknames than any other British sovereign. She was called the "Virgin Queen," "Gloriana," "Good Queen Bess" and occasionally in compliment to her masculine mind "King Elizabeth." Her successor, James I., proved such a feeble and effeminate monarch by contrast to the kingly queen that he incurred the nickname, rarely ventured in public, but frequently in the privacy of safe company, of "Queen James."

Elizabeth's masculine nickname, although less familiar to us today than most of the others applied to her, is recognized in Southey's punning stanza upon the armada, in which he makes playful and patriotic use of it in conjunction with the name of her great naval commander, Sir Francis Drake:

Oh, Nature! To old England still Continue these mistakes.
Give us for all our kings such queens
And for our Dux such Drakes!

The kingliness of other queens than Queen Elizabeth has been recognized sometimes in one way and sometimes in another. When Maria Theresa in the hour of her country's peril appealed in person to the Hungarian noblemen to try their loyalty to herself and her young son the fire and eloquence of her address so moved them that as their swords flashed from the scabbards and they crowded about her, waving the naked blades in token of fealty, they shouted fervently:

"We will die for our king, Maria Theresa!"

In 1794 when General Suvaroff, after the second partition of Poland, stormed and captured Praga after a twelve hours' desperate battle against a superior force he reported the victory to his imperial mistress, Catharine the Great of Russia, in these words:

"Hurrah! Praga! Suvaroff!"

To this message Catharine, "as befitted a king and a commander," says the historian, [illegible] brevity, [illegible] in three words both congratulation and promotion:

"Bravo! Field marshal! Catharine!"

BISMARCK AS A SPEAKER.

How the Great Prussian Statesman Impressed Andrew D. White.

It was my good fortune to hear Bismarck publicly discuss many important questions, and his way of speaking was not like that of any other man I have ever heard. He was always clothed in the undress uniform of a Prussian general, and as he rose his bulk made him imposing.

His first utterances were disappointing. He seemed wheezy, rambling, incoherent, with a sort of burdensome self consciousness checking his ideas and clogging his words. His manner was fidgety, his arms being thrown uneasily about and his fingers fumbling his mustache or his clothing or the papers on his desk.

He puffed, snorted and floundered, seemed to make assertions without proof and phrases without point, when suddenly he would utter a statement so pregnant as to clear up a whole policy, or a sentence so audacious as to paralyze a whole line of his opponents, or a phrase so vivid as to run through the nation and electrify it.

Then perhaps after more rumbling and rambling came a clean, clear, historical illustration carrying conviction. Then very likely a simple and strong argument, not infrequently ended by some heavy missile in the shape of an accusation or taunt hurled in the faces of his adversaries. Then perhaps at considerable length a mixture of caustic criticism and personal reminiscence, in which sparkled those wonderful sayings which have gone through the empire and settled deeply into the German heart.—"Autobiography of Andrew D. White."

Hearing an Electric Current.

An interesting electrical experiment illustrating the fact that sound accompanies the passage of electricity through the body can be shown in the following manner: Let two persons each hold an electrode from a small magneto or shocking coil. Let one person with his free hand touch the other person behind and just below the ear. A buzzing sound, otherwise inaudible, can be heard. The tone of the sound depends upon the number of interruptions of the current.—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

Not a Matter of Money.

One's wordly possessions seem to have very little to do in the matter of determining one's happiness, and we verily believe that we got just as much pleasure and satisfaction out of life in the old days of our poverty, when we used to give our wife a carpet sweeper for Christmas, as we do now, when we give her half a dozen salad forks.—Ohio State Journal.

"PRESIDENCY" BOOK

NOW READY

Contains Facts, Figures, Dates and Data About All Past And Present Elections

SETTLES ELECTION ARGUMENTS INSTANTLY

If you want to know how the political "machine" works; if you want to know the "strength" of each state; if you want to know how your state and other states have voted during the past twenty-five or thirty years—in other words, if you want to know a hundred and one different things about politics that the "other fellow" doesn't know, you have only to secure a copy of "The Presidency of the United States" and all of this desirable information will be yours.

This little book has been compiled by experts at great expense, and the information it contains is absolutely reliable and strictly non-partisan. It is not only intensely interesting but has a distinct educational value that makes it desirable for school children as well as for grown-ups.

"The Presidency of the United States" will be used by thousands of people this year as a quick and ready reference for information on all past and present elections, and as "final authority" for settling all election arguments and disputes.

The ability to answer correctly the questions this book contains indicates a more intimate knowledge of past history and current events than is possessed by the average citizen. Many a surprise is in store for anyone who thinks to do so without "brushing up."

We were fortunate in securing a supply of these books for immediate delivery. If you want one you can secure a copy at this office for "only ten cents."

"Be sure you are right—then go ahead," was the favorite saying of old David Crockett. Those who believe in this motto will find in "The Presidency of the United States" an abundant supply of historical facts and non-partisan information upon which to base their statements and arguments during the 1916 presidential campaign.

Easy & Practical Home Dress Making Lessons

Soft Frocks For Midsummer

A well-made frock is known by the simplicity of its trimming. This soft design in crepe and taffeta whispers a hint of the bands to be stitched on the edges of skirt for early Autumn.

Figured crepe is a material of which smart women never seem to tire, for there is no other textile which so combines delicacy with excellent wearing quality and which moreover, may be had in such lovely colors. The costume shown here has the underblouse front, back and sleeves cut in one. The jumper is removable and closes at the left shoulder. Dainty and in the height of fashion is the one-piece skirt gathered at the top and plaited at the sides to form a cascade drapery. In medium size the dress requires 6¾ yards 36-inch material, with ¼ yard belting 2 inches wide for the stay and ¾ yard contrasting material 27-inches wide for the band on the skirt.

In order to properly proceed with the cutting of the dress, the material for the underblouse and piecing for the skirt will have to be laid in an open width on the sewing table. The section of the pattern marked "A" is laid on lengthwise thread of this material, as near the edge as illustrated in the cutting guide. The belt and two collars are laid around the underblouse, with the skirt piecing to the right.

The skirt, front and back of the jumper are cut from the material after it has been folded in half, each of the sections named being placed on a lengthwise fold of the crepe. If desired to finish the neck with a standing collar, this may be placed to the right of the back section.

Any preferred outline may be used for the neck, by cutting out the upper part of the underblouse.

It is predicted that much attention is to be paid to hems during the coming season. This means, of course, hems turned under and applied. Serge and taffeta are to be combined with crepe to a wide extent, it is whispered from Paris.

In the evening the more diaphanous the dresses of the young girls, the more becoming they are, and scarves of tulle of every color are twisted round the figure and neck, just as a pretty woman knows so well how to adjust them with the most satisfactory results.

RAPID FIRING GUNS.

Hurling a Tornado of Death Into the Ranks of the Enemy.

Since the introduction of the modern quick firing gun and the perfection of "time" shrapnel and high explosive shells new and scientific methods of rapid firing have been developed. When a rapid and overwhelming fire is wanted, the range is found, and the ground within the limits of the prescribed area is swept from end to end with a tornado of fire.

In the French army this is called a rafale (a squall or gust). It is a series of eight rounds per gun, each two rounds being laid to burst 100 yards farther than the last, thus sweeping an area of say 400 yards with a rain of shrapnel or a devastating series of high explosive shells. "Sweeping" fire is a series of three rounds per gun, one in the original line, one to the right and one to the left. This is also, and significantly, called "mowing." A further combination is called "search and sweep."

Time was when the commander of a battery stood near his guns and shouted commands to his gunners. Today the artillery officer may be two or three miles away directing operations by telephone from an observation post in view of the enemy's works. The observatory may be a ruined house, a tree trunk, a shell crater or a haystack, and from this point he observes the accuracy of the fire of his battery and telephones instructions to the gunners in the rear, altering the range when necessary and communicating any enemy movements, so that the shells soon find a new mark.

Instruments of precision and careful calculations are of course necessary to fight a battery in this manner, many allowances having to be made for the difference in height, distance and angle between the battery commander and the guns under his charge.—Exchange.

TWINS AND A WEDDING.

Simple Method of Solving a Matrimonial Problem.

The late Colonel Anstruther Thomson in his "Eighty Years' Reminiscences" tells the story of a remarkable marriage.

Of the many quaint "characters" whom Colonel Anstruther Thomson met in the hunting field none captivate the imagination like the brothers Leamon of Ivybridge—"two thin, delicate looking old men, twin brothers, seventy-two years old, with white hair, very gentle and courteous in manner, red cutaway coats, white cords, black boots, caps and gloves; most respectable and nothing slangy about them; they are so alike you can hardly tell them apart."

When past sixty years of age one night after hunting one of them said to the other:

"I have been thinking neither of us can have much longer to live in this world, and it will be a terrible thing for the survivor to have to remain here alone. Don't you think one of us ought to marry?"

"Yes," was the reply. "I have thought so for a long time."

"Well, do you know of any lady?"

"Yes, I do. Is there any one you fancy?"

On comparing notes it appeared they had both selected the same woman, the manageress of the hotel at Okehampton.

"Well," said one, "we have lived together all these years without a wry word, and it's a pity we should fall out at our time of life."

So they tossed up which should marry her. The winner rode down to Okehampton next morning and was accepted. All three lived together, and the wife nursed both brothers in their last illness and was left their money.

The Three Scutaris.

There are three places named Scutari—one in Albania, one opposite to Constantinople and one in southern Greece. It is curious that each name comes from a different original form. The Greek Scutari is otherwise Scatari, the Albanian one is the Illyrian Scodra, and the Asiatic one is the Turkish Uskudar. This last means a courier carrying royal orders from station to station and commemorates the fact that this place, the ancient Chrysopolis or City of Gold was the starting point of the Asiatic couriers.

How He Got the Moon.

John Henry Maedler, the astronomer, whose favorite study was the moon, having learned that Frau Witte, the wife of the state councilor, owned a wonderful model of his pet luminary, spent years trying to gain possession of it. As her husband was living, he could not marry the owner of the model, so he married her daughter, and at the death of his mother-in-law the coveted moon became his.

Successful?

PINEAPPLE SHERBET.—Take one pint of grated pineapple, one pint of sugar and one and one-half pints of water. Boil the sugar and water until the former is thoroughly dissolved. When cool add the grated pineapple and the juice of two lemons and freeze fast. When partly frozen add the beaten whites of two eggs, mix thoroughly, take out the dasher, pack well and let stand for an hour or more.

Peach Sherbet.—Fill the can of the ice cream freezer about half full of peach juice, and when it is almost frozen put in the beaten whites of four eggs. When frozen the sherbet will be a delicate pink color. Use four eggs for a six-quart freezer.

Mint Sherbet.—Mint sherbet is delighful and is easily made. Have ready the juice of five lemons, one pint of sugar, a quart of water, half a cupful of mint leaves pressed down hard and a tablespoonful of gelatin. Let the water and sugar come to a boil add the gelatin and take from the fire. Crush the mint leaves and stir them into the boiling water with the lemon juice. When cold strain and freeze.

Peach Ramekins.—Cook half a cupful of rice in milk with a quarter of a cupful of candied orange peel and half a teaspoonful of salt until the kernels are soft. Then stir in one-fourth cupful of sugar. Half fill buttered ramekins, place two peach halves in each add a little more rice and pile on top a meringue made of the whites of three eggs, three tablespoonfuls of powdered sugar and a few drops of orange extract. Brown in a moderate oven and serve with orange sauce if desired.

Prune Whip.—Take about six prunes for a person and wash and stew till very soft. Then take a knife and cut in very fine pieces when cold enough to handle. Then add three-quarters cupful white sugar, and for the pulp of eighteen prunes take the whites of two eggs beaten stiff; add the prunes and stir till well blended. Set one side till near the meal you want them for then whip one-quarter pint of cream very stiff and put over each order.

COOLER ICEBOXES.

How to Keep Your Refrigerator Cold Without Extra Ice.

Many people do not keep their refrigerators at the proper temperature. Their economical nature permits the ice to melt away until there is little if any left in the compartment. This is a big mistake, for there is no economy in an empty refrigerator. The more ice you have in it the greater the economy. It is the melting of the ice which makes the refrigerator cold. The colder the refrigerator the more slowly will the ice melt.

Another way to keep the refrigerator cool is to open it as little as possible. It is also advantageous to keep the refrigerator in a cool part of the house.

It is difficult to say whether it is more important to keep the refrigerator cool or keep it clean. They are both big essentials in maintaining the health of the family. Every morning the refrigerator should be wiped out to remove the dampness which collects on the sides and affords a splendid place for bacteria growth. Once a week scald the refrigerator thoroughly with soda water. Cleanse all the corners and the drainpipes well. Fish, cheese, bananas, cantaloupes or any other strong smelling food should be kept well covered if placed in the refrigerator.

Where the Blame Lay.

Manufacturing sorrow is one of the worst of sins.

Diet and Morals.

Famous dietitians and doctors who have given careful study to foods and their effects upon the morals and disposition of human beings and animals claim that they can determine the character of food eaten by the physiognomy. This being true, it behooves us in the interest of our right to beauty, to confine our diet to such foods as are the allies of beauty and not its demonstrated enemies.

DEALERS MUST GIVE A BOND

FARMERS TO BE PROTECTED FROM DISHONEST COMMISSION MERCHANTS.

Rigid enforcement of the law compelling merchants who handle farm products to give bonds to protect the farmer will be one of the good results of the series of hearings being conducted by the Wicks joint legislative commitee, which held a meeting in Oswego yesterday.

Heretofore for some unknown reason the enforcement of this safeguard of the farmers has been practically neglected, but its real value has been shown by a case which has been reported to Commissioner Charles S. Wilson, state agriculture superintendent. Governor Whitman, who has been watching the matter has had the lay amended by the legislature so as to make it workable.

In the particular case mentioned a New York city Commission house went into bankruptcy. The State Department of Agriculture had compelled this concern to file a bond. When it became a bankrupt the state began proceedings to collect on the bond and more than $3,000 was realized. Because there was not any provision for the distribution of this among the farmers the house owed for produce the money was placed in an Albany bank. Commissioner Wilson asked the legislature to pass a law providing for such distribution and it was passed and approved by Governor Whitman. The interest on the original amount deposited to $3,278.52. As soon as the amendment became effective the checks were sent out to farmers who were creditors.

The Department of Agriculture is taking steps to safeguard the producers who sell their products to commission merchants or dealers to handle. The law provides that all commission merchants must obtain licenses and secure bonds. In this way the producer is better protected than when he consigned goods to merchants and depended entirely on good faith. When the law first became effective it was not well understood and there was some opposition on the part of the commission men to complying with it, but now this has disappeared and practically all of the dealers are filing bonds in accordance with the requirements of the law.

A TOUR OF INSPECTION

STATE REPRESENTATIVES WILL BE IN FULTON NEXT WEEK TO INVESTIGATE OUR WATER SUPPLY.

Dr. A. L. Hall our local health officer received a letter yesterday from Engineer Horton, of Albany, saying that the State representatives would be here Tuesday to make the sanitary survey of the water supply. Dr. Hall said that this inspection would be public and all are invited to go. Dr. Hall issued an invitation to the Common Council that they might see and hear what the state authorities find. The situation of our water supply at present is questionable from Dr. Hall's opinion. The evidence he has of this is as follows:

That a stagnant substance is surrounding the springs which five or six years ago was under cultivation. There are approximately eight acres of land submerged in the vicinity.

Three years ago forty cases of typhoid fever, of which five proved fatal, were traced directly from this source by Dr. Mason, of Rennsalaer Polytechnic Institute.

Dr. Hall said that the water supply thus far had proven all right, but as a prevention against possibilities the State authorities were requested by him to make the survey.

WIFE SEEKS INFORMATION

REPORT CAME THAT JOHN LOCHRAY OF FULTON WAS MORTALLY WOUNDED IN ALLIES' DRIVE AGAINST THE TEUTONS ON JULY 31ST

Paul White, of the First Canadian oversea contingent, who fell mortally wounded before the German trenches in France while fighting with the allies, is none other than Joseph Lochray, whose wife, Jessie Lochray, lives at 220 South Second street, this city.

It was stated that he had been mortally wounded in the allies' drive of July 31st and that it was the second time he had been wounded in the past three months.

Mrs. Lochray says that her husband enlisted at Toronto during the first year of the wear under the name of Paul White. He was employed in the woolen mills here before going away and leters received by friends after he joined the Canadian contingent said that he had enlisted under the name of White.

Mrs. Lochray is anxious to find out whether her husband is dead or alive. He was in a field hospital mortally wounded, the report said, but she has heard nothing from his condition.

Letters have been sent to the Canadian War Office at Ottawa and a reply is expected in a few days.

EVERYBODY WILL BE WELCOME

Meany is fast rounding into shape and it is assured that he will give the Syracuse bearcat a race for his money.

The winner of the bout will meet Kid Burns, the champion featherweight, of Canada.

MANUFACTURERS TO PAY A TAX

A MEASURE TO TAX THE NET PROFIT ON EXPORTED GOODS NOW BEING CONSIDERED.

Oswego county manufacturers who sell goods abroad may be forced to pay a tax on their net profits if a measure now being considered by congressional leaders becomes a law. The measure is designed as a substitute for the existing war revenue bill.

The tax on war munitions has been giving considerable trouble. They have been told, however, that the proposed tax would not be considered an export tax and they are looking upon it favorably.

The proposed plan would apply particularly to manufacturers who have made fortunes out of the European war and would add many millions to the government funds. It is substantially as follows:

"That every person or corporation engaged in the business of selling goods, wares, or merchandise of any description to any foreign government or to the agents or representatives of such foreign governments shall pay for each taxable year an excise tax of one per cent. on the net profits of such business in excess of ten percent. of the capital invested and not in excess of twenty percent. Two per cent. on profits not in excess of twenty and not in excess of thirty; three per cent. on net profits in excess of thirty, but not in excess of forty per cent.; four per cent. on net profits in excess of forty per cent., but not in excess of fifty per cent., and five per cent. on net profits in excess of fifty per cent.

AL. G. FIELDS MINSTRELS

WILL BE AT THE QUIRK NEXT WEDNESDAY

Such a prominent subject as "Preparedness" could not fail to find its way to the Al. G. Field Greater Minstrel program. The manner in which it is handled by Mr. Field suggests "Peace through Preparedness," and it is done with a blend of good humor and seriousness which develops a fair minded atitude from all.

Early America is represented in a tableau by a group of soldiers of the period of 1776, and music, marches and pantomime indicate the patriotic spirit of the Revolutionary days.

Then appear in the foreground files of foreign soldiers, all quarrelling among themselves, and disturbing the public peace, and finally reaching chaos. While the contest is still going on, Uncle Sam, accompanied by the Goddess of Liberty, appears on the horizon. Back of the mare assembled soldiers and officials representing all branches of the United States service. Suddenly the band bursts forth with the National airs of America!

At this the foreigners are immediately calmed as they observe the resources of Uncle Sam and his devotion to the Goddess of Liberty. Instantly the scene is lighted by myriads of red, white and blue lights and a hundred American flags are unfurled, when patriotic songs by the immense chorus epitomize the heart and spirit of America.

The Al. G. Field Greater Minstrels will be at The Quirk Theatre, Wednesday, August 16. One performance only.

LAW TO DRAFT THE CHILDREN

ALL MALE CHILDREN OVER EIGHT YEARS IN NEW YORK STATE MUST PREPARE FOR MILITARY SERVICE

Armed with thousands of leaflets bearing opinions of noted men and women against the military laws enacted by the last legislature John Turner, a Columbia University student and four pretty co-eds from other colleges will swoop down on the fair at Sandy Creek, August 23, in a campaign to have the conscription laws repealed. The party is making an auto tour of the state and will visit Whitney Point, DeRuyter, Margaretville, Ellenville, Cairo, Ballston Spa, Boonville, Moravia, Norwich, Delhi, Herkimer, Dunkirk, Watkins, Rochester and Syracuse.

Turner has donated the use of his automobile for the trip and the girls will give up their summer vacations to the cause of saving men and boys of the state from compulsory military service by draft.

Although the trip will be full of hardships there were scores of college girls who volunteered to make SIX .... the journey with Turner and from the list of applicants the most attractive and the most forceful speakers were chosen.

The party will direct their attacks against the Welsh, Slater and Stiver laws, which force all males into the military service over the age of eight years. The Welsh law provides for the training of children above the age of eight years in all elementary and secondary schools under the direction of the state military training commission. The Slater law forces military training upon every boy in high school, public school and college between the ages of sixteen and nineteen. The Stixers law empowers the govrnor to draft youths and men into the militia whenever he sees fit.

Turner and the young women will visit the above named places and deliver speeches and distribute thousands of pamphlets attacking the measures and urging that they be repealed or amended.

The big advertisers are the big merchants.

OSWEGO COUNTY AGRICULTURAL SOCIETY

PROMISES TO HAVE AN EXCEPTIONALLY GOOD FAIR—GOVERNOR WHITMAN WILL BE HERE FRIDAY.

The Oswego County Agricultural Society have made the following awards for the tent caterpillar exterminating contest. District school number 9, at Scriba under the supervision of Mrs. Olive Sheldon; Number 6, with Mrs. W. B. Van Sickle, and the South Granby school, with Miss Beulah Pengere as instructor, were the three schools obtaining the high scores. The individual prizes were given the following:

First prize, Howard Butler, of South Granby; second prize, Mabel Graham, of South Granby; third prize, Louise Judge, of Colosse; fourth prize, Minnie Wilcox, of South Granby.

The enthusiasm showed by the young people was much appreciated as the animal is probably one of the most harmful to the agriculturalist.

Secretary Kingsbury announced today that word was received by the officials of the state fair that they would undoubtedly conduct a spelling contest. They lauded Mr. Kingsbury for this event, claiming that the colleges are complaining inasmuch as the students entering college for the past few years have proved very inefficient in spelling.

A scholarship has been awarded by J. L. Kyne, of Baldwinsville to the winner of the spelling contest which is scheduled for Friday morning in the Grand Stand.

Owing to the fact that the main building is so congested by the auto show exhibit it became necessary for the ground committee to secure a 40 by 80 tent for the purpose of housing the late entries.

Governor's day will be observed Wednesday and Governor Charles Whitman has written his intention of coming. Speaker T. C. Sweet will also be present. Francis M. Hugo has also signified his intention of coming. Speeches will be made by these gentlemen from the judges' stand on the race track.

Many new displays will be found on the midway. Already many large tents are being placed for the week. The cattle building is the recipient of many valuable prize winners and all is favorable for a very successful county fair.

There is also an opening for members of the manual training class of the local high school to place an exhibition at the fair this year. Thus far the application for the display of the work done by our local school has been very light.

CHILDREN MUST NOT GO TO FAIR

ALL LARGE ASSEMBLIES MUST EXCLUDE CHILDREN FROM ATTENDING.

Dr. Hall has in his possession a report from state officials showing twelve distinct cases of infantile paralysis within the city of Syracuse, beside three additional cases in Onondaga county. For this reason the inhabitants of Fulton should be very cautious about receiving small children as visitors during this plague and should also feel the same way about letting infants visit in the vicinity of Syracuse.

A special meeting of the Board of Health was called this evening to act in regard to a letter received from Hermann M. Briggs, state commissioner of health. The letter places a ban on children attending the county fair, as well as the State Fair. All large assemblages must exclude children. This is a state requirement and is a provision to guard against the spread of infantile paralysis.

At present the city is free from the dreaded disease and every precaution will be taken to prevent the continuation of the plague.

HIRES TAXI TO DELIVER HIS CORPSE

PATRON SHOOTS HIMSELF AT UNDERTAKER'S DOOR.

Lawrence, August 12—"How much to drive me to Maurice Mahoney's undertaking parlors in Lawrence?" said a man known only as William Harvey to Joseph McAree, driver of a Haverhill taxi, at the Haverhill depot.

"I don't know where Mahoney's place is," answered McAree, "but the fare to Lawrence is $3."

"That suits me; it doesn't make much difference how much I pay," said Harvey. "Meet me here between 9:30 and 10 o'clock.

McAree was on hand and met his passenger. The trip to Lawrence was made in silence, Harvey sitting crouched down on the seat. Shortly before 10:30 o'clock the car turned into Essey street. Harvey leaned over and said: "Drive to Hampshire street and turn to the left and you will come to the undertaker's."

McAree was just turning into Hampshire street when he heard a pistol shot. He stopped the car quickly, believing it was a blowout, when he noticed his fare with an automatic revolver in his hand. Harvey leaned over and said: "I've done a good job. I've shot myself. Now take me to the undertaker's."

McAree summoned Inspector C. R. Vose and Officer Thomas O'Brien, who were across the street, and Harvey was rushed to the General Hospital.

When asked by Inspector Vose at the hospital why he shot himself, he said he would never tell. Asked if some one else knew he intended to kill himself, he replied one other. Inspector Vose believes there is a woman in the case.

STATISTICS PROVE VALUABLE

A chart showing the functional proportions of expenditures of the semiannual report from January to July 1st, 1916, has been issued by City Chamhberlain H. W. Adkins. The total expenditures for the period is $163,903.02, divided as follows:

Specific appropriation 43 per cent.
Bonds liquidated, 6 per cent.
Interest on bonded indebtedness, 7 per cent.
Bureau of police, 3 1-2 per cent.
Bureau of fire, 2 1-2 per cent.
Weights and measures .0022.
Department of Charities 2 per cent.
Plumbing inspection .0023.
Health conservation on sanitation, 3 per cent.
Water department, 2 1-2 per cent.
Administration, 5 per cent.
Public school system, 22 per cent.
Lighting streets, 3 per cent.

The chart is one of the several efficiency charts which the chamberlain has compiled. By use of these efficiency charts it is possible to arrive at the unit cost of government which is the basis of comparison with all cities of the United States.

The records of the office of the chamberlain are open for inspection to all taxpayers who would care to inquire in regard to the civic activities.

A photograph of the chart will be taken. It is an original undertaking by Chamberlain Adkins and is the same as would be used in analyizing the efficiency of commercial industries.

PACER LANCER HAS SUCCESSFUL WEEK AT NEWARK VALLEY.

"Lancer" a fast pacer owned by Charles F. Jones, proprietor of a hotel on the West Side returned to this city today, after a very successful week at Newark Valley, N. J. "Lancer" has a mark of 2:19 1-4 and on Thursday entered in the 2:20 pace. There were seven starters and Lancer took three straight heats, winning the race. The fastest heat was 2:21.

Owing to the fact that the track was heavy faster time could not be expected. Amos Hartness piloted the pacer.

Mr. Jones announces that his horse is entered in the 2:20 pace at the local fair Wednesday.

Greater New York Preparing For R. R. Strike

(By United Press)

New York, August 14—That over 5,000,00 living in greater New York will be effected in the event of a railroad strike is a problem now being given consideration by officials here today. Joseph A. Hartican, Secretary to Mayor Mitchell, commander on food supplies recommended that action be taken by the city governor to prepare an agency should a stoppage occur of American traffic of food supplies. Hartican proposed that a survey be made of the sources in which food supply could be commanded if the strike was declared.

THE HUNTER BROTHERS ARE BEING EXAMINED

The bankrupt Hunter Brothers, of this city, have been summoned to appear before Special Master Andrew J. McNaught, in this city, at 1:30 o'clock this afternoon to testify regarding the expenditure of about $114,000 of the funds of the Hunter Arms Company. It is alleged by some of the creditors connected with the bankrupt that some or all of this money was used to pay some of the personal debts of the Hunters.

The trustees in bankruptcy will probably attend the hearings.

When the Hunters take the stand they will be examined by Nelson P. Bonney, one of the trustees and Judge James P. Hill, of Norwich, who represents a number of the creditors.

Important developments are expected.

MOTT WILL BLOW ON "HIGHER-UPS"

MANY PROMINENT PERSONS IN SYRACUSE ARE ON THE ANXIOUS SEAT.

Syracuse, August 14—With Charles F. Mott, fugitive former superintendent of buildings of the Onondaga tuberculosis sanitarium on his way back from South America in the custody of officials, there are a number of Syracusans on the anxious seat.

Mott's first word to Syracuse when arrested was that he was going to "blow" the whole business and charged that there were others in the grait scandals as well as himself.

These men are the ones that do not know which way to turn. Officials may know who they are. If this is the case they are keeping silent.

In the meantime Syracuse is guessing as to the identity of the "higher-ups." Detectives are also working on the matter. Several times in the past they have had what they thought were clues to the trail of other men, but each time the clues have petered out from lack of evidence. Mott is expected to offer the missing links in the chains of evidence the sleuths have already gathered and interesting times are looked for when he gets in this city about September 29.

WILL GO AFTER "BILLY" SUNDAY

LARGE SYRACUSE DELEGATION WILL VISIT DETROIT TO GET BILLY TO COME AGAIN.

Syracuse, N. Y., August 14—A large delegation of members of the Syracuse Billy Sunday Business Men's Club, will attend a business men's banquet in Detroit, August 24 to boom Billy Sunday's campaign in that city.

The banquet will be attended by representatives from other cities where Mr. Sunday has conducted evangelistic campaigns. There will be men present from Trenton, Philadelphia, Scranton, Paterson, Kansas City and perhaps Omaha.

The meeting is to arouse interest in the Detroit campaign. Much of the effectiveness of the campaign depends upon the whirlwind start and as in other cities Detroit workers are lining up the business men of that city.

Syracuse enjoys the unique distinction of being the first city in the country to invite Mr. Sunday to conduct a second campaign here. The invitation was extended to him during the revival at Kansas City, but it is not probable that he will come. The evangelist, however, may make a visit here for a few days previous to opening of a campaign August 26th at Ocean Grove, N. J.

Memphis, Tenn., August 14—Five persons were killed and seventeen injured, four fatally, when a tornado swept over eastern Arkansas last night, blowing down twelve buildings at Edmundson, Arkansas, twelve miles west of Arkansas.

FIRST CONFERENCE HELD THIS MORNING

(By United Press)

Washington, August 14—The first step in the effort of President Wilson to prevent the universal tie up of the country's railroads by strike ended at noon today when the representative for the employees left the White House smiling broadly. He has been in conference with the president today one and one half hours.

Once More the Bremen is Sighted

(By United Press)

New London, Conn., August 14—Communications from two separate sources reported today that a submarine, possibly the long looked for Bremen, was sighted off this port. The wireless operator at Fisher's Island said that he sighted a submarine at one o'clock off Montauk Point, but that it was too far away for him to determine the nationality.

KING IS SAID TO HAVE DENIED MURDER

(By United Press)

Alpion, New York, August 14—Mrs. Grace Huniston, leader of the fight to save Charles Stielow from the death chair at Sing Sing was questioned today by Irving King, who is said to have repudiated his confession that he and an accomplice were guilty of the double murder for which Stielow was convicted.

FIREWORKS ARE BEGINNING TO SHOOT

(By United Press)

New York, August 14—With many campaigns underway William R. Wilcox, chairman of the Republican National Committee announced today that a second gun will be fired Saturday when the Massachusetts campaign will be opened. Henry D. Estabrooks, of New York, will start the fire works Saturday in Dorchester, with an open speech in the bay state.

AN IMPERATIVE DUTY

While the young people of the United States are willing to concede that President Wilson is a patriotic citizen and is animated by the sincere desire to serve his country, many have little confidence in the leaders of the Democratic party. They feel that the gift of another four years powers to the old party would be fraught with dangers of the deadliest nature. It was only the European war that prevented a nation-wide panic in the second year of the Wilson administration. It was the misfortune of Europe that helped the Democrats.

It is perfectly obvious that the controlling influence in the Democratic organization comes from a section of the country in which manufacturing is yet in its infancy; a section whose inhabitants have no sympathy with the desires of manufacturers and working people to keep out of America by a high tariff wall the productions of the cheap labor of Europe. They are rather interested in procuring their supplies in the cheapest market, having no industrial plants, and they are quite willing to sacrifice the labor of the country to promote their selfish desires. No wonder they enact free trade legislation whenever they get the chance.

The prosperity which the country is now enjoying is a sinister and a fictitious prosperity. Notwithstanding the Democratic denial it is altogether the outcome of the European war and unless our manufacturers succeed in arranging for some other business at the close of war, the return of peace will witness the dismantling of many industrial establishments and the appearance of thousands of idle men on the streets of our great cities. We do not see how this experience is to be warded off in any event. We are quite sure that without the existence of a stiff protective tariff the future will be full of very sharp sorrows for many citizens of the United States.

The best is likely to be bad enough unless a miracle intervenes. The only way in which the worse can be prevented is by the election of a Congress in sincere sympathy with the principle of protection. Europe will be a fierce competitor in the field of legitimate industry when the guns cease firing and the trenches are deserted for the activities of peaceful life. Our trade in munitions, being a purely artificial one, will entirely cease, and the thousands employed in the factories where these instruments of destruction are made will be deserted. The voters should take pains to put in charge of the government at Washington statesmen who are wise enough and patriotic enough to stand up heartily for the principle of taking care of the people who live here and work here in preference to those who live elsewhere. It is the duty of the head of every family to take care of it; it is equally the duty of the Federal Congress to take care of American industry and of all those who live by it. The people should elect Hughes and Fairbanks.

AN INTERESTING EVENT

Former Governor James M. Cox will meet Governor Frank B. Willis, of Ohio, in a public discussion of their political views on the afternoon of August 14, (today), at the Miami Valley Chautauqua, near Franklin. The debate will take place at two o'clock. Governor Willis will open with a talk of thirty minutes. Former Governor Cox will then have forty minutes for his argument. Governor Willis will close in ten minutes. The management of the Chautauqua, which is one of the largest in the state, expects an attendance of 25,000 or more on this day.

This will be the first time in the history of the state when a former governor and a governor will meet on the platform in public discussion. The fact that both are candidates, opposing each other for the second time, arouses additional interest. Those who have watched events of the present and immediately preceding administration expect this meeting to be enlightening. It will be virtually a joint campaign opening for the state.

—Hughes comes back with the goods making Secretary Redfield look like thirty cents.

GUARDING THE BORDER

The mother who wrote to President Wilson in a complaining mood because her boy on the border had not been involved in a fight with Mexicans must be a very queer mother. Perhaps she is just angry because her son has been taken away from home. It may be that she considers the trip to the border an unnecessary expense and a wanton waste of the time of the troops. Surely she is not enraged because her boy is thus far guiltless of another's blood; or because he has not lost his life at the hands of a Mexican bandit. She would be a queer mother if she were. And that's the way she's been acting.

To all human appearances the action of President Wilson in calling out the National Guard of the several states and the prompt mobilization of almost 100,000 of the troops prevented the outbreak of war with Mexico. At least the news from Mexico and from the American towns on the border was of the most warlike nature. For a time it appeared almost certain that Pershing's little army would be attacked; had that occurred a bloody and costly struggle would have ensued. The soldiers sent out by the states, and now forming part of the federal army, are really messengers of peace and guardians of our border. There have been moments when citizens who hate war were so greatly irritated by the conduct of our Mexican brethren that they were disposed to criticise the remarkable patience of the president. But as the days went by and the clouds rolled away they have realized that the federal administration was on the right track; thus far it has spared both republics the horrors of war and continued to set an inspiring example to the maniac nations of Europe. We are quite sure that the commonsense of the American people will not sympathize with the hysterical woman who is irritated because her son is not fighting now.

We believe the mobilization of the National Guard and the speedy movement of the troops toward the border preserved the peace. General Carranza took notice of what was going on; he perceived that the government had reached a point where even President Wilson admitted that forbarance had ceased to be a virtue. And he suddenly became a very mild-mannered neighbor. The National Guard brought him to his senses; they prevented war; they are doing a nobler thing than fighting—they are preserving international peace.

DON'T COMPLAIN

Make up your mind that whatever you may have done in the past you will in the future wear your clouds "inside out, and show the lining." We all have clouds, but that is no reason why we should draw the attention of the world to them. It is the brave, cheerful soldiers who inspire the others. So if you can't get what you like, determine to like what you have or at all events to make the best of it and go on your way bravely without complaining.

WE COULD EXIST WITH NO IMPORTS

Everything In Way of Food Is Produced Here.

EXPERTS' FIGURES GIVEN.

Chamber of Commerce Finds That Country Might Have to Go Short on Coffee and Tea in Case of a Blockade, but These Are Considered Luxuries. Production Increasing.

One worry of the fighting nations need not keep the United States awake, the National Chamber of Commerce finds.

The report of the chambers committee on statistics and standards, just published, proves that no matter how severe a blockade might be drawn about the country it would be impossible to starve American stomachs into capitulation.

It would be necessary to get along without importations of coffee, tea and cocoa, and these are not extensively grown in this country, but all these are classed by the committee as luxuries.

The most impressive point, the committee says, is that while the population of the country has increased 200 per cent in half a century its food production has been increasing in that same period from 250 to 3,000 per cent in prime commodities.

The most important product—wheat—has increased in production 560 per cent and corn 270 per cent. The production of rice shows the greatest increase, being 3,000 per cent, and barley comes second, with 2,000 per cent. Oats and Irish potatoes have increased in production 475 per cent and 250 per cent respectively.

Wheat Exports Vary.

"The usual argument that we are becoming a food importing country is based on the statement that our exports of foodstuffs are decreasing while imports are increasing," the report goes on.

"In the case of wheat, the greatest of all cereals used directly for human food, it will be seen the exports vary decidedly from year to year, being affected by a great number of contributing causes, but that exports have shown an appreciable increase during the last five years, while the imports always have been and still continue a negligible quantity.

"The falling off in exports of corn is due largely to the numerous new uses found for it at home in ways often not directly as human food. The last two years show a large increase proportionately in imports, principally from the Argentine.

"These imports were actually in small volume compared with the production of any surplus growing corn state and had small relation to the question of food. They were largely the result of decreased domestic production owing to drought in the two years in question and consequent high prices."

The importance of luxuries is held to be entirely a question of taste and our extensive use of them an evidence of our ability to gratify this taste and not a matter of necessity. In case of stress we could well get along without them, as was generally done in the south during the civil war, which is a different proposition from not raising enough wheat for our own use and trying to get along without that.

Rice is not a natural North American product, being a plant of tropical and subtropical countries, yet while both importations and exportations have increased in about equal proportion production has outstripped them both, indicating that the largely increased demand is being met by domestic production even more than by foreign importation.

A definite proof of surplus production of agricultural products beyond our needs, according to the report, is the fact that each year we carry from the former harvest into the succeeding harvest from 20 to 25 per cent of the yield of the principal cereals.

Cane Sugar Booms.

Cane sugar is pointed to as a most remarkable exhibit. It is largely a tropical and subtropical product and consequently can be grown only in a limited area in the United States. Likewise the production of sugar in this country has always been complicated by the matter of tariff.

Yet despite these facts, according to the report, domestic production increased about 1,600 per cent against about 1,000 per cent in imports. Meanwhile exports from this country have increased over 2,000 per cent.

There is scarcely an agricultural food product, either primary or secondary, the production of which has not outstripped the growth of population in the last fifteen years, and "the real problem is not to seek needed supplies abroad, but to find an adequate and satisfactory market for the constantly increasing output."

So far as the money value is concerned, according to the national chamber authorities, the exportation in 1914 of pork packing house products alone was seven times greater than all the live cattle brought into the country during that year. Of the $154,000,000 of packing house products imported in 1914, only $20,600,000 was meat intended for food, while pork packing house products exported totaled $154,000,000 for the same period.

Ancient War Automobiles.

Among some interesting documents in the old Bohemian city, Saaz, on the Eger river, is a picture showing an attack on the fortress Glatz, in Silesia, in which war automobiles were used. The mechanically driven cars were flat vehicles, protected by huge shields in front, in which the soldiers turned large cranks, the rotary motion of which was transferred to cog wheels and to the road wheels. It is estimated that these fifteenth century "chauffeurs" got a speed of four miles an hour out of the armored cars.

"Yes," Carlyle said, "and the doctors told me the same thing. Our Greatest Need Is an Intelligent Comprehension of Ideals of Democracy

By CHARLES E. HUGHES, Republican Nominee For the Presidency

WE want patriotism, and I don't think we are going to lose it very soon, although I do devoutly hope that out of the perils and difficulties of this time may come a new birth of the sentiment of unity.

I do hope that in the midst of all these troublesome conditions we have a better realization of our national strength and of the import of our democratic institutions.

We need not vast extent of territory, not great population, not simply extraordinary statistics of national wealth, although they speak in eloquent words of energy and managing ability, BUT WHAT WE NEED MORE THAN ANYTHING ELSE IS AN INTELLIGENT COMPREHENSION OF THE IDEALS OF DEMOCRACY.

Those ideals are that every man shall have a fair and equal chance according to his talents. It is not an ideal of democracy that one alone shall emerge because of conspicuous ability, but that there shall be a great advance of the plain people of the country, upon whom the prosperity of the country depends.

WE DEPLORE EVERY CONDITION IN WHICH WE FIND MAN LOWER THAN HE SHOULD BE UNDER A FREE GOVERNMENT. WE WANT VICTORIES OF DEMOCRACY THAT THE LEVEL OF SUCCESS SHALL BE RAISED.

Hot Stuff.

A clergyman was very fond of a particularly hot brand of pickles and, finding great difficulty in procuring the same sort at hotels when traveling, always carried a bottle with him.

One day, when dining at a restaurant with his pickles in front of him, a stranger sat down at the same table and pretty soon asked the minister to pass the pickles. The divine, who enjoyed a joke, politely passed the pickles and in a few seconds had the satisfaction of seeing the stranger watering at the eyes and gasping for breath.

"I see by your dress," said the man when he had recovered, "that you are a parson."

"I am, sir."

"I suppose you preach."

"Yes; about twice a week, usually."

"Do you ever preach about hell fire?" inquired the stranger.

"Why, yes. Sometimes I deem it my duty to remind my congregation of eternal punishment."

"I thought so," said the stranger, "but you are the first of your class I ever met who carried samples."—Harper's Magazine.

You and Today.

With every rising of the sun
Think of your life as just begun.

The past has shriveled and buried deep
All yesterdays. There let them sleep.

Nor seek to summon back one ghost
Of that innumerable host.

Concern yourself with but today,
Woo it and teach it to obey

Your will and wish. Since time began
Today has been the friend of man.

But in his blindness and his sorrow
He looks to yesterday and tomorrow.

You and today! A soul sublime,
And the great pregnant hour of time!

With God Himself to bind the twain,
Go forth, I say, attain, attain!

—Ella Wheeler Wilcox.

Faced Both Ways.

I well remember when a little boy, said a railroad man, hearing my father tell a story that his father told him about the great Lafayette, who was such a warm friend of the United States, then in the making, when Lafayette came back to this country on a visit. My grandfather met him at a reception, and as an evidence of his tact and humor, to one man to whom he was introduced Lafayette said:

"How do you do? Are you a married man?" The man replied, "Yes, sir."

And Lafayette said: "Happy man! Happy man!"

The next man to whom Lafayette was introduced was asked, "Are you a married man?" and replied, "No, sir."

Whereupon Lafayette said: "Lucky dog! Lucky dog!"

Prank of a Japanese Joker.

Ikku, the Japanese joker, author of what are described by Saito Man as "books of immortal humor," lay a-dying. He called friends and relatives to him, and addressing them in affectionate terms, and now that his going was coming, he had a last request—to cremate his body just as it lay. If they did that he would show them his gratitude. They did so and gathered sadly around the pyre, Ikku in the thin coffin into which he had been lifted.

As the flames crackled there suddenly began a weird tattoo inside the coffin. The crowd was filled with horror. "He's alive, trying to get out!" Just then the coffin took fire, and there was an explosion, scattering red embers in a shower over the mourners, who turned to run, but presently a pillar of fire shot up from the now visible body, and at its shimmering summit they saw a beautiful pyrotechnic flower expand and disappear. It was his last joke. He had hidden the fireworks in his kimono.—East and West News Bureau.

Kept Him on the Jump.

A company of very new soldiers were out on a [illegible] practicing the art of taking cover. The officer in charge of them hurried to one of the rawest of his men. "Get down behind that hillock there," he ordered sternly, "and, mind, not a move or a sound." A few minutes later he looked around to see if they were all concealed and to his despair observed something wriggling behind a small mound. Even as he watched the movements became more frantic. "I say, you there!" he shouted angrily. "Do you know you are giving our position away to the enemy?"

"Yes, sir," said the recruit in a voice of cool desperation. "And do you know that this is an anthill?"

She Cured Him.

Speaking of economy in dress the other day, a society woman said: "I know a man who was so stingy he grumbled every time his wife bought a new gown. Determined to cure him of this habit, his wife for one month stayed away from the shopping district and the stores and succeeded in not buying a single cent's worth of clothes. When the next month's bills arrived the husband noted there was a memorandum for about thirty Turkish baths. He inquired if there was really necessity for such a large number of Turkish baths in one month. 'Certainly,' replied the wife. 'You told me not to spend any more money on clothes, and a Turkish bath is about the only place I can go and not wear clothes.' All of which proves that when a woman makes up her mind she wants that $30 suit marked down to $29.98 she is going to scheme until she owns it, economy to the contrary notwithstanding."—New York Telegram.

Side with truth before it is popular to side with it. Side with God and humanity and human hope just as fast as you can see what is best for humanity. Be fully persuaded in your own mind. Do not drift. It is not worthy of a man to drift. A man ought to have a conviction. Most people have only opinions, impressions, impulses. The number of people who have convictions is comparatively small.—Minot J. Savage.

To Make Mushroom Ketchup.

"Mushroom ketchup may be made after the following recipe," says a writer in Farm and Fireside:

"One peck mushrooms, carefully picked over; one pint vinegar, two tablespoonfuls salt, one-half teaspoonful cayenne, two tablespoonfuls mustard, one tablespoonful cinnamon, one-half teaspoonful mace, one-half tablespoonful cloves.

"Cook the mushrooms with one cupful of water until quite tender and rub them through a colander. Add to this pulp the vinegar and spices and cook about half an hour longer. Bottle and seal.

"This sauce is delicious with fish, steak and cold meat."

BOYS WILL BE SEVERELY DEALT WITH IF APPREHENDED BY THE AUTHORITIES.

Many complaints of late have been made to Chief of Police Edward Dyer by residents along East Second street, concerning the freight train-riders.

Saturday night a local popcorn and peanut vender, who has been in the habit of wheeling his vehicle up First street to Rochester and up Rochester to Second, was on his way home when suddenly he was attacked by a volley of bricks from a passing freight train. It was possible for him to see that much vigor was being displayed by some young prospective citizens on the top of a coal train and the man was forced to admit that if there were as many sharpshooters at the Mexican border as there were on that train, the greasers would have all been exterminated long before this.

The pop corn wagon was somewhat demolished from the fray and will have to undergo repairs before its next appearance.

Within a period of ten minutes after this incident another complaint was made by Charles Mead of East Second street, to the effect that he had received a bombardment from snipers aboard the same train and that the attack resulted in broken windows and bruises.

Chief Dyer stated this morning that a trace will be made for these young bandits and those implicated in the charge will be dealt with severely.

SERMON BY REV. C. A. BALCH

THE FOLLOWING IS A SYNOPSIS OF A SERMON PREACHED BY THE REV. C. A. BALCH, IN DEFENSE OF THE CHRISTIAN SABBATH.

Thus far in the religious history of the world there have been three distinct dispensations of the grace of God, and for each of them there has been appointed a different Sabbath to commemorate the most notable manifestation of that grace. The Eden Sabbath commemorated the Creation. It was in force for 2,500 years or during the Patriarchal dispensation. It was composed of the "evening and the morning," Gen. 1:5, 9, 13, etc. It therefore began Saturday noon and closed Sunday noon.

If the record had said that the creation days were composed of "the night and the day," it would have made the days begin at sunset, for the "night" includes that part of the twenty-four hours from sunset to sunrise. But the word "evening" is never applied to that part of the night after midnight. In the scriptures it is invariably applied to some or all that part of the day between noon and midnight. John 20:19; Jer. 6:4; Prov. 7:9; Zeph. 3:3; Gen. 1:5.

Take also the word "morning." Webster says: "Morning.—The first or early part of the day, variously understood as the earliest hours of light, the time near sunrise; the time from midnight to noon, from rising to noon, etc." This word is used in the Bible with the above meaning in every instance, and is never once applied to that part of the day after noon. Mar. 1:35; Job 36:7; Dan. 6:19; Ex. 16: 14, 21; Eccl. 11:6.

Adam Clarke says: "The Jews divided the day into morning and evening; till the sun passed the meridian, all was morning or forenoon; after that, all was afternoon or evening." Comments on Ex. 12:6. The Creation days therefore began and ended at noon like the astronomical or nautical days of the present.

The Jewish Sabbath began Friday at sunset and closed Saturday at sunset, and was in force during the Jewish dispensation. It was based on the Eden Sabbath. Ex. 20:11. It commemorated that wonderful event of the departure of the Israelites from Egypt. Ex. 12:14; 16:30; Deut. 5:15.

The Christian Sabbath is for the Christian dispensation and commemorates the resurrection of Christ. It begins Saturday at midnight and closes Sunday at midnight. Christ said that after his crucifixion and before his resurrection he would be three days and three nights in the heart of the earth. Mat. 12:40. If we divide the days according to the Jewish reckoning from sunset to sunset, this is impossible.

The fourth commandment is partly moral and partly ceremonial law. Moral law is based on the nature of God and is laid in the conscience and constitution of man. Ceremonial law, which is the divine appointment for the observance of outward ceremonies, is based on the will of God. Man cannot learn it from his conscience. It must come to him by a revelation from God and through preaching. Moral law is eternal and unchangeable. Not so with ceremonial law. It belongs only to the dispensation for which it is intended, and may be changed or abrogated. For instance, the command against lying is moral. It relates to man's heart and conscience. It is based on God's nature which is truth. It is eternal. It never can be right to lie. Man's conscience tells him so without a revelation from God. On the contrary, the ordinance of baptism is a ceremony. It is for the Christian dispensation only. No man's conscience could tell him he must be baptized unless he had heard it preached from Revelation. Now the fact that moral law is written on the conscience of men, furnishes us an unvarying test of what is moral and what is ceremonial law, for at the Great Day God will judge the heathen for breaking the moral law even though they have never heard the gospel, but will not condemn them for breaking any ceremonial law. In regard to the Sabbath, the heathen know by their conscience that God should be worshipped, but what particular day should be kept holy, they do not know, hence we find that the word of God pronounces judgments on the heathen for breaking all the moral commandments, but in not one place between the lids of the Bible are the heathen ever condemned for breaking the Sabbath. The particular day on which the Sabbath day should be kept is therefore ceremonial in its nature and not moral.

Sabbatarians never call a Sunday keeper immoral, if he professes to keep it with a clear conscience, for they recognize that he may do so. But would he admit that one could lie or steal and not be immoral? The fourth commandment is not wholly unchangeable, moral law, for it makes provision for the resting of chattel slaves, plural wives and concubines, all of which are unknown under the Christian dispensation. The "maid servants" were often chattel slaves and plural wives or concubines. Ex. 21:7-11. The fourth commandment endorsed the Old Testament system of slavery and polygamy, for it is self-evident that God could not have given two contradictory laws at the same time. Lev. 25:44-46.

The Jewish ceremonial law including the Jewish Sabbath was abolished when Christ died. Hos. 2:11; Col. 2:14-17. However, the Jewish Christians did not immediately abandon those ceremonies. The civil law compelled them to keep them until after the destruction of Jerusalem. Ac. 21:20.26; 25:3; Gal. 2:11-14. The Gentile Christians always kept the Sunday Sabbath. If they ever heard the word preached on Saturday, it was in connection with Jewish worship. Take one instance of several. In Acts 20:7 we learn that Paul in his journey through Troas preached to them "Upon the first day of the week when the disciples came together to break bread." His stay in Troas was seven days, hence he was there over Saturday, yet there is no mention of a Saturday meeting. On Saturday the Christians at Troas were at work. He did not preach Saturday evening as Sabbatarians claim for it was the first day of the week and not the seventh and their seventh day closes at sunset; but Paul preached till midnight. Also after the Patriarchal dispensation, the evening was always the close of the day and not its beginning. John 20: 19; Ex. 12:6, 18; Judg. 19:9.

Paul after his sermon was "ready to depart on the morrow." When it is the first day of the week, "the morrow" indicates the second day or Monday on which he departed, and not Sunday as Sabbatarians claim.

Now the apostles had authority from God to fix the doctrines of the church. Therefore Paul's endorsement of the custom of the church at Troas gives us the sanction of Divine authority for Sunday keeping. Also his failure to call the church together for worship on the seventh day of the week gives us Divine authority for abandoning the Jewish Sabbath. Notice how they disregarded the Jewish custom of closing the days at sunset, for though his meeting lasted "until midnight," it was said to be on "the first day of the week," and "the morrow," or second day of the week on which he was "to depart' did not begin till after midnight.

The Sabbath was changed during the Apostolic age, as is proved by the custom of the Gentile churches. Ac. 20:7, etc. There is not one scrap of evidence in history that a change subsequently was ever made. Constantine's Sunday law was not a change, but an endorsement of an existing custom of the church. The classic work of the Sabbatarians is Elder Andrews' History of the Sabbath. We need not go outside of this book to learn that as early as A. D. 140—only forty years after the death of the last Apostle—Sunday was kept as universally as it is today. Justin Martyr wrote his "Apology" in A. D. 140. In it he says, "Upon the day called Sunday, all that live either in city or country meet together, etc." Hist. of Sab. p. 269. "Justin was a decided opponent of the ancient Sabbath." p. 272. "Christians held their assemblies on this day X X Sunday." p. 265. "The reasons offered by the early Fathers for neglecting the observance of the Sabbath, show conclusively that they had no special light on the subject by reason of living in the first centuries which we in this later age do not possess." p. 310. Now if so learned a man as Elder Andrews admits that "the early Fathers" "in the first centuries" neglected the "observance of the Sabbath," what further witness do we need that Saturday was not kept in the first centuries? Hence it is inconsistent to claim that the pope or any emperor or council ever "changed" the Sabbath.

Matter Enough.

THE RED MEN TO THE FRONT

WITH THE ASSISTANCE OF THEIR LITTLE FORD

Through a misunderstanding on the part of the local members of the Order of Red Men, there were but few who went to Oswego Saturday to participate in the Preparedness parade and as the number was so small they concluded not to take part in the demonstration, but fate would have it otherwise, and for a few minutes the little delegation headed the parade.

While taking in the sights of the city eleven brothers were approached by Past Sachem F. E. Bache, who was riding in his Ford and invited to take a ride. Quite a load for the "boulevard louse" but it was equal to the emergency until——

As they attempted to cross Utica street they were ordered back by Chief Marshal Vowinkle, but the little Ford could not see it that way and balked. It refused to move in either direction. The parade approached and Chief of Police Mowatt, who was in the lead came to the conclusion that it would be necessary to detour, but Charles Quirk got out and after a little persuasion with the crank induced the obstinate Ford to proceed on its way.

P. O. EMPLOYES IN POLITICS

THOSE NOT IN CLASSIFIED SERVICE ARE GIVEN CERTAIN PRIVILEGES.

The latest communication received at the post office regarding political activity on the part of employees of the postal service shows that the post master, not being in the classified service has more latitude in regard to such activity than those in the classified civil service.

Laborers employed in the post office, who are not in the classified service, are also exempt from the strict rules regarding political activity which apply to those in the classified service.

The latest communication says:

"It is not intended that government service shall curtail or interfere with the exercise of a person's duties as a citizen. This department therefore interposes no objection to unclassified employes contributing political articles or otherwise discussing public issues (providing they do not indulge in personalities), or attending primaries or county conventions, but must not act as chairmen of such conventions, or as officers of political committees. Employes are prohibited from soliciting contributions for campaign purposes or using their offices to control political movements from causing public scandal by their actions, and must not, under any circumstances, neglect their official duties. All employes are prohibited from becoming candidates for elective offices or from taking such active part in political matters as is likely to give rise to criticism or complaint on the part of the patrons of their offices."

MEN REJOIN FEDERATION

ROCKEFLLER UNION FOR MINERS A FAILURE, HE SAYS

(By United Press)

Colorado Springs, Col. August 14—Delegates from the Rockefeller mines in Colorado were prominent at the opening of the annual convention of the state federation of labor here today.

The miners of the Colorado Fuel and Iron (Rockefeller's) company are flocking back to the United Mine Workers' Union.

Recent open organization meetings in the Colorado coal fields have been attended by representatives of the Rockefeller company as well as the miners, whose union affiliations were condemned in the historic strike of 1913-14.

"There is no talk of a strike," said President McClennan of the state federation today. "The men are not threatened with discharge for joining the United Miners. The C. F. & I. apparently is making good on its promise not to discriminate against union men.

"But the fact that the men in Mr. Rockefeller's mines are again joining the union means that the company's 'industrial representation plan' isn't all that the men desire. The men feel that their representatives in 'Rockefeller's union' are selected rather than elected. The miners want an organization of their own, supported by themselves.

"Mr. Rockefeller's industrial representation plan is paternalistic. The miners feel they are being spied upon. Their representatives in the Rockefeller union are selected at small meetings which only a small proportion of the miners attend."

McClennan stated that the Rockefeller company had instituted great improvements in the way of Y. M. C. A.'s, moving picture shows and social service."

"But the wages of the coal miners have not been increased. They are still being paid about fifty-five cents per ton and the demand during the great strike was for a ten per cent. increase on this amount.

"One good thing—the saloons in the Rockefeller camps have been abolished under the state prohibition law."

A feature at the convention today was the strict enforcement of the rule that every delegate must wear at least five articles of clothing with the union label.

STRICTLY A FEMALE CAMP

300 WOMEN ROOKIES TO OPEN "CHEVY CHASE OF THE WEST" TOMORROW

(By United Press)

Lake Geneva, Wis., August 14—Women rookies of the west, numbering about 300 will answer the call of reveille at 6:30 tomorrow morning at the women's military training camp established here—the Chevy Chase of the west.

The women will do everything about the camp except cook. Cooks have been hired to get the meals but the women rookies will be given instruction in dietetics. Beside this they will be taught how to make surgical dressings, perform military drills, do ambulance driving and telegraphy.

Of course there must be some men about the camp. But they will be used only for protection. They will act as guards and patrol the camp limits at night. They will not be allowed to enter the regular camp grounds.

The women, some of whom arrived here today, are equipped with regular uniforms, a double blanket, dressing robes, four sheets, two pillow cases, glass tumbler, underclothing, bloomers, high, tan, low heeled shoes, toilet articles and rubbers.

"Lieut. Col. Vyalla Poe Wilson has charge of the camp.

VETERANS OF FOREIGN WARS

BIG CONVENTION ASSEMBLES IN THE WINDY CITY TODAY

(By United Press)

Chicago, August 14—Uncle Sam's sons of empire met here today to talk of the time when they carried the flag into China, the Philippines, Cuba, Vera Cruz and the "coral reefs and desert sands" where the United States army, navy or marine corps has fought in the past two decades.

Several thousand of them, members of the Veterans of the Foreign Wars of the United States are attending the seventeenth annual encampment of the national organization.

Grand Commander Gus E. Hartung, of Denver, and Adjutant General Col. R. G. Woodside, of Pittsburgh were early arrivals. Delegates are here from the Philippines and Canal Zone posts.

Delegates displayed with pride their campaign badges. This badge, issued by Congress to men who saw active service in the Philippines, Haiti, Santo Domingo or Cuba, was the official badge of the encampment.

The favorite campaign discussed today was that of General Winfield Scott, made from Vera Cruz to Mexico City in 1846. The massacre at the Alamo was re-enacted, the sinking of the Maine pictured anew and the reoccupation of Cuba and the Nicaraguan campaign were fought over again by men who took part in many of these famous events.

The opening session was called to order shortly after noon today. A smoker will be held this evening. The two hundred delegates of the Ladies' Auxiliary will hold their initial meeting tonight.

Resolutions favoring enactment of the Key pension bill, already passed by the lower house of Congress, were to be adopted at this afternoon's session.

Memorial services to commemorate the memory and history of the day will be conducted on the afternoon of the sixteenth. The convention will end Thursday.

Albert A. Lenden, thirty-four, a well-known resident of the Fifth ward, was found dead in bed at his home, No. 226 West Seventh street, at ten o'clock Sunday morning. Coroner C. J. Vowinkel, who made an investigation of the case, attributed death due to heart disease.

A CLOSE CALL.

Messrs. George and John Moore, of this city, narrowly escaped drowning yesterday morning while canoeing on the river. The two men who are camping across from Pathfinder Island were out in the center of the stream when a passing motor boat throwing high swells tipped the canoe and sent both occupants into the water. Owing to the temperature of the water they were stricken with cramps and it was with much difficulty that the young men reached shore.

CANDIDATES ARE VERY BUSY

MUST FILE THEIR PETITIONS BETWEEN AUGUST 15 AND 22

The many candidates for nomination to various offices in the different political parties are on their last lap hustling hard for the greatest number of signers on their petitions, which will place their names on the primary ballots.

Petitions of candidates to get in the primaries must be filed with the Board of Elections between August 15 and 22. From that date forward the Board of Elections will be a busy place until after the election and the votes are counted and tabulated in November. There are now a great many politicians flying about the county. Candidates of the various parties must get the signature of the enrolled voters of their respective parties.

Any voter who has moved from one district to another, within the county, may vote in the primaries by filing a certificate with the commissioners before August 22. Young men who have arrived at the age of twenty-one years since the last election may vote in the primaries by filing these certificates with the commissioners.

Easy & Practical Home Dress Making Lessons

Prepared Specially for This Newspaper By Pictorial Review

Combination for Little Girls.

The neck can be in high, round or square outline. The front of the underwaist and drawers are cut in one.

Little garments require extreme care in cutting, so the home dressmaker is requested to study the cutting guide very closely in connection with today's lesson. All of the sections of the pattern must be placed on an open width of material, but there can be two width, right sides facing, so that each section will be cut in duplicate. All of the pieces are laid on a lengthwise thread of the fabric, with the exception of the waistband, which is marked by a single "T" perforation. This is laid on a lengthwise or crosswise fold.

The back of the underwaist and the lap are arranged into position first, with the kneeband and underwaist front and front and back of drawers above. The material that is left may be folded to provide for the placing of the waistband on a fold, as previously directed.

If desired with a round or square neck, cut out the upper parts of the underwaist front and back along single small "o" perforations indicating the line desired.

The embroidery may be done before the combination is made.

Service and daintiness are combined in this combination undergarment for girls. It may be made of nainsook, lawn or batiste and is trimmed with lace and embroidery.

The cost of making this attractive undergarment is very small indeed. In medium size the combination requires 2 yards of 36-inch nainsook, lawn or longcloth, with 4½ yards of edging for the trimming. The embroidery design is simple and can be worked within a few hours. Solid satin, eyelet and outline stitches are used for this purpose.

The combination consists of an underwaist and side-closing drawers.

Pictorial Review Combination No. 6790. Sizes, 6, 8, 10, 12 and 14 years. Price, 10 cents.

OUR NAVAL SCHOOL

Origin and Rise of the Grand Institution at Annapolis.

BANCROFT GOT IT STARTED.

He Worked For Its Establishment With Untiring Zeal, and It Was Formally Opened on Oct. 10, 1845—Our Previous Naval Schools.

We had a military academy almost half a century before we had a naval academy. It was not until the administration of President James K. Polk that the government thought it necessary to establish a naval academy at which young men could be educated for that part of our protective service.

George Bancroft was the founder of the United States Naval academy which was at first called the Naval school. It was formally opened at Annapolis on Oct. 10, 1845. For several years prior to this effort there was a school working along similar lines at the Naval asylum in Philadelphia, where the midshipmen prepared themselves for examination and promotion.

The school was reorganized in 1850 and the course was increased from five to seven, the first and last two years to be passed at the school, the intervening years at sea. At this time the separate departments of instruction were established, a vessel was provided and annual practice cruises were instituted. In 1851 the requirements of sea service were abolished, leaving the course four consecutive years of study.

At the outbreak of the war in 1861 the Naval academy was removed to Newport, R. I., where it remained until the summer of 1865, when it was re-established at Annapolis. In 1870 the title of cadet midshipmen was substituted for midshipman, and three years later the course was increased by the addition of two years' sea service in cruising vessels, at the expiration of which the cadet midshipman returned to the Naval academy for examination in professional subjects prior to graduation.

Previous to the establishing of the Naval academy several attempts had been made to establish training schools for officers and sailors of the navy. In 1838 Captain M. C. Perry suggested a school for engineers, but little was accomplished before Bancroft called the meeting in Philadelphia which decided the establishing of the present school.

At first there was considerable of a wrangle as to where the school should be located. The site finally chosen was an old army post known as Fort Severn, located on the point of land which forms the easternmost extremity of the city of Annapolis and lies between the harbor and the Severn river. Poor as the place was in the eyes of Bancroft, he saw that it was far less likely to challenge congressional criticism than a more pretentious habitation, and besides, as the board of naval officers had said, the fact was undeniably true that it might "be enlarged and perfected at some future time."

Fort Severn was duly transferred by the war department to the navy on Aug. 15, 1845, and a fortnight afterward Secretary Bancroft published his "plan," which, together with the "regulations" subsequently prepared by Commander Buchanan, governed the workings of the school until 1850. The first superintendent of the Naval academy was Commander Franklin Buchanan.

At 11 o'clock on the morning of Oct. 10, 1845, all hands assembled in one of the recitation rooms, and the superintendent, after a brief but pointed address, in which he announced he should exact rigid compliance with all laws, orders and regulations, declared the school open. The old buildings at the ancient army post at Annapolis, where the midshipmen began to receive instruction, had been termed by Secretary Bancroft "a modest shelter for the pupils," and it is said that they certainly deserved no more complimentary description.

Mr. Bancroft at once began plans to have the academy more commodiously housed, and he asked congress for an appropriation of $28,000 to be expended for repairs, improvements and instructions at Fort Severn, Annapolis. The secretary brought all his diplomacy and skill to bear, and at last had the profound satisfaction of receiving the appropriation by an ample majority and of seeing the naval school of the United States then become duly organized by law.

Thus ended the long fight for it. Three days after the bill became a law Secretary Bancroft directed the superintendent to enlarge the buildings and construct new ones sufficient to accommodate 100 midshipmen. This small beginning was the foundation of the present large and effective institution, which trains the sailors in a way equal to that furnished by any other country in the world.—Philadelphia Press.

Train Your Dog to Wipe His Feet.

A puppy can easily be taught to wipe its feet on the doormat when entering a house, and the habit once formed is seldom broken. The modus operandi is simple. Every time the dog is brought to the door the command is given, "Wipe your feet." The trainer then lifts each paw in succession and pulls it twice across the mat. ANTI-PROFANITY CLUB IS FORMED IN OHIO TOWN

As a Result, Language of Bucyrus Is Now 99 Per Cent Pure.

Several of the most respected citizens of Bucyrus, O., have formed what they call an "Anti-profanity club," and it is said the membership is constantly increasing.

It appears that these gentlemen who have taken the initiative in the establishment of this organization have heretofore been addicted to the use of violent and picturesque language when things didn't go along smoothly. It appears that before this club was formed there was considerable rivalry in Bucyrus among the charter members as to which one could under stress emit the largest volume of sulphuric language in a given time without repeating himself.

At last, however, the wives, daughters, sisters and sweethearts of these naughty word jugglers shamed them into reform. The ladies pointed out to them the evil influence their profanity was sure to have on the rising generation of the town and suggested that when a man resorts to profanity to express himself it is an admission that his education in pure English has been neglected.

These arguments seemed reasonable, so the gentlemen who had been doing ground and lofty tumbling as to their use of pyrotechnical language got together and formed the Anti-profanity club. Since then their language has been 99 per cent pure.

In lieu of the volcanic verbal eruptions which they formerly used each member of the club has been furnished with a list of mild and harmless expletives to be used in case of emergency. Here are a few of these gentle and refined expressives:

"Mercyation!" "Oh, goodness!" "La-la-la!" "Gracious sake!" "Gee-whilliker!" "Dad-bing!" and "Ding-bust it!"

"Ding-bust it!" is regarded by the club members as perhaps the most forceful and expressive expletive in the list, and as a result there has probably been more "ding-busting" done recently in Bucyrus than in any other town of the same population in the United States.

BIBLE DECEIVES CENSOR.

Nurse Tells of Famine in Turkey; Cholera Also Prevalent.

Using Biblical quotations on a postcard to deceive the Turkish censor, a missionary nurse "got across" a story of famine, pestilence and personal danger confronting American missionaries in Turkey.

Ostensibly the card received by a friend and published by the American board of commissioners for foreign missions is just a word of greeting. Its wording is:

"We shall very soon have to test the first part of the twentieth verse of the fifth chapter of Job and still sooner, even now, of the last of Ps. xci, 3. What a blessing to have a God who is true and able. Lots of love to you all. Dr. Hamlin's famous mixture in demand here."

Job v, 20, reads, "In famine we shall redeem thee from death."

Ps. xci, 3, reads, "For He shall deliver thee from the snare of the fowler and from the noisome pestilence."

"Dr. Hamlin's mixture" is a medicine used in the treatment of cholera.

BEES' BUZZ PARALYZED.

Epidemic Sends Honeymakers Into Hive Corners to Die.

An epidemic resembling paralysis has started among the Ohio bee colonies and threatens to reduce materially the state's output of honey, according to an announcement by N. E. Shaw, state bee inspector. The federal government is sending Dr. E. F. Phillips, its chief bee expert, to the state to investigate the case.

Bees attacked by the disease quit work, go off to a corner of the hive and lie there until they die, says Mr. Shaw.

FOR YOUNG FOLKS

A Sleepy Time Story About Two Woods People at a Fair.

JOEY SQUIRREL AND BUNNY.

Many Strange and Amusing Things They Beheld Until Lost In the Crowd. Nuts and Buns A-plenty—A Ride on a Camel—The Brave Boy at the Beach.

Uncle Ben was all ready after supper and said to little Ned and Polly Ann that he would tell them about

BUNNY AT THE FAIR.

"Are you going to the fair?" cried Bunny, scampering up to Joey Squirrel. "We are all off and are going to have such fun."

"Yes, I'm coming. I've never seen a fair before. Will you take me with you?" asked Joey.

"Yes; come along," replied Bunny.

In a few moments Joey joined his friend and the little family of bunnies, and they quickly ran down the woodland path to the field.

You should just have seen the crowd of animals.

There were so many and such stores of nuts and buns that Joey was quite bewildered.

There were some camels there to give the people rides, and Joey liked that much better; he and Bunny went right to the other side of the field on one. There they saw some mice doing tricks and stayed watching them for quite a long time.

"We had better go back now; mother will wonder where we are," said Bunny, but the crowd was so great that they could not find her again.

"What shall we do?" asked poor little Joey, beginning to cry.

"I know—we'll sit under the hedge till the rest have nearly all gone, then we shall see her," answered Bunny bravely.

Suddenly Joey said: "I know—I'll run up this tree, and then I can see all over the fair. Shall I?"

"Yes, do," said Bunny.

He was out of sight in a moment and found he could see all that was going on, and after a few moments he spied Mrs. Bunny on the other side of the field talking to Policeman Hippopotamus.

"I see her!" he cried and, scrambling down, took his little friend's hand and raced off. It was hard work to get through the crowd, but they reached Mrs. Bunny at last, just as she was beginning to cry.

"Oh, how glad I am to see you!" she said, kissing them both. "Where have you been?"

"We were lost, only Bunny said we'd stay under the hedge, so nobody hurt us," explained Joey.

"And Joey climbed a tree and found out where you were," added Bunny. And then his mother kissed them again and took them home.

She gave Joey a lovely supper before he went home, and then he and Bunny said good night to each other and went to bed, quite tired out with such an exciting day.

Not Afraid of Sharks.

The brave young lad here pictured has just expressed his contempt of sharks. You see he has thrust his tongue out in derision of the sea monsters which have been so active and murderous along the Atlantic coast of late. At the same time you may notice that this fearless boy is taking no chances and is keeping pretty near the land.

What He Lacked.

"Now," said the pert salesman sarcastically as he waited to put back the rolls of calico, "can't you think of something else I could show you?"

Cordouan Light.

One of the most beautiful of the early lighthouses and the first tower in a sea swept position was Cordouan light on the coast of France at the entrance to the river Gironde. It was built in 1611, and, although it has been remodeled, some of the original structure is still there, over 200 feet high.

"PRESIDENCY" BOOK

NOW READY

Contains Facts, Figures, Dates and Data About All Past And Present Elections

SETTLES ELECTION ARGUMENTS INSTANTLY

If you want to know how the political "machine" works; if you want to know the "strength" of each state; if you want to know how your state and other states have voted during the past twenty-five or thirty years—in other words, if you want to know a hundred and one different things about politics that the "other fellow" doesn't know, you have only to secure a copy of "The Presidency of the United States" and all of this desirable information will be yours.

This little book has been compiled by experts at great expense, and the information it contains is absolutely reliable and strictly non-partisan. It is not only intensely interesting but has a distinct educational value that makes it desirable for school children as well as for grown-ups.

"The Presidency of the United States" will be used by thousands of people this year as a quick and ready reference for information on all past and present elections, and as "final authority" for settling all election arguments and disputes.

The ability to answer correctly the questions this book contains indicates a more intimate knowledge of past history and current events than is possessed by the average citizen. Many a surprise is in store for anyone who thinks to do so without "brushing up."

We were fortunate in securing a supply of these books for immediate delivery. If you want one you can secure a copy at this office for "only ten cents."

"Be sure you are right—then go ahead," was the favorite saying of old David Crockett. Those who believe in this motto will find in "The Presidency of the United States" an abundant supply of historical facts and non-partisan information upon which to base their statements and arguments during the 1916 presidential campaign.

Easy & Practical Home Dress Making Lessons

Prepared Specially for This Newspaper By Pictorial Review

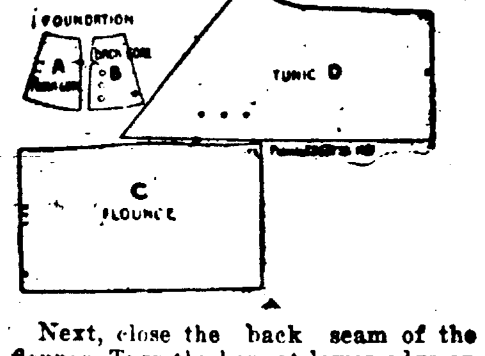
A Design For Bordered Materials.

A bordered marquisette made with a simple bodice and skirt in tunic effect, the twain being joined under a coquettish belt of satin.

Still sharing favor with rich embroideries and dainty laces of the season are bordered materials. This frock is in marquisette, the border being formed of filet lace. The waist closes at the back, the front and back being gathered along the shoulders to a strap, which may be of the same material, or of lace.

The skirt is built up in tunic effect upon a three-piece short foundation. In medium size the entire costume requires 8 yards 44-inch bordered material. If made separately, the skirt requires 5⅞ yards, with 1 yard of material 27 inches wide for foundation gores.

The foundation is the simplest part of the skirt to construct, but upon it depends the beauty of the skirt. The gores are first joined as notched, then the back seam is closed from large "O" perforation to lower edge, the edges above being finished for the placket.



Next, close the back seam of the flounce. Turn the hem at lower edge on small "o" perforations and gather upper edge between double "TT" perforations. Sew the flounce to foundation, center-fronts and center-backs even. The small "o" perforation should be at the side seam.

To make the tunic close the center-back seam from large "O" perforation to lower edge, finish edges above for a placket. Close center-front seam. Turn hem at lower edge on small "o" perforations. Gather upper edge between double "TT" perforations. Adjust to position on foundation

There is something coquettish about the belt, draped as it is with one side higher than the other.

Pictorial Review Waist No. 6596. Sizes, 34 to 44 inches bust. Price, 15 cents.

The Moves In Chess.

In the number of possible moves chess stands alone among games, and not only is it perfectly safe to say that no living man has ever made even once every possible move, but it is highly improbable that in all the centuries of the history of the game has every possible move been made. The different ways of playing the first four moves on each side are so numerous that if every man, woman and child in a city of half a million population were to set to work playing them at the rate of four moves a minute night and day it would be more than a year before any one would be able to leave the chessboard.

Philatelic Philosophy.

Turning the Turtle.

Turtle hunting is not without excitement. The method of capture consists of the simple act of turning the turtle on its back. Once in this position it is quite helpless. Its only defense is to cover its captor with sand thrown up by the powerful front legs or flippers. These are brought into action in an instant, and woe betide the captor who has his eyes and mouth open at the moment, for the sand is hurled with great force. When turned over the captive is dragged up the beach to above high water mark, and this is no easy task, for it weighs about four hundredweight. — London Telegraph.

The KITCHEN CUPBOARD

SUMMERY PASTRY.

BUTTER CAKES.—Chop a tablespoonful of mixed lard and butter into two cupfuls of flour sifted with a saltspoonful of salt and a full teaspoonful of baking powder. Add a cupful of milk or enough to make a soft dough that can be handled. Turn upon a floured breadboard, roll out into a sheet quarter of an inch thick and cut into small rounds. Roll out each round as thin as a cooky, prick with a fork, lay in a floured pan and bake in a quick oven. Spread butter on top of them after they are done leave them in the oven a minute longer and serve.

Cinnamon Wheels.—Materials. A cupful brown sugar, two cupfuls flour, two teaspoonfuls baking powder, one-half teaspoonful salt, two tablespoonfuls shortening, one-half cupful milk, a tablespoonful of butter, a teaspoonful cinnamon.

Utensils.—Mixing bowl, measuring cup, tablespoon, teaspoon, bake board, rolling pin, knife, flour sifter and bake pan.

Directions.—Sift the flour, baking powder and salt into bowl; add the shortening and rub in very lightly; add enough cold milk to make a dough. Place on floured board and roll out quarter inch thick, then spread with butter and cover with the brown sugar and cinnamon; roll same as jelly roll, cut into one inch pieces, place in pan which has been brushed with oil or butter and bake twenty minutes.

Berry Muffins.—Two cupfuls of flour, one-quarter teaspoonful salt; two tablespoonfuls of melted butter, one-quarter cupful of sugar, two small teaspoonfuls of baking powder, an egg, a cupful of milk and a cupful of berries. Mix as for plain muffins, add berries last, dusting them with a little flour. Bake in muffin pans in a hot oven.

Blueberry Muffins.—Two cupfuls of flour, four teaspoonfuls baking powder, three-quarters teaspoonful salt, three teaspoonfuls sugar, two tablespoonfuls shortening, three-quarters cupful milk, a cupful fresh blueberries. Sift flour, baking powder, salt and sugar together and chop in the shortening or rub in with the tips of the fingers. Add milk gradually, using only enough to make it the proper consistency. Fold in the berries. Fill buttered muffin tins and bake in a hot oven.

FROEBEL DISCIPLE

Chief of Kindergarten Division, U. S. Bureau of Education.

STANDS FOR MORE SCHOOLS.

Also Maintains That Two Extra Years Added to the Meager Four or Five That Most Children Get Would Greatly Increase Average Intelligence.

At a conference of the National Congress of Mothers held in New York city in connection with the recent convention of the National Education association Miss Bessie Locke, chief of the kindergarten division of the United States bureau of education, said:

"Those who are familiar with the fact that there are nearly a thousand kindergartens in Greater New York and that most of the large cities have adopted them may be surprised to learn that throughout our country only 11 per cent of the children are in kindergartens, making 89 per cent still unprovided for. In other words, 500,000 children are receiving this training, of whom nearly 4,000,000 are deprived. In a country which stands for equal privileges for all it is manifestly unfair that a few should be enjoying this educational advantage, while the large majority have to go without it.

MISS BESSIE LOCKE.

"A short time ago we wrote to all the civilized countries of the world asking what they were doing for the education of their little children, and we found that Belgium had made the greatest progress, more than a half of all its children between three and six years of age were in kindergarten. Numerically, Belgium is now a small nation, one of the smallest, but as we think of this afflicted country let us not forget that it is the quality of a people rather than the quantity that is important and that education, especially education given in the early, formative years, is one of the most influential factors in the making of quality."

Miss Locke pointed out the fact that the children of our own country spend on an average only a little more than five years in school, and in some sections less than four years, maintaining that two extra years added to this meager four or five would greatly increase the average intelligence of our people.

ABOUT HANDBAGS.

Infinite Variety of Styles For All Individual Tastes.

Everywhere one goes the new handbags are most noticeable. Here is a new fashion which has definite variety. No two of them resemble each other. Any woman of taste can design her own handbag and have something personal and unique.

These bags are on the order of the famous pocket of Lucy Lockett—that is to say, they are of the reticule type and hang over the arm by ribbons or chains. They seldom have the gate or silver frame, but draw up through rings or in simple old fashioned style through a fold.

These bags are sometimes knitted bead affairs. A very stunning one often seen is so large one expects to find fancy work inside. It hangs over the arm by long platinum chains. The upper part is of suede leather, the lower part knitted in varicolored stripes. There are also saddlebag shapes which hang over the arm. These are made of dark moire silk, generally heavily embroidered and fringed with several colors of beads. Others are embroidered with steel or silver beads.

One extremely large silk bag has a heavy silver frame. The bag part is made of beautiful brocade, often intermingled with gold or silver threads and fulled into the silver frame. It is so large and the chain so long that when held over the arm it drops more than halfway down to the knees.

The only sort of arm bag which resembles those carried last season are small shapes, the frames all covered with striped or plain taffeta. These should match the dress worn. The bead frame bags often have little all over patterns of contrasting colored beads.

All bags, whether of the reticule or frame bag type, are fitted inside with the usual small mirror, pocket powder puff, etc. A very odd fancy of the moment seems to be to go gloveless. The gloves are buttoned or snapped together at the last fastening and thrown across one end of the bag, saddle bag style. It looks very odd to see these white gloves, more or less clean, dangling over the bag.

For a shopping bag the very flat, thin envelope type seems to be the most popular. The polished and seal leathers are the most seen, and this bag has generally a leather handle on one side which can be slid along until it is a mere hand strap through which to thrust the hand.

Hand or arm bags show signs of wear quickly, and nothing takes away from a costume more than a shabby bag. This new style may be easily fashioned by the girl at home, for the inside of the bag is lined and faced with flat pockets to hold the vanities, which may be taken from old cases and recovered.

Extra Fine Piecrust.

One cupful of lard, two cupfuls of flour, one tablespoonful of lemon juice, three-quarters of a teaspoonful of salt, one egg and sufficient cold water to hold the mixture together. Sift the flour and salt into a basin. Flour the blade of a knife and chop the lard into the flour, being careful to keep the flour between the blade of the knife and the shortening. When the mixture looks like meal add gradually the egg, well beaten, and mixed with the lemon juice. Roll the pastry into a ball with the knife. It may be used at once, but it will be improved if allowed to stand in a cool place for one hour. This pastry should be rolled out once and handled as lightly as possible. Bake in a hot oven. Lemon juice makes gluten of flour more elastic, so that dough stretches rather than breaks as paste is rolled out.

The Children's Play Corner

"Secret History."

Each player is requested to write on a card or slip of paper the name of some well known woman in history or fiction or in modern life. These are dropped into a basket, and all are then asked to write upon another set of papers the names of certain men whose names and careers are familiar to the average person. These are put in a second basket and well mixed, and both are passed around.

Each player draws one paper from each basket and cudgels his wits to write or tell a brief story bringing in the names of the man and woman that he has drawn, as hero and heroine. The more impossible and ridiculous the better. One person who drew "Rip Van Winkle" and "Xantippe" represented Rip's wife as a reincarnation of the virago who made Socrates' life miserable.

"Mother Bird and Hawk."

This is a fine out of door game and may be played by a large number. Children are arranged in groups in a row. Each group has the name of some bird, such as robins, sparrows, canaries, etc. About fifteen yards to the right of the birds and in front of them is a space for the "mother bird." The same distance to the left is reserved for the "hawk." The mother bird calls, "Come out, canaries" (or any other group). At these words the canaries all run to the mother bird, the hawk trying to intercept and capture them. If tagged they are imprisoned by the hawk. If they reach the mother bird's home without being tagged they are safe. Game continues till all birds have been called out.

Decapitation.

For ONE, which flows from tropic trees,
Men brave the storms of southern seas.
TWO'S thought to bring its wearer ill,
Yet's purchased and paraded still.
My dearest friend I call my THREE,
Though some rebuke me, half in glee,
And say, "That is but slangy lore.
His name is Albert—call him FOUR."
Answers—Copal, opal, pal, Al.

Streets In Mexico.

As so many of the Indians cannot read the streets in Mexico are named after birds or beasts. The name of the street appears in Spanish letters, but this is followed by the figure of the creature after which the street is named. For instance, Ox street is indicated by a figure of an ox in plaster or painted on a wall. The street of Flamingo presents the tall flamingo with back of fiery red, and Elephant street has a well molded figure of that animal with enormous tusks and trunk. This custom is a very useful one, for the youngest child can thus find its way home.

Sea Terms.

The terms larboard and starboard come from the Italian "questa borda" and "quella borda," which by rapid delivery became starboard and larboard, but owing to the strong similarity of sound they were changed into starboard and port, the use of the terms in the original form having been the cause of many accidents.

Dancing on the Beach.

It's a merry, merry tune,
On a summer afternoon,
That the sea keeps singing, singing, to the shore,
As we gayly dance away
To its music bright and gay,
For we love to hear the dear old ocean roar.

AL. G. FIELDS MINSTRELS

WILL BE AT THE QUIRK NEXT WEDNESDAY

Such a prominent subject as "Preparedness" could not fail to find its way to the Al. G. Field Greater Minstrel program. The manner in which it is handled by Mr. Field suggests "Peace through Preparedness," and it is done with a blend of good humor and seriousness which develops a fair minded atitude from all.

Early America is represented in a tableau by a group of soldiers of the period of 1776, and music, marches and pantomime indicate the patriotic spirit of the Revolutionary days.

Then appear in the foreground files of foreign soldiers, all quarrelling among themselves, and disturbing the public peace, and finally reaching chaos. While the contest is still going on, Uncle Sam, accompanied by the Goddess of Liberty, appears on the horizon. Back of the mare assembled soldiers and officials representing all branches of the United States service. Suddenly the band bursts forth with the National airs of America!

At this the foreigners are immediately calmed as they observe the resources of Uncle Sam and his devotion to the Goddess of Liberty. Instantly the scene is lighted by myriads of red, white and blue lights and a hundred American flags are unfurled, when patriotic songs by the immense chorus epitomize the heart and spirit of America.

The Al. G. Field Greater Minstrels will be at The Quirk Theatre, Wednesday, August 16. One performance only.

He Explains.

"What did you call your silver mine?"

"The American Boy."

"Any particular reason for calling it by that name?"

"Well, it had plenty of pockets, but nothing in them except rubbish."—Kansas City Journal.

"Why did she break the engagement?"

"Seems he mailed her a love letter in one of these envelopes with a glass front."—Louisville Courier-Journal.

Children Cry
FOR FLETCHER'S
CASTORIA

CHARGED WITH HYPNOTIZING

OLIVE FELLOWS WAS TAKEN AWAY BY A GIPSY WHO CLAIMS HE MARRIED HER.

Syracuse, N. Y., August 14—Charging that their daughter Olive was hypnotized when she married "Billie" Dow, a nineteen year old gyspy, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Fellows have retained counsel and taken first steps toward having the ceremony annulled.

Fearful lest the girl should again come under the influence of her husband, the parents are keeping her locked in her room, virtually a prisoner, in the Fellows hotel at Onondaga Valley.

The girl disappeared from home three days ago and despite efforts of the police no word was secured until she returned home of her own accord, with a confused story of what had happened.

She says she met Dow on the street and under his influence accompanied him to a soda parlor. That was the last she remmbered until she stepped off a car in Rochester. That night they spent at a Rochester hotel, each in separate rooms, she says and the next afternoon she remembers standing before a minister with Dow. If there was a marriage ceremony she says she knows nothing of it. All she remember so she declares is that Dow asked the minister how much he owed him and was told fifty cents, but he gave the clergyman a dollar.

That night she says they slept in the open air at Pleasant Beach. In the morning she ran away from Dow, hid in a barn and finally made her way home.

Dow says the girl went willingly with him, claims they were legally married and denies using any hynotic influence over her.

The girl's father says the trouble arose when he refused to allow a band of gypsies to camp on ground he owns at Onondaga Valley.

FULTON PEOPLE GET INSTANT ACTION

Those who have used it in Fulton are astonished at the INSTANT action of simple buckthorn bark, glycerine, etc., as mixed in Adler-i-ka. Because it acts on BOTH lower and upper bowel, ONE SPOONFUL Adler-i-ka relieves almost ANY CASE constipation, sour stomach or gas. It removes such surprising foul matter that a few doses often relieve or prevent appendicitis. A short treatment helps chronic stomach trouble. W. H. Gayer & Son, druggists. adv

PUBLIC SCHOOLS MAY NOT OPEN

THE STATE EPIDEMIC OF INFANTILE PARALYSIS MAY CAUSE SCHOOLS TO REMAIN CLOSED IN FULTON.

Every public school in New York state may be closed up because of the spread of infantile paralysis.

State Superintendent of Schools John H. Finley has addressed a letter to each and every school superindent in the state telling them that the state health department deemed it advisable not to re-open the schools in September because of the scourge.

The continued spread of the epidemic may also result in measures being adopted forbidding any child from attending any fairs throughout the state. The state authorities have already taken steps to prevent the attendance of children at fairs in sixteen sections of the state where the disease is raging the worst now and similar action will be taken if the ravages of the disease are not checked in the immediate future.

Notices have been sent out by the state health department to all local health boards instructing them to issue orders against children attending any public gatherings of any nature whatsoever.

The opening of the schools in many cities and towns will in a large measure depend upon the attitude of the health authorities of the municipalities. Superintendent Finley's letter is merely a recommendation and not an order.

It is an open secret, however, that the rapid spread of the disease during the past week or ten days in new sections has caused the greatest alarm. Several new cases have developed around Watertown, which section had heretofore been immune from the plague, more victims are reported at Syracuse, a case has developed in Oswego, while along the Hudson where it spread first from New York city the number of victims and deaths continues to grow daily.

In New York city and Brooklyn there appears to be no abatement in either the number of deaths or the number of new cases. There has been some talk of a nation-wide quarantine and a government fight to stamp out the scourge.

The matter of closing the schools is being seriously discussed in Albany, Syracuse and many other cities. It is practically assured that the Albany schools will not re-open while the Syracuse authorities will act if the disease continues to spread in that city. Several new cases were reported there yesterday.

Some physicians take an optimistic view of the situation and declare that the schools are not scheduled to open for another month and before that time the situation may undergo great changes.

However, if the disease continues to spread at its present rate it is certain that many cities will shut down the public schools and it is probable that in that case a state wide order would be issued to that effect.

EMPIRE UNITED RAILWAYS

WILL PROBABLY SETTLE DISPUTE WITH EMPLOYES WITHOUT HAVING A STRIKE

Syracuse, N. Y., August 14—It is probable that the wage dispute between the officials of the Empire United Railways and its employes, members of the Amalgamated Association of Street and Electric Railway Emweek.

Conferences between T. C. Cherry, manager of the lines and George E. Keenan, representing the union have been in progress for several days and it is understood that an agreement has been reached.

The signing of the new agreement has been delayed several weeks because the factions were not able to agree on terms and also because the officials claimed that nothing definite could be done because the line was in the hands of receivers. The men insisted they had nothing whatever to do with the financial affairs of the road and insisted that some terms be made. The old agreement has expired, but the men have been working under its terms pending a settlement of the dispute.

MOVIE MAN WAS ACQUITTED

SYRACUSE THEATRE PROPRIETOR FOUND "NOT GUILTY" OF VIOLATING LAW.

Syracuse, N. Y., August 14—With the acquittal here late Saturday afternoon of B. Emmett Cornell, proprietor of the Eckel theatre, on charges of violating the law in keeping his theatre open on Sundays, it is probable that the agitation to close the picture houses on the Sabbath will die a natural death.

It is extremely doubtful whether any further arrests will be made although none of the city officials will say what will be done, in fact none of them seem to know, it depending in a large measure upon what steps the New York Civic league takes. It was this league that filed the demands for the closing of the houses.

The jury in the case was out but a short time and the entire trial consumed but six hours.

NO WAR TAX BILL HAS BEEN PASSED BY CONGRESS YET

Internal revenue officials in this district are worried lest Congress will not make up its mind what kind of a war tax bill, if any, is to be passed this year and whether any measure will be signed by the president in time for the internal revenue collectors to get their blanks out in the regulation time before January 1, when the next tax is due.

Congress drafted one war tax bill and then proceeded to rip it to pieces and now seems to be as far from an agreement as at the start. There is talk of Congress adjourning before September 1 and the war tax measure will certainly be passed in some form before that time.

COUNCIL FINANCES EXHAUSTED CITY FUNDS

Several citizens attended the regular meeting of the Common Council last night, which covered almost three hours of debate and consideration of several important financial questions.

W. S. Hillick, city attorney, read a communication from the office of the State Comptroller explaining a method by which the council could re-establish some of the exhausted department funds, particularly those of the Charities and Police Department. According to the communication, the council is at liberty under present conditions, to create a "Revenue Fund" to which shall be charged all moneys collected by the city other than by direct taxation. In anticipation of such collections, the city can draw against the "Revenue Fund" for the Charities and Police Departments. Included in this fund are the monies collected from excise fees, fines collected by the city court, and various other sources. At the end of the fiscal year, the money collected is deposited to balance the funds advanced these departments.

Under this ruling, the council last night established a "Revenue Fund," and appropriated from it $2,000 for the Department of Charities and $4,000 for the Police Department. The sum of $2,000 was placed to the credit of the Department of Charities this morning and Commissioner James R. Somers will now have money available to relieve the poor of the city. Since May 3, the funds in the Charities Department have been exhausted.

The Council voted to refund the east side sewer bonds issued in 1896, and to issue another block of bonds this year to take the place of those which now fall due. Bids for the bonds will be received until June 24, and the bonds will be delivered to the successful bidder at the Farmers' Loan and Trust Company in New York City, on August 1st. The new issue of $67,500 in bonds will consist of one bond of $500 and 67 of $1,000 each. Under the new system approved last night, two of these bonds will be retired every year, commencing August 1, 1918.

Under the Machold bill, the council voted last night to issue bonds to the sum of $15,000, principally for the purpose of making up deficits incurred by previous administrations. Bids for these bonds will be received until June 24, and these bonds will also be received until June 24, and these bonds will also be refunded serially.

In response to a request from Senator Walters, the city waived its preferential rights to certain state land applied for by the Ontario and Western R. R. Company. This land, amounting to .5284 acres adjoins the present holdings of the railroad north of Seneca street and is the proposed site for a new spur.

The Council extended an invitation to the State Association of Sealers of Weights and Measures to hold their annual convention in this city next year. Harry M. O'Brien, city sealer, is now attending the state convention at Elmira.

The city clerk was authorized to purchase a Todd check-writer and protector and an Underwood typewriter for use in his department.

The council voted an appropriation of $40 to Dr. Hall, city health officer, for expenses in attending the state convention of health officers at Saratoga Springs.

The usual motion for a "safe and sane" Fourth of July was passed by the council.

Fred Summerville, who has suffered damage to the extent of several hundred dollars on his property on Hart street, near West Third, because of defective drainage, threatened to bring suit against the city unless some action was taken at once to improve the street. The foundation of a house under construction by Mr. Summerville was almost washed away during the heavy rains.

Mr. Summerville offered to withdraw his claim for damages of the city would improve the street by laying a water pipe and grading the road. City Engineer Hill has approximated the cost of such work at $450, but this is decidedly less than Mr. Summerville's claim. The council promised Mr. Summerville some action on the matter as soon as a survey of the situation had been made.

Mrs. Margaret Cullen entered a claim against the city for $5,000 for injuries received when she stumbled on a sidewalk in front of Conley Brothers' store on Second street, April 19, and fell to the ground. Mrs. Cullen claims that the walk was in an unsafe condition at the time, and her injuries are directly due to negligence on the part of the city.

Mrs. Emma Fancher claims $200 for injuries received when she fell on the sidewalk on Oak street, April 24. Alonzo Clark entered a claim for $10 damages received from surface water on his premises. These claims were referred to the city attorney.

The following bonds were ordered paid, one Oswego Falls school site bond, with interest, $302.40; one West Side sewer bond, with interest, $300.00; one West Side sewer bond, with interest, $100.00; one West Side sewer bond, with interest, $200.00; one West Side sewer bond, with interest, $435.00; one street improvement bond, with interest, $2,303.78.

The report of Charities Commissioner James R. Somers, showing disbursements for the month of $53.34, of which $31.00 was from a private fund, was received and approved.

The report of Bert Adkins, city chamberlain was also presented to the council. During the month, the sum of $30,266.47 was received and disbursements to the extent of $44,001.38 were made. The sum of $97,257.09 was on hand in the banks June 1st.

Billboards Given Good Hard Blow

"Moved, that the application of the Wallace Bill-Posting Company be received and placed on file" was the treatment accorded an application of the Wallace company to erect a billboard on a vacant lot owned by Frank Wolever, near the corner of First Street and Broadway, at a meeting of the Common Council last night. In other words, the Wallace application, which was vigorously protested by Dr. Leon C. Fessenden, William MacNamara and D. S. Hollenga, will be pigeonholed indefinitely which is equivalent to refusing the company a permit.

In protesting against the proposed bill board, Mr. MacNamara and Dr. Fessenden as neighboring property owners stated that the condition of the vacant lot as it now stands is bad enough, without adding further to its unsightliness by the erection of the board. Mr. Hollenga also urged the Council to reject the application. In face of some opposition, the Council recently gave permission to the Wallace company to erect a billboard on South First street opposite Rochester street.

Mr. Hollenga told the Council that Mr. Wolever had been orderded to clean up his lot during Clean-Up week, but no attention had been paid to the order. He said he had received 332 complaints against the condition of the Wolever lot, and asked that the City Health Ojeer be instructed to order Mr. Wolever to clean the lot. City Attorney Hillick informed the Council that no such order could be enforced unless an unsanitary condition exists on the premises.

CITY PARKS FAVORED AS MUSICAL CENTERS

The Common Council appropriated the sum of $300 for summer band concerts at last night's meeting. Seven concerts will be given, and they will be distributed as follows: Triangle Park, First Ward, one; Second Ward, (site undecided) two; East Side Park, four.

This is the first time in several years that no city concerts have been held at the Elks' Home and although this location was suggested last night, the majority of the aldermen were of the opinion that the East-Side Park was the more convenient location.

The city chamberlain was instructed to present the proposition to the manager of the Elks' Band at once, and it is quite likely that the first concert will be held within two weeks.

BRITAIN MAY CHOOSE MAN FROM CIVIL LIFE TO SUCCEED KITCHENER

London—A marked stimulus in the recruiting, the last day under the voluntary grouping system, and the general demand for the internement of all enemy aliens in Great Britain regardless of age, sex or nationality, are the result of the death of Lord Kitchener.

There is a possibility of a political struggle coming over the appointment of a successor to Kitchener, many people believing that the post should go to a civilian, while others are of the opinion that the appointment of a military man would be preferable. Sir William Robertson, chief of staff. Lloyd George, minister of munitions, is one civilian spoken of for the place.

Every Roosevelt Plank in Platform

(By United Press.)

Chicago—11:28 a. m.—Chairman Hills rapped for order.

11:33 a. m.—The Rev. John T. Stone, of Chicago, invoked a divine blessing upon the convention.

11:38 a. m.—James E. Reynolds, secretary of the National Committee read the official call for the convention.

11:45 a. m.—Chairman Hills presented the name of Senator W. G. Harding, of Ohio, as temporary chairman. Senator Harding made the keynote speech, pleading for Americanism and party unity.

Noon—The resolutions committee begins an open hearing, and Senator Borah withdrew from the race. The allies claim three times more votes than the Hughes men.

Every preparedness and Americanization plank that Theodore Roosevelt has espoused in the last year is to be included along with the Suffrage and labor referendum planks of the Republican party, is the big news of the day at the coliseum.

Backed by pledges of one-half million votes and $6,000,000 cash to overthrow the enemies of Suffrage, the National Women's Party will demand of the G. O. P. resolution committee that a Suffrage plank be included in the Republican platform.

ELKS CONVENTION COMES TO FULTON NEXT YEAR

To friends in this city John W. Stevenson Exalted Ruler of Fulton Lodge, B. P. O. Elks, sent the following telegram last night:

"Brand elected. Convention at Fulton next year."

Mr. Stevenson referred in the first part of his wire to the election of Joseph W. Brand, of New York city, as State Exalted Ruler. The information which most interests Fulton Elks, however, is the announcement that this city will be the convention centre for the Elks of he state in 1917.

Uica made a strong fight for the 1917 convention but the Fulton delegation got a flying start on other competing cities and largely through the efforts of Mr. Stevenson, this city will harbor a live convention next June.

President Wilson Tries To Avert Strike

(By United Press)

Washington, August 15—President Wilson conferred yesterday with both parties to the threatened country-wide railway strike, and last night it appeared that sufficient foundation had been laid to furnish a working basis for a settlement of the differences of the employes and employers. The president has been holding conferences with both sides again today. An exemplification of the threatened railroad strike appeared to have swung around from the railroads today when the managers had been in the White House an hour and a half. It was learned that they have agreed to accept the basic principle of a new eight hour day. The demand of the question of overtime pay suggested a bigger and far reaching investigation.

President Wilson at the conclusion of the conference with the managers authorized the following statement: He said that it was impossible as yet to report on the results. All that he could say was that progress was being made on the basis of a settlement.

HUGHES' RECORD HELPS

New York, August 15 (Special)—When Mr. Hughes said at Fargo, "I'd like to have authority to investigate this administration for six months," everybody cheered. Why? Because Mr. Hughes' reputation as an efficient and merciless investigator had gone before him. His audience remembered the thorough and merciless investigation to which he subjected the insurance companies and they recalled, too, that it made not the slightest difference to him whether it was corrupt contributions to the Republican or to the Democratic campaign funds that he was exposing. People who have been paying special taxes, stamp taxes, income taxes, corporation taxes etc., for the last three years, with the prospect of paying more when the pending revenue bill is passed, would like a Hughes investigation, not only of the present administration, but of all previous administrations, that there may be some check on the gross extravagance of public expenditures, the criminal waste of the people's money.

RAILWAY STRIKE MENACES

New York, August 15 (Special)—All New York is anxious regarding the railroad strike which threatens to tie up the entire country. This city is peculiarly isolated and, with its vast population, would be immediately menaced by a food famine were its normal supply, shipped in daily, to be cut off. There is no city in the world which lives from hand to mouth as does New York, so that anxiety regarding the threatened strike is peculiarly personal, aside from the terrible injury to business conducted and represented here. President Wilson took a spectacular step when, after having received assurances that the railway employes would not order a strike until they had conferred with him, he dispatched his secretary, Joe Tumulty, to New York, to ask them to do so, widely heralding his departure from Washington and arranging to have Tumulty met by a host of newspapermen on his arrival in New York, where he gave out Mr. Wilson's letter to the heads of the unions and the railways. The unexplained ordering of an additional 25,000 militiamen to the Mexican border has created an unfortunate suspicion among the railway workers. Many of them, in the absence of any good reason for this order, believe that it was specifically designed to afford the President an excuse for enjoining the railway employes on the ground that their strike was interfering with the military operations of the government. Inasmuch as conciliation is the chief requisite to any success which Mr. Wilson may have in the role of mediator, it is generally regretted that he should have done anything which so greatly arouses the antagonism of the railway men on the eve of his effort to settle the difficulty.

VICE RAMPANT.

New York, August 15 (Special)—That vice has again become rampant during the administration of John P. Mitchell, Democratic Mayor of New York, is disclosed by the white slave investigation now in progress. It has been developed that within a few years over 3,000 school girls have been lured away from home and delivered to lives of infamy by an organized gang. The bathing-beaches, moving picture theatres and dance-halls have been the chief recruiting places of the "Vice Trust." This infamous trust, operating under the protection of the police, actually maintained a number of moving picture houses itself for the sole purpose of luring young girls into the snares of its operatives. Free admission to "the movies," the first bait offered, was greedily accepted. Candy and water followed and soon the children so tempted were completely within the power of their seducers who then shipped them away from New York to be trained in vice, bringing them back only when their parents had ceased to search for them. Mayor Mitchell says he will not run again.

SYRACUSE HAS TOOK A HAND

STRICT MEASURES BEING ENFORCED IN OUR NEIGHBORING CITY.

Syracuse, N. Y., August 15—With infantile paralysis apparently making headway throughout Central New York District Sanitary Supervisor Sears, Mayor Stone, city health officials and the state department of health today took a hand in the matter and started a campaign to check the plague ravages in this section.

First the parade of the Barnes circus scheduled to take place this morning in this city was prohibited as well as the sale of refreshments, balloons and "squakers" on the circus grounds.

Children will as far as possible be kept from all public places or from congregating at any place.

All public swimming pools in this city will be closed indefinitely.

All children who are taken sick and who display the slightest symptoms of paralysis will be placed under the most strict quarantine.

Every visitor from New York, Brooklyn or any other place where the disease has broken out will immediately be reported to the health authorities and an examination made.

Meantime the disease is daily claiming new victims. There have been upwards of half a dozen reported in this city within the past twenty-four hours, several have been discovered at Utica, five have been recorded in Oswego county, Erieville reported its first victim yesterday and scores of patients are under observation as suspects in other places. There are more cases in Central New York at the present time than there has been at any time since the plague first started in New York and Brooklyn.

In these two cities with the coming of cooler weather, the number of deaths and the number of new cases has shown a marked decline. The opposite is true of this section and so far as the health authorities are able to see there has not been any appreciable turn either way since the end of the hot spell. If anything it is worse than before.

The State Department of Health has notified Dr. Sears that it will send a trained physician to this section to aid in the fight on the disease. Dr. Sears is supervisor over Onondaga, Oswego, Oneida, Cayuga, Seneca and sixteen other counties in Central New York.

A campaign of cleanliness will also be inaugurated to stamp out any possible germ centers of the plague. Piles of refuse, garbage, dead animals, etc., must be removed promptly under direction of the health authorities. The health officials of every town, village, city and hamlet in this section will be enlisted in the campaign.

Dr. Sears has sent out a warning to mothers and fathers all over the district. He asks that:

1—Children be kept at home and carefully watched.

2—That parents avoid traveling in public conveyances with children.

3—That ice cream soda water and other soft drink glasses be sterilized before being used again.

4—That all physicians report immediately any suspicious case that may come under their observation.

Results are obtained from Evening Times Classified Advertisements.

ANSEL W. BROWN A CANDIDATE

RICHLAND MAN IS SEEKING SUPPORT OF FRIENDS FOR THE REPUBLICAN NOMINATION FOR COUNTY TREASURER.

Ansel W. Brown, one of the best known Republicans in the town of Richland, made formal announcement yesterday that he had decided to enter the race for County Treasurer. He stated that he had now started active work in his campaign to gain the nomination of the Republican party at the primaries on September 19 and that he hoped for the support of his friends in his canvass.

Mr. Brown is forty-six years of age and has been a life long resident of the town of Richland. He ran a farm just outside of Pulaski for a number of years but eight years ago moved into Pulaski village where he has since lived. He has been a lifelong member of the Grange and is one of the stockholders in the Grange building in Pulaski.

Mr. Brown has been county committeeman from the first district of Richland for many years and has always been regarded as a hard worker in the interests of his party. Before the curtailment of the Customs Service he was deputy collector under James H. Cooper and John S. Parsons, in charge of Port Ontario. Last year he was an inspector attached to the auto bureau of the Secretary of State.

TALK WITH YOUNG MEN

Accidental greatness dies young, and it knows no resurrection. It is excited, boasting, egotistical and tyrannical. All the littleness of its common childhood is lost in the shadow of its present brief loftiness. It assassinates poverty, courts Godliness under the sun and stabs it under the moon, flatters knowledge to keep secret its own ignorance.

Character never dies; it is born to live. It is never beyond improvement. Man makes his character and his character preserves him. Little promises, little debts, little words and little acts are small in themselves, but they are the very weights we throw in the balance over againt a man's reputation. One noble deed doesn't establish true nobility. No man can be trusted with the cares of a higher station until he has proven himself capable and honest in lower ones. Better see him swim the brook before you bid him try the river.

And yet, some men begin to rise only when Fate seeks to pull them down. Difficulties awake them; and what to others seems certain defeat, is all that nerves them to win the battle. True bravery and true nobility are shy, unassuming.

It is the traitor, who always boasts of his loyalty, and the villain who modifies his honesty! Honor "vaunteth not itself," looks every man in the face fearing none; asking no advertising and cannot be flattered.

We say to all the boys of Fulton, remember these little things and don't boast of your honesty. Boast not at all! And we think it poor philosophy to lend a man four dollars by way of enticing him to pay the one he already owes you. Weigh your promises well, and when you have made them, keep them, no matter what it costs.

JUMPING AT CONCLUSIONS

Many of us reach quick decisions, or, rather, jump at conclusions, without really being aware of doing so, and it is only after we are shown to be wrong that we realize how hasty we have been. Even then it is not pleasant to have to admit our error, but it is better to do so than to continue in our mistake. Perhaps we may be prejudiced against a person, and for that reason we incline unconsciously to believe the worst of him rather than the best, and often misinterpret his actions simply by forming unfair judgments without taking the time to inform ourselves. Such action, of course, can cause alarm and misunderstanding, and it seems a pity that many of us who pride ourselves upon our common sense and impartiality, as a rule, allow our prejudices to blind us to real conditions. Sometimes we form our dislikes for no reason at all, at least for no real reason that would appeal to others, and yet because of this dislike we find it impossible to see any good whatever in those who have aroused our prejudice and, instead, are more than willing to make the most of any adverse criticism we happen to hear of them. This is another way of jumping at conclusions and one that reflects upon our own sense of fair play as well as upon our reasonableness.

UNFRIENDLINESS IN POLITICS

How easily does miserable little politics estrange friends! It happens all the time that friendships are weakened and destroyed by the bitter bickering of politics. Such results are really disgraceful, for they arise from the most trivial differences—differences that are not very important, which way the issue goes. The enmities created are far more disastrous than the defeat either side suffers. It is often the case that men have not spoken to each other for years following a campaign. Such a result reflects seriously upon the men and reduces to a real depravity the cause of the estrangement. It is bad politics that produces such estrangements and it behooves all sensible men to see that they do not occur. Have a higher opinion of your conviction than to think it cannot stand a little opposition.

—The optimist sees the doughnut and the pessimist sees the hole probably because the optimist knows he's going to get the doughnut and the pessimist knows that he is going to get the hole.

RURAL SCHOOL ATTENDANCE

A recent government report on rural schools shows that there are important sections of the country where the children attend only sixty-five to eighty days in a year. Even in such a wealthy and progressive group as the north central states, the actual average amount of school attendance per year is but 109 days.

There is still a vast field for the activities of the old fashioned truant officer. It is not enough to establish a well equipped school and put a competent teacher in it. If the pupils are hit or miss in their attendance, the taxpayers' money is wasted, and a generation of children is growing up in semi-ignorance.

Figures like those quoted above suggest a big problem as to who is responsible for such lax standards. "Playing hookey" is a boy trait from one age to another. The shrewd resourcefulness of the youngsters in dodging the teachers and truant officers almost arouses one's admiration. But the truant will pay high for his idleness later on.

This is an era of easy going habits of parenthood. The fact that an order is issued to the younger fry does not mean that anyone follows it up to see that it is obeyed. Money earned by children is a very convenient factor in paying household bills. Many a family encourages the youngsters to slip out of school work in order to pick up odd jobs in a time of scarce labor.

The efficient school will keep a very close watch over its absent members. Excuses for non-attendance will be very thoughtfully read. A very persistent search will be made for the elusive truant. Parents that connive at such absences in order to gather in the few coins that the youngsters can earn, ought to be made to see just how they are spoiling what might be a hopeful future.

MIGHT DOES NOT MAKE RIGHT

Shouts an orator in a cartoon: "The nation must have adequate defenses. A nation which wishes to be respected must be able to command respect." Bladerdash every word of it. Respect is not won by arms. Get a pistol and a pair of knucks and go up and down the street, demanding respect, and see how much you will get. The first thing you know some fellow will pop up and knock the head off you. Respect does not come by way of being armed. Fear does, but fear does not bring lasting or true friendship, which is the only guarantee of peace. A sense of justice, the spirit of good will, our own forces of character—these are the conditions that inspire respect. And this is the kind of respect we want to bring to the nations of the earth by disarmament and doing without great standing armies. We are getting heartily tired of the old-time bully going up and down the street, shaking his fists, and saying he's the "best little man in this town."

HOPE AND SUCCESS

No material treasures that anyone may acquire can compare with the treasures of a hopeful, healthful mind.

The mainspring of all effective effort is hope.

If hope is strangled by gloomy foreboding there is no incentive left.

How can one expect to find success and happiness when looking in the opposite direction toward disaster and failure?

One can anticipate failure and disaster so long that the brain becomes incapable or giving off anything but failure.

We increase discord by admitting its reality, just as we increase happiness by dwelling upon pleasant things.

Either success or failure meets us half-way. By turning the mind toward failure we invite it and cause success to fly from us.

If we persistently shut out every thought that discourages and depresses, and keep the mind in a bright, healthy, keen condition, then the brain cells will be clear to think success and plan it and the body strong, active and able to carry out the brain's dictates.

The mind that is unclouded by the cobwebs of fear and expected failure, and quick to seize upon every passing opportunity or advantage, is an open door to success.

Indeed, the possession of such a spirit as this is success itself.

TERMS OF TREATY WITH DENMARK

Provisions Governing Sale of Danish West Indies.

DECLARE CESSION FREE.

United States Will Agree to Maintain Certain Grants, Concessions and Rights Bestowed by Danish Government—Rights of Citizens Are Also Outlined in Detail.

The treaty which, if adopted, will make the Danish West Indies the property of the United States consists of twelve articles compared with seven in that of 1902. In many respects they are similar. The most important changes are found in article 3, in which are enumerated the grants and concessions the United States will maintain in accordance with the terms of the grants when made by the Danish government.

Article 1 describes the territory ceded as the "islands of St. Thomas, St. John and St. Croix, together with the adjacent islands and rocks," and including the government lands and buildings.

In article 2 Denmark guarantees that the cession is free and unencumbered "by any reservations, privileges, franchises, grants or possessions held by any governments, corporations, syndicates or individuals, except as herein mentioned."

This article also provides for the protection of the property of the Danish national church.

Article 3 contains many special agreements. The arms and military stores of the Danish government are to remain its property, to be removed as soon as practicable.

The United States agrees to maintain certain grants, concessions and licenses given by the Danish government in accordance with their terms, including the following:

Concession to Det Vestindiske Kompagni (the West Indian company) granted Jan. 18, 1913, and April 16, 1913, being a license to drain, deepen and utilize certain areas in St. Thomas harbor and preferential rights as to commercial, industrial or shipping establishments in that harbor.

Concession of June 20, 1914, for establishment of a Danish West Indian bank of issue.

Article 4 provides for the appointment of proper agents for the purpose of formally delivering and accepting the territory ceded.

Price $25,000,000.

Article 5 provides for the amount to be paid for the islands, the sum stipulated being $25,000,000 "in gold coin of the United States," to be paid within ninety days from the date of the exchange of ratifications and to be paid in Washington to the representative of the Danish government.

Article 6 relates to citizenship. Danish citizens may remain or remove from the islands at will, including the right to dispose of their property or its proceeds. In case they remain they will continue to enjoy all the rights, political and religious, secured to them by laws now in force. If the present laws are altered, the inhabitants shall not thereby be placed in less favorable position in respect to their rights and liberties than they now enjoy.

Those who remain in the islands may preserve their Danish citizenship by making within one year from the date of exchange of ratifications a declaration of their decision to preserve such citizenship. In default of such declaration they shall be held to have renounced it and accepted citizenship in the United States.

Article 7 provides that Danish citizens residing in the islands shall be subject in matters civil as well as criminal to the jurisdiction of the courts of the islands, pursuant to the ordinary laws governing the same, etc.

Article 8 relates to judicial procedure pending at the time of formal delivery of the islands ceded and provides for the disposition of civil and criminal litigation then under way. Case pending before the superior or the supreme court in Denmark shall continue to be prosecuted before the Danish courts until final judgment according to the law hitherto in force.

Article 9 provides that the rights of property secured by copyrights and patents acquired by Danish subjects in the islands ceded at the time of exchange or ratification shall continue to be respected.

Article 10 stipulates that treaties, conventions and all other international agreements of any nature existing between the United States and Denmark shall eo ipso extend, in default of a provision to the contrary, also to the ceded islands.

Article 11 provides that in case of differences of opinion regarding the interpretation or application of this treaty, if they cannot be settled through diplomatic methods, the questions shall be referred to the court of arbitration at The Hague.

To Domesticate the Mink.

The United States department of agriculture will attempt to domesticate the mink, which has been bred sporadically in captivity for fifty years or so. The large number of types of American mink, no less than ten, prove it to be a "plastic" animal, and the governmental purpose is to develop a higher and more valuable type than any of those now known.

INDIAN SIGN LANGUAGE.

Members of Every Different Tribe Can Read These Signals.

A white man who visits a foreign nation finds it hard and sometimes impossible to make his most ordinary wants known. The red man has no such difficulty. The problem of a universal language was solved centuries ago by the savage inhabitants of this western world.

Should an Indian from northern Alaska go to Patagonia he could by means of this universal language converse with his southern brethren almost as easily as he could with his neighbors at home. That would also be the case if he visited Central America or met the tribesmen of our own western prairies and mountains.

When this language was invented no one knows, but every Indian learns it in addition to his own. Recently two chiefs of different tribes met in the Geographical society rooms in Washington and held a conversation that lasted nearly three hours, and yet neither one knew a word of the other's language.

This universal language is, of course, made up of signs. For example, if an Indian is passing through a strange country and sees other Indians at a distance he makes the "peace sign"—that is, he holds up his blanket by two corners so that it covers his whole figure. The same thought is expressed by extending the hands, palms outward, slightly inclined from the face. Any Indian would understand either one of these signs.

Then there are the abstract signs by which these "savages" can express their thoughts with regard to the Great Spirit, heaven, good, evil, life and death, sickness, health, riches and poverty. Life is expressed by drawing an imaginary thread from the mouth and death by chopping this thread off. Another sign for death is to hold the tips of the fingers of one hand against the palm of the other and let them gradually slip downward and at last drop beneath the palm.

Most white people think that the Indian word of greeting, "How," is merely the abbreviation of the question, "How are you?" But that is not so. The word is really "aou," which means "brother" or "friend." So when he comes up and growls out his seemingly inquisitive "How" he is not asking after your health, but telling you that he is a friend.—Youth's Companion.

When War Ceases America Will Feel the Pinch of Hard Competition

By GEORGE W. PERKINS, Financier

SOME day the war will cease—probably as suddenly as it began—and our men will no longer have this work. At approximately the same moment that Europe's demand on us for war supplies largely ceases her men will be put to work manufacturing the things that she was selling to us so successfully when the war broke out.

IN SHORT, THE END OF THIS FRIGHTFUL WAR WILL AUTOMATICALLY PUT MANY OF OUR MEN OUT OF WORK AND MANY OF EUROPE'S MEN AT WORK.

It will not do to lull ourselves to sleep with the argument that when this war is over Europe will be so exhausted in men and money that she cannot compete with us in the manufacturing lines. Emergencies and difficulties quicken the faculties of a resourceful people, and no country on the civilized globe today is more resourceful than Germany.

It is a great mistake to expect Europe to be hopelessly crippled, industrially speaking, when this war is over. The thing Europe will be crippled for will be gold. We shall have it, and her only way to get it will be by sending us manufactured goods at prices low enough to get back that gold, and this she will unquestionably do. AS MATTERS STAND TODAY WE ARE WHOLLY UNPREPARED TO REPEL HER ATTEMPT TO DO THIS.

WOULD LIMIT THE NUMBER

EVERY AMERICAN WOMAN SHOULD BEAR THREE BABIES, SHE SAYS.

(By United Press)

St. Paul, Minn., August 15—"There will be no need of birth control legislation when women demand that science cope with the fear of motherhood, which is the real cause of all this agitation for laws permitting the control of the size of families," said Mrs. Robert B. Liggett here today. She has just completed a three weeks' lecture course on "Twilight Sleep" in Detroit.

"American families are decreasing in size every year even without birth control laws," Mrs. Liggett said. "This decrease in our birth rate is alarming. Every American woman must bring to maturity at least three children or our nation will go backward instead of forward.

"It is the immigrant woman who is keeping up the birth rate now. American women are dodging motherhood, and clamoring for birth control because they are physically afraid of motherhood, not because they are afraid of poverty or do not wish to give their time to the care of babies.

"The higher education which we are demanding of our girls is unfitting them for motherhood, because it is developing them to a high nervous tension and making them more keenly sensitive to pain. We cannot condemn our women for wanting to control the size of their families unless we give them some means of eliminating the pain which they know they must face to bring children into the world. With easier motherhood, there will be no need of birth control."

Mrs. Liggett will make a tour of Michigan and Indiana for the same propaganda.

Mrs. Liggett is conducting an educational campaign among women that they demand emancipation from the traditional belief that childbirth must be accompanied by danger and suffering. She has assisted in raising a fund to be used in establishing a Twilight Sleep ward in the Woman's Hospital at Detroit—the first such ward to be made available for women who cannot afford to pay for the treatment.

Mrs. Liggett claims that with better trained physicians for obstretsics, more scientifis knowledge by women of the care they should take of themselves and a universal demand that science make some contribution toward relieving the suffering incident to maternity, birth control will not be necessary.

Nest of the Marsh Wren.

When the marsh wren builds his nest he selects a spot near the water's edge or in a swamp filled with reeds and grasses, and he employs the art of a bridge builder with the daring of a steeplejack. The nest is shaped like a globe, with small openings in the sides. The bird hangs it among the reeds high enough so the spring from it cannot disturb it.

He lines it with feathers, providing a soft cradle for him to rock with the summer breezes. Often a colony of marsh wrens will build their nests in the same swamp, and they keep up a scolding chattering accompaniment to the croak of the frogs.

MILK PRICES FOR PRODUCERS

BEING INVESTIGATED WITH VIEW OF AVERTING A STRIKE AMONG THE FARMERS.

Leading milk producers throughout this section of New York state do not believe that there is to be a strike by the farmers who supply the big distributors. The reason is given as a lack of concerted action on the part of any appreciable number of the purchasers.

It is said testimony before the Wicks investigating committee has shown how all attempts of the farmers to get together for their own protection have been broken down before the methods employed against them.

It is pointed out that co-operative milk stations erected by farmers have been eliminated by "squeeze" methods. Privately owned plants have arisen in the neighborhood and higher prices for milk have been offered to the farmers than their own concerns could stand. The result has been disorganization and real competition has been driven out.

Testimony before the committee has also shown that cream is being illegitimately removed from milk prepared for shipment to New York, the removal being accomplished in such a way as to leave the milk passable under the prescribed tests. This is done by holding up a shipment for twenty-four hours. The milk is skimmed by hand the next morning after being left in the coolers. Several cans of cream having been gained the milk is put into a pasteurizer with the morning's receipts and sent to New York as whole milk.

Dairymen are positive in statements that seventy per cent. of their number are not making a living and would be forced out of business entirely if not engaged in mixed farming. Some dairies are kept, it is said, only for the value of the fertilizer.

"The evidence so far presented to the committee" says Senator Wicks, "shows that prices to the consumer should not be advanced at this time, and any dealer taking advantage of the present situation to make an immediate increase to the consumer will be taking an entirely unwarranted action. Any such effort will be the subject of a prompt investigation.

"Information has been given to the committee at various places that where a milk manufacturer actually desired to buy milk of dairymen and offered prices higher than others were paying he was called to New York and shown that he must not raise the price or invade some other man's territory."

The committee will hold hearings at Cooperstown, Richfield Springs and Clinton during the latter part of this month.

2,500 ROOKIES OFF TO SEA IN "NAVAL PLATTSBURG" TODAY

(By United Press)

Washington, August 15—Two thousand five hundred potential sailors—erstwhile private citizens of the United States, whose naval experience heretofore has been nil, started out from eastern seaports today for a four-weeks' cruise in the interest of naval preparedness a sort of Naval Plattsburg personally conducted by the Navy Department.

The cruise is the first of its sort—for civilians who want to learn navy ways. The men will do just what the Annapolis men do on their cruises; learn how to work a ship and fire guns; and, incidentally, how to keep the brasswork shiny.

Many of the sailors are university men; others are mechanics, radio and telegraph operators, men with and without sea experience. They range in years from a boasted nineteen to an admitted forty-five, and in wealth from $4 a week to $4 a minute.

As planned by the Navy, the cruise will provide a naval reserve—apart from the naval militia—that will be available in time of war. Eight ships are doing the work of carrying the recruits:

The Kearsarge, sailing from Portland, Me., with about eighty recruits; the Virginia from Boston with about 463 and from Newport with about 28; the Maine and Kentucky from New York, with about 943; the Rhode Island from Philadelphia with about 379; the Illinois from Norfolk with about 461 and the Alabama from Charleston with about 101 men.

The recruit's day will start at just about the time some of them have been starting for the all-night athletic clubs for a combination late supper and early breakfast—four a. m. It ends at 9:05 p. m. It includes everything from holystoning a deck to learning what makes a turret turn, and why.

It won't be all work and no play, though. Plans include regattas, baseball games between ship teams and swimming contests. All the 2,500 will have a chance to get a breath of salt air and a set of sea legs. Many of them, it is expected, will join naval militia organizations after their first experience with battleships. They will be asked when the cruise is over whether they will volunteer if the United States has war within the next four years.

An important feature of the cruise will be a demonstration along the Atlantic Coast during the last days of the cruise, of the efficacy of motor boats for home defense against submarines. Such of the 2,500 as own motor boats along the Atlantic coast will bring them out and learn how to sneak up behind a submarine and bash up its periscope or otherwise run. Navy submarines will be buffers for the motorboat men. They will spend part of the time as the attackers and part of the time as the prey of the "wasp fleet."

The Navy Department has high hopes for the cruise. It expects it to result in a real naval reserve that will be ready at call to repel invasion. There will be a lot of fun in it: but there will be many calloused hands, too.

F. X. O'BRIEN TO WALK VIA PIKE'S PEAK HIGHWAY FROM PHILADELPHIA TO CHICAGO.

(By United Press)

Philadelphia, August 15—A walking trip of nine hundred and fifty-six miles, from Philadelphia to Chicago was started from here today by Franklin X. O'Brien, of South Yarmouth, Mass., under the auspices of the National Highways association, of Washington, D. C., to arouse further interest in the National movement for good roads everywhere.

Mr. O'Brien left the corner of North Broad and Market streets, at the City Hall, Philadelphia, at eight o'clock on his long hike over the Eastern End (Philadelphia to Indianapolis) of the Pike's Peak ocean-to-ocean highway.

His outfit consists of a light equipment of extra clothing and an aluminum cooking set, besides his guide and note books.

The Pike's Peak highway runs from Philadelphia to San Francisco, with a connecting link between Reading, Pa., and New York city. Mr. O'Brien's itinerary takes him through Harrisburg, Pittsburgh, Columbus, Springfield, Dayton, and over the Dixie highway to Chicago, via Danville, Ill. Mr. O'Brien expects to reach Chicago, October 13th.

The National Championship tournament begins on August 28.

EXPERTS TRYING TO FIND EXACT VALUE OF FARM TRACTOR MACHINERY

(By United Press)

Cedar Rapids, Ia., August 15—Experts from Iowa state college at Ames at the state tractor demonstration here today are trying to find the value of the different makes of machines exhibited for the farmers. They are testing for fuel cost and the amount of power required to operate plows and other farm machinery.

Experts say it is as necessary to measure the ability of new farm machinery as it is to measure the amount of food required by a cow and the amount of milk she produces. Farmers and implement men from all over the middle west are attending the tractor demonstration, which will continue for four days.

U. S. SOCCER TEAM MEETS SWEDISH PLAYERS AT STOCKHOLM TODAY

(By United Press)

Stockholm, Sweden, August 15—The All-American Soccer Team is here and ready today to meet the All Stockholm aggregation in the only 1916 international soccer contest scheduled. The Americans are acclimated and prepared to give the Swedes a big run for their money.

A second game with the same aggregation will be played the 18th and on August 22nd the All Sweden eleven will battle the Americans. From here the Americans will go to Gothenburg, where it plays August 25th. The tour will close with the final game at Christiania on the 28th.

The American aggregation, which sailed from Hoboken for Christiania late in July, is the guest in Norway and Sweden of The Stockholm Gymnastic and Sporting association and is made up of the following players under the direction of Thomas W. Cahill, secretary of the United States Soccer association: George Tintie, of the Brooklyn Celtics, goal; J. M. Robertson, Yonkers Field Club, right back; C. H. Spalding, Dieston A. A., Philadelphia, left back; Thomas Murray, Bethlehem (Penn.), Field Club, right half; Neil G. Clarke, Bethlehem Field Club, center half; Albert Blakey, Putnam Field Club, Philadelphia, left half; James Ford, Jersey A. C., Jersey City, outside right; Thomas Swords, Fall River Rovers, inside right; J. H. Heminstey, Scottish-Americans, Newark, center forward; M. B. Diederichsen, Innes Fells Field Club, St. Louis, inside left; Harry Cooper, Continental Field Club, New York city, outside left, and the three substitutes, C. J. Smith, Bayonne; W. L. Burgin, Philadelphia, and C. H. Ellis, Brooklyn Celtics.

SMITHSONIAN INSTITUTE EXPERTS TO HAVE FREE HAND IN ARGENTINE WORK

(By United Press)

Buenos Aires, August 15—The Argentine government has issued orders that every facility be extended to the members of the Commission from the Smithsonian Institution at Washington, who are coming here to engage in solar studies.

It is understood the commission's work will be mainly in the interior, remote from large towns, and all possible preparations are being made for its convenience. The members will be given the status of Argentine national employes that they may be entirely unhampered. The exact date of their coming has not yet been announced yet.

Fulton is reaching out for more factories. Nothing will carry more weight with the prospective investor than a live daily paper. Are you doing your part?

HAVE ROSY CHEEKS AND FEEL FRESH AS A DAISY—TRY THIS!

Says glass of hot water, with phosphate before breakfast washes out poisons.

To see the tinge of healthy bloom in your face, to see your skin get clearer and clearer, to wake up without a headache, backache, coated tongue or a nasty breath, in fact to feel your best, day in and day out, just try inside-bathing every morning for one week.

Before breakfast each day, drink a glass of real hot water with a teaspoonful of limestone phosphate in it as a harmless means of washing from the stomach, liver, kidneys and bowels the previous day's indigestible waste, sour bile and toxins; thus cleansing, sweetening and purifying the entire alimentary canal before putting more food into the stomach. The action of hot water and limestone phosphate on an empty stomach is wonderfully invigorating. It cleans out all the sour fermentations, gases and acidity and gives one a splendid appetite for breakfast.

A quarter pound of limestone phosphate will cost very little at the drug store but is sufficient to demonstrate that just as soap and hot water cleanses, sweetens and freshens the skin, so hot water and limestone phosphate act on the blood and internal organs. Those who are subject to constipation, bilious attacks, acid stomach, rheumatic twinges, also those whose skin is sallow and complexion pallid, are assured that one week of inside-bathing will have them both looking and feeling better in every way.

Buenos Aires, July 25 (by mail)—Buenos Aires English speaking residents to whom local merchants address lots of advertisements in their own language, were tickled today when one of them announced a new cough mixture, which he guaranteed would prove exceedingly advantageous for the undertaker.

A GOLD BAND.

William Walters' Banner Band, a musical organization that has been a feature with the Al. G. Field Greater Minstrels the past several years, have added to their general attractiveness by the purchase of an entire set of solid gold instruments. Even the drums are gold trimmed. C. G. Conn, who furnished the instruments, declares that in tone and finish they surpass any set of instruments ever put forth.

With the natty red and white uniforms, Walters' Band is a striking feature of the minstrel parade.

Concerts at 11:30 a. m., and 7:00 p. m., will be given by this band and they will also play at the Fair Grounds.

WABASH-PITTSBURGH R. R. WORTH 3 MILLION, SOLD AT AUCTION TODAY

(By United Press)

Pittsburgh, August 15—The Wabash-Pittsburgh Terminal Railway is up for sale by a master at the company's building here today. The Erie was expected to be the most interested bidder. The price wanted is about $3,000,00.

The Erie may be a purchaser of the Wheeling and Lake Erie Railroad before long, according to gossip in railroad circles. The Pennsylvania, because of the United States Supreme Court's decree dissolving the Northern Securities company, cannot acquire either the Wabash-Pittsburgh or the Wheeling and Lake Erie.

The Erie, by getting hold of the latter, would have ready-built connection between its own lines and the Wabash-Pittsburgh.

DEMOCRATS JUBILANT

New York, August 15 (Special)—There is jubilation at Democratic National headquarters because Charley Murphy and Tammany have announced that they will cordially support Samuel Seabury, the Democratic nominee for Governor of New York. Judge Seabury is a single taxer which, in the opinion of his friend Charles O'C. Hennessey, will ultimately make him President of the United States. Tammany engineered the nomination of William F. McCombs for United States Senator, so that with its acceptance of Judge Seabury, its support will be unanimous and probably enthusiastic for the Democratic ticket. Charley Murphy does not particularly like Seabury, but would infinitely prefer him to Governor Whitman, the Republican candidate, and having been given the Senatorial nomination, there is no reason for Murphy and his cohorts to complain because in picking a candidate for governor the convention did not take an essentially Tammany man. After all, Tammany is a practical organization which knows well how to play the political game and to win over Democratic candidates even when it has not named them. However, the fact that both Seabury and McCombs enjoy Tammany support is an occasion of rejoicing to the Democratic leaders.

CHILDREN WILL BE GIVEN BOOKS

FUND BEING STARTED TO FURNISH INVALID CHILDREN WITH BOOKS.

Central New York people have contributed liberally during the past two years to all sorts of relief work, most of which was for the benefit of foreigners. Now a fund has been started to help suffering in New York state. It is for a contribution of pennies to buy books for the benefit of thousands of children which have been stricken with infantile paralysis and other plagues.

The money is not to be used in the care of the children. The municipal authorities of the metropolis are doing that. The money will all be used in the purchase of books to make the sufferers happy.

The fund was started by a little boy in New York with a gift of two pennies to buy picture books for the youngsters in the hospitals who are helpless from the disease. His act started a country-wide movement to bring more pennies to the fund.

It is likely that when the collection starts in this city collection boxes will be placed in stores in the business sections of all Central New York towns and cities.

Backers of the movement are sending out this appeal:

"Ever since the days of the Widow's Mite there have been instances where minute gifts of money have grown to miraculous proportions in some mysterious way or another. It is good to know that even these days of war and pestilence and skeptical science are not immune from miracles of this kind. Just such a one happened a few days ago in New York—of all places—and the end of the miracle has not yet been reached.

"It began with a letter—the first letter of a very busy boy—sending two pennies to his aunt in the big public library to buy picture books for the sick children. Now it happened that the aunt was none other than the chief librarian of the children's department. It also happened that all the children's rooms all over the city had been closed for a month because of this very sickness, and the workers therein were wondering what they would do with no books to keep and no children.

"It was like Hamlin town after the Pied Piper had played the childrren away to the Joyous Land. And then the pennies began to work their magic. In three days they had multiplied like fairy gold until there was enough to buy a hundred picture books, a miniature circulating library for the children recovering from infantile paralysis.

"The hundred books were bought entirely by penny contributions and another hundred can be bought in the same way. It is the hope now of the chief librarian to have a shelf of books in every hospital center.

HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES CONTEMPT CASE AGAINST U. S. ATTORNEY UP TODAY

(By United Press)

Washington, August 15—A phase of the United States House of Representatives' contempt proceedings against U. S. District Attorney H. Snowden Marshall, of New York, comes up in the United States Supreme Court here today.

The contempt proceedings grew out of the U. S. indictments against Congressman Frank Buchanan, of Illinois and other members of Labor's National Peace council in connection with alleged German bomb plots said to have been hatched in the United States.

Congressman Buchanan, charging irregularity in the actions of Marshall in handling the case before the Federal Grand Jury, got a congressional investigating committee appointed to come to New York and probe Marshall's acts.

The investigating congressmen, displeased with what they considered Marshall's snippy attitude toward them and their investigation, haled him before the House of Representatives for contempt.

Marshall sought a writ of habeas corpus before Federal District Judge Hand, in New York, to prevent the House compelling him to appear and answer the charge. Judge Hand dismissed the habeas corpus proceeding after a hearing on its merits. Marshall has until midnight today to perfect an appeal to the U. S. Supreme Court from the dismissal of his action by Judge Hand. Marshall's petition stated that he had serious doubts as to the jurisdiction of the House in haling him before it for contempt. He also questioned the right of Speaker Clark to issue a warrant for his arrest.

IS YOUR PANAMA MADE OF PAPER

JAPAN FURNISHES A LARGE PER CENT. OF SO CALLED PANAMA HATS.

If you happen to be the proud owner of a Panama hat, or rather what was sold to you as a Panama hat, at Panama hat prices, just give it the once over and see whether it is made of real straw. There's a fair chance that it is made of tissue paper.

One of the officials of the special agents branch of the United States Treasury department has called attention to a decision of the Treasury Department anent the subject of "Panama hats" that are instead made out of tissue paper.

What the department had to do was to decide whether hats imported into this country that are made of that material should be classified as a hat or merely tissue paper.

The department decided that the "hats" which are made in Japan were not hats, merely paper. So duty on these hats is imposed on the theory that they are nothing but paper.

But should you discover that your hat is nothing but papet don't get excited. The tissue paper Panama will probably stand as much wear and tear, and perhaps more, than the ones made of straw.

In its official language the Treasury Department holds that imitation Panama hats are dutiable as articles made from tissue paper of which the tissue paper is the component material of chief value. It has formerly been the practice to class them as hats.

The hats in question are made from paper, rolled and coated so as to imitate grass or straw and the department finds it necessary to change the classification.

The customs office gives birth to strange rulings. A late treasury department ruling speaks of rubber flower ornaments on bathing caps and suits for women and holds that such articles should not be classed as rubber goods, but as millinery.

PROFESSIONAL MEN'S PAY

SMALL INDUCEMENT TO BECOME A MEMBER OF THE MEDICAL PROFESSION.

Unless the State of New York offers better compensation for positions in the medical service of the state it is liable to be at a disadvantage in its hospitals, prisons and charitable institutions for lack of competent physicians. The salaries of the positions requiring such physicians are so small that few of the medical profession are attracted by them.

The state civil service commission has found it necessary to issue a statement calling attention of physicians to the advantages to be gained by entering the state's service. The commission instances recent examinations which failed to produce any results because of the fact that competent physicians did not try the examinations.

The statement says an examination was recently held for prison physician at a salary of $2,000, but the number of competitors was very small, and no one passed the examination. An examination for assistant physician in the prisons, salary $1.500 held at the same time produced only two eligibles. An examination for assistant physician in the state hospitals held January 22 produced 18 eligibles, but the list was exhausted before July 1. Another examination was held July 15, but only eleven competitors were secured.

This position carries an intial salary of $1,200 with maintenance including quarters, board, laundry, etc., and the salary is automatically increased $100 per year until $1,600 is reached when opportunity is offered for promotion to the next higher grade, senior assistant physician at $1,800 and maintenance. The state hospital service, the announcement says really offers a career, as there is a regular chance for promotion for the medical staff from assistant physician to superintendent.

Not His Fault.

"You pay too little attention to your personal appearance. Remember that clothes make the man."

"Yes, but for me the man says he won't make any more clothes!"—Exchange.

INNOCENT MAN IS SAVED FROM CHAIR

Guilty Person at Last Confesses to Authorities.

ALL HOPE HAD BEEN LOST.

Preparations Had Been Made For Execution and the Final Goodby Had Been Said to His Family—Convicted of Double Killing—Robbery the Motive.

The death house at Sing Sing prison was filled with activity on the night of July 28, for there was to be an electrocution the following morning. Charles Frederick Stielow had been sentenced to pay the death penalty on a charge of murder that morning. The prison ministers were in his cell, the chair had been prepared, his death suit had been given him, with the slits in it for the electrodes. His hair had been cut so as to make a clear space for the deadly instrument. The condemned man's family had said their last goodby, and all hope had disappeared.

Outside the prison, however, friends were at work on the case, convinced that a man was about to be sent to the great beyond for a crime he did not commit. Stielow was popular. A good natured, jolly German, he proved himself to be one of the most likable men in the prison, and other prisoners and guards were convinced that a man of his disposition was not guilty of the crime with which he was charged.

Justice Guy of the New York supreme court then sent a stay of execution to the prison in order that the evidence might be reviewed. This reprieve put new life and new hope into Stielow and his friends. They went to work with renewed vigor in their endeavors to prove him innocent.

Now Irving King, a junk dealer, has come forward with a confession that exonerates Stielow. King has admitted that on the night of March 21, 1915, he killed aged Charles Phelps and Miss Margaret Wolcott, the object being robbery. The confession is also said to exonerate Nelson Green, who is serving a sentence in Elmira prison for complicity in the crime.

King had been suspected of the double murder for some time. His arrest followed weeks of investigation. The story told by his confession is this:

On the Sunday of the murder he went to the home of Mr. Phelps. He arrived in the afternoon, made himself agreeable to Mr. Phelps and Miss Wolcott and got an invitation to take supper with them. He accepted this invitation.

The meal over, King engaged them in further conversation, and, the hour having grown late, he got an invitation to spend the night.

Meant to Rob His Host.

He accepted it, and some time before 11 o'clock he was escorted to the guest room, which Mr. Phelps in his hospitality put at his disposal. In the room he waited until things grew quiet. He had determined to rob his aged host.

Shortly after 11 o'clock King left his room and stole out. His mission was to rob Mr. Phelps. He did so, but aroused the aged man.

King confessed that he took his pistol and shot and killed Mr. Phelps, that then he took the same pistol and shot and killed Miss Wolcott.

The conviction of Stielow was originally procured mainly through an alleged confession obtained by a private detective, George W. Newton. Stielow could not sign his name, but Newton had him make his mark at the end of the typewritten "confession."

Badgered Into "Confessing."

Affidavits were submitted in motions for a retrial asserting that a lawyer for Stielow had trapped this detective into a description of the methods by which he obtained the alleged confession. Stielow has consistently told his lawyers that he made his mark to the confession without realizing what the paper was and simply to avoid constant badgering by the detective.

Charles Phelps, a wealthy farmer, seventy-one years old, and his housekeeper, forty, were found shot to death in West Shelby, Orleans county, N. Y., on the night of March 21, 1915. The man was in his own home. Miss Margaret Wolcott was on the steps of the cottage across the road, where Stielow, a newly engaged farm hand, lived with his wife and children; Nelson Green, his brother-in-law, and the latter's wife. As Phelps was known to have had a large sum of money in the house, and as this was missing robbery was given as the motive.

Rewards aggregating $6,000 were offered, and before the month ended Stielow and Green were arrested. They got "the third degree" from private detectives, who later produced an alleged confession. This was unsigned, but at the trial in July, 1915, they swore it had been obtained from Stielow. He was sentenced to death, and Green was sent to Elmira for life.

Four dates were set for Stielow's execution and a stay granted each time.

Named After Thirty-six Years.

After thirty-six years as a candidate for one office J. Worten Keys was nominated for sheriff by the Democrats of Saline county, Mo., in the primary. He has been a candidate for sheriff at each election since 1880 and failed to win until this year. Keys is a farmer and stock raiser.

SCHULTE WARNS MAN WHO DEFIES DEATH

Frank Schulte is one of those quiet exponents of the unexpected (on and off) who keep up the interest.

One day the Cubs had a day off in Buffalo and were engaged in looking over Niagara falls. The players were on a trolley car on the Canadian side to take the gorge trip. Suddenly a battered, much beaten up, wiry looking individual leaped upon the running board of the car.

"On such and such a day," he said, "I went over the Horseshoe falls in a barrel. The rock near the center shows where I took the plunge."

A moment later he broke loose again.

"In the rapids below, near the bridge, is where I was taken from the barrel."

Every half mile or so he pointed out some spot where he had risked his life. Schulte had not said a word. Suddenly he slid over to the end of the seat and remarked confidentially:

"Say, old boy, you'd better get in off that running board. You might fall off and get killed."

CHIEF MEYERS AGAIN AN IDOL

Indian Backstop Stages Big Comeback With Brooklyn Team.

Chief Meyers has come into his own. Discarded by John McGraw as being "through," looked upon by Polo grounds fans as a once great catcher who had slipped back immeasurably, the "chief" has accomplished a wonderful comeback and is an idol in Brooklyn today.

It is an admitted fact that a player, grown stale, will often undergo a startling change in form when he dons the uniform of another team, and this is exactly what has happened in the case of John Tortes Meyers, the college bred aborigine.

The "chief" has had a rather picturesque career. A graduate of Dartmouth, he took a three year postgraduate course in baseball in the minor leagues and came to the Giants from St. Paul in 1908, costing the club $6,000. At Marlin in the spring of 1909 he jumped into the limelight as a long distance hitter and was received by the New York fans with open arms.

It was last year that Meyers gave the first indication that he was slipping, and there were few regrets on the part of the fans when the Indian was sent to Brooklyn and Bill Rariden was signed to take his place. In 110 games last year he hit the ball for an average of exactly .232, and it appeared that he was about ripe for the minors.

Then came the transformation, not only in his batting, but in his catching. Meyers loomed up in great form behind the bat when the Robins opened the present season, and he has maintained a steady pace ever since. The result is that he ranks second only to Uncle Robbie in the affection of the fans in Brooklyn. He looks like a different man today, and his timely hits have broken up more than one game for the league leaders.

GOLF GAME REQUIRES SKILL.

This Is Why So Few Muscled Athletes Take to the Pastime.

Why is it that more athletes successful in various other sports do not do well in golf? A head full of brains and courage is fairly handy in all branches of sport. Brawn is generally not to be sneered at. Speed and stamina, not mentioning alertness, are all good assets. But the fellow that has all this stuff perhaps does not make the best golfer, for this gentle game seems to be somewhat different from other outdoor sports. Still, the fall golf tourneys do not suffer a whole lot in the class of entries as a consequence.

A slap in the neck, a jolt in the chin, 200 odd pounds in the ribs and a cleated hoof in the nose—all at the same time—then crawl out of the sod and come back for more. That's football.

A tear filled eye, a hazy ball, a slippery club, a critical gallery, a distant pin, thought of the present, past and future—no chance to get sore or hit anybody, no chance for brute strength or vim—that's all to worry the golfer when he's backed to make a perfect shot. No wonder so few raving, tearing athletes shine at golf. There is no running and yipping. A cool, squinty eye triumphs over the muscled brute every time.

STALLINGS STILL CONFIDENT.

Thinks His Braves Will Win National League Flag.

George T. Stallings was greeted by a friend the other day, with "Hello, George, how have you been all the time?"

"Oh, fighting umpires, mostly."

"An old pastime of yours in the International league, wasn't it?"

"Perhaps. But they can hand it to you harder in the big league. But we have gotten along pretty well—considering."

Stallings was confident that his Braves would win out in the National league. "We are in a comfortable position now," he said, "and we are the best road team in the league. I have got the most wonderful pitching staff that was ever assembled, but the natural hitters on my team are not hitting. They always have and they will again, but just now they are not. When they break loose watch the Braves jump to the front."

UNIQUE CEREMONY

The Japanese Rite For the Battle Slain of the World.

IT EMBRACED ALL NATIONS.

On a Floating Temple In Sumida River a Priest of Tokyo, With His Flock, Offered Prayers For the Souls of Soldiers Dead Because of Wars.

Unusual preparations were made one morning in Shussanji, or the Going Out of the Mountain temple, a quaint little place of worship hidden away in a labyrinth of crooked streets in a poor quarter of Tokyo—preparations for a celebration on the Sumida river to pray for the repose of the souls of all those slain in battle regardless of nationality and to scatter scraps of paper bearing the image of Jizo Sama over the waves, one for each departed spirit.

The chief priest, an aged man, with his assistant and the supporters of the temple, had been busy for days in advance, and all was ready. The red and gold altar of Shussanji was heaped up with offerings of rice and fruit, and a plain wooden tablet had been placed there bearing the words:

"To console all those souls who have passed into the beyond because of war."

The old priest, his bald head shining, clad in his coarse cotton robe of gray, officiated before the altar, and when the last prayers were uttered the people formed a procession to the Sumida river, a short distance away.

Near a bridge an unusual craft was waiting, a deep cargo junk roofed over with canvas bearing bold black Buddhist symbols, and at the bow fluttered a white cotton banner on which was written in large black characters:

"A service to console the spirits of the whole world's departed ones."

Quickly the parishioners embarked and squatted down upon the cushions spread over the bottom of the boat, and the priest, the central figure in the religious ceremony, as gray and faded as the robes he wore, took up his position in front of the altar. A piece of soiled embroidery did duty for an altar cloth, and there was set up a tarnished statue of Jizo Sama. Just below were three wooden tablets. The central one read, "Pray for the whole world's departed ones' souls." The others had inscriptions asking for prayers for the Japanese army and for prayers for the allies of Japan.

The priest placed some sweet scented squares of incense upon the coals in a small brass brazier, and as the clouds rose into the air the boatman with his bamboo pole pushed off from the shore and the holy man's voice was heard chanting—all the worshipers, old women and young, men and children, murmuring in an undertone, "Name Amida Butsu!"

Out upon the Sumida river the ceremony of scattering the papers was begun. Old and young with their hands full leaned over the sides of the junk, throwing away the sacred papers with the effigy of Jizo Sama stamped thereon, each meant for the solace of the soul of some soldier slain in battle.

Those who have mourned dear ones slain in war would have been touched to the quick by this simple service of humble Japanese people given for all that great host of unknown who have laid down their lives for their countries.

And, while the priest intoned, the incense rose into the air, the metal and the wooden drums were beaten, the worshipers chanted unceasingly, and the squares of paper fluttered out of the boat on all sides and were carried away by the wind over the water to make a long wake behind the vessel.

For three hours the temple junk floated down the river, the papers falling noiselessly over the waves as the banks of the Sumida were passed.

A halt was made at noon, when thin white wooden boxes filled with rice and vegetables were brought out, while an old woman brewed the tea over a little charcoal fire.

The spot at which the stop had been made was a sacred one, for in that exact place a Jizo Sama stone had been buried under the water. Here after the simple meal a special service was held before the boat returned upstream, and a long, narrow piece of wood was driven into the sandy bottom of the bay. The inscription upon it read literally as follows:

"Herewith the service is held for the whole world its departed soldiers to console."—London Times.

Paralyzed Him.

"Don't tell me you can't find work," said the hard faced housekeeper.

"Well, mum," replied the tramp at the door, "it's true a man offered me a job only las' week, but I couldn't take it."

"And why not?"

"I was paralyzed."

"You seem all right now."

"Yessum. Yer see, I wuz paralyzed wid fright."—Birmingham Age-Herald.

Both Departed.

"You don't often see an old fashioned whittler nowadays."

"No. The type is dying out; also the diminutive bad man who used to pull out a bowie knife and threaten to whittle his foe down to his size."—Birmingham Age-Herald.

Another Cluster of Future Greats Has Popped Up.

BILL BRENNAN A GOOD ONE

The Husky New Yorker Has Been Mowing Them Down In Masterly Style, and Many Experts Predict He Is In Line For Championship Honors.

The white heavyweight division is indeed a hardy product. Despite Champion Jess Willard's seeming invincibility, the dangerous presence of Jack Dillon and the consequent hopelessness of their lot, new big men with titular ambitions continue to spring up and demand attention.

Until the title holder outgrows his boxing ability, Dillon suffers the loss of a couple of limbs and the colored contingent is suppressed there is but a slim chance of any of the new men attaining widespread recognition. Still, they all seem optimistic and hopeful of fighting their way to the topmost position in the division eventually.

Within the last few weeks or months three men have appeared in battle in local rings and performed with such uniform success that they are beginning to command quite a bit of publicity in the papers, not to mention the building of enthusiastic followings. The trio of newcomers consists of Knockout Bill Brennan, Jim Healy and one Jack Dempsey. It cannot be foretold just how far they will go, but they are on their way. At the present time they just "look promising."

Brennan Has Good Record.

Brennan is one of Leo P. Flynn's dogs of war. To date he has compiled quite a record. Out of thirty-eight fights he has won thirty-one with knockouts, which gives him a batting average of .816. Since the first of the year he has fought twenty-eight battles, twenty-four of which he won with the ten second punch.

During his two year career only six men have carried him over the scheduled distance, the notable exceptions being a chap named Nelson, Marty Cutler, Ned Carpentier, Larry Williams, Andre Anderson and Terry Keller. He has lost but one battle, that being his questionable defeat by Joe Cox in Brooklyn. However, he beat Cox later.

Brennan would also take a paste at Arthur Pelky if some club in the country would stage it. Jim Healy, too, is another that he would meet.

Brennan's desire to pick out Healy is accounted for by the fact that he threatens to "horn in" on the popularity which he shares with Coffey among their fellow countrymen. Healy has been boxing almost exclusively at the Olympia Athletic club, New York, and has gained quite a number of admirers for himself. Every time he boxes he packs the arena to capacity. Thus far he has flattened only a bunch of dubs, but they do say that he will surely be a champion some day.

Nothing had been heard of Jack Dempsey for a month until the other day, when he took the astonishing, agile Andre Anderson over the jumps at the Fairmount Athletic club, New York. Dempsey made a very favorable impression and gained a rapidly growing crowd of supporters. Dempsey hails from the west and fights under his right name. He is a six footer and weighs 180 pounds.

Horses the Cossacks Use.

The Cossack's horse is small, with a short, thick head and neck and a sloping back, but what he lacks in size he makes up in sense. To weather and climate he is alike indifferent and does not miss a warm stable, because that is a luxury he never had. He will thrive where any other horse would starve and relishes food that a goat would scorn. His rider will tether him on a snow covered plain, and he will get his own food by scraping aside the snow to get at the reindeer moss. And so docile is he that he will form a breastwork for his master to fire over or cover incredible distances on the shortest of commons.—London Chronicle.

Right In His Line.

"PRESIDENCY" BOOK

NOW READY

Contains Facts, Figures, Dates and Data About All Past And Present Elections

SETTLES ELECTION ARGUMENTS INSTANTLY

If you want to know how the political "machine" works; if you want to know the "strength" of each state; if you want to know how your state and other states have voted during the past twenty-five or thirty years—in other words, if you want to know a hundred and one different things about politics that the "other fellow" doesn't know, you have only to secure a copy of "The Presidency of the United States" and all of this desirable information will be yours.

This little book has been compiled by experts at great expense, and the information it contains is absolutely reliable and strictly non-partisan. It is not only intensely interesting but has a distinct educational value that makes it desirable for school children as well as for grown-ups.

"The Presidency of the United States" will be used by thousands of people this year as a quick and ready reference for information on all past and present elections, and as "final authority" for settling all election arguments and disputes.

The ability to answer correctly the questions this book contains indicates a more intimate knowledge of past history and current events than is possessed by the average citizen. Many a surprise is in store for anyone who thinks to do so without "brushing up."

We were fortunate in securing a supply of these books for immediate delivery. If you want one you can secure a copy at this office for "only ten cents."

"Be sure you are right—then go ahead," was the favorite saying of old David Crockett. Those who believe in this motto will find in "The Presidency of the United States" an abundant supply of historical facts and non-partisan information upon which to base their statements and arguments during the 1916 presidential campaign.

Secure your copy at this office right away before the supply is exhausted. tf

What Is New In Summer Coats.

A coat of old blue taffeta made with drooping shoulders to form a cape effect and trimmed with revers, collar and cuffs of contrasting material.

The coats to wear over summer frocks are particularly graceful and pretty. This design is in taffeta and has a lining. It is shirred above the waistline and held in with a belt, which may encircle the figure and meet at the front, or be arrested by a straight front panel. In medium size the coat requires 5⅝ yards 36-inch taffeta. The revers, collar and cuffs are of contrasting silk, 1 yard being required for the purpose. The cape effect formed by the drooping shoulders is very chic.

As the lining extends only to the waistline, it is very simple to make—simply close underarm and shoulder seams as notched. Next, take the sleeves and plait, tacking the plaits into position. Close sleeve seam as notched and line the cuff and sew to lower edge of sleeve. Lap the front rounded end of cuff on back end, and tack to position on sleeve. Adjust sleeve to position, stitching along line of small "o" perforations in lining front and back. Now take the coat and first close the underarm, then the shoulder seams. Gather front and back along crossline of small "o" perforations; and make 2 rows of gathers below perforations ¾ inch apart. Slash front and back about ⅜ inch outside of gathers in front and back, about ¼ inch above and below gathers and finish edges for openings to pass the narrow belt through. If wide belt is used, do not slash the front and back at gathers. Bring small "o" perforation in narrow belt to under-arm seam, and bring large "O" perforation in belt to center-front. Draw gathers to fit belt and stitch to position.

The outside may now be arranged on the lining. Line the collar and sew to neck edge.

If desired the lower edge of the coat may be trimmed with a wide two piece band.

HITLESS BASEBALL.

Remarkable Record That Was Made by Cy Young In 1904.

The proud record for pitching consecutive innings of hitless baseball is held by no less a personage than the Hon. Denton Tecumseh Young of blessed baseball memory. Mr. Young, better known as "Cy," is the holder of several records in unusual feats in the pitching line.

It was back in April, 1904, that Young proceeded to shatter all figures in this line, and before he got through he had created a new record in hurling hitless ball and one which stands today clean cut and without a spot or blemish and without a doubt the greatest piece of pitching the game ever witnessed.

On April 30 against the Washington team Young took Winter's place in the third inning, no one out, and pitched out the game, retiring the next twenty-one batsmen in order. Young's next game took place May 5 against the Athletics. Cy pitched the best game of his long and honorable career that day and retired twenty-seven of those famous swatsmen of Connie Mack in a row. In a game against Detroit on May 11 Denton T. pitched his famous fifteen inning 1 to 0 game against the Tigers, and in the first seven innings Young set them down without a base hit.

This would give Cy twenty-three innings of hitless ball, or, in other words, as far as the records show, sixty-eight batsmen stepped to the plate and were retired in succession. In that same period the big Ohioan pitched forty-eight consecutive innings wherein his opponents failed to get a run across the plate. After his great no hit-no run game against the Athletics he pitched fifteen innings of runless ball, as mentioned, against the Tigers with Ed Killian opposing him. It was a battle royal, and the clever Killian met defeat by a score of 1 to 0.—New York Sun.

CHARTING THE GREAT LAKES.

Uncle Sam Has a Steady Job In These Perilous Waters.

Summer after summer the fleet of the lake survey sails the broad expanse of the five lakes and the score of bays and inlets searching for danger spots that may claim their heavy toll of human life and vessel tonnage.

Since 1841 the United States government has been silently carrying on this work, a herculean fight against the jagged reef and the unseen shoal that menace navigation. Sounding lines have been plunged into black depths of 95,000 square miles of water, and still today there are areas that have not been charted in which passing barks may founder.

Probably no frequented waterways in the world are so hazardous as the great lakes. At no time is a steamer on them more than a comparatively few hours from shore and periodically fierce storms arise, fully as violent as those experienced on the ocean, which play with the steel ships, battering them helplessly about, threatening to engulf or sweep them ashore.

Over $5,000,000 has been spent by the government since 1841 for the prosecution of the work of charting the lakes. Locked in heavy timbered boxes, protected from fire in immense vaults in the old postoffice building, Detroit, are over 1,300 field charts, dating back to 1818, when a survey of Lake Erie was made by officers of the British navy. With few exceptions the maps are the result of the scientific researches of United States officers and surveyors.—New York Sun.

AUTUMN'S TASK.

What All Good Housekeepers Should Know.

ABOUT FALL CANNING ARTS.

The Value of Accuracy Instead of Guesswork—Preserving Really Means Sterilization and Hermetic Sealing. Suggestions About Vegetables.

First.—Fresh fruits and vegetables are first choice, if available. If not, canned goods, homemade or commercial, are a veritable godsend—wholesome, convenient and economical.

Second.—Canning means sterilization (killing bacteria and spore by heat, and hermetically sealing so that no invaders can enter the can). Nobody needs a canning powder. They are always dangerous and useless.

Third.—There is little if any more danger of illness from canned goods than from fresh. Sterilization is a highly perfected process, and nearly all spoilage makes itself known to sight and taste and smell. The most care must be exercised with milk and meat and fish.

Fourth.—Throw away a can that is "swelled" or leaky. This may mean insufficient sterilization or gas formation, and no chances should be taken, though sometimes it means only overfilling.

Fifth.—Use a thermometer. Don't guess. Womanly intuition and the rule of thumb would never produce efficiency in a cannery, and they won't do it in the home kitchen.

Sixth.—Sulphites and saccharine in canned corn, copper sulphate for greening peas, boracic and salicylic acids for easier and surer preserving are all evils of a dead and buried past. The only canned goods chemically preserved to be found nowadays are those put up on the farms and in small towns, where the peddler of the "preserving powders" misleads the unsuspecting home canner into using his anonymous wares.

Seventh.—A can of corn twenty-seven years old recently was critically examined by a food commissioner and pronounced to be "good eating." A product that was inferior before going into the can may at one year of age be a poorer product than its elder brother. However, age is not to be desired in canned foods, and they should not be carried over several seasons. The amount of tin dissolved increases on standing, condensed milks "lump" and excesses of heat or cold injure quality.

Jutland and the Sea.

Jutland is one of the few countries where political change has been avoided. Denmark has looked after the Jutes for over 1,000 years without challenge. But the sea has refused to let Jutland alone. Like Holland, it needs the protection of dikes, and but for these there would be considerably less Jutland. Even on the east coast, with its higher elevation, the sea runs into many inlets. One of the longest of these, the Lymfiord, was in 1825 broken into from the west by the waters of the North sea, and the north corner of Jutland has ever since remained an island.—London Chronicle.

Had His Title All Ready.

Disraeli's first novel affords a curious instance of intelligent anticipation. Among the host of characters in "Vivian Grey," most of them slightly veiled portraits of celebrities of the day, Lord Beaconsfield is one of the most important in the secondary rank. The novel was written in 1826, exactly fifty years before the writer assumed the title he had invented. It is usual for novelists to portray themselves in their first book, but no other instance can be found of an author christening a character with a name subsequently to become his own.—London Spectator.

Sheepskin.

Sheepskin was used as parchment before the invention of paper. Even then it was a substitute for vellum, which is made from calfskin and of a far finer quality than parchment, and was employed for fine illuminated work. Tanned sheepskins are in the trade called basils. For these there are many legitimate uses, but it is for imitation purposes that the sheepskin is most largely used.

THE COUNTY FAIR OPENED TODAY

Extra Tents Have Been Erected for Exhibitors

Track Is In Fine Condition Racing Will Begin Tomorrow

The Oswego County Fair is in full swing today, with prospects of fine weather for the week. All exhibits are now arranged and the races will start tomorrow. The entries will be found on the first page.

The midway has been filled with several new features, and all reservations have been taken in the various buildings for the exhibition of stock and various displays. It has been necessary for the Ground Committee to erect five new tents 40 by 80 to accommodate the displays that have usually been made in the main building, which is overcrowded this year on account of the new auto show feature.

Don A. Conley, superintendent of racing, arrived in the city yesterday and stated that the entries for the races indicated that there will be the best horse racing ever field on this track. Burney Clark, track superintendent, has devoted considerable time and labor to the preparation of the track, and announces that it has never been in better condition.

The racing program for tomorrow is the 2:20 pace trot for a purse of $250 and eighteen entries have been made, and the 2:29 trot for a purse of $200 has eight entries. Some of the best horses in the country have arrived for these races, and with the track in perfect condition it is expected that some fast time will be made.

"Big Jim," the wrestling bear, is here and will give daily exhibitions in front of the grand stand.

As a result of last year's tent caterpillar contest, C. I. Kingsbury, secretary of the Fair Association, announced that three schools will have free admission to the fair this year. The award winners as announced are South Granby School, of which Miss Beulah Pringle is teacher; District No. 9, Scriba, Mrs. Olin Sheldon, teacher, and District No. 6, Mexico, Mrs. W. B. Van Sickle, teacher. With the prizes offered to the schools there are four individual prizes offered, of $4, $3, $2 and $1, respectively. In the 1916 contest first prize was won by Howard Butler of South Granby, second prize by Mabel Grochan of South Granby, third prize by Louise Judge of Colosse and the fourth was won by Minnie Wilcox, of South Granby.

CHARLES E. HUGHES.

DETROIT'S IMPRESSIONS OF A MAN.

Governor Hughes' visit to Detroit opened the presidential campaign of 1916 and if we may forecast the events that are to follow by the omens of Monday we would prognosticate an intensely warm, vivid and humanly interesting period in the next few months.

Setting aside the auspices of meteorological conditions in this prevision of the future—although they are approved by numerous professional augurs and by a host of commonalty as well—we base this prophecy on the characteristics of the candidate whose too brief stay with us has been enjoyed by all with whom he came into contact.

The misguided individuals who have been expecting Charles E. Hughes would prove to be a cold proposition and therefore easy to beat are in for a shock that will make them think they have been hit by an uninsulated trolley wire. There is nothing cold about Mr. Hughes, Detroit has learned. He is about as intensely human a piece of humanity as ever captured the hearts of a crowd, and the more people in the United States he meets between now and November the more votes will be cast for him. As a campaigner he is a revelation. He likes his fellow beings, and they like him because they see he likes them.

And what his personality begins his remarkable powers of intellect and utterance finish. He drives his points home with tremendous force. What he says sticks. There are thousands of Americans today who can retell every step in the arguments he made eight years ago on the Bryan trust policy, yet in 1908 Mr. Hughes was not especially a prominent figure and there was no particular reason why his address more than others should have remained clearly in the memory except the gift of the man to send his own thoughts so deep into the brains of others. They are clear in his own mind first, undoubtedly. He knows precisely what he wants to say because he has reasoned it out before he speaks it out. Probably that has something to do with the ease with which he conveys his meaning. But it is a very rare quality he possesses in his ability to master subjects so thoroughly as to make the most abstruse simple to himself and his hearers. It is a quality eminently desirable in a political candidate; it is infinitely more to be desired in the president of a great country like the United States.

Detroit's impression of Charles E. Hughes is all favorable. The thousands of people who have studied him at close range are convinced that if he is elected president next November he will be a great president, one of the greatest this nation has known, worthy to stand in history with George Washington and Abraham Lincoln, a custodian of the republic's fate to whom that fate may confidently be intrusted. If that conviction is shared by the people of other states whom he is still to meet, the outcome of his swing around the great American circle cannot fail to be propitious for him.—Detroit Free Press.

INFANTILE PARALYSIS EPIDEMIC ON DECLINE

(By United Press)

New York, August 16—The infantile paralysis epidemic again registered a decline. This was indicated by the figures for the past twenty-four hours given out by the health department today.

Attacked by Two Bandits; In Critical Condition

(By United Press)

Cleveland, Ohio, August 16—Owen Bennon, of Buffalo, is in a critical condition here at Lake Side Hospital today. His throat was cut last night by two highwaymen, who attacked and robbed him. He came here from Buffalo two days ago.

CONFERENCE ON STRIKE PROBLEM TOMORROW

(By United Press)

New York, August 16—The problem of averting the railroad strike that would paralyze the traffic of the country still rests with President Wilson. 600 district chairmen of the Brotherhood accepted the President's invitation to confer with him in Washington tomorrow. No other condition was reached at the meeting here, however, as the situation continued a deadlock.

Russians Have Captured 358-602 Austro-Germans

(By United Press)

Petrograd, August 16—The Russian armies under General Brusiloff from June 4 to August 13, captured 358,602 Austro-German prisoners and 405 cannons, other booty included 1,325 machine guns, 338 bomb throwers and 292 powder carts.

STRIKE NOT SETTLED

(By United Press)

New York, August 16—600 District chairmen representing 400,000 employees involved in the threatened railroad strike will meet here today with W. S. Carter, President of the Brotherhood of Firemen to consider a proposal that railroads adopt the eight hour day for a trial period of six months, together with the present schedule of pay for overtime work.

England Will Not Resume Diplomatic Relation

(By United Press)

London, August 16—England may not resume her diplomatic relation with Germany after the end of the war until Germany makes a reparation for the execution of Captain Fryatt and similar allied outrages.

WM. BARNES AND THE COLONEL

AFTER THEIR CHARGES AND COUNTERCHARGES WILL KISS AND MAKE UP.

Politics makes strange bedfellows. No better proof of it can be offered than reports floating about the state that William Barnes, who Colonel Roosevelt dubbed a "boss" and then proved it at Syracuse, has so far patched up his feud with T. R. that they are going to work together to bring about the renomination of Harvey D. Hinman, of Broome county for governor against Whitman and of former ambassador to France Robert Bacon, as the candidate against former Congressman William Calder, of Brooklyn.

Both Roosevelt and Barnes are against both Calder and Whitman. Both Roosevelt and Barnes are in favor of Bacon and Hinman. This is as far as the "patch up" may go. It is not likely they will meet, but silently work toward the same end.

Should Mr. Hinman, who was supported by the Colonel against Whitman two years ago, definitely decided to become a candidate, additional interest will be given the contest, because of his close friendship with Charles E. Hughes, the Republican presidential candidate. When Mr. Hughes was governor Mr. Hinman was his floor leader in the senate and fought through all the important reform measures in that period.

For the past week or ten days well known Republicans opposed to the nomination of Governor Whitman and also to the nomination of Mr. Calder have held many conferences. More are still to be held and a definite decision as to what is to be done will be made shortly.

The plans of the conferees provide for the support of Mr. Bacon and Mr. Hinman, but no final determination will be reached until both are heard from as to their intentions. Mr. Bacon has already announced he would enter the race, but no word has yet come from Mr. Hinman. Other candidates have been considered at these conferences, but these two will be given the first call.

Mr. Barnes has not hesitated to express himself on the renomination of Governor Whitman and Mr. Calder. Recently in his newspaper, the Albany Journal, he bemoaned the possibility that they should be permitted to go into the Republican primaries without opponents, and more recently in private has expressed his feelings in more vigorous terms. As for Colonel Roosevelt he has not made any public statement concerning the situation and none is expected from him.

It is known, however, that within the last two weeks the Colonel has had conferences with two or more anti-Whitmen Republicans and that they came away from Sagamore Hill convinced that Mr. Roosevelt would welcome the opportunity to support a Republican candidate other than Governor Whitman. No doubt is expressed but that former senator Hinman fills the bill.

EMPLOYES WILL ACCEPT TERMS

AN AGREEMENT HAS BEEN REACHED IN S., L. C. AND N. CONTROVERSY.

Employes of the Syracuse, Lake Shore and Northern have voted to accept the new agreement with the company according to opinions of officials "on the inside" today.

The agreement was reached after long-drawn out negotiations between representatives of the Almagamated Association of Street and Electric Railway Employes and officials of the company headed by general manager T. C. Cherry. At one stage the conferences were held up by the fact that the line is in the hands of a receiver along with the other Empire United lines. This difficulty was bridged a few days ago and the negotiations resumed.

The terms of the agreement upon which the men have voted has not been made public. It is said, however, that a slight change in the "runs" has been made from the old agreement.

This was the only point at issue between the men and the officials.

The company wanted to make the change, but the men objected, saying they were satisfied with the present hours and did not see any reason for a change at the present time.

Neither the union officials or representatives of the company would say whether the change had been made nor would they discuss the new agreement in any way whatever.

The last of the ballot were cast last night. The result will be announced perhaps late this afternoon or tomorrow and at the same time the terms of the new agreement will be made public.

The men for the past few months have been working under the terms of the old agreement which has expired.

GETTING ON THE BAND WAGON

The above phrase has become classic in our politics. It represents a certain type of mind that cares little about the merits of campaigns. It is anxious merely to get on the winning side.

Politicians have always made it a great point to capture this wavering element. They issue absurd and impossible claims of big majorities that they expect to get. Also they make a tremendous and disproportionate effort to carry local contests occuring in September, for the effect these may have on the November voting. For many years speakers and money have been poured into a few states, notably Maine, that still have or formerly had state elections in advance of the presidential contest.

This tendency is not distinctively characteristic of the American voter. In England the "bye-elections" are looked to for the same psychological result. Carrying a few districts in advance of the general contest has a similar tendency. It attracts doubtful voters to the side that seems to be winning.

The great majority of American citizens of course are not swayed by the mere desire to be on the winning side. They have positive convictions, and are not afraid to state them. They do not try to conceal the fact the day after election that they were in the minority.

The voters who sway toward the side that seems for the moment to be winning add nothing to the intelligence of the verdict, and are a burden on our civic life. A successful political party cannot be built up out of such elements. Perhaps the politicians exaggerate the number of men affected by this frivolous consideration. Very likely they have always spent too much money and energy in the futile attempt to make a showing on local contests fought out at September elections.

A SIGNIFICANT SIGN

One of our merchants has a sign in his store that reads:

"Boost the Store that Boosts the Town." If the citizens of Fulton will take into considerationthe significance of that motto and be governed by it the future success of our town is assured. It is not the man who makes the noise and accomplishes nothing that is of benefit to the community, but it is the man who devotes his time and energy and capital to the upbuilding of the town that assists in making a solid growth. There are many able, prosperous business men in Fulton who from a small beginning have built up a lucrative business. They have faith in the future of the town. They have been successful, have accumulated money to enlarge and extend their business and no reasonable person is jealous of their success. It is to such citizens that the town owes its success, in fact its very existence.

There is another class of character to be found in any community—fortunately Fulton has but few of them—who never did and never will amount to anything in the way of progression. They are like a leech sucking out an existence. Their personal appearance, and methods are obnoxious and the effect of their wails is to keep decent, respectable strangers from even considering the advisability of locating in our midst. They talk "boost" but their very presence is a knock. They have failed to make a success of business and become jealous of their neighbor who by his square business methods is gradually forging to the front.

Don't teach your children that it is a shame to wear worn and patched clothes if you are not able to afford better, but that it is no honor in wearing new ones that are not paid for. A poet said, "Remember, that rags may cover a boy who will some day be the great world's joy.

HOW THE BIG DAILIES VIEW THE PRINT PAPER SITUATION

Many of the larger papers of the country are intimating very strongly that all of the raise in price of print paper is not justified on the grounds of increased cost of labor or raw material, but that a combination of print paper manufacturers is responsible for the greater portion of the increase. These same statements were made before the federal trade commission investigation at Washington. The following editorial from the New York World is a fair example of the attitude of many of the most influential papers of the country:

PIRACY IN PAPER.

"When the federal trade commission reassembles in August it will meet an important problem relating to the price of print paper. If this governmental agency for the correction of rapacity in business is ever to have an opportunity to prove its value, it can ask nothing better than that which now presents itself.

"Except as individual publishers have protected themselves from extortion, print paper has been monopolized in this country for almost a generation. There is a pretense of competition, but the consumer who enters the market soon finds that he has been allotted to a single producer and that nobody else cares to do business with him. This is combination at its worst.

"Of late, purchasers not protected by long-time contracts have met prices almost prohibitive on all sides, and the evidences of conspiracy are too numerous and too plain to be disregarded. Extortion in this line can make no plea of necessity. It is to be attributed to nothing but the ethics of highwaymanship—the power to rob and the helplessness of the victim who is to be robbed.

"Perhaps a vigorous protest on the part of the trade commission will bring this buccaneering to an end. If not, the case should go to a federal grand jury without further delay."

OLD HOME DAYS

Old home week and old home day celebrations are being held all over the country. It is an exceedingly pretty sentiment, and one that may have practical business value. In many places, however, the prevailing idea is to produce a lot of vaudeville stunts and midway features, winding up with a grand program of "eats."

That does not constitute a real old home day, and its motive is usually to make money for some one. The real old home idea is to draw back to the town those who once lived there, and make the occasion one of reunion, reminiscence, and plans for the future development of the community.

Many a town's future has been wholly changed by the incitements of such functions. Former residents are led to return for good or to make gifts of public institutions or equipment. Many heart strings are stirred by such reunions, and larger impulses arise, leading to plans for more generous civic advance.

SLIGHTLY INDISPOSED

The leading newspaper-syndicate doctor's column yesterday was devoted almost entirely to a sort of general discussion of the situation but he had room enough left down at the tail end to make us think we had something pretty serious the matter with our spinal column and our pelvis, that our teeth, tonsils and nose ought to be thoroughly examined and that possibly cold salt baths and massage might afford us a little temporary relief.

TO MOVE REAL ESTATE

Many people who would like to dispose of houses or farms, worth thousands of dollars, will sometimes hesitate about the few cents it would cost to advertise them well in the newspapers. They depend on what chance opportunities may come to them, and in the end may sacrifice hundreds of dollars on their property.

There are a host of people who are always on the look out for a chance to buy real estate. They are always watching for favorable chances, whether for their own occupancy, or to speculate on it. Putting and ad in the For Sale column of a newspaper, puts a would-be seller in touch with a wide circle of people who want to buy. These people make it a point to read all the real estate advertising they can find in a number of newspapers, and it is worth while to attract their attention.

A well written notice describing a piece of property attracts as many readers as anything in the paper. It will attract hundreds of possible buyers where an agent would be able to interest only a few. It is the cheapest and most profitable way to sell real estate.

WOMEN SHOULD BE FOR CHARLES E. HUGHES, SAYS ROOSEVELT.

"Mr. Hughes has unequivocally taken the right position, and as regards all other positions he, and not his opponent, is entitled to the support of both men and women, and therefore the women in the enfranchised States who do not in this election support him forfeit the right to say they have done their utmost for their sisters in the non-enfranchised States."—From a letter of Theodore Roosevelt to Miss Alice Carpenter.

EDITORIAL PARAGRAPHS.

Two futile invasions of Mexico and six separate and distinct policies on the question of permitting arms and ammunition to be sent into that country are included in the performance of the Wilson administration in its dealings with our southern neighbors in less than three years. It is this characteristic instability of the government that makes people want a change.

"Inadequate" aptly characterizes the Wilson administration but almost any synonym of unsatisfactory will do.

When Charles E. Hughes said: "The dealings of the administration with Mexico constitute a confused chapter of blunders," he gave an explicit characterization of the Wilson administration's policy in one sentence.

Just as it is now obstinately shutting its eyes to the need of industrial preparedness, for three years the Wilson administration refused to see the need of adequate military preparedness. With war on our southern border it was content to rely on a regular army that could only muster 40,000 available men and refused to continue the established policy of building up our navy. When the time came for action, the country had not sufficient troops to police the border and this force has been supplemented by a trifle more than one third the war strength of the national guard. If the national administration had had the ability to interpret the signs of the time military preparedness would have been well under way instead of barely begun.

Charles E. Hughes, the Republican candidate, recognizes an important fact that Woodrow Wilson, the Democratic President, appears to have overlooked—that the United States is big enough to help Mexico out of the condition of anarchy in which that country is plunged and, by securing order in Mexico, insure peace on our border.

The insuperable handicap of the Democratic party in this campaign is its record.

If the Democratic national administration had left on the statute books in 1894 the federal corrupt practices act placed there by the Republicans there would be no occasion for the present administration's campaign publicity measure which, at best, is a very poor substitute for the law repealed.

President Wilson's campaign managers are entitled to all the comfort they can get out of calling the roll of Progressives who are going to vote for him. It would be an endless task to call the roll of Progressives who are not going to vote him.

For every reason that can be advanced why Progressives should vote for Wilson, ten can be advanced why they should vote for Hughes and the beauty of it is that they know the reasons without having to be told.

The Wilson administration went into Mexico to punish Villa for his outrage on American soil. The only punishment inflicted has been on American soldiers who were shot down at Carrizal by order of First Chief Carranza.

"Franklin Roosevelt, Assistant Secretary of the Navy, sees strong trend for Wilson in Maine."—News Dispatch. Who can blame a man who for three years has been assistant to Josephus Daniels for "seeing things"?

Even Woodrow Wilson could not save the infamous Clarke amendment to the Philippines bill. He lost the ablest member of his cabinet, Secretary Garrison, because of his advocacy of the policy of scuttle, but even the sacrifice of Garrison could not save it.

NEED OF CONSTRUCTIVE LEGISLATION.

Just before the European war broke out, we had a million skilled mechanics out of work, and nearly half a million railroad men were idle, together with nearly half a million freight cars. The railroads were suffering from lack of freight to carry to market and industry was gradually becoming stagnant. In Louisiana 200,000 acres of sugar land were ploughed up because of Democratic changes in the tariff law. It is generally conceded by all save the blind that the country was not progressing. Attempts were made to keep courage up by the predictions made by Secretaries McAdoo and Redfield and President Wilson, of the great trade booms which were soon to appear, but which failed to materialize until the outbreak of war on the Continent.

AMERICAN RIGHTS.

"No one could successfully present to an American audience that an American citizen's rights stopped with the coast line."

"There is not a particle of militarism in my composition, but there is Americanism in its place, and if elected, I am going to see that American rights are protected."

LABOR.

"The working man is not asking anything he should not have. All he wants is a square deal."

"No such thing as prosperity exists for just one class in America, unless it exists for all."

"The Republican party does not stand for the prosperity produced by the war, but for a prosperity produced by sound American policies and these are what we propose to have."

PREPAREDNESS.

"Do not let us get this country into a low patriotic plane so that we are content with disesteem, with the scoff of the world."

"'I am an American citizen,' ought to be the proudest title in the world."

CIVIL SERVICE.

"We had in the coast and geodetic survey an eminent scientist. He was displaced to make room for an excellent stock breeder."

"It is the most unworthy thing an administration can do to take public business and pay political debts with it."

BEST EVIDENCE.

New York "World" accuses Mr. Hughes of being pro-German.

"The Fatherland," the organ of those who would have the United States violate its neutrality for Germany's benefit, asks Mr. Hughes ten questions which are designed to carry the accusation that he is pro-British.

These directly conflicting charges against him will be regarded as the best evidence that he is just plain American, without bias toward either side.—Albany Journal.

Democrats who harbored hopes that Josephus would catch the virus from the Bryan and Garrison resignations are still nursing their disappointment. Nothing remains for them but to resign to a realization that Josephus will not resign.

President Wilson is now anxious to have it thought that there was no withdrawal of troops from Mexico at the request of Carranza. Why not go one better and declare that we never had any troops in Mexico to withdraw?

Moslem Etiquette.

All true Moslems when eating must begin with salt and finish with vinegar. If they begin with salt they will escape the contagion of seventy diseases. If they finish with vinegar their worldly prosperity will continue to increase. The host is in etiquette bound to be the first to start eating and the last to leave off. Tooth picking is considered an act of grace in the true Moslem, for the angel Gabriel is reported to have brought a toothpick from heaven for the prophet after every meal. The priests recite certain passages of the Koran before and after lunch and dinner and also before drinking water at any hour of the day.—London Globe.

Botany Bay.

Sir Joseph Banks was the man who invented the once familiar phrase "Botany Bay." He was the botanist attached to the expedition of Captain Cook, the "Australian Columbus." Landing at this bay, close to the present city of Sydney, he found such an abundance of strange plants and flowers that he associated the word "botany" with it for all time. For a long time Botany Bay and Australia were synonymous in England. Sydney has spread out to the historic bay, and you can travel by tram car to "Botany." It was Sir Joseph Banks who made the kangaroo and other Australian animals known to science.—London Graphic.

Payment will be made according to the actual market value of the article or in case of damage, such amount as is necessary to repair in the usual manner.

BOOKS ARE ADVANCING IN PRICE.

Booklovers will have to pay from ten to twenty-five cents more for current publications. Publishers and retailers already have increased the price. Books formerly selling at from fifty cents to one dollar are now rated at ten cents higher. Those in the past priced at from one to two dollars are being sold at an increase of twenty-five cents.

The publishers claim that there has been an increase in the price of paper, leather, cloth and ink amounting to from fifty to one hundred per cent. during the past twelve months, and it is not possible to produce books at the old prices. The consensus of opinion among the publishers is that under the present serious shortage of supplies there is a likelihood of a further increase. The only chance to avert this second raise they said is for the European war to come to an end. It is claimed that there is also a shortage of chemicals which must be obtained from Europe for the manufacture of their particular grades of paper. The surplus supply of this class of material is exhausted and the publishers will have to depend upon a new supply.

Publishers dealing in school books only will not accept any new contracts for some time to come. They claim that their contracts are of long standing and that they will have all they can do to meet the demand on their output to carry out the old orders.

CEDARINE ALLEN PROPHECIES PEACE

Peace and a billion dollar laugh in one paragraph.

"Britannia rules the wave," does she not? She does—not.

Instead, she stolidly sits on top of the wave with a billion dollar navy, while Germany with a million dollar cargo of dyestuffs quietly sails under her with a little boat born of necessity, an engine of war turned into a harbinger of peace.

That cargo spells the beginning of the end.

Does John Bull see the joke? When we were little boys and went to school we learned that the earth was three-fourths water and one-fourth land, and down to date John Bull has practically served this notice on the world: "The waves are mine, keep off the grass," and it has remained for Germany to show a blood drenched world that peace hath her victories—the submarine turned into peaceful pursuits.

The one great fact that made this war possible, and, as Germany saw it, necessary, was Briton's boast—and down to date her ability to sustain her boast—that she ruled the waves.

Laugh, ye everlasting hills, and shout for joy, for peace is almost here! God's love and also His seas for man are very deep, but arrogance and greed have only skimmed the top and it has remained for Germany, bent on peace, to sound God's ocean depths, to leave the war go, holding the surface only—now baffled, beaten, bewildered—the Peace Dove dove (did dive) and said to war: "To hell with you, where you belong!"

If I wasn't an American I'd rather be a German, for that cargo spells, "Peace on earth, good will to men."

Geo. H. Allen.

SOLDIERS CAN MAIL LETTERS WITHOUT STAMPS.

Fulton soldiers down in Texas who cannot raise the price of a postage stamp can send their letters without it. Uncle Sam will carry the letter o its destination and collect the amount at the other end.

So many soldiers complained that they did not have any postage money that one woman took up the matter with the postal authorities at Washington. The department replied by quoting an old law that soldiers, sailors and marines, in the service of the United States could send their letters collect. These must be indorsed "Soldier's Letter." and signed thereunder with facsimile, hand stamp or in writing with the official designation by a field or staff officer or by surgeon or chaplain at a hospital.

SKIM MILK TO BE MARKETED

IF PROPERLY LABELED IT CAN BE SOLD TO CONSUMERS AT A REDUCED PRICE.

Syracuse, N. Y., August 16—The salvation of the farmer dairyman through a plan for milk bottling by which people can buy skimmed milk as whole milk, is foreseen by Albert B. Brockway, chairman of the social committee of the Onondaga Dairying Association. He is not on th trail of the Wicks Investigating committee and says he will not rest until his proposal is adopted. Mr. Brockway is one of the leading Central New York dairymen.

The idea of selling skim milk for household use is a new one among dairymen in this part of the country, but Mr. Brockway contends that it is just as nutritious as that containing butterfat. "People who think that milk that shows cream is the only nutritious kind are mistaken," he says. "The butter fat test is not the most important test of food value. Skim milk has nearly all he protein of the whole milk, and is, for all practical purposes, as valuable a food."

Were the sale of skim milk for household use permitted by the state, Mr. Brockway believes, the farmer would be assured of greater income from his dairy. At present he sells milk to creameries at a flat rate as whole milk. The creameries extract the butter fat or cream, for butter making and the skim milk residue is sold back to the farmers for feeding calves, or to manufacturing companies who use the milk sugar and casein.

"If the despised skim milk were declared by state law to be a valuable article of food," declares Mr. Brockway, "creameries could pay the farmer for skim milk at the rate of four to five cents per quart when butter fat is selling at eight cents. This would be enough to make the production of milk profitable.

The committee of the dairy association of which Mr. Brockway is chairman, will go to Albany when the Wicks committee meets there and present its case.

At the recent session of the Wicks committee in this city Mr. Brockway outlined his plan for selling bottled milk and declared it could be disposed of to the poor in New York city and elsewhere. His plan is to be placed before the Common Council of this city in the form of an ordinance this fall. He criticises the present looseness of the state law which reads "milk from which any part of the cream has been removed" is declared adulterated.

"It is all nonsense that the ban should be placed on skim milk," he said. "Cream is only fat. We do not rate the food value of meats solely by the amount of fat they include. Why apply this test to milk? Removal of the fat takes out practically none of its protein value that is left has all the value of the whole milk for building and repair of tissue; for the making of blood, muscle and bone. It has half the value of the whole milk for supplying heat and muscular power.

"Don't accuse the farmer of dishonesty if he puts water in his milk," he exclaimed. "He is taught to do it by the mistreatment he gets from every side. The horse dealer instead of selling him an all-wool blanket sells him one that is half-wool, the implement factories send him machinery that is made, not from iron ore, but from scrap iron, it keeps him buying extra parts until he has not a cent left. These people are not "dishonest" but the minute the farmer puts water in his milk he is a criminal.

"I believe that if the bottled milk plan can be incorporated in the Wicks bill we are going a long ways toward settling the problem. I am not going to stop until I have accomplished something definite along this line."

Worthy of Your Good Opinion.

On most subjects there is a vast difference of opinion, but Chamberlain's Tablets win the good opinion if not the praise of all who use them. Mrs. Oren Coon, of Pulaski, N. HEALTH LAWS

The local authorities have been strictly enforcing the health law in regard to children intermingling in large assemblages. Dr. Hall local health officer and Chief of Police Richard Dyer made a trip to the Fair Grounds and succeed in driving about one hundred and fifty children from the grounds, part of whom had "sneaked in." The authorities were warned not to admit any children under the age of sixteen.

This measure was taken in compliance with orders from the state officials as a protection in the spread of Infantile Paralysis. Sunday School picnics and even public schools will be included in this.

Two exact cases of infantile paralysis were reported to the local health official this morning.

Esther M. Fredinburg, six years old, residing in the rear of the old Falley Seminary building is a victim of total paralysis in the right arm, according to reports from Drs. Hall and Schiappi. This is an absolute case of infantile paralysis said Dr. Hall this morning.

Agnes Plumber, age one year, residing on Van Buren street, is the other case and she is also affected in the right arm. Although this case is said to be only partial paralysis. It is the intenion of the local health officer to take every precautionary step to check the advance of the disease.

Placards have been placed on the houses of both cases and an absolute quarantine exists in these vicinities.

Moving picture houses, theatres and all public places of assemblage must hereafter exclude children.

AL. G. FIELDS IS WITH US IN FULTON TODAY

We have with us today, the oldest traveling theatrical organization in world: We refer to the Al. G. Field Minstrels.

There is something appealing in the music of the Minstrel Band as there is in the songs of the Minstrel. It's the popular band and the sort that pleases the masses, many persons have referred to the Al. G. Field Company as an institution, a permanent institution.

More than thirty years have passed since the company began coming this way—for more than thirty years this man Field has stood at the helm guiding the destinies of the organization. Fame and fortune has come to him but like the brook the enterprise goes on and on.

When asked when he intended retiring, his reply was, "I have never seriously considered retiring from this business. I am active and fear if I retired I might rust out. It is my existence.

Field is a resident of Columbus, Ohio. He has business interests other than the minstrels, not the least of which is a model stock and dairy farm, known as Maple Villa Farm. He is a director in the Central National Bank, and a large property owner in the city of Columbus; but the minstrel game was his first love, and that he holds to it, is only a verification of the old saying, "Men thrive best in that vocation, in which they take most pride."

MERCHANTS MUST KNOW THE LAW

MOST OF FULTON'S MERCHANTS WORK IN HARMONY WITH SEALER OF WEIGHTS AND MEASURES.

Mr. Harry O'Brien experiences but little trouble with local merchants, most of them being anxious to work in conjunction with him in carrying out the provision of the law.

Because of the widespread misunderstanding of the state weights and measures law, which has resulted in a number of violations being detected and scores of others being practiced without detection a summary of the important points of the law has proved a boon to merchants and butchers and others interested. Lack of knowledge of the law does not excuse and the magistrate has but one course open to him to follow in case of violations and Mr. O'Brien desires to call attention to these facts.

All meat products and butter, shall be sold or offered for sale by weight. All other commodities not in containers shall be sold or offered for sale by standard weight, standard measure or numerical count and such weight, measure or count shall be marked on a label or tag attached thereto, provided, however, that vegetables may be sold by the head or bunch.

The law provides certain standard containers for vegetables, produce or fruit. They must be of capacity of one barrel, one half barrel, one bushel or multiple of bushel divisible by two except that fruits, vegetables and produce may be sold in other sized containers if the net capacity in terms of standard dry measure is plainly or conspicuously marked or otherwise indicated on the outside or top thereof, or is marked in certain cases by a label or tag.

The law also gives the size and cubic contents of a barrel and standard grape baskets.

When commodities are sold or offered for sale in containers of other sizes than those specified above, the net quantity of the contents of each container, or a statement that the specific weight includes the container, the weight of which shall be marked plainly, branded or otherwise indicated on the outside or top thereof or on a label or tag attached thereto in terms of weight, measure or numerical count.

Commodities in containers with ornamentations or decorations used exclusively for gifts or social favors, commodities dispensed for consumption on the premises or in containers used for the purpose of merely carrying or delivering the commodities, are not included in the above provisions.

No person shall be prosecuted under the provisions of this article, when he can show a guaranty signed by a wholesaler, jobber or manufacturer residing in the state from whom he purchased the commodity in containers to the effect that they were not incorrectly marked within the meaning of the law.

The person then making the sale and guaranty shall then be amendable to the prosecution and fines and other penalties which should in due course attach to the dealer under the provisions of such actions.

"A container" as used in this article shall include any carton, box, crate, barrel, half barrel, hamper, keg, drum, jar, crock, bottle, case, basket, pail, can, wrapper, parcel, or package. A person' as used in the law shall be considered to import both the singular and plural and shall include corporations, companies, societies and associations and whether acting through an agent or servant.

The examination of the weight, measure or numerical count of the contents of the container shall be made by the state superintendent of weights and measures or under his supervision or direction by any of the weights and measure officials of the state.

"A person violating any of the provisions of the law shall be punished by a fine of not less than $25 nor more than $100 for the first and second violations, and by a fine of not less than $100 nor more than $500 for subsequent violations."

It will be well for merchants to retain a copy of the above for guidance.

KINGSBURY IN DISTRESS.

Mr. C. I. Kingsbury, secretary of the Oswego County Fair Association was in considerable distress last night while dining at the Clark Hotel. While at the dining table a small portion of food became lodged in his throat, causing him to suffer for some time. Dr. Fessenden was called and administered treatment. The obstacle was fortunately removed after many attempts by the application of melted lard. It was thought for some time that an operation would be necessary.

Mr. Kingsbury is able to resume his duties today.

SECY. OF STATE FRANCIS M. HUGO

DELIVERS AN ADDRESS AT THE COUNTY FAIR

Francis M. Hugo, accompanied by his wife and Miss Brown, sister of Senator Brown, arrived in Fulton today. They drove from their home in Watertown in an automobile and report having had a very pleasant trip. The party was banqueted at the Clark House at one o'clock and at 2:30 Mr. Hugo addressed a large gathering on the Fair grounds. His main topic was the necessity of good roads and other public improvements for the state.

The horse racing starts today with a splendid list of entries. A number of Fulton horses are listed along with the many others and with the previous reputation that some of these horses have the races this year will undoubtedly surpass any of former years.

The midway is in full swing and more tents are pitched on the grounds this year than ever before. There are fortune tellers and palmists in abundance and side shows of every variety.

A NEW INNOVATION

Hunter Knight is Attending the Fair

AND BY THIS TIME EVERY BODY IS AWARE OF THAT FACT

He Represents The American Tobacco Company And is Calling Smokers' Attention To The Merits Of Mecca Cigarettes.

Mr. Hunter Knight is in the city. He covers western New York in his Ford machine and wherever he goes he is given a hearty welcome, and is long after remembered for the pleasant large crowd and the manner in which he introduces the Mecca cigarettes to the trade and to consumers. The "Mecca" is a product of the American Tobacco Company and has a world wide reputation for its delicately balanced blend.

The method employed by Mr. Knight is something entirely new. Instead of sampling a city or certain territories in the old fashioned way, demonstrations are given by him and the profits from sales all revert to the local dealer.

The Oswego County Fair was the incentive that brought Mr. Knight to our city, at this particular time and there will be no visitor to the fair grounds who will not be interested in seeing the thorough demonstration that he is giving.

His Ford car is covered with attractive advertisements that draw a large crowd and the minner in which the merits of the Mecca cigarettes are shown is interesting, instructive and entertaining. You are certain to find comfort in the Mecca because they are a cigarette that "hits the spot" and it is said there is no other cigarette in the world that is quite as good. Mr. Knight knows this to be a fact and consequently has no hesitancy in using his best endeavors to introduce this particular brand. In fact, he says it is a pleasure and that his heart and soul is in the work.

Mecca is not the only cigarette made, but when a man is handling as good as the best he cannot help but feel an interest in his work. Such an advertising campaign as he is carrying on here is not only a boost for the American Tobacco Company's product, but it is an attractive feature for the Fair that is equal to many of the local exhibits as an entertaining feature.

In a talk with a Times representative Mr. Knight said that the sales of the Mecca cigarettes are steadily growing, due not alone to the novel methods employed in advertising them, but to the superior quality of the materials used in their manufacture.

He is a hard worker, always looking after the interests of the company he represents and is an enthusiastic worker in the interest of the high class, popular and well known brand of Mecca cigarettes.

Many veterinarians recommend Hanford's Balsam. Among horsemen and liverymen it has an established reputation. They say: "We would not be without it."

FAIRIES AT THE FAIR

On Thursday and Friday, all day, the Camera Man for the Fairy Tales Film Company, Inc., of the City of New York, will be at the Fulton Fair Grounds, producing a Fairy Tale to be later shown for a week at the "Quirk" in Fulton.

Only the young ladies and gentlemen of Fulton are to be the players of the roles in the play, and only the scenes in and about Fulton are to be featured in the animated pictures.

The Fairy Tales Film Companys corps of artists have been at work in Oswego for the last three weeks, and a complete Film Picture of the young people of that city is nearly ready for the showing.

In Fulton, the Ladies Auxiliary of the Lee Memorial Hospital will be the patronesses of the play, and the funds received for the entertainment at the Quirk will go to swell the figures of the Ladies Auxiliary balance sheet.

Come one, come all to the Fair Thursday and Friday, a thousand are wanted in the picture; come and build up a fund for the support of one of the best interests of any town—the care of its sick.

If Fulton does its share, the Fairy Tales Film Company will create something that will be a monument of pride for the civic betterment of the community.

GOOD MORNING JUDGE.

Four train riders were apprehended late last night by a local patrolman near the Broadway station. All four were soundly wrapped in sleep when approached by the officer, who with all due courtesy escorted them to the police headquarters.

Their sleep was soon resumed, however, as they were placed upon the downy slats at Chief Dyer's hotel and were lulled to slumber not by the nursery rhyme method, but by the monotony of the large steel gratings.

All have historical police records and will be arraigned later.

Many complaints have been received by the local police from residents along East Second street it is claimed that damage has been done by the hurling of coal from passing trains. It was only a few days ago that a popcorn and peanut vender had to leave his stand, which he was wheeling home at a late hour, to seek refuge from missiles flying from a freight train.

CRÊME ÉLCAYA

Only One Tyrol.

It is not correct to talk about "the Austrian Tyrol" or "the Italian Tyrol." Mr. Baillie-Grohman, one of the greatest authorities on "The Land In the Mountains," condemns such errors severely, insisting that there is only one Tyrol. He has denounced also the use of the article, declaring "the Tyrol" to be as wrong as "the Scotland" would be. Mr. Coolidge, however, pointed out to the present writer some years ago that, while Mr. Baillie-Grohman's long residence in the country naturally makes him take an accurate Austrian standpoint, "the Tyrol" is sufficiently established in English usage to justify an English author or tourist in using it.—London Standard.

Kitchener's Way.

It happened some years ago. London. Regent street where it turns a semicircle. Two gamins are fighting. A crowd. No interference. We hesitate. We know how the Londoner loves his fight in or out of the fight. One boy is some twenty pounds heavier than the other. And two inches taller. A woman shrieks, "Why doesn't some one stop it?" It goes on. Then comes a tall man, top hatted, heavy stick, morning coat, a sort of squint in his eye. He brushes us all aside. Drops stick. Has a boy in each hand. "Learn to fight for each other, not against each other," said Lord Kitchener as he walked away.—London Mail.

The White Road Home

The white road winds through endless twisted pines,
Low woods that stretch away on either side
Into the shifting sands, and clutch
At rocks with gnarled roots to anchor them.
Deep shade and peace it has, lulled by the low voiced surf
And gentle rustling of the wet sea breeze
That slowly bends the tree tops to and fro
Over my dear road home.

It leads through straggling fields with bowlders strewn
And here and there a little cypress tree,
Past low gray cottages and flowers
Jealously hedged against the wild north winds.
It links a countryside of kindly souls—
Women with steady eyes and work worn hands,
Men with an old time faith that still holds firm—
Where my white road winds home.

Long in the stifling room I lay awake,
Racked by the maddening noise above, around.
I rose to watch the night crowd drifting by
Under the flaming sky signs, and I heard
From some roof garden snatches of a song
That winged toward me on the torrid air,
So bitter sweet, through tears I watched the stars
That light my white road home.

—Ethel Wolff in New York Times.

REGNAULT'S "SALOME" GIVEN TO NEW YORK ART MUSEUM

George F. Baker Presents Masterpiece That Cost $125,000.

Regnault's famous painting, "Salome," has been presented to the Metropolitan Museum of Art by George F. Baker of New York. Mr. Baker is said to have paid more then $125,000 for the picture.

"Salome" was the sensation of the French salon of 1870. It was bought in Paris in 1912 by Roland Knoedler, the New York art dealer, for $105,600 at the sale of the collection of the Marquise Landolfo-Carcano. There was spirited bidding at the time in which representatives of the museum of the Louvre were in a rivalry with Mr. Knoedler. Mr. Knoedler later offered to sell it to the Louvre for what he paid for it. A public subscription was started in France, but a sufficient amount was not raised, and early in 1913 the painting was brought to America, much to the disgust of French art lovers, who resented what they called the capture by American dollars of another European masterpiece. It was especially loved by the French people because of the history of the artist, who lost his life in the siege of Paris in 1871.

The history of "Salome" has been peculiarly dramatic. The picture was started in 1868, when Alexandre Georges Henri Regnault was at the Villa Medici, in Rome, where he had gone two years before as the winner of the Prix de Rome. It was finished at Rome in 1870, a few months before the artist met death in a skirmish before Buzenval at the siege of Paris, Jan. 17, 1871. He was only twenty-seven years old.

In Regnault's "Correspondence" it is told that the artist's first idea was to make a mere study of the model, to be called the "Study of an African Woman." Then he decided to add accessories and to paint a picture of "The Favorite Slave." Afterward he conceived the idea of "Salome." He wrote of draperies and shawls and the like that he utilized before he achieved his memorable final effect. After its first exhibition Regnault was amused by some of the critics, who credited him with philosophical and profound intentions, and he wrote to a friend:

"I have wished, however, to express certain things, and I am glad you have understood them. Yes, a caressing ferociousness is the foundation of her nature, as she is, as you have perceived, a sort of tame black panther, but always savage and cruel."

The picture shows the dancer at the end of her performance before Herod, seated, holding on her lap the platter to receive the head of John the Baptist, which her mother had told her to ask as the price of her dance. Resting on the platter, her hand playing with the hilt, is a sheathed scimitar. It is said that the artist considered placing on the platter the head of John the Baptist, but he did not, and the picture was sent to the salon of 1870, where its success was instantaneous.

FOOTBALLS WIN A CHARGE.

Surreys Boot Them Along Until They Capture German Post.

Describing some of the many thrilling incidents of the great advance on the Somme, a correspondent refers to the exploits of the east Surreys.

"The captain of one of the companies," he says, "had provided four footballs, one for each platoon, urging them to keep up a dribbling competition all the way over the mile and a quarter of ground they had to traverse. As the company formed on emerging from the trench the platoon commanders kicked off and the match against death commenced.

"The gallant captain himself fell early in the charge, and men began to drop rapidly under the hail of machine gun bullets. But still the footballs were booted onward, with hoarse cries of encouragement or defiance, until they disappeared in the dense smother behind which the Germans were shooting.

"Then when the bombs and bayonets had done their work and the enemy had cleared out the Surrey men looked for their footballs and recovered two of them in the captured traverses. These will be sent to the regimental depot at Kingston as war trophies worth preserving."

"PRESIDENCY" BOOK

NOW READY

Contains Facts, Figures, Dates and Data About All Past And Present Elections

SETTLES ELECTION ARGUMENTS INSTANTLY

If you want to know how the political "machine" works; if you want to know the "strength" of each state; if you want to know how your state and other states have voted during the past twenty-five or thirty years—in other words, if you want to know a hundred and one different things about politics that the "other fellow" doesn't know, you have only to secure a copy of "The Presidency of the United States" and all of this desirable information will be yours.

This little book has been compiled by experts at great expense, and the information it contains is absolutely reliable and strictly non-partisan. It is not only intensely interesting but has a distinct educational value that makes it desirable for school children as well as for grown-ups.

"The Presidency of the United States" will be used by thousands of people this year as a quick and ready reference for information on all past and present elections, and as "final authority" for settling all election arguments and disputes.

The ability to answer correctly the questions this book contains indicates a more intimate knowledge of past history and current events than is possessed by the average citizen. Many a surprise is in store for anyone who thinks to do so without "brushing up."

We were fortunate in securing a supply of these books for immediate delivery. If you want one you can secure a copy at this office for "only ten cents."

"Be sure you are right—then go ahead," was the favorite saying of old David Crockett. Those who believe in this motto will find in "The Presidency of the United States" an abundant supply of historical facts and non-partisan information upon which to base their statements and arguments during the 1916 presidential campaign.

Secure your copy at this office right away before the supply is exhausted. tf

CHEERFULNESS.

Cheerfulness is a virtue that every one should cultivate. Cheerfulness is a thing to be more profoundly grateful for than all genius ever inspired or talent accomplished. Next best to spontaneous cheeriness is deliberate, intended and persistent cheeriness, which we can create, cultivate and so foster and cherish that after a few years the world will never suspect that it was not a hereditary gift.—Helen Hunt Jackson.

SHOULD SLOAN'S LINIMENT GO ALONG?

Of course it should! For after a strenuous day when your muscles have been exercised to the limit an application of Sloan's liniment will take the soreness and stiffness away and get you in fine shape for the morrow. You should also use it for a sudden attack of toothache, stiff neck, backache, stings, bites and the many accidents that are incidental to a vacation. "We would as soon leave our baggage as go on a vacation or camp out without Sloan's Liniment." Writes one vacationist: "We use it for everything from cramps to toothache." Put a bottle in your bag, be prepared and have no regrets.

Sarcastic.

"John," said a father to his son one day when he caught him shaving the down off his upper lip, "don't throw your shaving water out where there are any barefooted boys about or they might get their feet pricked."

ROOM FOR IMPROVEMENT

WASTEFUL "ECONOMY" IN NEW YORK ROAD BUILDING.

Albany, in the language of its newspapers, is isolated from New York city by the almost impassable condition of about five miles of the main road from Poughkeepsie. To enter the capital it is necessary to make a long, dusty detour. This condition has existed since last year.

Incidental inquiry made in connection with the thorough investigation of state highway work now in progress, shows that the torn up stretch of road was plain macadam built only two years before it was advertised for resurfacing in 1915.

A little further down the road from New York there are several miles under construction near Blue Stores. This road is deteriorating at the finished end while construction is proceeding at the other end. The new road is still a "good road" in the eyes of the motorist, but it already shows minor displacements that are sure signs of early disintegration.

The road entering Albany is being built with the same inferior asphalt binder that is being used on the Blue Stores road. There is no reason to believe, therefore, that the heavily traveled Albany road when completed will long remain in satisfactory condition.

The present highway policy of cheapness appears also to be infecting the towns. Rhinebeck's principal street, among others on the main line between New York and Albany, reeks with tar spread with no prospect of any permanent result except the ruin of everything with which it comes in contact.

It is noticeable in this connection that the bituminous roads built under the Hughes administration in 1909 are in far better condition than highways for which the present regime is responsible. The region between Poughkeepsie and Albany contains proof of the correctness of this statement in the Hudson-Hollowville road and the highway from Craryville to the state line. The latter road does not seem to have needed or to have been improved by the application of light oil it has received for half its length.

Just beyond the Albany city line is one of the curiosities of state highway construction in the form of a wooden chip and asphalt mixture, known under the name of lignum mastic. In spite of the fact that this road has rapidly gone to pieces since it was completed last year, the state is advertising for additional construction of this type. That the promoter of this road is a relative of a high state official is not a sufficient reason for its adoption from the viewpoint of road engineers or taxpayers.

Diarrhoea Quickly Cured.

Mrs. George Williams, Middleville, N. Y., in speaking of Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy says: "I cannot praise this remedy too highly. My mother used it for years at times when she had attacks of diarrhoea and it always relieved her quickly. A few doses of it is all that is needed." The prompt cure affected by this preparation has been the wonder and delight of thousands of sufferers. For sale by all dealers.

Some People Never Satisfied.

We lived for awhile in a Korean home, eating Korean rice, pickles and seaweed, padding about in stocking feet, sitting on our heels in lieu of chairs, sleeping on stone floors with our heads resting (?) on the customary pine blocks which the Koreans much prefer to pillows. But we had these experiences only when we deliberately sought them. The orient is the orient de luxe to those who wish it so.—Christian Herald.

Railways in Shakespeare's Time.

An American lady at Stratford on Avon showed even more than the usual American enthusiasm and fervor. She had not recovered when she reached the railway station, for she remarked to a friend as they walked on the platform, "To think that it was from this very platform the immortal bard would depart whenever he journeyed to town."

A Straight Tip.

"Say," growled the first hobo, "why didn't yer go ter dat big house an' git a handout?"

"Why, I started ter," replied the other, "but a minister lookin' guy gimme a tip not ter. He sez: 'Turn from yer present path. Ye're goin' ter de dogs.'"—Philadelphia Press.

AL. G. FIELDS MINSTRELS

WILL BE AT THE QUIRK NEXT WEDNESDAY

Such a prominent subject as "Preparedness" could not fail to find its way to the Al. G. Field Greater Minstrel program. The manner in which it is handled by Mr. Field suggests "Peace through Preparedness," and it is done with a blend of good humor and seriousness which develops a fair minded atitude from all.

Early America is represented in a tableau by a group of soldiers of the period of 1776, and music, marches and pantomime indicate the patriotic spirit of the Revolutionary days.

Then appear in the foreground files of foreign soldiers, all quarrelling among themselves, and disturbing the public peace, and finally reaching chaos. While the contest is still going on, Uncle Sam, accompanied by the Goddess of Liberty, appears on the horizon. Back of the mare assembled soldiers and officials representing all branches of the United States service. Suddenly the band bursts forth with the National airs of America!

At this the foreigners are immediately calmed as they observe the resources of Uncle Sam and his devotion to the Goddess of Liberty. Instantly the scene is lighted by myriads of red, white and blue lights and a hundred American flags are unfurled, when patriotic songs by the immense chorus epitomize the heart and spirit of America.

The Al. G. Field Greater Minstrels will be at The Quirk Theatre, Wednesday, August 16. One performance only.

THE COUNTY FAIR IS IN FULL BLAST

Extra Tents Have Been Erected for Exhibitors

Track Is In Fine Condition Racing Began This Afternoon

The estimated attendance at the County Fair on the opening day yesterday was 1,200 persons. Owing to the infantile paralysis scare no children under the age of sixteen are being admitted.

Yesterday morning marked the opening of the sixty-first annual fair of the Oswego County Agricultural Society held at their grounds on Neahtawanta Lake. The committees have worked unceasingly to make this a successful year. The grounds are in as good condition as they ever have been. The weather man appeared yesterday with ideal weather and indications appear favorable for the remainder of the week.

Reservations in the cattle building are all filled and many exhibitors are forced to place their cattle in the open behind the building. There are some exceptionally fine hogs and sheep on display at the right of the cattle building. The main building is filled to overflowing with all the usual things that are brought to county fairs.

Daily balloon ascensions are being held each day at the fair grounds. Yesterday's ascension was of short duration owing to the fact that there was a strong wind and the parachute drop was made directly over West Fifth street just a short distance from the fair grounds.

To add to the excitement of the week band concerts are being held every night in different sections of the town. C. M. Allen, Jr., city clerk, has charge of the raising of the found for the concerts on the east side of the river. He reports that the amount has been raised for concerts to be held three nights on the east side. The first one was last night and the others will probably be on Thursday and Saturday nights. A large and appreciative audience greeted the Elks' Band last night when they rendered their concert on a platform built by Frank H. Rumsey, superintendent of public works, in front of the Chamber of Commerce office.

Nearly a sufficient amount has been subscribed by the west side merchants for the concerts to be held on that side of the river. These concerts will probably be held on Thursday, Friday and Saturday evenings.
